

3 1761 11630669 7

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2023 with funding from University of Toronto

<https://archive.org/details/31761116306697>

2010
X1
-D23

No. 45

N° 45

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Wednesday 14 May 2008

Mercredi 14 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Wednesday 14 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Mercredi 14 mai 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ACCESS TO ADOPTION RECORDS ACT (VITAL STATISTICS STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT), 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'ACCÈS
AUX DOSSIERS D'ADOPTION (MODIFICATION DE LOIS
EN CE QUI CONCERNE
LES STATISTIQUES DE L'ÉTAT CIVIL)

Mrs. Meilleur moved third reading of the following bill:

Bill 12, An Act to amend the Vital Statistics Act in relation to adoption information and to make consequential amendments to the Child and Family Services Act / Projet de loi 12, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les statistiques de l'état civil en ce qui a trait aux renseignements sur les adoptions et apportant des modifications corrélatives à la Loi sur les services à l'enfance et à la famille.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Pursuant to the order of the House dated May 12, 2008, I am now required to put the question.

Madam Meilleur has moved third reading of Bill 12. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

All those in favour will say "aye."

All those opposed will say "nay."

In my opinion, the ayes have it.

Call in the members. This will be a five-minute bell.

Pursuant to the standing orders, the vote is deferred to routine proceedings this afternoon.

Third reading vote deferred.

SMOKE-FREE ONTARIO
AMENDMENT ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 MODIFIANT LA LOI
FAVORISANT UN ONTARIO SANS FUMÉE

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 13, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act / Projet de loi 69, Loi modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée pour protéger les enfants contre le tabagisme passif dans les véhicules automobiles.

Mr. Peter Kormos: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Perhaps we could recess for five minutes to give government members a chance to arrive in the chamber.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): That is not a point of order.

Mr. John O'Toole: Could we have a quorum call, please?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Madam Clerk, is there a quorum present?

The Deputy Clerk (Mr. Todd Decker): There is a quorum present, Speaker.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.
Further debate?

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I am delighted to be talking about Bill 69, the Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act. It is An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

There are two parts to this bill. The first is that we want to protect children. I think this is something that everybody in this House has always and will always agree upon: Everybody wants to protect our children. The issue of rights, that is, the right of a child to health and clean air, should supersede an adult's right to his addiction. I think this is something that many members who have spoken before me said they agreed with. It's like apple pie and, where I come from, maple syrup: Everybody likes it; everybody agrees to it. We are trying to protect children from the health hazards of second-hand smoke. This is something good and this is something that should go forward.

The second part of the bill has to do with smokers. We all agree that smoking is an addiction, that a lot of people are smokers and a lot of people smoke in their cars. If we want to change human behaviour, if we want to change the habit of a smoker who gets in his car, a place where he or she is allowed to smoke, and lights up, we have to do more than just pass laws; we have to do health promotion. Within the residents of Ontario, there are groups that are more at risk of being a smoker and more at risk of lighting up in their cars when their children are present. When we talk about populations at risk, I talk about aboriginals, First Nations, low-income, people with mental illness and homeless people. Those are hard-to-reach groups within our community who need our help in order to be able to quit smoking and in order to be able to comply with this bill.

I have talked, in the past, about the special relationship that exists between the First Nations and tobacco, but I think it's worth repeating. For First Nations, tobacco is part of the four sacred elements, the first one being cedar. First Nations use cedar to try to keep sickness away; they use tobacco to give thanks to Mother Earth and for their lives; they use sage to chase away negativity and help bring back healing if they have fallen sick; and they use sweet grass to bring their minds as one, looking into mental health. When they do smudging, they will use all of those four elements. I always talk about, whenever we talk about smoking and First Nations, that we have to realize that they have a different relationship to tobacco than non-First Nations do. If we want to help First Nations comply with this bill, we have to be cognizant of that cultural difference, and we have to help them.

I agree that some of what Ontario smoking prevention has done has had some success. The rates of Ontarians who smoke has decreased over the years, and this is a good thing. Unfortunately, it has not decreased for every group in our community equally. Unfortunately, as I mentioned, First Nations, aboriginal people, still have a higher smoking rate. Francophones in Ontario have a high smoking rate. The programs presently in place to help them quit smoking don't seem to be as effective. There are also other groups, such as homeless and low-income people, who continue to have higher smoking rates than the rest of the population in Ontario. If we are serious that we want to protect children from second-hand smoke, then not only do we have to create smoke-free areas—we also have to help people stop smoking.

0910

Il me fait plaisir ce matin de vous parler du projet de loi 69, Loi modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée pour protéger les enfants contre le tabagisme passif dans les véhicules automobiles.

On pourrait dire que ce projet de loi a vraiment deux parties. Dans la première partie, on essaie de protéger les enfants. Je pense à la protection des enfants, et tous les membres, tous les députés, de tous les partis sont d'accord avec ça. C'est quelque chose que tout le monde va appuyer. Protéger les enfants, c'est quelque chose qu'on prend pour acquis. Tous les adultes ont un devoir de protéger les enfants. Les protéger de la fumée secondaire est quelque chose d'important.

La deuxième partie de ce projet de loi est de vraiment regarder quelles sont les populations, à même la population de l'Ontario, ou les projets et les programmes pour encourager les gens à arrêter de fumer. Quels sont ceux qui ont eu du succès et quels sont ceux qui ont eu moins de succès? Certainement, au cours des années, on a vu une diminution du nombre de gens qui fument en Ontario, et ça c'est quelque chose de bien. Mais quand on regarde les statistiques un peu plus précisément, on se rend compte que c'est n'est pas tous les groupes qui ont eu le même succès. Si on pense aux Premières Nations, les Premières Nations fument encore beaucoup plus que le restant des gens en Ontario. Si on pense aux francophones de l'Ontario, les Franco-Ontariens fument beaucoup plus que le restant des Ontariens. Les personnes à revenu bas ainsi que les personnes sans abri ont tendance à fumer plus que le restant des Ontariens. Donc, si on veut avoir du succès avec ce projet de loi-là, il faut non seulement être tous d'accord que l'on veut protéger les enfants de la fumée secondaire, mais il faut également être d'accord qu'il faut des programmes pour aider les groupes à risque à cesser de fumer.

Quand je parle des groupes à risques et que je parle des Premières Nations, je veux toujours faire le lien particulier qui existe entre les Premières Nations et le tabac. Pour les Premières Nations, il existe quatre éléments sacrés. Le premier est le cèdre. Le cèdre est utilisé pour demeurer en santé et pour s'assurer qu'on ne devienne pas malade. Le tabac est utilisé pour remercier la terre, remercier la communauté, remercier pour qui on est et ce qu'on a. Le sage est utilisé pour éloigner les effets négatifs. Si quelqu'un est tombé malade, tu peux utiliser le sage pour regagner la santé et pour chasser la maladie. Et le sweetgrass, on utilise ça pour le côté de la santé mentale, pour se sentir bien et pour se sentir « un ».

J'en parle toujours parce que la relation culturelle qui existe entre les Premières Nations et le tabac est unique et doit être prise en considération si on veut les aider à arrêter de fumer. C'est sûr que l'utilisation du tabac dans les cérémonies sacrées des Premières Nations est quelque chose qui va continuer pour toujours. Mais fumer la cigarette, ça, c'est différent. Le lien entre les deux est fort, le lien entre les deux est culturel et il existe, mais il faut quand même faire attention. Mon collègue vient de me passer un message pour me faire rire et il a bien réussi.

My colleague just sent me a little message there and had me laughing. To answer you, no.

I'm now talking about how to help the people who have higher smoking rates. One of the first things that we as New Democrats want is more community health centres that focus on the populations at risk. When we talk about populations at risk, we're talking about the same populations: people who have more trouble quitting smoking because of a whole array of reasons. We're talking about francophones and the First Nations; those are target groups of many community health centres. In the community health centres, we're giving them the resources. They could certainly help bring forward those communities to help them quit smoking.

Another way to protect children from second-hand smoke is to educate the parents. We have a wonderful program in Ontario, called Best Start, where every single child born in Ontario will be seen by a professional from the health unit in the catchment area. There is an opportunity here to fund programs and resources so that every single parent or guardian of a child who is born in Ontario gets special education on the risks and horrifying effects of second-hand smoke on children. As children are born and as parents get educated, this is one of the best ways to protect children from second-hand smoke, not only in vehicles but everywhere that children live. Although this bill addresses one confined area, a car, which certainly is harmful to a child, there are lots of other areas this bill does not cover at all.

Un autre élément de ce projet de loi que j'aimerais discuter, face à aider les populations à risque, serait de financer des programmes dans les centres de santé communautaire existants, les centres d'accès aux soins pour les Premières Nations, pour qu'ils aient les ressources nécessaires pour aider les populations à risque à arrêter de fumer. Ce financement servirait à diminuer le nombre de fumeurs en général, ce qui aurait l'effet de diminuer la fumée secondaire chez les enfants.

Un autre programme qui irait dans la même direction serait le programme Meilleur départ. Le programme Meilleur départ est un très bon programme qui existe en Ontario et qui permet à tous les enfants qui sont nés en Ontario, leurs parents ou leurs gardiens de recevoir la visite d'un professionnel du bureau de santé publique. Ce professionnel-là, si on lui donne l'argent pour les programmes nécessaires, peut faire l'éducation envers les méfaits de la fumée secondaire chez les enfants, certainement dans les voitures parce que ce sera la loi, mais également partout où ces enfants-là vont vivre et respirer.

On connaît très bien les effets néfastes de la fumée secondaire chez les enfants, et un programme visant les parents et les gardiens des enfants qui naissent en Ontario pourrait les assurer que, à la longue, tous les parents auront reçu l'éducation et que tous les parents comprennent et sont en mesure de prendre des choix éclairés pour leurs enfants.

Another part of the bill that I would like to talk about is the age cut-off. This is something that bothers me tremendously. Right now, the bill sets the cut-off at 16 years of age. Although you need to be 19 to buy tobacco, only children 16 years of age and under are going to be protected. To me, we are missing out on a great opportunity. A lot of kids between the ages of 16 and 19 will be experimenting with tobacco, will start smoking and will become addicted to smoking. At the same time, during that age period most of them learn how to drive through graduated licensing—the G1, the G2 and the G.

There is such strong motivation for kids who want to learn to drive. They are ready to learn; they are ready to do just about anything. We've all been teenagers; we've all been there. Lots of us in this House have teenage sons and daughters, and we know that when they want to learn how to drive and when they want to borrow the car, they're ready to wash the car for you, they're ready to babysit their brothers and sisters, they're ready to come to grandma's and to church, if they get to drive. What a strong motivation. Why don't we extend the cut-off to 19, so that as they are learning how to drive, they are also learning that they cannot smoke in the car, and neither can their friends?

0920

As they are developing the habits of a driver, they won't associate driving with cigarette smoking, which a lot of smokers do. They cannot smoke at work anymore. They cannot smoke in public places. They get in their car and what's the first thing they do? They light up. New drivers learn the same patterns. What a missed opportunity. If we were to expand this bill to include up to 19, all of those new drivers would not develop this habit.

In health promotion, we talk about pre-contemplation, contemplation, decision-making and action. Those are the steps that motivate people to make changes, to take healthier habits in their lives. We have a golden opportunity here to help young people between the ages of 16 and 19 to not pick up the habit of smoking in their cars. It wouldn't be hard to make an amendment to this bill to make it 19 years old rather than 16.

A lot of other jurisdictions that have put in place similar bills have done the same thing. I have done some research on that and found that in places like Nova Scotia, they already have a bill that does this—in the town of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, to be more precise. In Arkansas, we can see that a similar bill has been put in place, but the age limit is higher. It has been done elsewhere. It is a good way to do health promotion. It is an opportunity that we should not let pass by.

Une autre partie de ce projet de loi qui me porte un petit peu de confusion est la raison pour laquelle on a fixé l'âge limite à 16 ans.

En Ontario, il faut avoir 19 ans pour acheter des produits de tabac, mais, pour une raison qui m'échappe, on a décidé que la loi ne s'appliquerait qu'à ceux qui ont 16 ans ou moins. Pour moi, c'est une opportunité manquée. Si vous pensez aux fumeurs et aux fumeuses en Ontario, ils n'ont pas le droit de fumer au travail et ils n'ont pas le droit de fumer dans les endroits publics. La minute qu'ils rentrent dans leur véhicule, la première chose qu'ils font, c'est d'allumer une cigarette. Ils ont maintenant connecté les deux.

Tous les adolescents entre l'âge de 16 ans et 19 ans qui apprennent à conduire sont dans une période où ils sont prêts à faire des choix parce qu'ils veulent avoir un permis de conduire. On a tous été adolescents, et on se souvient de la motivation qu'on avait à avoir un permis de conduire et à pouvoir conduire. On a des adolescents, la plupart d'entre nous, qui ont vécu le même processus d'avoir leur G2, leur G1 et puis leur permis de conduire. Quand un adolescent veut son permis de conduire, il est prêt à faire beaucoup de sacrifices. Il est prêt à laver la voiture pour avoir le droit de la conduire. Il est prêt à peut-être garder son frère et sa sœur si ça veut dire qu'il va avoir le droit de conduire. Il est prêt à aller à la messe si ça veut dire que c'est lui, ou elle, qui va conduire, puis il est même prêt d'aller visiter grand-papa et grand-maman si c'est lui ou elle qui va conduire. C'est une opportunité en or. Quand tu penses aux éléments à succès d'une campagne de promotion de la santé, tous les éléments à succès sont là : ils sont motivés, ils veulent apprendre et ils vont développer de bonnes habitudes.

Pour le fumeur qui a déjà associé, « Je rentre dans mon auto; j'allume ma cigarette », ça va être très, très, difficile de désassocier ces deux idées. Pourquoi ne s'assure-t-on pas que les jeunes de 16 ans à 19 ans, quand ils apprennent à conduire, apprennent en associant, « On ne fume pas dans l'auto »? C'est aussi simple que ça. On change le projet de loi. Plutôt que faire à ce que ça s'applique aux enfants jusqu'à 16 ans, ça s'appliquerait aux adolescents de moins de 19 ans—la même chose que pour l'achat des produits de tabac.

J'avais fait un peu de recherche là-dessus—en fait, c'est mon collègue M. Peter Kormos qui a fait la recherche—qui démontre que dans plusieurs autres juridictions ça se passe comme ça. À la Nouvelle-Écosse, plus précisément dans la petite ville de Wolfville, ils ont passé un projet de loi similaire, et la limite d'âge est à 19 ans. Aux États-Unis, plusieurs États ont passé des projets de loi semblables : on parle de la Californie; en Arkansas, on voit qu'ils ont passé un projet de loi semblable où l'âge limite est plus élevé, ce qui a l'effet non seulement de protéger les enfants de la fumée secondaire, mais on continue de les protéger jusqu'à 19 ans et on les empêche d'associer, « Je rentre dans l'auto » avec « Je m'allume une cigarette ». Cela a un pouvoir extraordinaire pour empêcher les adolescents de commencer à fumer, de diminuer leur taux de tabagisme s'ils ont déjà commencé et de les empêcher d'associer les deux. En ce moment, c'est une association qui, pour ceux qui travaillent en promotion de la santé, est très, très difficile à désengager.

Donc, en général nous, les néo-démocrates, sommes en faveur du projet de loi 69, Loi modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée pour protéger les enfants contre le tabagisme passif dans les véhicules automobiles. Mais on pourrait suggérer des amendements pour rendre le projet de loi un pas encore plus loin. Protégeons également les adolescents jusqu'à l'âge de 19 ans. On est d'accord que le projet de loi a reçu l'appui d'une douzaine d'organismes, qu'on parle de l'association des médecins de l'Ontario, de l'Association des infirmières et des infirmiers autorisés de l'Ontario, de l'Association canadienne de santé publique, de l'Association pulmonaire, de la Société canadienne du cancer et des centres pour les dépendances et de la santé mentale.

Je crois qu'on est tous d'accord qu'il y a une bonne base d'appui pour le projet de loi. On a une opportunité de rendre le projet un peu meilleur, de lui faire faire un pas de plus pour contrôler le tabagisme en Ontario. Ne laissons pas passer des opportunités comme ça. Elles ne se présentent pas souvent.

The New Democrats support the spirit of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act. This is a bill that is going in the right direction, and a bill we would support.

We have an opportunity, when this bill goes to committee, to make a few changes. One of the big opportunities is to change the age limit from 16 to 19 years old. This is a golden opportunity for anybody who works in health promotion to do more with the same bill by simply changing the cut-off from 16 to 19 years old.

We recognize that there is a lot of support out there for this bill. Whether it is the Ontario Medical Association, the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario, the Ontario Public Health Association, the lung association, the Canadian Cancer Society, the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health, public health units or non-smokers' rights associations, the list goes on. There is a groundswell of support for this idea, and we, as New Democrats, also lend our support. It is a good idea, but we could take it a bit further and make it a bit better.

The other part that troubles me, and where we would like to see changes, is the enforcement. To give somebody a $250 ticket does absolutely nothing to help that person change their habits. Health promoters all over Ontario will tell you that giving somebody a ticket because they have been caught smoking in a car will do nothing to help them change their habits. We have to do better.

Other jurisdictions have created ways to turn this disrespect of the law into a health promotion opportunity. Some of the opportunities that exist out there are: If you are caught smoking in a car with a child under 19—I take for granted that we'll accept my first amendment—then you would have the opportunity to join a smoking cessation group and participate in activities that will help you quit smoking. This is turning a fine—all a fine does is punish you; it does not help you change a habit such as smoking—into something positive, where you will actually help people make sound decisions for their health by offering them, “You won't have to pay the fine if you can show the court”—or whoever the authority is—“that you have enrolled in a smoking-cessation program and followed steps to help quit smoking.” To the New Democrats, that would be a way to turn this law into a health promotion vehicle.

0930

Une autre partie du projet de loi qui nous dérange, comme nouveaux-démocrates, c'est que se faire punir parce qu'on n'a pas respecté la loi n'aide en aucune façon les gens à arrêter de fumer. Te faire dire que tu dois payer 250 $ parce qu'on t'a arrêté et que tu fumais dans ta voiture avec des gens, je vais dire de moins de 19 ans, parce que je prends pour acquis que mon premier amendement a été accepté, n'est pas un motivateur pour arrêter de fumer et n'est pas un motivateur pour changer tes habitudes envers le tabac.

Il y a d'autres juridictions qui ont des projets de loi très semblables à ce que l'Ontario s'appête à mettre en place, mais qui prennent un focus sur la promotion de la santé. Donc, qu'est-ce que tu peux faire? Si la personne a fumé, avec un enfant ou un adolescent de moins de 19 ans dans sa voiture, tu peux lui offrir de se joindre à un programme pour cesser de fumer, et démontrer à la cour ou à l'instance qui a juridiction que, oui, il a fait les pas nécessaires pour essayer d'arrêter de fumer. Donc, plutôt que de devenir punitif, que tu viens de te faire punir et tu devras payer 250 $, on prend le projet de loi et on lui ajoute une composante de promotion de la santé où l'on offre aux gens de se joindre à un programme pour arrêter de fumer.

Pour nous, les néo-démocrates, c'est d'amener le projet de loi un pas encore plus loin, envers le but qu'on est en train de se donner, de protéger les enfants et d'aider les gens à arrêter de fumer.

Comme je vois que le temps passe, je vais conclure.

I see that I've taken up longer than I thought I would, so I will conclude. The New Democrats will support this bill. We are looking forward to this bill going to committee, and we hope that you will be amenable to a few minor changes that could have a tremendous impact on making this bill an instrument of health promotion.

The first amendment would be with the age cut-off, raising it from 16 to 19. The second one would be to bring alternatives to the $250 fine. Rather than having a $250 fine, let's put alternatives: that people could join smoking-cessation plans, and take steps to stopping smoking. Rather than punishing them with a fine, we would encourage them to change their behaviour.

We're looking forward to this bill going to committee, and we're hoping that you will be amenable to a few amendments.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: I'm pleased to join in and comment on the debate on Bill 69. I want to first congratulate my colleague David Oraziotti for bringing forward this critically important issue and Minister Best for taking up the charge on a bill that builds upon the important work done in our first mandate with respect to bringing forward the Smoke-Free Ontario Act and bringing forward a motivation for change: to change behaviour, to change Ontarians' behaviour so that they can better protect their health.

The Smoke-Free Ontario Act is now going to be amended for yet another area. You're driving along the street and see someone in an automobile with their children, and you know how you, as an adult, feel when you jump into a taxicab or something like that and that vehicle is filled with smoke. Personally, I'll get right out of it, because I don't want to be in that atmosphere. But a young child who knows no different needs to be protected by their parents. This bill makes it clear that it is a decision that we are all going to work on together to ensure that those children are protected.

When we talk about changing behaviour, I think it's so important to talk about carrots and sticks, and information and knowledge that we need to impart to people. I know it is of critical importance that there is stick in this bill—that someone is punished, receives a fine if in fact they break the law. This bill also, though, starts to educate people about what happens to a small set of lungs in a child when they are closed into that vehicle and how much of those toxic chemicals they are breathing in. I think there is another important component, when it comes to those older children, older drivers—peer pressure.

I very much look forward to seeing this bill become law and I stand very much in support of the excellent work being moved forward by Bill 69.

Mr. Ted Arnott: I'm pleased to rise and compliment the member for Nickel Belt for her fine presentation this morning in this House, and certainly indicate my interest in this bill, Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

I'm aware that this government bill was brought forward in this House on April 30 in response to the expressions of concern by the Ontario Medical Association as well as the expressions of interest from our member from Kitchener-Waterloo, who brought forward a private member's resolution with respect to this issue, I believe just before Christmas, which called upon the government to undertake an education campaign of some sort to ensure that people were aware of the dangers—if they weren't already—of smoking in their vehicle while they have children in the back seat.

My wife and I are privileged to be parents of three young boys. They're growing up fast now; they're almost 13, almost 11 and nine years old. We're obviously very well aware of the need at all times to protect our children from any kind of danger. We're not smokers, but I have in the past witnessed parents smoking in cars while they've got young children—hopefully in car seats, at least—in their vehicles. Obviously, those parents are just not aware of the risk that they're putting their children in, in terms of inhaling the second-hand smoke.

For all the years that I've been privileged to serve in the Legislature, I've always made it a point to support anti-tobacco legislation as it's been brought forward. I believe that it is the role of government from time to time to bring forward new legislation to discourage tobacco use and to ensure that especially young people are discouraged, knowledgeable and warned of the dangers. I see this bill as one of a long list of government bills that have been brought forward through the years by all governments, including the New Democrats when they were in office in the years 1990-1995, and I will be supporting this legislation as well.

Once again, I want to compliment the member for Nickel Belt for her presentation here this morning.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's a pleasure to rise and also to compliment my colleague from Nickel Belt, who delivered a lengthy and very well-researched piece on smoking in cars, both in French and in English. We're very proud of her in the New Democratic Party caucus.

I want to pick up on something she said. She spoke about the inefficiency of fining someone who has an addiction issue—and let's face it, nicotine is an addiction issue. People who smoke in cars with children are doing it because they're addicts. They're doing it because they feel that they don't have any choice. One can only imagine the stress that goes into lives where you would put your own child at risk. We see this in a whole range of addictions. We know that the health response to addictions is not one of fines, it's one of treatment.

I certainly support her amendment—and it's a friendly amendment to this motion. She has already said and we in the New Democratic Party caucus have said that we are going to support this bill. We think it's an inch forward—we'd like to say it's a mile forward. It's certainly a step forward, and as such we will support it.

0940

But there are amendments that need to be added to this bill to strengthen it, to address the issue of addiction—in this case addiction to nicotine, of course one of the most dangerous addictions that are out there, partly because it's legal and accessible. Again, we're looking at that amendment and we're also expressing concerns about the enforcement—period.

We know that our police are overworked, that they're under-resourced. We know, because I've spoken to my two divisions on this bill and they kind of threw up their hands and said, "We can't even enforce the laws we already have, never mind adding more laws to our already insane workload." We'd like to see those police officers, those community officers that were promised, delivered, certainly in the 11th and 14th. It gives me an opportunity to say thank you to those police associations and precincts in my riding.

Mr. Kuldip Kular: I'm pleased to participate in the debate on Bill 69. I want to congratulate the Minister of Health Promotion for bringing this bill forward. As a physician, I know that tobacco use is one of the leading causes of preventable diseases and deaths in Ontario.

Smoking, whether it's direct smoking or second-hand smoke, can lead to lung cancer. Lung cancer causes about 13,000 deaths in Ontario. It costs about $1.4 billion in direct health care costs in this province. There's about $4.4 billion in fiscal losses because of productivity losses. I understand that smoking not only causes lung cancer, it can also contribute to other types of cancers, for example, pancreatic cancer, esophageal cancer, bladder cancer, kidney cancer, or some other types of cancer. At this time, medical people don't know what other cancers can be caused by smoking.

As a physician, I support this; as a legislator of this House, I support this bill. The Ontario Medical Association supports this bill; the Ontario Lung Association supports this bill. I think this bill, if passed, is a step forward. It's a step in the right direction. I would urge all members, from any party, to support this bill. I definitely support this bill.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Member for Nickel Belt, you have two minutes to respond.

M<sup>re</sup> France Gélinas: I'd like to start by thanking the members for Etobicoke–Lakeshore, Wellington–Halton Hills, my colleague from Parkdale–High Park and the MPP for Bramalea–Gore–Malton for their comments.

I think we all agree that children are particularly vulnerable to second-hand smoke. They have smaller lungs and a higher respiration rate. Second-hand smoke contributes to respiratory infections, sudden infant death syndrome, ear infections, asthma and, later, cancer, as a member just mentioned.

Second-hand smoke is 23 times more toxic than smoke in the home. Even with all four windows open, the concentration is still not acceptable. Also, second-hand smoke is absorbed into car furnishings and later let off as gases. We know that stale smoke is even more toxic than fresh cigarette smoke.

We also know that, despite public education, many smokers do not perceive exposure to smoke as a health risk. In Ontario right now, only 37% of smokers have made their vehicles smoke-free. But we also know that there is a groundswell of support. Between 55% and 80% of the population, depending on the community, supports this bill. Smoke-free policies prevent youth from starting smoking and send a strong cultural message that this is not culturally acceptable.

But as I mentioned, there's room for improvement. There's room for improvement in the age cut-off, which should be moved from 16 to 19. There's room for improvement in the way that the bill is enforced, to take it from the punitive to more public awareness and education, with fines as a last resort only.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate?

Mr. David Oraziotti: I'm very pleased today to be speaking to Bill 69. I want to thank the Premier for moving this bill forward and also Minister Best for introducing the bill. It has been a bit of a long haul, I would say, but we're here today, and not to presuppose what we're going to do in here, but I want to say that this is going to be great news for kids if this bill is passed.

Over a year ago, I began working with a number of key stakeholders, who pretty much everybody has mentioned here today, and I just want to acknowledge their support. Dr. Janice Willett, who has just changed positions—she is the former president of the Ontario Medical Association—actually practises medicine in the riding of Sault Ste. Marie. I want to thank her very much for her support on this bill, as well as Patrick Nelson and the other folks at the OMA. Michael Perley, who is part of the Ontario Campaign for Action on Tobacco, has been an incredible advocate on this issue. Rocco Rossi from the Heart and Stroke Foundation; George Habib, CEO of the Ontario Lung Association; Peter Goodhand, CEO of the Canadian Cancer Society, Ontario division; and a number of other individuals related to health as well as enforcement. Joanne Di Nardo, from the Ontario Tobacco-Free Network and who works at the Ontario Lung Association, has been instrumental in helping to facilitate a working table that we've had moving along for well over a year now, in consultation with all of the key advocates in the health sector. They were certainly very supportive of this legislation moving forward.

I also want to make reference to our enforcement folks. I made a number of calls to organizations representing the police, both union and management, and there was overwhelming support to move in this direction, and that enforcement was not going to be an issue. It's something that officers can look out for, just as they watch for those who are not wearing seat belts. It would be a matter of pulling someone over if they witness this and believe that someone under the age of 16 is in the vehicle, and they could be fined.

I want to extend my congratulations to the Premier and Minister Best, as well as my colleagues who have all been very supportive of this legislation passing. I want to thank them very much for their support, as well as the many organizations that have come forward.

The bill itself is really moving ahead at a great pace, because we're on the leading edge of this. Only one other province in Canada has passed this legislation. Nova Scotia passed this in December. If we pass this legislation, we're going to be only the second province in Canada to have this type of legislation, so I think we're very much at the forefront of this debate.

There are three US states that have passed it: California, Arkansas, Louisiana. I might add that the fines are substantially less. In Arkansas, the fine is $25; in Louisiana, it's $150; in California, it's $100. So a fine of $250 I think sends a very clear message that we think this is an important issue and that we take it seriously. Six other US states are proposing this type of legislation.

In Canada, British Columbia has a private member's bill that is attempting to make its way forward as well, and in the Yukon, a private member's bill was introduced to do the same thing: to protect children and youth from second-hand smoke in automobiles, because we know what the research says and we know what the statistics say.

I'm also very pleased to see that the bill will be a primary enforcement mechanism. In the state of California, this type of legislation is only a secondary enforcement mechanism. In other words, an officer needs to see someone operating a vehicle doing something else that they believe is not keeping up with the law to also fine them for using tobacco products in the automobile. If an individual is speeding or has a headlight out or there's some other infraction involved, they can pull them over, but they can't pull them over if they stop beside them at a stop light and see young kids strapped in car seats while adults are using tobacco products in the car. They can't fine them. In Ontario, that would be the case if this legislation is passed.

0950

Support for this, according to statistics, has continued to increase over time. In 1995, only 55% of Ontarians supported this. In 2002, 68% supported this. In 2007, 80% of Ontarians indicated that they support some type of legislation that would protect children and youth from second-hand smoke. When it comes to non-smokers, it's 86%, and when you're talking about smokers, 66% of smokers in Ontario feel that we should have some type of legislation that addresses this issue. Clearly, public opinion on this and research that has been provided by many of the organizations I previously mentioned have been key in bringing to light the very severe and negative effects that individuals and young people experience in an automobile while tobacco products are being used. And I might just reference some of those.

The New England Journal of Medicine, in 1990, indicated that one out of every five instances of lung cancer in non-smokers can be attributed to childhood second-hand smoke exposure. So we know there is a correlation.

A 2004 Ontario Medical Association report indicated that the second-hand smoke inside an automobile, in a very confined space, can be 27 times more intense than in a home where tobacco products are used and, in fact, 60 times more intense than in a home where there are no tobacco products used. The exposure in small spaces increases the risk of respiratory illnesses such as bronchitis and pneumonia in children, increases the number of emergency room visits made by asthmatic children, and also has a negative effect on behaviour and cognition in children.

The Harvard School of Public Health and the American Journal of Preventive Medicine 2006 report indicated that exposure to second-hand smoke for children is more likely to result in respiratory infections, sudden infant death syndrome, ear infections and severe asthma symptoms. Children are also more vulnerable to these diseases because of their smaller airways and greater demand for oxygen and higher respiratory rates, as well as their less mature immune system.

Exposure to second-hand smoke in a car for an hour for a child is the equivalent of a child smoking between 17 and 35 cigarettes. I don't know who would let their child smoke 17 to 35 cigarettes in an hour, but the average child in Ontario spends about 50 minutes a day in an automobile. So if you have children spending 50 minutes a day in an automobile, and you have adults using tobacco products in the car, and it's the equivalent of a child smoking, in an hour, 17 to 35 cigarettes, I think we all know just how intense and how severe the effects are when we are talking about our youngest Ontarians.

This leads to other illnesses, as I've indicated and as the research has indicated, being developed in these children at a much earlier stage in their life, and it leads to their having more frequent visits to our emergency rooms, putting more strain on our health care system. Frankly, these young children really don't have a choice. If mum and dad are going to get in the car and drive 600 miles to a relative's home and they are smokers, you can just imagine the effect on those children.

I have to say that when I introduced the private member's bill back in the fall, with the comments I received at our office—the e-mails, phone calls, letters—and the discussions from coast to coast in this country, from folks in Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Halifax, the interest in this was very significant. I had many people tell me that when they were children their parents smoked in the car and they are very happy to see this moving forward, because they wish there had been a law in place when they were children growing up, because they really struggled, being in the vehicle while people were using tobacco products when they were kids. They have other illnesses now related to that. It's something that I suppose, as we continue to learn more about and get more research on, like many other issues related to health promotion, we'll move forward in the right direction.

I think Ontario is very much at the leading edge of this in terms of Canadian provinces. So I'm very pleased to see that; 80% of Ontarians support this.

I want to take a second and reference the issue around the fines. I heard the member from Nickel Belt say that fines aren't effective and we need education, but then say that the fines aren't high enough. I'm not sure what it's going to be here, but I think the fines are important because obviously education is not getting to everybody who needs this message, because unfortunately to this day I still see people in my community, and I know other people see them as well, who are using tobacco products and have children in car seats.

With respect to the age, this was the age that I had proposed, and I'm pleased that our government is moving forward in this direction. Unless we're going to get serious with the 13-year-olds and 14-year-olds and 16-year-olds who are standing outside schools using tobacco products, I think we have to be realistic in what we're going to enforce. Are we really going to pull an 18-year-old over who's operating a vehicle by themselves and smoking a cigarette and say, "We're going to fine you for smoking in that vehicle," or pull over a 17-year-old who's operating a vehicle, having a cigarette, and say, "We're going to fine you for using tobacco in that automobile"? Unless we're going to get serious with much younger people in this province who are, we know, using tobacco products, I think we have to be realistic about the age. I think the age is appropriate. I think once individuals have their licence to drive, the legislation will address that. We know that in the province you need to be 19 years old to buy tobacco products, but there's no age limit to use tobacco products in the province.

So I support the legislation as it has been introduced. Again, I want to congratulate Minister Margaret Best for taking the leadership role to do this, and I know she'll do a very capable job of making sure that the bill is passed in this Legislature. As I hear opposition members talk about their support for this legislation, I hope this will be passed in a very timely fashion because I think we know that it has the potential to help save the lives of many children in this province and help reduce the negative health effects that they're exposed to by adults using tobacco products in their automobiles.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Mr. Kuldip Kular: I'll again say at the outset that I support Bill 69, which will ban smoking in cars when children are present.

Second-hand smoke is known to cause respiratory illnesses such as asthma and lung cancer. Even though children in a car do not smoke directly, it's second-hand smoke, so that's why the Minister of Health Promotion has brought Bill 69 forward to ban this.

If Bill 69 is passed as it is, it will definitely make sure that we prevent deaths and disease caused by tobacco use. Tobacco use is known to cause not only asthma and respiratory illnesses, but also lung cancer and other types of cancers like esophageal cancer, bladder cancer and kidney cancer.

Whether it's a direct or indirect type of smoking, it's costing our province $1.4 billion in direct health care costs. It's also costing our province $4.4 billion in productivity loss. When people are sick, whether it's asthma or respiratory illnesses, they lose work and the province loses out on productivity.

I think this bill is a step forward, and I fully support it.

1000

Mr. Peter Shurman: I'd like to respond briefly to the comments of my friend from Sault Ste. Marie.

This bill amazes me. On the one hand, yes, your opposition friends will support the bill. It's apple pie and motherhood, and I support apple pie and motherhood. Don't smoke in cars with children: It's nanny-state legislation, like so much on the agenda this year, and it bothers me—

Interjections.

Mr. Peter Shurman: I'm sorry. It bothers me for a reason. It's like saying you're going to introduce a bill that makes it illegal to be a moron in Ontario because only a moron would smoke in a car with a kid. I never did, even when I was a smoker, 25 years or so ago. Yes, there are morons in the province.

Now, let's go to point two: How do you police it? Well, we'll send the OPP, tearing down the 401, looking for people smoking in cars where they have kids in car seats. Is that going to happen? I don't think so.

We hear about the good work of the Smoke-Free Ontario Act and the Minister of Health Promotion bringing in a bill like this to protect our children and yet, for—what?—two months in this House, I have repeatedly asked questions about cigarettes getting into the hands of children on an illicit basis.

There are studies that have been done by the Ontario Convenience Stores Association that take a look at the butts of cigarettes found in school yards, and what have we got? We've got 40% usage of illicit cigarettes in Aurora and 40% usage in Mississauga, and yet we have legislation here that's going to make it illegal to smoke in a car with a kid because we want to protect our children. Of course we want to protect our children. But can we do something with teeth? Can we potentially put something into play that actually helps our children by shutting down illegal smoke shops that put these cigarettes into their hands, not passing meaningless, moron legislation?

Interjection.

Mr. Ted Arnott: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I distinctly heard the Minister of Transportation, in his interjection, talking about dogs barking. I believe the Speaker has ruled that out of order on more than one occasion. I would ask you to call him to order.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): I think your point is well made. That is a point of order, and I would ask all of us in this House to take heed to it.

The member for Nickel Belt.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I'd like to make a few comments following the member from Sault Ste. Marie's remarks, and maybe follow up a little bit on the comments from the member from Thornhill.

First, I agree with the member from Thornhill that this is not a bill that will shatter all bills; it's pretty light. We've already agreed that there is a 55% to 80% groundswell of support behind it. So, whether we pass this law or not, people are getting the message that smoking when there are kids in the car is not a good idea. At the end of the day, are we going to change a whole lot of things? Not that much. But we have a health promotion opportunity here. The law can become a powerful public education tool to raise awareness about the risk. To say right off the bat that we're not going to consider moving it to 19 years old because all of a sudden enforcement becomes the be-all and end-all of this bill—like you said, are we going to stop a 17-year-old because he's smoking? Are we going to stop an 18-year-old in a car because he's smoking? No. And we're not going to stop a 35-, 65- or 85-year-old in his car because he's smoking with a kid in the car.

This is not what the spirit of the bill is about. The spirit of the bill is about health promotion. It's about sending a message that, yes, people here in this Legislature are concerned about second-hand smoke for children and want to send a powerful message. None of us believes that law enforcement officers are going to be chasing down cars and handing out fines, whether it be for a 17-year-old or an 18-year-old. I want you to think about that.

Ms. Helena Jaczek: I would like to again rise in this House in support of this Bill 69, and congratulate our colleague from Sault Ste. Marie for his great initiative in the previous Parliament in bringing this private member's bill forward.

I certainly feel that a number of the comments of our colleague from Nickel Belt in relation to health promotion are interesting and important comments as they relate to cultural issues, in particular. As I think about this bill—in my riding of Oak Ridges—Markham we have so many newer Canadians in the community, specifically the Asian and South Asian communities—certainly, the efforts of the local public health units in their health promotion activities will need to focus very much on those particular communities, which may need some additional explanation as to the importance of this bill, so that they fully understand the health benefits of not smoking in a vehicle, in terms of the risks to their children.

I think it's very important to emphasize the impact that tobacco smoking can have on a young child's lungs—the harm it can do. We have certainly seen asthma rates rising in children, and I have no doubt whatsoever that the habit some parents have of smoking in their cars with their children there has contributed to that. As so many have said, no parent knowingly wishes to put their child at risk. Very often public education and health promotion activities will ensure voluntary compliance.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Member for Sault Ste. Marie, you have two minutes to respond.

Mr. David Oraziatti: I want to thank the members for Bramalea—Gore—Malton, Nickel Belt and Oak Ridges—Markham for their comments.

We know that the public supports this legislation. And how long have we known that smoking is bad for us? Forty years? Your party had an opportunity to pass this. You didn't. So let's not sit here and say this is “meaningless, moron legislation,” to quote the member from Thornhill—that's what he said. I would expect you're going to be voting against this, with that kind of comment, right? You had an opportunity to pass it; you didn't pass it. I want to congratulate our Premier and our minister for showing the leadership to introduce this bill and ensure that we protect kids in the province of Ontario.

Smoking has cost the lives of 13,000 Ontarians every year, and costs our health care system $1.7 billion every year. Yet I hear the member from Thornhill say this is “meaningless, moron legislation.” I can't believe the comments from the opposition. Either you're for it or against it. You had an opportunity to introduce it; you didn't do it. Let's get it straight: We are on the side of young people who need their quality of life protected in an environment where adults continue to use tobacco products in automobiles. It's not healthy—we know that; the research has been there for many years—and so we're moving forward with it. We know that an adult exposing a child to second-hand smoke for one hour in an automobile has the effect of that child's using 17 to 35 cigarettes in that hour. The research is there; we're supporting it. I'd like to hear the opposition members stand up and say, “This is good legislation, and we support it,” not, “This is meaningless, moron legislation.” I can't believe it.

I'm very thankful that our Premier and our minister are showing the leadership on this to ensure it's passed.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate?

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I am very pleased, personally, to be able to support this bill. In fact, this particular bill was one I had also prepared. Legislative counsel would know that I was also set to introduce a very similar bill, and the member from Sault Ste. Marie got out there just ahead of me. Anyway, I do support it.

As a former health minister, I put in place many initiatives to do what we could to eliminate smoking and, hopefully, raise the awareness of people in Ontario to the impact of smoking on the health of people. Anyway, I support this bill.

When the member introduced his bill and my bill was not going anywhere, I decided that one way I could help move his bill forward was to introduce a resolution that would support him and also, hopefully, convince his Premier, who initially said he didn't support the member's bill, to recognize that the opposition supported the bill as well. So one week later, on December 13, I introduced a resolution, “That, in the opinion of this House, the government ... should protect the children and youth of this province from the harmful effects of second-hand smoke in automobiles by immediately implementing an effective province-wide campaign to educate parents about the dangers of smoking in vehicles when a person who is less than 16 years of age is present.”

1010

You know, sometimes I believe there are opportunities for the government member who has a private member's bill to be supported by a member of the opposition. I hope that I, in the way that I introduced my resolution, made the Premier reconsider his initial reaction, which was simply to indicate that he was not going to go down this—he called it a “slippery slope.” Originally, he didn’t see it as a necessary bill, to protect children from second-hand smoking in cars.

When he continued to object to the bill that had been introduced by the member from Sault Ste. Marie, I wrote him another letter, after the introduction of my resolution on December 13. On January 24, in fact, I had an open letter to the Premier stating:

“Dear Premier McGuinty,

“As we recognize National Non-Smoking Week, I call on your government to take action to immediately implement a new anti-smoking initiative to introduce an effective province-wide campaign to educate parents and others of the dangers of smoking in motor vehicles while children are inside.” I told him that I supported the ban on smoking in vehicles while children are present. I said that I believed it was time for our province to do what had already been done in Nova Scotia last year, when that province became the first in Canada to ban smoking in vehicles with children.

I also indicated at that time that I was disappointed because the health promotion minister had indicated that we weren’t going to do anything about this until the end of the year, and I wanted him to make this a priority for his government. I said that if you wait until the end of the year, which would have been 2008—I reminded him that second-hand smoke in a vehicle is 23 times more toxic than in a house because of that smaller space. I said, “If you’re not going to move forward on introducing the ban that has been proposed, then will you at least institute a province-wide campaign to educate parents and others of the danger of smoking in vehicles while children under the age of 16 are inside?”

I think we can all say, “Well, it makes sense. Why would anybody do that?” The reality is that people do smoke in cars when their children are in those cars, and obviously it’s extremely dangerous to their health. All of the research shows that children and youth are particularly susceptible to the harmful effects of second-hand smoke. I said to the Premier, “Can we afford to gamble with the health of even one child?”—the answer being “no.”

I went on in my letter to say that we’ve known for a long time that smoking is a significant cause of preventable illness, disability and premature death in Canada. In fact, second-hand smoke continues to claim the lives of more than 1,000 Canadians each year—and to think that that is almost totally preventable. This initiative is just one more step in taking action that would prevent the illness, the disability and the premature deaths.

I concluded my remarks to the Premier in my letter of January 24 by saying, “Unless we take a more aggressive and immediate approach to promote healthier lifestyles, our health system will be further consumed by preventable chronic diseases and needless deaths.” Then I asked him to deal with this issue of great importance to our children.

I hope that the introduction of the bill by the member for Sault Ste. Marie, my supportive resolution, my letter, plus, I believe, the flood of letters and e-mails that probably all MPPs received, influenced the Premier in making the decision to move forward with this bill.

I would have to say to you personally, as a former health minister and as a mother, that I appreciate the fact that this initiative has come forward. The reality is, we need to make sure that we protect our children. We already, as you know, have banned smoking in workplaces and in public areas such as bars and restaurants. It seemed that the next step simply was this ban in cars. I don’t know how anybody can object to it. That’s my personal opinion. We all know that our children are totally defenceless. They depend on adults to make responsible decisions on their behalf. This really is the least that we could do.

We know that we have seen widespread support, certainly from those who deal with people who suffer from illnesses, disease and death as a result of smoking. We’ve heard the lung association being supportive, the Ontario Medical Association—our doctors see the consequences every day—Canadian cancer, heart and stroke. The reality is, there’s no evidence to the contrary. We need to move forward and we need to make sure that this happens.

Since the introduction of the ban in Nova Scotia, and now the introduction of a bill by ourselves, of course, we know that British Columbia has also taken the initiative to move forward. We know that New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island are considering a similar ban. So this is an issue—I don’t see it as being partisan. I see us moving forward on behalf of all of the children in the province of Ontario, to give them the protection that they need.

I think, though, at the same time, we also need to continue to educate people about the consequences of smoking. We sometimes assume in this House that it’s common sense. I don’t think it’s necessarily common sense. There are all sorts of things that adults do without always considering the consequences. For example, we know people who drink—mothers, when they’re pregnant. That has an impact, obviously, on some of the children. So we have to alert them to what the dangers of smoking in a car are. In fact, I hope we can take whatever steps are possible to educate all people about the need to refrain from smoking. It’s tough.

Hon. James J. Bradley: What a positive voice they have over there.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Thank you very much.

We could go on and on and talk about this bill, but the reality is, I think most of it has been said. It’s common sense. We know there are health consequences. I can remember, when I was Minister of Health, the different initiatives that we did undertake in order to ensure that we could move this agenda forward. It’s an agenda that has been moving forward in all of the provinces in Canada. As I indicated, Ontario is just one of the most recent provinces to move forward, but others are going there too.

I could read you off lists of all of the dangers of smoking, but I think, again, most people know that it is a major cause of heart disease, it is a major cause of strokes, it is a major cause of cancer, vascular system—in fact, smoking-related cardiovascular disease is responsible for more than 6,000 deaths in Ontario each year. That's a significant number of people who are dying because of smoking-related cardiovascular deaths. When you consider that number, it would just make sense that we wouldn't expose our children to smoking, because later on in life this will continue to have an impact on them.

1020

I support the age under 16. I think that is an appropriate age. I believe that once someone starts to drive in a car—I mean, we assume that they're capable of making the appropriate decisions regarding the operation of that vehicle, so I believe that is important.

There are other states in the United States that have actually banned smoking. I would just share with you that the Yukon, Arkansas, California, Maine, Louisiana, Puerto Rico, South Australia and Tasmania have. We are simply doing what others have already done before us. We weren't the leaders, but nonetheless the government recognized that the public supported this bill.

I think that's the other thing that was most interesting: If you take a look at any of the research that was done, there was actually widespread public support for this particular piece of legislation. I would also just say that if you take a look at preventable deaths, tobacco use is the number one preventable cause of death in Ontario. It kills 13,000 people every year in Ontario. To date, no scientific authority or regulatory health body in the world has established a safe level of exposure to second-hand smoke. We know that second-hand smoke contains 4,000 chemicals, and more than 50 are known or suspected carcinogens. Children are especially vulnerable to second-hand smoke because they have higher respiration rates than adults and their respiratory, immune and nervous systems are still developing. Going back to the poll and the fact that there is public support for protecting these children who are so vulnerable, there was agreement in a 2007 Ipsos Reid poll that 80% of Ontarians agree that children should be protected from second-hand smoke in a vehicle. This is a 25% increase in public support from 1996.

I'd just like to remind the audience that when I was Minister of Health between 1997 and 2001, I did promote an agenda. In fact, we put in place a continuum of what we believed to be health services. It began with health promotion. It then focused on primary care, making sure people had access to a family doctor. It then focused on the hospitals. But then it focused, afterwards, on long-term care and home care. Part of the agenda for wellness and health promotion and disease prevention was to focus and develop a strategy. We worked with partners to make sure that we did everything we could in order to eliminate smoking and encourage people to not start smoking, particularly young people. We also focused on the need to eat healthy and, of course, on the need for clean air and the need for exercise. These are all parts of a healthy life.

We cannot sustain our health system. We can't afford our health system to continue paying for preventable deaths. If you take a look at the number of people who are dying every year in the province of Ontario because of tobacco—13,000—we need to do everything we possibly can. We need to continue to move forward. I'm glad that the government is continuing to move forward on some of the steps that we put in place regarding disease prevention, health promotion, encouraging people not to smoke and educating them about why it shouldn't happen. Today, this bill is just a logical step forward in that process.

We've already banned, as I said before, smoking in workplaces. In this instance, we're simply focusing our attention on a very vulnerable group of people: children under the age of 16 who don't have their own voice when traveling in a car with a parent, or perhaps with a grandparent, a family friend or someone else who may be carpooling them to some event or to school. We're simply saying that once this bill is passed, those children would no longer have to be exposed to second-hand smoke in cars.

I'm pleased the bill is moving forward. I certainly support it. The sooner the bill is passed, the sooner we can put in place the framework, and the sooner it becomes law, I personally will be grateful. As I say, it's something as a former health minister I strongly support, and I hope we can continue to do more.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I want to thank and support the member from Kitchener–Waterloo for her comments. We in the New Democratic Party also will be in support of this bill. It is a small step on a long road, but a step in the right direction.

The damage done by second-hand smoke cannot be underestimated. Twenty years ago when I started my career, if you went into any primary school and there was a group of 30 children in front of you, you would talk to the kids and ask, "Do any of you have asthma?" They didn't know what the word meant. Maybe one of their siblings or neighbours had asthma. Now if you walk into any elementary school and there is a group—it doesn't have to be a big group—of 12 to 30, you ask the kids if any of them have asthma and you are guaranteed that at least one out of four will raise their hand. They know what asthma is all about. They have all seen it. They've all seen puffers. They know what they're used for. They know the symptoms and they know what to do.

Things have changed, but not for the better. There shouldn't be an epidemic of asthma among young children in Ontario, but there is. We can't help but link the fact that as children get exposed to second-hand smoke, it just contributes to more respiratory infections, more asthma and, we all know, chances of cancer later in life. This is a small step, but a step that's worthy of our support.

Mr. John O'Toole: I am always pleased to respond to the remarks made by our member from Kitchener-Waterloo, Ms. Witmer. She comes at this with a great deal of experience, as well as respect in the health industry. I know when she spoke to caucus very passionately about this issue, it reminded all of us how important the issue is.

I think it's important to recognize the work done by the member from Sault Ste. Marie, in all due respect, as a young person with an athletic background setting a good example in his community. I know he played hockey and things like that. To set that example is very good and important in your riding.

The member from Thornhill, when he took exception to it, was really trying to point to the issue that Minister Best, the Minister of Health Promotion, brought in this bill. I think it was brought in to deflect some issues that were on the agenda, on the horizon, right across the whole economy. I see the Minister of Agriculture is here and the Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal and other people are in the chamber this morning. It's important to know that there's a lot of downside in the economy right now. I think this was really a way of getting something off the radar screen without actually doing anything that would be controversial.

And yet the Minister of Agriculture knows that they haven't solved the issue of how to get the agricultural industry problem solved for the tobacco growers. How are they going to move them to other commodities? It is an industry. It's a legal product. I don't particularly enjoy it. I'm a reformed smoker so I'd be even harsher. But they have no plan. That's one of the issues that Mrs. Witmer tried to bring out. It's a bit of a smokescreen to the economy.

I do want to be on record as supporting this. As a grandparent with four grandchildren, I would be remiss not to say that we should all be doing the right thing. The issue of enforcement is going to be the right thing, by educating the public to do the right thing and not put our children at risk.

1030

Mr. David Oraziatti: It is a pleasure to be able to add some comments to the member for Kitchener-Waterloo, the health critic for the Conservatives. I thank her for her support of this legislation. I know that she has put forward a resolution and I did receive her news release and some of the other commentary, so I want to thank her for that. She has been vocal about her support for this legislation as well.

The member from Thornhill perhaps needs to make sure that he's speaking to his health critic, because there might be some mixed signals over there. I don't want to see people calling this bill meaningless, moronic legislation. I'm not sure if the member from Thornhill took his briefing from Mychoice, backed by Imperial Tobacco, because we know that Mychoice has been very actively pursuing our members and is out there talking about how it's okay to have adults using tobacco products with kids in cars. I was contacted by Mychoice and they don't think there's anything wrong with this.

This is still a serious issue. I still see this in my community. I saw this several weeks ago. I saw it several months ago. Every now and then when you pull up at a stop light, you see an adult using tobacco products, with kids strapped in car seats and the windows cracked the customary inch or two, and there is a haze of smoke in the car. We want to do the right thing, and I know members of the opposition want to do the right thing as well. I hear their comments and I welcome those comments. I think this is a much-needed initiative in this province.

Let's not forget that we're still very much on the leading edge of doing this. There's only one other province in this country that has passed this legislation, about six or seven months ago. No other provinces have passed this. There are only three US states that have passed this and some counties that passed it as well. So it's something that is still not being driven home to people, so to speak. Education can only take us so far, and we do need enforcement on this issue. I want to encourage all members of the House to support this legislation.

Mr. Ted Arnott: I'm very pleased to compliment the member for Kitchener-Waterloo on her fine presentation this morning with respect to Bill 69. It's unfortunate that the member for Sault Ste. Marie tried to introduce a tone of partisanship into the questions and comments that followed her speech, because clearly our caucus is quite supportive of this legislation. I remember, immediately after the election—in speaking with the member from Kitchener-Waterloo and, certainly, within our caucus—her advocacy for this issue, indicating her intention to bring forward legislation to discourage adults smoking in cars when kids are in the back seat. Certainly that was her intention, and I was pleased that she followed up with her resolution right before Christmas.

It was, I think, a very good example of where we can work across the aisle in the public interest. When we take that approach, we're serving the public interest, I would argue. The private member's bill being brought forward, introduced by the member for Sault Ste. Marie, was criticized immediately by the Premier. But apparently after he received the polling data that some of his staff people probably showed him, indicating the strong level of support for this legislation, as well as the advocacy by the member for Kitchener-Waterloo, we see ultimately a government bill introduced on April 30—more than six months after the election, I would add.

I think the member for Kitchener-Waterloo has brought an important perspective to the debate. As a Minister of Health, she brought forward a number of very important wellness initiatives, a whole agenda surrounding the issue of wellness and how we could promote wellness, as opposed to just treating illness. I think the work she did in that regard is something that our party is very proud of as we look back at our legacy in government. In her capacity as health critic, she continues to bring forward meaningful initiatives within this Legislature that the Minister of Health should listen to and heed. Again, I would encourage all members of the House to listen to the member from Kitchener-Waterloo with respect to this issue and all the issues that she brings forward in the House, especially the issues revolving around health care.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Member for Kitchener–Waterloo, you have two minutes to respond.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I appreciate the words from the member from Nickel Belt, someone who has certainly demonstrated her concern for the health and well-being of people in the province of Ontario; obviously, my colleague from Durham, who indicated that as a grandfather of four and a reformed smoker, he recognizes the need for this type of legislation to protect our children; and the person, of course, who introduced the private member's bill, the member from Sault Ste. Marie.

As I say, I just think it's really interesting that two people from different parts of the province both were prepared at the same time to introduce similar legislation. I'm glad it happened. It is an example of us being able to work together in order to make something possible to improve the quality of life of, in this case, the children of our province. I hope that my support for his bill and my resolution and then, of course, subsequent feedback helped persuade the Premier to take action and move this bill to where it is today.

Of course, I thank my colleague the member from Wellington–Halton Hills very much for his comments. He works very hard on behalf of his constituents. I know he has three children. Each day, he certainly tries to make sure that he improves the quality of life, not only for his own family, but for people in the province of Ontario.

I would just hearken back to what I said before, and that is that as Minister of Health, my focus very much was on the wellness agenda, the need to focus on disease prevention, health promotion. Besides focusing on this, I focused on providing the free flu vaccine, which I know has prevented illness and death.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I'd like to rise to correct my record. Yesterday in estimates, I made reference to a company called Koolatron as being in financial difficulty. I'm happy to report that the company is solvent and operating happily in Brantford, Ontario.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): That is a point of order, and we thank you for that.

Further debate?

Mr. Mike Colle: I'm here today to support Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

First of all, I want to point out the incredible leadership that the member from Sault Ste. Marie, David Oraziotti, has shown, in that when nobody was willing to take this battle on, he did so when there weren't many people who were interested enough or who were not aware of the dangers of second-hand smoke in a confined space and what it was doing to children.

I see there are children here from one of the local schools, and I think it's very important for them to understand that this legislation ensures that adults who are driving automobiles do not use tobacco products, because it intensifies the harm of the tobacco smoke when it's in an enclosed space. So if a child is in the car and the adult is smoking, I think the member from Sault Ste. Marie mentioned it's almost like forcing that child to smoke 10 or 12 cigarettes.

We know unequivocally, after years of denial by big tobacco—big tobacco paid billions of dollars trying to persuade people that smoking was good for them. They denied the fact that smoking was causing cancer. Literally millions of people in the world died as big tobacco was trying to persuade people that tobacco did not cause cancer. In fact, there are still some people out there today who will deny that there's a linkage between smoking tobacco products and cancer, despite the fact that right now in Ontario hospitals there are thousands of people who are on respirators, who have lung cancer, throat cancer, mouth cancer, cancers of all sorts, caused by using tobacco products.

1040

The member from Sault Ste. Marie added to our very strong Smoke-Free Ontario Act, which was a new paradigm in educating and prohibiting the use of tobacco products in public spaces. That means that whether you're in a restaurant, whether you're in some kind of public space, in a hockey arena or wherever you are, you cannot use tobacco products. So the Smoke-Free Ontario Act covers most of the prohibitions in public spaces. It is a piece of legislation which sets the groundwork for protecting the health of Ontarians, and not only protecting their health, but there are billions of dollars used to treat people who are victims of cancerous tobacco.

I think there are over 450 hospitals in Ontario, and you'll find in every hospital—maybe some of the young children here today should visit a hospital and talk to some of the victims of cancerous tobacco so they can see what this awful, addictive drug does to people. It is not only costing the health of those people in these hospitals—killing people—but it is costing the health care system billions of dollars every year to treat the victims of cancerous tobacco. So there's almost a double whammy: the unfortunate individuals who are dying of cancer because of tobacco, and their families, and then also—

Mr. John Yakabuski: Why don't you ban it?

Mr. Mike Colle: I know the members of the Conservatives are for the tobacco industry and they keep on heckling me in favour of it, but on this side we think that cancer is caused by tobacco and children in the back seats of cars should not be exposed to cancerous tobacco smoke. That's why the member from Sault Ste. Marie was brave enough to bring forward this piece of legislation, against much opposition from the Conservative side. He has put this forward and now the government of Ontario has taken on this bill—Bill 69—which will ensure that innocent children will not be exposed to cancerous tobacco, which the Conservatives are heckling in favour of, because they don't see the danger and they don't read the medical records of the thousands and millions of people who have died as a result of tobacco.

This is another strong step that our government is taking to ensure that this kind of dangerous behaviour does not occur, because it puts the danger of cancer into a confined space in an intensified fashion, and that is why this legislation is important.

I know the Conservatives talk about this being part of a "nanny state." They say the government is going too far by doing this: "Why do they have to do this?" Well, they said the same thing about the Smoke-Free Ontario Act: "Why do you have to have a smoke-free Ontario? We want the right to smoke in Ontario."

This is all about ensuring that the people of Ontario are protected from this hazardous product. They don't have to go into a restaurant and a child doesn't have to be in a car and exposed to this hazardous product. This is the type of thing that Bill 69 does. It protects those who cannot, in some cases because they may be small children, stop the adult from smoking in the car. Therefore, we ask the help of all members of society to ensure that this practice, which many Conservatives condone, should not be allowed in this province. It is part of educating, fining people and telling them that this is something that is not allowed in Ontario.

Again, I congratulate the member from Sault Ste. Marie for having the courage of his conviction to do this. He fought for this private member's bill to the point where the government adopted it because of his hard work, his vision and his caring for children across Ontario. I think all of us in this province should be thankful to the member from Sault Ste. Marie for having the vision and the courage to do this when big tobacco said it wasn't necessary. Big tobacco still says that these measures are not necessary.

We need more members like the member from Sault Ste. Marie, who fight for what they believe in and make this a better province.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The hour being 10:45, the debate stands adjourned.

Second reading debate deemed adjourned.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): On behalf of the member from Toronto Centre, we would like to welcome representatives from the Campaign to Control Cancer group, including patients, survivors, advocates and health care professionals.

On behalf of the member from Oakville: in the west public gallery, the grade 5 class and teachers from Brookdale Public School.

On behalf of the member from Mississauga-Erindale: the grade 10 class from Erindale Secondary School, seated in the east public gallery.

On behalf of page Sheilagh Brenegan: in the west members' gallery, Lynn Brenegan, her aunt; Georgia Brenegan, her nana; and Stan Brenegan, her papa.

On behalf of page Matthew Wilson: in the west members' gallery, Andrew Wilson, his brother; Fraser Wilson, his father; and Kim Wilson, his mother.

On behalf of the member from Eglinton-Lawrence and the member from York West, we'll be joined later this morning by Gianni Bardini, the consul general of Italy, who will be seated in the east members' gallery.

On behalf of the member from Toronto Centre, we'd like to welcome the parents of page Rafaël Lemmens-Chapdelaine: Trudo Lemmens, his father; Pascale Lemmens-Chapdelaine, his mother; and Alberic Lemmens-Chapdelaine, his sibling, in the east members' gallery.

As well, on behalf of page Matthew Chaput: in the east members' gallery, Mary Shay, his grandmother, and Gerry Chaput, his father.

On behalf of Premier McGuinty and Minister Watson, I'd like to introduce Emma Brownlie of Ottawa, a student of D. Roy Kennedy Public School, who's accompanied by her mother, Cheryl Brownlie; her grandparents, Leila and Forrest Buckingham; and her aunt, Nancy Tilt. Emma is the CanWest CanSpell National Spelling Bee champion, and she's representing Canada at the world spelling bee championship next week in Washington. She's in the east members' gallery. Welcome, and welcome to all our guests to Queen's Park today.

ORAL QUESTIONS

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: My question is to the Premier, again dealing with his government's relationship with General Motors. Given that General Motors is one of the largest beneficiaries of what in many cases seems to be a bottomless bowl of money, the government, in our view, has fumbled their strategy in this regard. We're seeing job loss after job loss. I think it's raising legitimate questions about their approach. We believe it's time to shine a light on the deals that this government has made with automakers. Taxpayers have a right to know how their monies are being used and what net gain there is for this province. Premier, will you immediately release the details of your funding agreements with automakers?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: It's hard to figure out from one day to the next where the official opposition is coming from on this score, and I'll tell you why. Just recently—in fact, on April 28—the member for Oshawa stood up in this House and asked a question about the auto sector. He said: "It's extremely important that we come forward with a plan that'll give initiatives to make sure that we build a stronger economy...."

"What are you specifically going to do to aid the auto sector?"

A little while ago, the leader of the official opposition said the following: "[A]ny Premier of Ontario must keep in his toolbox all of the tools necessary to make sure we maintain and attract automobile investment in the province of Ontario...."

"I would consider direct investment, in appropriate cases, to be something that you could use and should use...."

So I say to the official opposition: Are they in favour of supporting the Ontario auto sector or are they not?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary?

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: Speaker, I'm not sure if you heard an answer there; I didn't. We're talking about specifics with respect to contracts made with General Motors and other automakers. I think we're talking about significant taxpayers' dollars that are going into these funds. Taxpayers have a right to know what the net benefit is.

1050

What we are seeing today is 1,400 jobs now being lost in Windsor, a city that is already facing 10% unemployment, and significant layoffs in Oshawa with General Motors. You are very quick to forget that the money you're handing out with no strings attached is taxpayers' hard-earned money. Taxpayers have a right to know what value they're getting for the money that's gone to General Motors. Based on the job notices, it appears that we're getting the raw end of the deal. Why won't you disclose the details of these contracts?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I think the results are pretty important. And I think it's important to understand what's happening to the auto sector in the North American economy. Our three biggest competitors in this regard are Michigan, Ohio and Indiana. From 1999 to 2005, Michigan lost 90,000 jobs, a 30% decline; Ohio lost 29,000 jobs, a 19% decline; Indiana lost 16,000 jobs, a 15% decline. It is true that we have lost jobs in the province of Ontario. We've lost 6,000 jobs; that's a 4% decline. But at the same time, of those massive losses, we've secured a $1-billion new investment from Ford, a $2.5-billion new investment from GM and a $768-million new investment from DaimlerChrysler. And contrary to Michigan, we have Toyota and Honda in our province.

We've been doing very well, given the competition, given global economic circumstances, and we continue to press forward to secure even more new investment to create more jobs in the province of Ontario.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: In the bigger picture, they've lost 207,000 manufacturing jobs in the last three and a half years—and growing.

I think a quote I put on the record yesterday from David Adams, the president of the Association of International Automobile Manufacturers, bears repeating: "As it currently stands, Ontario is now one of the most expensive jurisdictions in the world to manufacture vehicles." That's because of your policies over the last four years, and shoving taxpayers' money out the door is not going to solve that problem.

What Ontarians are seeing is that the deal you've made with General Motors has gone badly for taxpayers and for General Motors workers in Oshawa and Windsor. It demands scrutiny; it demands transparency and accountability.

Now we find out General Motors is looking for even more taxpayer money. Before we can trust you again in going into an agreement with this company or others, I think it's clear that you must disclose the details of past contracts. Will you do that?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: The leader of the official opposition really should get hold of his counterparts in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, because I can tell you what they're asking their governors is, why is Ontario eating their lunch? Why is it that when they've lost 90,000 jobs, 29,000 jobs and 16,000 jobs, experiencing anything from a 15% to a 30% decline in jobs, Ontario has emerged with only a 4% decline in jobs? Why is it that we secured the greatest amount of new investment in North America here in Ontario in the last four years? Why do we have a brand new greenfield Toyota assembly plant? Why did we land that here in Ontario?

There is undoubtedly a real challenge facing the global economy when it comes to the auto sector, but we have more than held our own. We've gleaned an unfair share. We intend to pursue as aggressively as possible a still further share of the limited auto sector economy. We want more new investment and more new jobs here in Ontario.

NATIVE LAND DISPUTE

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: My question is to the Attorney General. It's regarding the letter sent by Six Nations Council Chief William Montour clearly suggesting that the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs intervened in an ongoing police investigation and prevented the laying of charges. That's potentially a serious criminal offence. Minister, given the clear and serious implications of what Chief Montour is saying in his letter—and you were copied on that letter as well—what did you do about it?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: That's right, I was copied on the letter.

The issue in the letter that the Leader of the Opposition makes reference to is answered directly by OPP Commissioner Julian Fantino in his letter to the Dunnville Chronicle, which the member should have had a copy of before raising the question. He says, "At no time during this event, or in relation to any police operation, did anyone in government or elsewhere tell the OPP to stand down or direct the operations of the OPP."

That thoroughly and completely addresses the issues raised by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I would suggest that's an abdication of responsibility on the part of the Attorney General. Certainly we appreciate Commissioner Fantino's perspective, but what about Chief Montour's perspective? You're going to completely ignore it.

Given the seriousness of Chief Montour's comments and his request for further interventions with the police, can the Attorney General explain why he didn't bother to correct them? These are written criminal allegations made by a credible individual. Now you're getting up and the minister's getting up later and saying, "Well, now we're going to do it," after the letter became public. Why didn't you act? It was your responsibility to react.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: I'm not sure what part of Commissioner Fantino's letter you disagree with, so let me continue.

In the third paragraph: "The decisions that resulted in the peaceful resolution of the road closure in Caledonia were based on ongoing dialogue between the OPP and Six Nations leadership and on the OPP commitment to resolve such situations in the safest manner possible."

I'll continue on with the next paragraph: "The suggestion that political interference played a part is regrettable and untrue. OPP operational decisions are the purview of the police officers in charge. Decision-making is influenced by factors related to the event and the overall need to maintain order and preserve the peace. This is fully in keeping with the police role and authority."

This government does not direct the police. We do not direct the OPP. The commissioner is on the record. What part of that letter do you disagree with? Stand up and be counted.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I don't know who you're performing for, but it's certainly not the people of the province in terms of upholding the rule of law.

Chief Montour is a respected, credible individual. He's not someone who would fabricate a story about a minister of the crown interfering with police. He has nothing to gain, but this Minister of Aboriginal Affairs has a lot to lose even if he left the impression with Chief Montour that he was influencing police decisions.

Again, these are serious allegations coming from a credible source. They merit a full investigation, and I ask the Attorney General to take off his political hat, do the right thing, stop protecting a colleague and call in the RCMP.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: We have the commissioner of the OPP, who has not only called in but written in to the Chronicle on the very—

Mr. Peter Kormos: You're in the back pocket of the police.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd just ask the member for Welland to withdraw the comment that he directed to the Attorney General, please.

Mr. Peter Kormos: Withdrawn.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: He has written on the very issue that is raised by the Leader of the Opposition, making clear the suggestion political interference played a part is regrettable and untrue. It is direct, it is clear, it is unequivocal.

We have lots of letters that are received in lots of places over lots of issues. You've heard from the ministers involved. Now you've heard from the OPP commissioner. I say to you again, what part of the OPP commissioner's direct response to the direct suggestion do you disagree with?

Interjection: Rumours.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: That's right. You want me to act on rumours.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Howard Hampton: A question to the Premier. Shortly after the McGuinty government announced the automotive investment strategy, you also announced a $235-million investment in General Motors. I want to quote from the Minister of Economic Development and Trade. This is what he had to say, "And yesterday we built on our success. In partnership with General Motors of Canada ... the Premier announced Ontario's investment ..." Then he goes on to say, "Our investment will support expansions and vehicle design manufacturing capabilities at GM plants right across this province ... This is great news for thousands of workers and their families who will benefit from new and secure jobs at General Motors." It sounded, when you made this announcement, as if General Motors workers across the province were going to benefit.

Premier, can you tell us how 5,500 General Motors workers could be laid off in the context of that announcement?

1100

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I don't know where that last number came from; I've never heard of it before. The leader of the NDP may want to substantiate that. But there is some truth to the release he made reference to.

Interjections.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I just want to remind the members of standing order 23(h) when it comes to allegations. I just remind the Minister of Transportation and the Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal of that standing order.

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: There is some real merit to the release he referenced, which referred to "new and secure jobs." We inherited an auto sector infrastructure, so to speak, which was not bound by any guarantees, any securities. In the face of literally dozens of plants being closed throughout North America, it was inevitable that Ontario would be affected. But we're proud of the record that we established on a go-forward basis.

Mr. Howard Hampton: If the Premier can make aspersions of truth and untruth—I'm not quoting from a release; I'm quoting from what the Minister of Economic Development and Trade said here in this Legislature, in Hansard, on March 3, 2005. If the Premier says that Hansard isn't telling the truth, then we've got a problem. But I suggest that Hansard does tell the truth. The problem here is the Premier's problem.

You went out and you told workers and communities across this province that your $235-million investment was going to guarantee General Motors jobs in General Motors communities across this province. But as we found out on Monday, you forgot all about the workers in Windsor. How could the McGuinty government say here in this Legislature that you were guaranteeing thousands of General Motors' workers' jobs, yet, we find out now there was not even any thought given to the General Motors workers at the transmission plant in—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Premier?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: We never said that, and that Hansard doesn't say that. What I would recommend to my honourable colleague—and I'm prepared to arrange this for him—is a meeting with Buzz Hargrove. I'm offering to set that up. I'm prepared to serve as a mediator to reconcile, to actively do my best to reconcile, the differences.

But I can say that—and I do want to acknowledge the presence of Bill Reeves, who's with CAW Local 1973; he's the president. I had a chance to chat with him. One of the most important things he asked me to do was to ensure that GM had a continuing strong presence here in Ontario. We are absolutely committed to finding new ways to help GM grow still further in our province.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I just want to tell the Premier that it's not Mr. Hargrove who's supposed to be looking after the public finances of Ontario. It's not Mr. Hargrove who said that this $235-million investment in General Motors is going to guarantee General Motors workers jobs at plants across Ontario. It was the McGuinty government that said that. You didn't just say it in this release in the Legislature; you said it elsewhere.

My question again is this: Your Minister of Economic Development and Trade said that this investment was going to guarantee GM jobs across Ontario. They were going to have more secure jobs. In that context, how could 5,500 GM workers lose their jobs after you made the $235-million investment and all the announcements that went with it? How can those two things be squared, Premier?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: Again, we've never said—and the fact is we can't guarantee all existing auto sector jobs that are presently found in Ontario. We can make new arrangements, with new investments, on a go-forward basis.

Again, I would want to remind my honourable colleague, since 1999 Michigan lost 90,000 jobs, Ohio lost 29,000 jobs, all in the auto sector, Indiana lost 16,000 jobs.

During that time, when the Big Three shut down dozens of plants in North America, given the fact that here in Ontario about 90% of our product is sold south of the border, notwithstanding those challenges, we landed a billion dollars' worth of new investment from Ford, $2.5 billion in new investment from GM, $768 million from DaimlerChrysler, and a $1.1-billion brand new greenfield assembly plant from Toyota.

I think, given our circumstances, we've been very aggressive and very effective.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Premier: This is not about Michigan or Indiana. This is about the McGuinty government promising something in Ontario and now thousands of workers find out that what they were promised just hasn't turned out to be the fact.

Here is another comment from Mr. Cordiano, where he said to the Toronto Globe and Mail that, under the agreement, General Motors of Canada has pledged to maintain an average of 16,000 employees over the nine-year life of the project. That means it can trim its workforce by 4,000. General Motors has already trimmed their workforce by 5,500.

Again, Premier, these are the words of you and your cabinet ministers. Why don't they ring true today when 1,400 workers at the GM plant in Windsor are being told "You're out the door"?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: Speaker, to the Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I think it's important, when we're talking about numbers like this, that every one of those numbers represents a person who has a family to support. I don't appreciate that the leader of the third party wants to stand up and add thousands whenever he feels it adds to his argument.

The truth is, a few weeks ago GM did announce 900 jobs, not due to take effect in layoffs until September. So don't add 900 to the total. Last year they announced 1,200 in layoffs. What the number actually was when it happened was 400. That means that, thankfully, there were thousands more who didn't receive a layoff notice. This is important, because these families are important to us.

We want GM to do well, and doing well means that we've got to help fight for product against other jurisdictions that we compete with in North America. When we're competing with other jurisdictions around this continent, Ontario is winning, and they're winning because Ontario is prepared to be there—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. Supplementary.

Mr. Howard Hampton: One of the reasons I'm asking these questions is because a lot of workers saw the money go out the door, but they're wondering where their job is now. For example, Ford committed to retaining 4,000 jobs in return for a $100-million investment from the McGuinty government. Well, Ford has announced layoffs totalling 2,700 workers since that investment. And I think what those workers want to know—and those workers were told pretty much the same thing, that these investments are going to guarantee their jobs, just as your predecessor said here in the Legislature.

I'm asking now: We see the money go out the door. Why were there not, in fact, real job guarantees? Why are 2,700 workers out of a job now?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: This member is interested in asking questions. I want to ask this member, if he was supportive of Ontario's role in reopening the Windsor-Essex engine plant for Ford, the first opportunity for the Ford Motor Company to reverse their decision and re-invest in Windsor—where were you on that decision? Do you support those jobs that are coming back to the Windsor area? And what about the Oakville facility that's now hiring 500 positions? We have to understand what's happening in the world of the automotive sector, but when that sector is facing challenges, that's when it needs a champion in government, not someone who's prepared to blow all over it and make things worse than they ever were.

We are there for automotive sector today, and we'll be with it again tomorrow. Those are great jobs for Ontarians and we support them.

1110

Mr. Howard Hampton: Obviously, the minister and the McGuinty government don't want to answer this question. I will tell the minister, I actually support government investment to sustain jobs, but government investment should come with job guarantees, and that is something the McGuinty government has failed at miserably. For example, Chrysler committed to retaining 5,200 jobs in return for a $76.8-million government investment, but since that government investment, Chrysler has sent 2,000 workers out on the street.

I say to the Premier again, if you're going to make these investments, shouldn't you at least look them in the eye and say, "We want a guarantee that our workers are going to continue to have jobs in Ontario," and not have 2,000 workers go out the door immediately or within the next two years after the signing of the agreement?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Let me reiterate that when we sit down with the automotive companies, all five of them that are assembling here in Ontario—Ford, GM, Chrysler, Toyota and Honda—we work with them because we understand the world market for the automotive sector. We recognize that there are changes afoot. There's a high Canadian dollar. There's a high price for a barrel of oil. We know that the US sales are slumping right now. We know that this is a tough year, but we also know that we're going to pull out of this, and when we do, it's because we helped our companies become productive—that we will solidify jobs to make great cars in the future right here in Ontario, including the city of Windsor.

We're proud of our relationship with the auto sector. It's built this country and it's built our manufacturing sector. We want to ask this member: Do you really support the Canadian auto workers who work in this province?

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: To the Minister of Economic Development and Trade: Despite over 2,000 recent job cuts at General Motors, the minister has all but agreed to hand out another $140 million to GM's engine plant in St. Catharines. That's on top of the $135 million they received in 2005. In fact, the minister said that recent layoffs and losses would have no impact on her decision to dole out more money. I find that unbelievable. To enter so hastily into large agreements, with questionable job guarantees and no accountability, is not a responsible way to look after taxpayers' hard-earned money.

Minister, with this new expenditure, can you guarantee that there will be no more job losses at General Motors in Ontario?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Let me read this: "I have said repeatedly ... that I think any Premier of Ontario must keep in his toolbox all of the tools necessary to make sure we maintain and attract automobile investment in the province of Ontario.... I would consider direct investment, in appropriate cases, to be something you could use and should use, because to me, what is important for the province of Ontario is we attract and maintain that investment...."

Interjection: Who said that?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: John Tory, your leader.

I think you guys need to get it together, because your MPP who comes from Oshawa knows full well that that plant must be viable. We want it to grow in the future. So you tell me today, if GM makes an application to the province of Ontario, does your colleague from Oshawa support that application? I'm going to wait and hear what that member has to say.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: Sadly, I'll have to take that as a no. A lot of the tools you have in that toolbox are giving this government a lot of skinned knuckles when they try to use them. There's no guarantee that General Motors won't take the money and run.

I understand the need to partner with industry and to leverage investment, and I value GM as an important Ontario employer. However, there are two ways to support the private sector: the correct way and the Liberal way. The correct way is to soberly and frugally assess the situation and make certain that recipients are upholding their end of the bargain. The Liberal way is to shovel the money out the door to large corporations as fast as they can, regardless of what those corporations are extorting from this government.

Minister, how can Ontarians trust a government that recklessly spends their hard-earned tax dollars and refuses to be publicly accountable for that money?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I think it's important, because the MPP from Ottawa said—

Interjection: Oshawa.

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Oshawa—and GM is important to this member. He fully supports support for General Motors.

I want to speak about what Christine Elliott, also from Whitby—Ajax—a very important region for the automotive sector—had to say: "I certainly wouldn't dismiss the help out of hand. I think it's important that we be given whatever support they can give."

I think it's important that we say right now, when the automotive sector is facing challenges in Ontario, this is not the time that we're going to pile on—not this government that planted its flag in automotive, not this government that has been so supportive of an industry that has fed this nation for decades.

We are having a tough year and we acknowledge that, but we also know that when it gets tough, that's when the government gets tough too, and we will help to build this automotive sector and it will be great again.

WORKPLACE SAFETY AND INSURANCE BOARD

Mr. Paul Miller: My question is to the Minister of Labour.

When I met the minister several weeks ago, I asked him to make some demands of WSIB Chair Mahoney, to which he said that he has an arm's-length relationship with the agency, so he couldn't do that. Yesterday, the minister said he had spoken to Chair Mahoney about his lavish spending and had a letter reporting the details of his frolic.

When will the minister exercise his powers and direct Chair Mahoney to cancel the experience rating program and direct those billions of dollars to injured workers, where they belong?

Hon. Brad Duguid: If the NDP really cared about injured workers, one would think that they would want to be informed by the review that's going on at the WSIB right now regarding experience rating.

For those who don't know, experience rating is an incentive program brought in originally by the NDP, utilized by the Conservatives as well, when they were in power, and it's a system that's still in place today, that we've acknowledged has flaws and needs to be fixed.

There's a review going on with the WSIB now. Why the NDP would want to pre-empt that review is beyond me. That they would not want to be informed by the recommendations that come from the review tells me that their priority isn't people or injured workers; their priority with this issue appears to be politics.

Mr. Paul Miller: Once again, the minister is incorrect. We didn't do that.

On April 17, I asked the minister to use the powers he has under the memorandum of understanding between his ministry and the WSIB and bring in the Auditor General to review this deeply flawed, worker-adverse experience rating program. He said that the WSIB chair is reviewing the program. Well, that's going to be a year down the road, and we've been asking for 10 years to have that done. Really, the chair reviewing a program that he has said is here to stay is like asking employers to willingly give up their lottery winnings.

Again, I ask when this minister will finally do the right thing and immediately cancel the experience rating program, immediately redirect the money to injured workers, where it belongs, and immediately bring in the Provincial Auditor to investigate this program and the labour ministry's fines for workplace injury and publicly report—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

Hon. Brad Duguid: I'll say it again: Why would the NDP not want to be informed by the WSIB review that's going on right now regarding this incentive program?

If this incentive program can be improved, it's going to encourage workplaces across this province and employers across this province to provide healthier and safer workplaces. That is the goal that all of us should be working toward, not trying to score political points on an issue that we're well aware of.

We support the review because we know there are flaws with this particular program, a program, as I said, that the NDP had when they were in power, a program that continued under the Tories, and a program that is in need of improvement. That's why we support the review.

We're not a government of half measures like the NDP would suggest we be. We're a government that wants to do everything we possibly can to improve the health and safety of workplaces across this province. That includes, if needed, incentives for employers. It includes education programs, as well—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

IMMIGRANTS' SKILLS

Mr. David Zimmer: My question is for the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration.

My riding of Willowdale is very diverse. I often meet with Iranian, Chinese and Korean Canadian constituents who were trained as doctors, pharmacists and engineers before coming to Canada. They tell me how very crucial it is for them to quickly integrate into Ontario's economy.

On Monday of this week, I was pleased to join the minister at the launch of Ontario's expanded bridge training program. Minister, can you tell us what bridge training is and what sectors of the economy will benefit from these programs?

1120

Hon. Michael Chan: My thanks to the honourable member for bringing this matter to the House. I'm very pleased to share this information with my honourable colleagues. Bridge training programs are the next generation of language and skills training for newcomers in this province. The bridge training project provides job-specific language training, mentorship, skills assessment and work experience, which are needed to succeed in many Ontario professions. That's why the McGuinty government is investing $27.4 million into 40 bridge training programs across Ontario. This will help 3,000 additional skilled newcomers to land a job that matches their qualifications and experience. This brings our government total to $85 million and 140 bridge training programs.

Mr. David Zimmer: Ontario is renowned throughout the world for the diversity of its population. We know that the majority of newcomers who settle in this province make the greater Toronto area their home. Minister, how will this important investment help newcomers in my riding of Willowdale and in other ridings in the greater Toronto area?

Hon. Michael Chan: Newcomers from all over the world choose Ontario as their home because it's a great place to live. I'm very proud of the investments that the McGuinty government has made to support Ontario's newcomers. In the greater Toronto area alone, there are 20 different bridge training programs offered to newcomers. Bridge training programs yield an excellent return on the investment we have made in them.

The Ontario Society of Professional Engineers has designed a pre-exam course to prepare internationally trained engineers to write a professional practice examination, a part of the licensing process for engineers. Programs such as these allow Ontario full access and utilize our most important resource—our minds. The McGuinty government's five-point economic plan is helping Ontario move forward, and my ministry is proud to assist internationally trained individuals with integration into the Ontario market.

NATIVE LAND DISPUTE

Mr. Toby Barrett: To the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs: Mike Corrado is the owner of a multi-residential site in Cayuga and he met with HDI several weeks ago, along with municipal and provincial officials. HDI requested this meeting after protesters blocked access to Mr. Corrado's land. In addition to a demand for a $3,000 application fee, they also demanded Mr. Corrado transfer title to his property to HDI and lease it back from them for the next 50 years.

You're a lawyer; you're the government. Is this not illegal? Is this not extortion? More specifically, Minister, are home builders now required to transfer title of their lands to Six Nations?

Hon. Michael Bryant: No.

Mr. Toby Barrett: Mr. Corrado would really appreciate a more fulsome answer. We've spoken with Mr. Corrado this morning. The blockades at his construction site are still up in spite of your "no." He's been told by Ruby Montour that the protesters will not leave and they'll never leave until he complies with HDI's demands, meaning transferring title of his land.

Again, Minister, is this not blackmail? Are deeds worth nothing? How many thousands of jobs are going to be lost; how many millions of dollars have to be spent on policing? The OPP have told Mr. Corrado they will merely act as peacekeepers; they will not intervene. My question is, do you agree with Mr. Corrado asking the OPP to lay criminal charges, asking the OPP to enforce the Criminal Code of Canada?

Hon. Michael Bryant: I spoke to the mayor of Brantford to discuss the municipal council's great frustration, the community's great frustration and the developer's great frustration with respect to what is taking place. A lot of efforts have been made to try and bring people together, to get them off of the streets and on to the negotiating table.

As the mayor said to me yesterday, at the heart of this are, in fact, unresolved claims, primarily along the Haldimand tract. Both the mayor and I agreed that it really is time for the federal government to set a deadline and say, "We're going to put all of our resources into resolving these claims. It is through that, that we are going to achieve justice." So I certainly want to add my voice to the mayor's and the local members when we say to the federal government, with respect to this 200-year-old dispute, that it is time for them to set a deadline and set it now.

PICKERING NUCLEAR GENERATION STATION

Mr. Peter Tabuns: To the Minister of Energy: Today a leaked letter in the Toronto Star from the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission to OPG says that safety margins are eroding at the Pickering B nuclear power plant. Why has your government allowed safety margins to erode at Pickering B?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: I appreciate the question from the member from Toronto—Danforth. Clearly, the public wants to have confidence in the safety of our plants. Ontario Power Generation, which runs the plant, works very hard at that.

I think, more importantly, for the confidence, the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission has, as the member knows, the prime responsibility here. They actually have an office on-site. They have access to the plant at any time. They monitor it very carefully. To provide some confidence, I hope, to the public, recently the staff at the nuclear safety commission recommended that the licence be renewed at this plant for five years. That's the maximum time that these licences can be renewed.

So I think, clearly, safety is very important. The commission has a big responsibility there. As a measure of some confidence, I hope this five-year renewal provides some reassurance to the public of Ontario.

Mr. Peter Tabuns: You certainly didn't answer why you've allowed the safety margins to erode. So the second question I have for you, given that this nuclear power plant is one of the closest in the world to a population centre like ours: What are you going to do to restore fully the safety margins that should exist at that plant?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: Again, it's a very legitimate question that the member raised. I want to once again say that we, the public, rely on the nuclear safety commission, an independent federal board with this prime responsibility. The public, I think, appreciates that. They have an office on-site, as I said.

Furthermore, they constantly monitor this. The staff there, as I said earlier, are recommending a five-year renewal on the licence. We certainly will follow the recommendations of the nuclear safety commission. They will provide advice to OPG on what things should be done, if any. I just want to assure the House and the public—have some confidence in the nuclear safety commission. They monitor this regularly. They're on-site and they are recommending, as I say, a five-year extension of the licence, which I hope provides some confidence to the people of Ontario and the people—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question?

ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: My question is for the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs. For the past several months, the cattle, hog and horticulture sectors have suffered greatly from low prices. The increase in the Canadian dollar has also added challenges to their sectors as well. In the 2007 fall economic statement, our government announced $150 million to help farmers in these sectors.

Some farmers in my riding of Lambton–Kent–Middlesex have expressed concerns over the eligibility requirements for the cattle, hog and horticulture payment program. Another member of this House had recently asked questions about a farmer who had been out of business for over 40 years and had still received a payment.

Mr. Speaker, through you to the minister, could the minister please clarify for this House, and for my farm constituents, the eligibility requirements that were required for the cattle, hog and horticultural payment program?

Hon. James J. Bradley: Good question.
1130

Hon. Leona Dombrowsky: I agree, it is a very good question. I'm happy to have the opportunity to make some clarification.

We worked very carefully with stakeholders who came to us and said there was an immediate need in the agriculture community. So what we agreed upon was that we would use the most recent ad hoc payment, which was provided by the federal government and matched by the provincial government, as the basis. I would remind all producers in the province that they had until September 2007 to make application to participate in that. That is the most current information we had available to us, and it was that information that we used to flow payments to farmers. So they had until September 2007 to receive it. It was based on that information that cheques were flowed. I can assure the people of Ontario that if people had not farmed in 2004, 2005 or 2006, they would not have received—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: I appreciate the minister taking the time to make that clarification. Hog and cattle producers and related processing industries are still facing significant financial pressure due to the higher feed and energy costs, the impact of the new federal enhanced feed ban regulations and the enhanced US border regulations.

The eligibility requirements, as clarified by the minister today, still leave some of my cattle, hog and horticulture producers ineligible for this program. Could the minister please tell this House what support programs are available to producers who began farming in 2007 or who did not qualify under the 50% rule of their eligible net sales coming from cattle, hogs or horticulture production?

Hon. Leona Dombrowsky: Again, I think it's very important for people in Ontario to know that, yes, for those farmers who started in the industry in 2007, there are federal and provincial dollars available to support them in the case of difficulty. The way that works is that for anyone who did start farming in 2007 or later, they are eligible for what are called interim payments under the AgriStability program. That's the joint program that we have with the federal government. Those programs are triggered by a phone call to Agricorp. Those are upfront payments that are provided to farmers. Farmers who started farming in 2007 would be eligible for those interim payments. For the 2007 production year, I would report to this House that $18.3 million in interim payments has been delivered to farmers, and that so far in 2008, $11.7 million has been delivered to farmers who have found themselves in difficulty. So there are dollars flowing to new farmers—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

ACCESS TO HEALTH CARE

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is for the Premier. Premier, your government continues to deny patients access to PET scans despite the fact that they're available in other provinces and other countries. We have a patient, Roman Gawur, a 57-year-old male who's fighting colon cancer. He's here today. He must now pay $2,000 for a PET scan, after he has already spent $25,000 on drugs that you will not cover, to determine if he can declare victory over his cancer or needs more cancer treatment.

I ask you, Premier, why will you not pay for his PET scan, as is done in most other provinces and countries in the world?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: This could be fairly categorized as a "spend" question, and I take it as such.

The member does know that we've been working to get wait times down for our MRIs and CT scans. For MRIs, they're down 11% or 13 days; for our CT scans, they're down by 27% or 22 days.

PET scans are still considered experimental by Health Canada. The member knows that we are currently conducting trials. We need to better understand the clinical value of these scans. I know the member well understands, having been a former Minister of Health, that there are an incredible number of competing demands for limited resources in our health care budget. What we're doing is approaching this carefully and thoughtfully, and we look forward to the outcome of those trials.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: As a former health minister, I know that these trials were to have been over by now and that we should have had full and equal access to PET scans for every person in the province of Ontario.

I want to tell the Premier about Perry Brodtkin, a former lawyer for OHIP. He is quoted in the Sudbury Star on April 21 as saying that OHIP must reimburse patients for the cost of PET scans, in accordance with the decision of the Health Services Appeal and Review Board on December 20, 2007, so long as the scan is provided in a public hospital in another province.

I ask you, Premier: Is it true that the province is now forced to pay for PET scans obtained in hospitals in other provinces, and if so, why have you held back and not given this information to the patients and doctors in Ontario?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I know that there are PET scans being done—in fact, a considerable number here in Ontario. Dr. Bill Evans, who's chair of the Ontario PET scan steering committee, offered this observation. He said: "There's been criticism in Ontario in its seeming tardiness to adopt. But it's a decision taken by cancer specialists of the province, various surgeons and medical and radiation oncologists."

It's probably a healthy thing for us to debate as lay-people and as political representatives on the value of PET scans. But at the end of the day, we have to place our continuing faith in our experts. Dr. Evans says that it's best for us to leave it to cancer specialists, surgeons, and medical and radiation oncologists. We await their very best advice on this, and we look forward to that.

NATURAL GAS RATES

Mr. Peter Tabuns: Minister of Energy, reports today suggest that Enbridge gas may be increasing their charges to their customers by 20%. There's an expectation that there will be increases in gas costs to customers across Ontario and, at other utilities, a comparable amount. What are you going to do to protect Ontario consumers from a dramatic increase in their gas bills?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: The public should be aware, although they may not be aware, that the Ontario Energy Board, on a quarterly basis—every three months—reviews the price of natural gas. None of the companies that distribute natural gas benefit from this. They review the price of natural gas as it's traded across North America, and reflect that price in the price that the companies are allowed to charge. They will review that price, I gather—the Ontario Energy Board—in June, to make a decision on July 1.

That is driven, I might say, very much by their estimate of what the price of natural gas will be over the next 12 months. So I would say: That's a decision that will be made by the independent Ontario Energy Board on the basis of the future price of natural gas. The challenge will be that natural gas has gone up. There very well may be an increase in price, but that is done through legislation—an independent board making that decision on the basis of the cost of natural gas—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary?

Mr. Peter Tabuns: The minister disowns responsibility, disowns his ability to have some impact when he let the $22-million lawsuit for late payment fees that's going to come out of ratepayers go ahead. He could do something about the unscrupulous practices of direct energy marketers, but he hasn't done any of that. Those people, in particular, affect the seniors and the uninformed. What are you going to do to protect the most vulnerable people in this society from gouging through those energy costs?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: If there's any evidence of gouging, we will take action. In the particular case you're talking about, this is the Ontario Energy Board, with the legislated mandate to reflect the price of natural gas costs around North America. So if you're asking me to violate the legislation that we have passed here in the Legislature mandating them to do that, I can't do that, and you would be the first to say that I shouldn't do that.

I'd just say to the public: The Ontario Energy Board has the legislated mandate to reflect these costs, and they will make that decision in June, effective July 1. I hope the member is not advocating that I, in some way, violate the legislation that we've passed here mandating the Ontario Energy Board to carry that out.

1140

LA JEUNESSE FRANCOPHONE

M. Jean-Marc Lalonde: Ma question s'adresse à la ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones.

Madame la ministre, l'engagement de notre gouvernement envers la jeunesse franco-ontarienne s'est fait sentir à plusieurs reprises depuis l'arrivée du gouvernement McGuinty à Queen's Park. Je pense aux investissements sans précédents dans le domaine de l'éducation et à la mise en œuvre de la politique d'aménagement linguistique.

Il est primordial que notre gouvernement continue son travail auprès de la jeunesse et prenne des mesures pour conscientiser nos jeunes francophones sur le besoin de s'impliquer dans leur communauté pour se bâtir un avenir.

Quelles sont les intentions du gouvernement pour engager davantage la jeunesse francophone de l'Ontario à s'impliquer au niveau communautaire?

L'hon. Madeleine Meilleur: Je voudrais remercier le député de Glengarry—Prescott—Russell pour son excellente question.

Le 1<sup>er</sup> mars dernier, dans le cadre du Banquet de la francophonie qui se déroulait à Embrun, j'ai annoncé que la relève est présentement l'un des plus grands défis de la francophonie ontarienne. Il faut donc redoubler nos efforts pour mobiliser les jeunes de l'élémentaire, du secondaire, les collégiaux et universitaires puis les jeunes travailleurs. Il faut former plus de professionnels qui vont travailler en français. Il faut appuyer nos jeunes entrepreneurs francophones qui offrent une main-d'œuvre bilingue.

C'est donc avec fierté que j'ai annoncé que notre gouvernement se propose de créer une stratégie jeunesse francophone qui sera élaborée et mise en œuvre par l'Office des affaires francophones. Et je suis remplie d'espoir quand je regarde nos jeunes francophones de souche ou immigrants dans le sud-ouest de la province, là où la francophonie de l'Ontario connaît son plus grand essor démographique.

Le gouvernement McGuinty fait—

Le Président (L'hon. Steve Peters): Merci.

M. Jean-Marc Lalonde: Madame la ministre, les Ontariens et Ontariennes francophones ont accueilli avec enthousiasme votre annonce récente à l'effet que votre ministère allait mettre en place une stratégie pour la jeunesse francophone. C'est très apprécié de voir la coopération qui existe entre votre ministère et le ministère de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités. Pourriez-vous nous donner les grandes lignes de cette nouvelle stratégie?

L'hon. Madeleine Meilleur: La stratégie francophone de notre gouvernement aura pour mission de mobiliser la jeunesse franco-ontarienne et d'assurer une relève pour l'épanouissement de la communauté franco-ontarienne.

L'Office des affaires francophones, en collaboration avec nos partenaires francophones, entreprendra des consultations auprès de la communauté pour faire en sorte que notre stratégie jeunesse corresponde aux besoins des jeunes partout en Ontario, car notre jeunesse franco-ontarienne est présente en grand nombre dans le nord, dans l'est et dans le sud de la province. Elle doit composer avec des milieux variés selon sa situation démographique, géographique, économique et sociale. Alors, j'ai confiance que partout en Ontario cette énergie renouvelée chez nos jeunes va trouver sa plus belle inspiration.

En février dernier, j'ai annoncé avec le ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités un investissement majeur de 20 $ millions pour le centre d'excellence pour l'éducation postsecondaire au Collège Glendon à l'Université York, en collaboration avec le Collège Boréal. Et je pourrais—

Le Président (L'hon. Steve Peters): Merci.

STEVEN TRUSCOTT

Mrs. Christine Elliott: My question is for the Attorney General. Minister, as you know, the previous Attorney General asked Justice Robins to consider the question of whether compensation for Steven Truscott for wrongful conviction would be appropriate. Curiously, the member for Guelph is bringing forward a resolution tomorrow for debate supporting compensation. Will the members of this House be finding out tomorrow the contents of Justice Robins' report through debate on this issue?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: I thank the member for the question. It's a very important issue. I do have the advice from Justice Robins. I'm looking forward to the opportunity to speak to this matter in the not-too-distant future.

The member is quite right: There is a resolution before the House tomorrow brought by my colleague the member for Guelph. The House will have the opportunity to debate that. I will, of course, hear the result of that discussion tomorrow.

I look forward to speaking to the matter in the not-too-distant future. I really do thank the member for the question about this very important issue.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I look forward to hearing from the Attorney General and wonder if he can give us some definite timelines about when he will be bringing forward this important report.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: Once again, I know this is a matter in which all members of the House are very interested and I thank the member for the question. There is going to be a debate here tomorrow and I don't want to say anything. That's a private member's debate. Let that go. I will receive the results of that. I have the advice from Justice Robins and I'm looking forward to speaking to this matter in the not-too-distant future. I don't have a specific timeline, but in the not-too-distant future.

Again, I know the member and others will want to participate in the debate tomorrow on the resolution brought by my colleague the member for Guelph, who has been very interested in this very important matter, as have all members of the House.

CHILD CARE

Ms. Andrea Horwath: The question is for the Minister of Children and Youth Services. Why is it that yet another province has announced a major provincial investment in child care, some $244 million, and Ontario doesn't even have a child care line in the budget?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Thanks for the opportunity to talk about the great progress we've made in child care in Ontario. Since the election in 2003, since we came to office, we've created 22,000 new child care spaces in the province. The member opposite will also know that in last year's budget, we allocated $25 million for last year and an additional $25 million for this year. So the province of Ontario is moving forward aggressively on child care.

Another very important change that we've made is that we've really streamlined the child care subsidy program so that more people in Ontario have access to high-quality child care.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: This minister will know that the vast majority of funding that came to child care in Ontario came from the federal government. That's just the reality. The $300 million that this government pledged years and years ago still hasn't seen the light of day in Ontario. Not only will Alberta be investing $244 million to expand child care, they're also going to be enhancing child care subsidies significantly in that province. By comparison, here in Ontario, we have the waiting list expanding in massive ways. Some 23,000 families are on waiting lists for a child care subsidy here in Ontario.

My question is this: Why is Alberta able to expand child care but in Ontario the minister can't even point to a physical line item in the budget that says "child care"?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I can't believe that the member opposite is so naive as not to understand why Alberta is able to invest more in child care than Ontario. However, the important thing is that access to high-quality child care is a very high priority for us. As we move forward on a poverty reduction strategy, having access to high-quality child care at a cost that parents can afford is a very important component of getting everyone who is able to work working in this province.

PETITIONS

GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk: I have a petition headed "Freeze Gas Prices."

"Whereas gasoline prices have increased at alarming rates during the past year; and

"Whereas the high and different gas prices in different areas of Ontario have caused confusion and unfair hardship on hard-working Cambridge families; and

"Whereas the false promises of Premier McGuinty adversely affect the trust between Ontarians and their elected representatives;

"We, the undersigned, hereby petition the Parliament of Ontario as follows:

"(1) That the Ontario McGuinty Liberal government immediately freeze gas prices for a temporary period until world oil prices moderate; and

"(2) That the Ontario McGuinty Liberal government and the federal government immediately lower their taxes on gas for a temporary period until world oil prices moderate; and

"(3) That the Ontario McGuinty Liberal government immediately initiate a royal commission to investigate the predatory gas prices charged by oil companies operating in Ontario."

As I agree with this petition, I affix my name thereto.

1150

HOME CARE

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the SEIU and the people of the greater Toronto area.

"Whereas the Ontario government has continued the practice of competitive bidding for home care services; and

"Whereas the competitive bidding process has increased the privatization of Ontario's health care delivery, in direct violation of the Commitment to the Future of Medicare Act, 2004; and

"Whereas competitive bidding for home care services has decreased both the continuity and quality of care available to home care clients; and

"Whereas home care workers do not enjoy the same employment rights, such as successor rights, as all other Ontario workers have, which deprives them of termination rights, seniority rights and the right to move with their work when their employer agency loses a contract;"

They ask the Ontario government:

"(1) to immediately stop the competitive bidding for home care services so home care clients can receive the continuity and quality of care they deserve; and

"(2) to extend successor rights under the Labour Relations Act to home care workers to ensure the home care sector is able to retain a workforce that is responsive to clients' needs."

I fully support this petition, will affix my name to it and send it to the Clerk with Evelyn.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Mario Sergio: Before I read this petition, I would like to introduce to the House, on behalf of every member, and especially the Italian members on both sides, the new consul general of Italy, Mr. Gianni Bardini, who is with us today in the west gallery. I would like to welcome him to Toronto. Consul Bardini is not new to Toronto or to the Italian community.

I have a petition from many residents of my constituency, with respect to maintaining the Lord's Prayer. It is signed by many thousands of people in my area, and I'm much in favour of it and will affix my signature to it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. John Yakabuski: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition: It is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I support this petition, affix my signature and send it to the table with Naomi.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network (CE-LHIN) board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

"Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality of care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I shall affix my signature to that and pass it to Sheilagh.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

As I agree with this petition, I affix my name thereto and provide it to Joanna.

GRAFFITI

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: A petition to the Legislature of Ontario:

"Whereas graffiti creates a nuisance that can adversely affect property values, business opportunities and the enjoyment of community life;

"Whereas graffiti promotes a sense of disrespect for private property, and a perception that laws protecting public and private property can be disregarded with impunity;

"Whereas it is important that everyone do their part in keeping both public and private properties free of graffiti in order to maintain community pride and confidence;

"Whereas the quick removal of graffiti from walls, fences and other structures is critical to maintaining community cleanliness and beauty; it is always true that the prevention is the best policy;

"Accordingly we, the undersigned, petition the Legislature:

"To impose certain conditions on the sale of spray paint, broad-tipped marker pens, paint pens, glass-cutting tools and glass-etching tools or instruments of graffiti and to make it be unlawful for any person, other than a parent, legal guardian, school teacher or law enforcement officer in the performance of duty, to sell, exchange, give, deliver, loan, or otherwise furnish or permit to be sold, exchanged, given, delivered or loaned any prohibited graffiti material to any minor unless the minor is accompanied by their parent or legal guardian."

I agree with this petition and I'll be signing my name to it.

ALMA COLLEGE

Mr. Khalil Ramal: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas historic Alma College, designed in the High Victorian Gothic style, chartered by an act of Ontario passed March 2, 1877, opened in October 1881, located in the city of St. Thomas, county of Elgin, province of Ontario, has fallen into a dire state of disrepair; and

"Whereas Alma College continues to be threatened with demolition by its current owners despite the efforts of many concerned citizens, alumni and various officials; and

"Whereas a historical plaque commemorating Alma College was unveiled at the college on Thursday, October 28, 1976, by the Ontario Heritage Trust, an agency within the Ministry of Culture and Recreation; and

"Whereas the city of St. Thomas designated Alma College under part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act (bylaw 167-94), in 1994; and

"Whereas recent amendments (2005) to the Ontario Heritage Act allow the Minister of Culture to designate property as being provincially significant;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"The Minister of Culture immediately designate Alma College as a building of provincial significance and, in the event of a demolition order being issued for Alma, to immediately intervene by issue of a stop order, and to further identify provincial partnerships and possible funding to protect the existing buildings from further deterioration while financial resources are generated to restore the property to its former glory."

I agree with this petition. I want to sign my signature to it and give it to Arjun.

GYPSY MOTHS

Mr. Tim Hudak: I'm pleased to present yet more petitions to protect Ontario properties from gypsy moth infestations. They read as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas gypsy moths are a dangerous pest because they can nest in more than 500 different native plant species; and

"Whereas professional arborists have estimated that thousands of acres in Ontario have been deforested by gypsy moths; and

"Whereas many properties in Binbrook, West Niagara, Haldimand and surrounding areas have been dramatically harmed by gypsy moths; and

"Whereas the province of Ontario has previously funded a cost-shared gypsy moth spraying program;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That Ontario's Ministry of Natural Resources immediately fund a gypsy moth spraying program to assist landowners and municipalities attempting to control further gypsy moth infestation."

In support, I affix my signature.

1200

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly. I would like to thank Dr. Nguyen from Mississauga and also Mary Lou Kiss of Melissa Court in Mississauga for their efforts in collecting the signatures on this petition. It reads as follows:

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I am pleased to sign and support this petition and to ask page Rafaël to carry it for me.

GAS WELLS

Mr. Tim Hudak: I am pleased to present a petition to "Preserve Our Gas Wells." I've read in a number like this. It reads, to conclude:

"We, the undersigned, request as follows:

"That the McGuinty government investigate the Ministry of Natural Resources petroleum division and direct civil servants to work proactively and positively with landowners and farmers to review the government's approach based on the following principles:

"(a) respect for property owners, and

"(b) consistent and fair treatment of gas well owners."

In support, I affix my signature.

MARY FIX PARK

Mr. Kuldip Kular: The petition is to the Ontario Legislative Assembly for the rehabilitation of Mary Fix Park.

"Whereas the province of Ontario has acquired public and private lands for the reconstruction and upgrading of the QEW/Hurontario interchange; and

"Whereas some of the acquired lands will be in excess of the requirements for the interchange; and

"Whereas the city of Mississauga has stated that these lands in excess of the interchange requirements have no developmental value; and

"Whereas the Ministry of Transportation and highways has stated that excess lands from this project will be conveyed to the city of Mississauga for parkland; and

"Whereas the Mary Fix Park property was originally donated to the city of Mississauga exclusively for parkland to preserve natural woodland; and

"Whereas this development has caused the loss of century-old trees, natural woodland and wildlife habitat from Mary Fix Park, and has substantially increased noise and traffic to local residences; and

"Whereas the lands on the south and west side of Pinetree Way are no longer the subject of further construction;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the government of Ontario, through the Ministry of Transportation and highways, remediate the lands surrounding the south and west areas of Pinetree Way between Hurontario Street and Glenburnie Road by planting trees and constructing berms within this year, and convey all excess lands from the QEW/Hurontario interchange to the city of Mississauga upon completion of the project."

I agree with the petitioners, so I put my signature on it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk: I have petitions provided to me by Dr. Kent D.L. McKinnon and Ms. Lynn B. Schamon.

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings;

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe;

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

As I agree with the petition, I affix my name thereto.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): This House stands recessed until 3 p.m. this afternoon.

The House recessed from 1204 to 1500.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

EVENTS IN PENETANGUISHENE

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: On Saturday, May 17, 2008, I will be attending what will no doubt be an exciting day for citizens of the town of Penetanguishene, the members of the Ontario Provincial Police and two very special families who reside in the wonderful southern bay community.

An Emergency Services Day will take place at the town dock in Penetanguishene between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., which will showcase the resources of the Ontario Provincial Police that include the Central Region Canine Unit, the OPP helicopter, bicycle patrol officers, police vehicles, the Penetanguishene fire service, the County of Simcoe Paramedic Services and the Canadian Armed Forces. Also joining in the display will be the local Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the VCARS of Simcoe county.

Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner Julian Fantino will be on hand to proudly dedicate and commission the newest vessel being added to the OPP fleet. This vessel, which is a 32-foot, state-of-the-art boat, will become the cornerstone of the detachment's marine enforcement unit. It will be officially named in memory of Provincial Constable Thomas P. Coffin, who was murdered on May 31, 1997, in the town of Penetanguishene.

Also attending will be members of the OPP central region command staff and the men and women of the southern Georgia Bay detachment. The dockside ceremony will honour Tom's memory. Members of his family will also be present to share in this momentous occasion.

Prior to this, the town of Penetanguishene will honour the memory of Mr. Gil Robillard, who was born and raised in Penetanguishene and has affectionately been referred to as "Mr. Penetanguishene." To honour his dedication to the town and service to the community, a mural, along with a historical marker, will be unveiled at the visitors' information centre in an official ceremony scheduled to take place at 11:30 a.m. I fully expect this day will be a day, for all those attending, to remember, and one that I will be looking forward to as well.

Mr. Speaker, with your indulgence, I'd like to introduce Mr. Jim Christie, who is with us today. He's the newly elected vice-president of the Ontario Provincial Police Association. He's joined by his wife, Caroline, who's a civilian dispatcher with the Midland Police Service in Midland. I'd like to welcome them to Queen's Park. Welcome, Jim and Caroline.

ASIAN HERITAGE MONTH

Mr. Yasir Naqvi: I rise today to share with the members of this chamber the exciting events that are taking place in my riding of Ottawa Centre in celebration of Asian Heritage Month. The Ottawa Asian Heritage Month Society is a non-profit organization made up of volunteers who are passionate about sharing Asian and Asian-Canadian heritage with everyone in the national capital region.

This month, I had the pleasure of participating in the Era 21 Networking Breakfast for Young Canadians, hosted by Senator Vivienne Poy, in partnership with the Black History Month society. This event brought together a diverse group of 100 young Canadians in grades 11 and 12 to network with parliamentarians and community leaders. The purpose of the breakfast is to encourage the idea of networking across the diverse cultures that reflect Canada's unique multicultural heritage and to help the students understand the great advantage of Canada's diversity, in terms of the opportunities it provides them as global citizens. I shared a panel with Adrian Harewood and Bettina Choo and became inspired by their ideas.

I thank Alek Choo, Sam Sey, Can Le, Katie Ng, Mary Lee and Patrick Cuenco, among many volunteers, for the work they do in promoting Asian Heritage Month in the riding of Ottawa Centre. Their efforts go a long way towards ensuring the spirit of Asian Heritage Month is shared throughout Ottawa.

ALMA COLLEGE

Mrs. Julia Munro: Residents of St. Thomas, Ontario, are still waiting to find out if the Minister of Culture will save Alma College from the wrecking ball. This historic High Victorian Gothic building is an Elgin county treasure, and only this government can save it.

Thousands of people from Elgin county and across Ontario have been signing petitions to "immediately designate Alma College as a building of provincial significance and, in the event of a demolition order being issued for Alma, to immediately intervene by issue of a stop order, and to further identify provincial partnerships and possible funding to protect the existing buildings from further deterioration while financial resources are generated to restore the property to its former glory.”

When the government amended the Heritage Act four years ago, they gave themselves the power to bring demolitions of historic buildings to a complete halt. People all over Ontario want to know why the minister has not used her powers to save Alma College. If this beautiful old gothic structure is not important enough to you to save, then what historic building would you save?

SAULT STE. MARIE ECONOMY

Mr. David Oraziatti: I'd like to share great news about my riding, with new jobs and economic development. This past week, with officials from the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corp., I had the pleasure to welcome Pollard Banknote's $150-million ticket finishing plant to our city. The new 22,000-square-foot facility will convert rolls of printed lottery tickets into finished books of tickets ready for distribution and sale across Ontario.

In addition to the OLG, this facility will be processing lottery tickets for other Pollard Banknote customers, including the New Jersey Lottery and national lotteries in France and Ireland. The plant opened with 33 employees, including machine operator positions, and will be expanding to approximately 60 employees as production demands increase. The ticket finishing operation will boost Sault Ste. Marie's economy by adding $32 million to the community over the course of the contract.

Under poor leadership by the past NDP representative, the BABN ticket finishing plant closed, but today we've taken a positive step toward the opening of the new plant and creating new jobs in Sault Ste. Marie.

The opening of this facility is part of the ongoing commitment provincial Liberal governments have shown to our community. Former Premier David Peterson made the decision to move the Ontario Lottery Corp. to Sault Ste. Marie in 1986, and today, with the new ticket finishing plant that has opened, in addition to that there are nearly 900 corporate and casino OLG employee jobs in Sault Ste. Marie, with an estimated annual payroll of $48 million. Great news for Sault Ste. Marie.

DURHAM SUPPORT OUR TROOPS RALLY

Mr. John O'Toole: I rise to inform the House of a rally on Saturday, May 31, in Bowmanville, to support the men and women of the Canadian Forces.

The Durham Support Our Troops Rally starts at 11:30 a.m. at Clarington Fields in Bowmanville. Volunteers from across Durham have made this event possible. I would like to thank the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 178 in Bowmanville, Branch 419 in Port Perry and Branch 170 in Uxbridge for their leadership and participation in this rally. Participants also include the Royal Ontario Regiment, cadet units, the Clarington Concert Band, ROSE volunteers and the Team Red Take a Stand organization.

The day will include pipes, bands and colour parties, military displays and, of course, a barbecue and music. Special guests include Lieutenant-General Walter Natynczyk, vice-chief of defence staff, as well as Lieutenant-Colonel John Conrad. Dan Carter from channel 12 will be the master of ceremonies. There's an opportunity to view the Highway of Heroes, the repatriation drive, from Trenton to Toronto. I look forward to joining my federal counterpart, Bev Oda, for Durham and this community event. Everyone is invited to visit Bowmanville on May 31, to show their support for the Canadian Armed Forces who serve our nation at home and abroad.

NURSES

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: This week is Nursing Week. We tried to get unanimous consent, but couldn't get there, but I'm still going to recognize those nurses. They are at the heart of our health care system. They are the only 24/7 profession at the bedside in our hospitals. They ensure that Ontarians receive the excellent health care that we need and deserve. New Democrats are on the side of nurses.

I'm proud that nurses are at the forefront of fighting for better health care. For example, like nurses, the NDP is opposed to any form of privatization in health care, including Liberal P3 hospitals and competitive bidding in home care. Nurses know the true cost of privatization of our health care system. Just last week, the RNAO study showed that Ontario taxpayers could be saddled with $585 million more due to Liberal P3 hospitals.

This week being Nursing Week, it's important to highlight how we can better support our nurses. First, the scope of practice for nurse practitioners must be extended. We have yet to recognize the full role that can be taken by nurse practitioners. Second, we need to create more community-governed health care centres that allow nurses to practise to their full scope of training. Third, we must better protect nurses from workplace harassment and violence, as my colleague Andrea Horwath's bill has tried to do.

Our nurses deserve that we stay focused on their needs while they continue to look after our needs. Thank you, nurses. Merci à toutes les infirmières.

1510

HEALTH CARE

Mr. Phil McNeely: After four years of working with the great staff at the Orleans Urgent Care Clinic to correct the funding crisis, a legacy of the Tory era, we will soon announce a solution to the funding crisis, and the great local services we enjoy in Orléans will be restored. Thanks, Jack, for being there yesterday.

Since coming to office in 2003, the McGuinty Liberals have invested $74 million in new funding for Ottawa-area hospitals to provide 89,000 additional procedures, improve quality of care and reduce wait times.

Since 2005, wait times in Ottawa have decreased: At the Ottawa Hospital, cancer surgery wait times are down 24% and cataract surgery 42%; at the heart institute, angiography wait times are down 64% and angioplasty 75%. At CHEO, we have the fifth-lowest wait times in Ontario. MRI exam wait times are down 62%. At the Montfort, we didn't close it, we doubled it in size and we got a new MRI last week. These are just samples of the results of the major investments made by the McGuinty Liberals in the hospitals of the Ottawa area.

I want to thank all the front-line workers who have done a great job working with our government. Also, special thanks to Rainer Bloess for meeting with John Tory and his cohorts yesterday. I hope he showed them all the great improvements our government has made in Ottawa.

Health care in Ontario is on the mend. Reduced wait times, improved services and better care are achievements this government can be proud of. Stay tuned, John Tory, and your new buddy Rainer. New health announcements are coming to Orléans.

CERTIFIED MANAGEMENT ACCOUNTANTS OF ONTARIO

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: It's a pleasure to rise in the House today to announce that we have some very special guests with us in the Legislature. I'm sure that all members will join me in welcoming members of the Certified Management Accountants of Ontario, who are visiting Queen's Park today and are sitting in the east members' gallery.

The Certified Management Accountants of Ontario is a self-governing professional organization of some 24,000 members, and is a significant contributor to the provincial economy. As the leaders in strategic management accounting, CMAs adhere to a strict code of ethics and rigorous standards to uphold protection of the public interest.

CMA Ontario members want to be part of a solution for a prosperous Ontario, and their annual reception at Queen's Park today is an opportunity for all MPPs to engage in important policy discussions.

I agree with CMA Ontario in their positive outlook for Ontario's economy and workforce, that we are capable of withstanding the challenges ahead and that innovative leadership is closely connected to economic success in Ontario.

Please join me in attending the annual CMA reception tonight. It's in committee room 2. We should all be there to show our appreciation for this very, very important profession.

LE TRAITEMENT DU CANCER CANCER TREATMENT

M. Shafiq Qaadri: Je suis très heureux maintenant de saluer et d'accueillir les représentants de la Campagne d'action contre le cancer à l'Assemblée législative de Queen's Park.

I am pleased to rise today to welcome to Queen's Park representatives of the Campaign to Control Cancer.

These individuals come from across the cancer community, from patients and survivors to health care professionals and advocates. They are here at Queen's Park to meet with MPPs from each political party to raise awareness of cancer. The Campaign to Control Cancer is working to champion a new response to cancer: more control and less cancer.

I am proud to be part of a government that launched Canada's first province-wide colorectal cancer screening program; that introduced a free vaccine to protect young women against HPV or human papillomavirus, which, as you'll know, is a cause of cervical cancer; that has increased access to provincial breast cancer screening programs; and, very importantly, that will be funding the PSA prostate cancer test for men as of January 2009.

The McGuinty government has also tripled funding for cancer-fighting drugs under the new drug-funding program since the Transparent Drug System for Patients Act came into effect, and we have in fact listed 10 new cancer drugs.

I think these are all important steps as we seek to transform, enhance and resource the health care system for Ontarians.

VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'll take this opportunity to welcome, in the west members' gallery, Bob Huget from Sarnia, a member of the 35th Parliament. Welcome back to Queen's Park today, Bob.

DEFERRED VOTES

BUDGET MEASURES AND INTERIM APPROPRIATION ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES MESURES BUDGÉTAIRES ET L'AFFECTATION ANTICIPÉE DE CRÉDITS

Deferred vote on the motion for third reading of Bill 44, An Act respecting Budget measures, interim appropriations and other matters / Projet de loi 44, Loi concernant les mesures budgétaires, l'affectation anticipée de crédits et d'autres questions.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Call in the members. This will be a five-minute bell.

The division bells rang from 1515 to 1520.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): All those in favour, please rise one at a time and be recognized by the Clerk.

Ayes

Aggelonitis, Sophia
 Albanese, Laura
 Balkissoon, Bas
 Bartolucci, Rick
 Best, Margaret
 Bradley, James J.
 Broten, Laurel C.
 Brown, Michael A.
 Brownell, Jim
 Bryant, Michael
 Cansfield, Donna H.
 Caplan, David
 Carroll, Aileen
 Colle, Mike
 Craitor, Kim
 Crozier, Bruce
 Delaney, Bob
 Dhillon, Vic

Dickson, Joe
 Duguid, Brad
 Duncan, Dwight
 Flynn, Kevin Daniel
 Fonseca, Peter
 Gerretsen, John
 Hoy, Pat
 Jaczek, Helena
 Jeffrey, Linda
 Kular, Kuldip
 Mangat, Amrit
 Matthews, Deborah
 Mauro, Bill
 McMeekin, Ted
 McNeely, Phil
 Meilleur, Madeleine
 Milloy, John
 Mitchell, Carol

Naqvi, Yasir
 Oraziotti, David
 Phillips, Gerry
 Pupatello, Sandra
 Qaadri, Shafiq
 Ramal, Khalil
 Rinaldi, Lou
 Sergio, Mario
 Smith, Monique
 Smitherman, George
 Sousa, Charles
 Takhar, Harinder S.
 Van Bommel, Maria
 Watson, Jim
 Wilkinson, John
 Wynne, Kathleen O.
 Zimmer, David

Balkissoon, Bas
 Bartolucci, Rick
 Best, Margaret
 Bisson, Gilles
 Broten, Laurel C.
 Brown, Michael A.
 Brownell, Jim
 Bryant, Michael
 Cansfield, Donna H.
 Caplan, David
 Carroll, Aileen
 Colle, Mike
 Craitor, Kim
 Crozier, Bruce
 Delaney, Bob
 Dhillon, Vic
 Dickson, Joe

Flynn, Kevin Daniel
 Fonseca, Peter
 Gerretsen, John
 Gélinas, France
 Hoy, Pat
 Jaczek, Helena
 Jeffrey, Linda
 Kular, Kuldip
 Mangat, Amrit
 Marchese, Rosario
 Matthews, Deborah
 McMeekin, Ted
 McNeely, Phil
 Meilleur, Madeleine
 Milloy, John
 Mitchell, Carol
 Naqvi, Yasir

Prue, Michael
 Pupatello, Sandra
 Qaadri, Shafiq
 Ramal, Khalil
 Rinaldi, Lou
 Sergio, Mario
 Smith, Monique
 Smitherman, George
 Sousa, Charles
 Takhar, Harinder S.
 Van Bommel, Maria
 Watson, Jim
 Wilkinson, John
 Wynne, Kathleen O.
 Zimmer, David

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): All those opposed?

Nays

Bisson, Gilles
 DiNovo, Cheri
 Elliott, Christine
 Gélinas, France
 Hardeman, Ernie
 Horwath, Andrea
 Jones, Sylvia

Kormos, Peter
 Marchese, Rosario
 Martiniuk, Gerry
 Miller, Norm
 Miller, Paul
 Munro, Julia
 O'Toole, John

Prue, Michael
 Runciman, Robert W.
 Shurman, Peter
 Sterling, Norman W.
 Tabuns, Peter
 Yakabuski, John

Arnott, Ted
 Bailey, Robert
 Elliott, Christine
 Hardeman, Ernie
 Jones, Sylvia

Nays

Martiniuk, Gerry
 Miller, Norm
 Munro, Julia
 O'Toole, John
 Runciman, Robert W.

Shurman, Peter
 Sterling, Norman W.
 Yakabuski, John

The Clerk of the Assembly (Ms. Deborah Deller): The ayes are 53; the nays are 20.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I declare the motion carried.

Third reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Be it resolved that the bill do now pass and be entitled as in the motion.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): All those opposed?

The Clerk of the Assembly (Ms. Deborah Deller): The ayes are 55; the nays are 13.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I declare the motion carried.

Third reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Be it resolved that the bill do now pass and be entitled as in the motion.

ACCESS TO ADOPTION RECORDS ACT (VITAL STATISTICS STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT), 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'ACCÈS AUX DOSSIERS D'ADOPTION (MODIFICATION DE LOIS EN CE QUI CONCERNE LES STATISTIQUES DE L'ÉTAT CIVIL)

Deferred vote on the motion for third reading of Bill 12, An Act to amend the Vital Statistics Act in relation to adoption information and to make consequential amendments to the Child and Family Services Act /
 Projet de loi 12, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les statistiques de l'état civil en ce qui a trait aux renseignements sur les adoptions et apportant des modifications corrélatives à la Loi sur les services à l'enfance et à la famille.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Call in the members. This will be a five-minute bell.

The division bells rang from 1523 to 1528.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): All those in favour will please rise one at a time and be recognized by the Clerk.

Ayes

Aggelonitis, Sophia
 Albanese, Laura

Duguid, Brad
 Duncan, Dwight

Oraziotti, David
 Phillips, Gerry

OPPOSITION DAY

WORKPLACE SAFETY AND INSURANCE BOARD

Mr. Howard Hampton: I move that, in the opinion of this House, the McGuinty government must:

—immediately direct the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board (WSIB) to eliminate the flawed experience rating program;

—immediately direct the Provincial Auditor to conduct an audit of the flawed experience rating program;

—recognize the fact that tens of millions of dollars have been drained out of the WSIB's accident fund each year by employers who have learned how to play the game of experience rating;

—recognize the fact that experience rating reduces employer claims, not worker injuries;

—recognize the fact that the practice of experience rating actually encourages employers to misreport or under-report injuries and occupational disease, force injured workers back to work before they are medically ready and pay workers sick pay rather than have them receive compensation benefits;

—recognize that this hides the true extent of workplace injuries and illnesses in Ontario;

—recognize that employers actually receive rebates after they have been penalized for workplace injuries and occupational diseases and deaths; and —recognize that the rebates flowing to employers under the program often exceed the cost of the original fine.

This is addressed to the Premier of Ontario.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Mr. Hampton has moved opposition day motion number 3. Debate? Mr. Hampton.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I want to indicate, right off the bat, that I'll be sharing my time with my colleague from Hamilton East—Stoney Creek.

I'm very pleased to be able to present this motion before the Legislature today because this is a most important debate, and I especially want to thank the many injured workers who have come here to Queen's Park today because they care, and care deeply, about this issue. I'd particularly like to welcome Halima Tato and D'Jamal Salhi, two injured workers who were kind enough and courageous enough to share their stories with the media just before this debate began. I encourage all members to hear their stories, because their stories are particularly tragic in the perverse and absurd way in which the experience rating system has treated them.

I'd also like to begin by thanking the Ontario Federation of Labour, which has done months and years of work documenting the absurd and bizarre results that have come under the experience rating program. I especially want to thank Wayne Samuelson, the president of the OFL, who is here with us today.

I briefly want to point out how the experience rating system actually works. Employers who are able to hide their serious workplace injuries as something called "no-lost-time medical-aid accidents" not only reduce their compensation costs, they also become eligible to receive a rebate from the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board—a cash payment. The other side of this perverse program sets out financial penalties for employers who actually report their on-the-job accidents, employers who actually come forward and say, "We've had these on-the-job accidents, these on-the-job injuries." What they get is a higher level of lost-time injury statistics and, therefore, higher costs.

The difference between these two scenarios—employers who under-report their workplace accidents, and then get a cash payment for doing so, and employers who actually report the number of lost-time accidents they've had in their workplace—amounts to roughly $200 million a year. In fact, it's been estimated that over $2 billion in rebates have gone to companies in the past 10 years with no evidence that the experience rating program has actually reduced workplace injuries.

The important point is that the two sides of the experience rating program skew the lost-time injury statistics for Ontario by providing a powerful incentive for employers to under-report. In other words, no matter how badly injured a worker is on the job, as long as he or she comes to work, their employers are rewarded financially under the experience rating system. Employers have responded to this perverse incentive by pushing injured workers back to work as soon as possible, even when the injured worker's doctor is of the opinion that the injured worker is not fit to return to work. Employer efforts to get injured workers back to work often see injured workers coming back to the workplace the next day to some sort of modified work, often long before they're ready to return to the workplace. As a result, injuries that should be recorded as lost-time accidents, lost-time injuries, that at one time would have been reported as lost-time accidents, lost-time injuries, are now being reported by employers as no-lost-time medical-aid accidents.

From the point of view of the program, it does not matter whether legitimate, modified, meaningful work is being provided or if the employer is simply hiding the claim. The result is the same: an under-reporting of lost-time accidents and more cash rebates for the employer. The truth is that if it is cheaper to hide the injuries than to prevent them, many employers with an eye to the bottom line will do just that. They won't focus on preventing workplace accidents or injuries; they'll focus on hiding them. That is one of the perverse results of this system.

1540

In addition to these perverse employer financial incentives, the Ministry of Labour uses both lost-time and no-lost-time injury statistics as a means to target workplaces for inspections. These are all tremendous incentives for employers to reduce both sets of statistics. So imagine: You've got a perverse system which drives employers to under-report lost-time accidents, and not only do they get reduced compensation costs for that but they get financial incentives. Then there's a follow-up process, which says, "Well, if you under-report, you will be inspected less often by occupational health and safety inspectors from the Ministry of Labour." So it's perversion on top of perversion in terms of the incentives that are here.

There are numerous examples of employers who operate internal incentive programs and engage in intimidation, all to keep injured workers from reporting their claim. Many employers have programs to get workers back to work immediately after an injury so that no lost time is recorded, even if the worker does no actual work or if returning to work so soon delays the injured worker's ultimate recovery. One technique that can be used to hide lost-time injuries is to use the employers' sickness and accident benefit plan. Workers or lower-level management whose job performance evaluation can be affected by the lost-time injury rates may have an incentive to see work-related injuries listed as lost time wholly unrelated to workplace injury or illness.

Things are made worse by cash bonuses that are provided to work crews who do not report any lost-time injuries. This could result in significant peer pressure to use the benefit plan rather than report the injury to WSIB.

Moreover, in the health care sector, consultants advise that hospital administrators routinely keep the wages of the workers whole and encourage them not to file claims with WSIB.

Other schemes to maximize experience rating incentives include draws for prizes. One such example, provided by the United Steelworkers, was a fishing boat and trailer located at the plant gate. Everyone who did not have a lost-time injury reported had their name go into the draw for the boat and the trailer. Another example is from Sarnia. Each week, all workers who did not incur or cause a recordable injury had their name put into a draw for gasoline coupons ranging in value from $100 to $1,000. For every week that they “qualified”—meaning no accident was reported—their name was put into the final draw for a vehicle valued at $30,000 to $40,000.

It's our opinion, the opinion of New Democrats, that these experience rating programs are more effective in reducing the number of claims than they are in reducing the number of workplace injuries. If there were a true reduction in workplace injuries through better health and safety in the workplace, we would expect to see a significant reduction in fatalities and serious injuries. But a reduction in fatalities and serious injuries has not occurred, which leads us to believe that the reduction in overall reported lost time has little to do with Ontario becoming a safer place to work.

It is also clear that experience rating has led to an increase in claims abandoned by workers. The rate of claim abandonment as a percentage of registered claims has increased substantially since the introduction of experience rating, from just under 7% in 1988 to a high of just under 18% in 1998. The rate has settled to between 15.5% and 16.5% in the last few years.

In 2007, 14,416 lost-time injury claims were abandoned. In addition, there were 41,821 no-lost-time claims abandoned. These are significant numbers of injury statistics that are not part of any performance measure.

That's the case. That's the perverse way in which experience rating works, and that is why New Democrats argue that this experience rating system must be ended now, and why we call on all members of the Legislature to support this resolution.

I know my colleague from Hamilton East–Stoney Creek has many details that he wants to add to this discussion.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Hon. Brad Duguid: I am pleased to rise today to speak to this issue. Just to be clear on what we're talking about, we're talking about a motion to “immediately direct the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board to eliminate the flawed experience rating program.” That doesn't mean review it; that doesn't mean get rid of it, cut it, scrap it and replace it with something else. That means get rid of it altogether.

I think that's the problem we have with this motion. We've heard no suggestions about how to improve it.

We've heard no suggestions about waiting until the review that's currently taking place with the WSIB, in terms of information that may come forward that could inform this debate. All we're hearing today is a desire to scrap it altogether. That's disappointing, because I think it limits the tools at our disposal to work toward a reduction in workplace injuries across this province.

I'm disappointed, not that a motion would come forward regarding experience rating; I'm disappointed that a motion would come forward in this way that suggests we should scrap it altogether. Had the motion said something like, “We should review it,” or had the motion said something like, “We should consider some way to replace it with a better program,” I would have been happy to support it, Madam Speaker, because as you know, and as everybody in this Legislature knows, our position as a government from the beginning has been that this experience rating program has flaws, that this experience rating program needs to be improved. That's why we support the WSIB in its review of this program. We think it's important that the WSIB does review this program, does make every effort to make this program better, does make some of the improvements the leader of the third party pointed out in his speech.

We're open to those suggestions, and I think that's one of the good things about having this debate. Perhaps by the end of the day some good suggestions will come forward. Certainly, some of the things the NDP, my own colleagues and the Conservative Party say may well be useful, in terms of that review, in identifying some of the problems that exist.

But let's talk about what this motion really does. It really says, “To heck with the facts, to heck with getting the facts first, to heck with waiting to find out about the WSIB review; that just doesn't matter.” That might be information that's important to our consideration, but it just doesn't matter. “To heck with any form of positive enforcement to encourage employers to invest in health and safety; let's just scrap it altogether.” That's the problem we have. I think the leader of the third party thinks he knows best—don't let the facts get in the way of a good argument.

Let's not be in a position where we say that if we scrap this particular program, workers are going to be better off. Our first priority—and it should be the third party's first priority as well—is to do everything we can to reduce workplace injuries. That's got to be our first priority. To suggest that we take an incentive program to encourage businesses to reduce workplace injuries and scrap it altogether, without suggesting that we should be improving upon that program, finding ways to make it work better, is, I think, frankly reckless; it's putting politics ahead of people. That's why we have a problem with this. That's why this minister and this government are not going to buy in to this motion the way it's written.

Let me begin by reminding members that the WSIB is indeed an arm's-length agency of the Ministry of Labour. The WSIB has the statutory authority to determine its own practices and procedures. That independence is vital to maintaining its role as a provider of no-fault insurance for both employers and workers. The WSIB must be, and must be seen to be, balanced, ensuring fair and reasonable compensation for injured workers and financial stability to employers.

1550

I should point out that the board has already recognized that this experience rating program needs to be reviewed, and more than that, about a month ago, that's exactly what they set out to do. I've listened carefully to some of the advocates who are here today and I welcome them here to this chamber. I've met with a number of them. I've listened very carefully to some of the concerns they've raised about this very issue. That's why this minister and this government are very much in favour of reviewing the experience rating system, reviewing the experience rating program, because we recognize that there are problems with the current system. We recognize that it needs to be improved.

The Toronto Star had a series of articles that identified a number of the problems with the current experience rating system. That information, I would expect, will be very helpful to the WSIB as they conduct this review.

I've made it clear that this government indeed recognizes that there are problems with the current system, and that's why we support this decision of the WSIB to review the experience rating system. That's why we support the WSIB's interim decision to immediately put in place a policy whereby employers whose workplaces experience a fatality should not be able to receive a rebate. I think that's important. It sends out a strong signal right off the bat that this isn't some window dressing type of review that's taking place. This is a serious review and we'll see what the results are. I can't prejudge what the results of the review will be. In fact, the results may be exactly what the leader of the NDP is looking for. It may be to scrap the system altogether, but it may also be a suggestion of an improved system that may in fact give the employers the incentives they need to continue to bring down workplace injuries. That would be a good thing for everybody, not just us here in this chamber, but for workers right across this province.

Our priority as a government when it comes to the WSIB and injured workers is to work with our health and safety partners to reduce workplace injuries. That's the key. In my view, that's the priority.

I think back to when I first had the privilege of serving in this position. It was probably within the first 48 hours that my BlackBerry went off to advise me of a workplace fatality. About 48 hours or 72 hours later, off it went again to advise me of another one. In my view and in the view of this government, as long as 261,000 workers are injured every single year, it's obvious that we together have more work to do. When 715 workers are injured every day, that tells me that's not appropriate, that's not good enough. We have more work to do. That's 30 an hour. That's one every two minutes. By the time I finish speaking here today, up to five, maybe six, workers will have been injured across this province. That's just not acceptable to this government, I don't think it's acceptable to anybody here in this chamber.

We recognize that we still have more work to do. The key is that we have to do that work together, working with our health and safety partners out in the field, working with the WSIB and utilizing every single measure that we have at our disposal to bring down workplace injuries. That means that we have to look at education and awareness, and the WSIB is doing a pretty good job of trying to get the message out to people, both to employers—in particular employers—and workers, that we have to do everything we can to reduce workplace injuries.

The WSIB and our Ministry of Labour are working with our education system so that workers at a very young age can develop that culture of safety. That's where we need to go. Education and awareness are so important to ensuring that we reach our goals. So is enforcement. There is no government that has enforced the regulations and rules when it comes to workplace health and safety more than we have. We've doubled the number of occupational health and safety inspectors across this province; 200 more health and safety inspectors are out there now, going into workplaces, working with employers. There is a cost to that and that cost is paid for through business premiums, but it's a cost that I think is worth paying, because it's an opportunity to further reduce workplace injuries.

The third pillar of any approach thus far taken—taken by the NDP when they were in power. In fact, some would argue that they implemented much of what we see now in the experience rating system. I know there was some system in place before, but they implemented much of it somewhere around 1992. The Tories continued this system, and we've had that system that we inherited, as well. There's always been a system in place to give employers the incentive that some of them may need to improve the health and safety in their areas.

I would suggest that we're selling injured workers short if we're not using every measure at our disposal to reduce workplace injuries. We really have to be doing everything within our power to do that. To just completely dismiss a potential incentive program that could encourage employers to reduce workplace injuries I think is irresponsible and reckless. It's not something that I'm willing to support today, and I have a feeling that many of my colleagues will join me in opposing this motion simply because of that.

We have every confidence that the WSIB will be conducting a very serious review of this matter. That's what we're looking forward to seeing. We're looking forward to seeing what they recommend. As I said earlier, we can't prejudge where they're going to go with this. We can't prejudge whether they're going to go far enough. We can't prejudge whether they're going to eliminate the system altogether. I suspect that they're going to look at every way they can to utilize this measure to reduce workplace injuries as much as possible.

We've made some progress. We have reduced workplace injuries across this province over the last four years. We're looking at what looks like about a 20% reduction in workplace injuries. That's an accomplishment and it's something that's been done in partnership with all of our stakeholders. But in my view and in the view of my colleagues—I think in the view of everybody here—that's not good enough. We've got to go further. We've got to do more, because every workplace injury is a family that's in distress. It's a huge impact on the life of a family and a huge impact on the life of workers. I know there are likely some injured workers in the galleries here with us today. They can attest to the huge impact, not only on them physically, but the psychological impact. The impact on their families is devastating. We share with them the concern that we have to do more. This government, while we've done a lot when it comes to enforcement—we're working very closely with our partners when it comes to awareness and education—doesn't feel that's enough. We want to do everything we possibly can. We're going to look at incentive programs as well. If an incentive program comes forward from the WSIB—they are a third party agency and they have the ability to bring this forward on their own, but we're going to be taking a close look at that review when it takes place.

I thank the leader of the third party for raising this issue. I don't support the approach that he wants to take, to scrap it all at once and scrap it altogether. I think it's reckless and irresponsible. At the same time, I am looking forward to seeing more reforms. I am looking forward to seeing some vast improvement to this experience rating system. Let's wait and see when this review report comes forward. I expect it will be sooner rather than later. We'll do what is responsible and we'll do what we believe is in the best interests of injured workers across this province.

Mr. Robert Bailey: It is a pleasure for me to rise today to speak to this motion brought forward by the leader of the third party regarding experience rating programs at the WSIB. I would like to start off by saying that our party will be voting against this motion.

It's important to understand the background of the experience rating program and why we support it being maintained. The experience rating program began in 1984 as an attempt to offer a positive incentive for employers to reduce workplace injuries and get injured workers back to work as quickly as possible.

I'd like to say that my experience in industry, both as an employee and in a management position, was that—in my industry, anyway—we had to report every single incident, no matter how small or minor, and full investigations were conducted at that time to prevent any further injuries or incidents. I know that was probably a more progressive employer than maybe some have had the advantage to work for, but I'd like to see us take those ideas forward and implement them across the province, to make other industries do the same. That was in the petrochemical sector, I might add, in Sarnia-Lambton.

Despite all of the reforms of the WSIB over the last 20 years, the experience rating program has had all-party support up until today. The Liberals, under David Peterson, expanded the program in 1986; the NDP, under the Bob Rae government, applied the program system-wide in 1992; and the Progressive Conservatives, under Mike Harris and Ernie Eves, saw no need to change that.

1600

The experience rating program is not the biggest problem that the WSIB is facing right now. What we should be spending our time talking about is financial controls that are currently in place at the WSIB, and pressing the current chairman on the importance of wiping out the board's massive unfunded liability by 2014, like they say they are going to do. However, the leader of the third party has chosen to focus on this one program offered by the WSIB, the experience rating program.

Let's look at some facts. First, how does the program actually work? On average, employers pay approximately a 2.25% payroll premium to the WSIB. If workplace safety and insurance claim costs are lower than expected, firms then have some of their WSIB premiums returned. If they are higher than expected, they pay more.

Experience rating promotes higher individual employer accountability without sacrificing basic workers' compensation insurance principles. This encourages companies to invest both in injury prevention and in early and safe return to work. In short, higher claim costs mean higher premiums; lower costs mean lower premiums.

A 2005 independent study by the Institute for Work and Health concluded, "Our research indicates that" experience rating "functions well, encourages prevention and contributes to positive workplace health and safety practices." In fact, for 2006, one in every four Ontario employers under this program were charged approximately $169 million, with the largest of these firms seeing average charges of $319,000. The average rebate under the experience rating program for large firms was $135,000. The charges far outpace the average rebate by a margin of 2.5 to 1.

If a company gets a rebate this year, it would be for accidents that occurred two and three years ago, where they had brought employees back to work. Contrary to what appeared in the Toronto Star, the rebate Inco got had nothing to do with the worker who was killed, but it did have to do with the outstanding record that Inco had in getting injured workers back to work sooner in previous years.

That is the type of behaviour that the WSIB is attempting to support and encourage. Under the experience rating program, there will not be a rebate issued in the case of a fatality. Experience rating offers a positive financial incentive to employers to do the right thing and to get injured workers back to work sooner.

The current chair of the WSIB, the honourable Steve Mahoney, is reviewing the program to see how he can keep the program, but it has still not issued a payout in a year that a company has a fatality. Reviewing this program is not a bad idea, but many business stakeholders believe that the changes being considered may ill-advisedly introduce concepts of blame into the system, upsetting the founding of the no-fault principles of workers' compensation that are integral to an effective, efficient and fair scheme.

We would be concerned that this may change the program enough that the effect will be that employers will either challenge and appeal claims more or will stop worrying about getting injured workers back to work sooner. In essence, many believe that this will have a detrimental effect on getting employees back to work sooner.

What our party would like to see is the Provincial Auditor do a complete audit of the WSIB. Our party is concerned by the fact that WSIB spending seems to be completely out of control.

The government likes to congratulate themselves by saying that when they took over in 2003, they found the WSIB in such a mess that they called in the auditor. When they called in the auditor, the unfunded liability was approximately $7 billion. Today, after five years of this government, the McGuinty government, it is over $8 billion. According to the chair of the WSIB, whom I personally visited a couple of weeks ago, it will peak at just over $9 billion next year. The board is in worse financial shape today than when we left office in 2003. Those are the facts.

This week, on another note, we learned that the current chair hired some high-powered lobbyists in Ottawa to organize a swanky soiree at Hy's Steakhouse and martini bar. This party appears to have been thrown exclusively for the chairman's former colleagues on Parliament Hill. What we would like to know, on this side of the House, is how much the WSIB spends on lobbying every year. We want to know if the McGuinty government thinks that the WSIB should be hiring lobbyists to organize parties. Is that really a good way to spend injured workers' money? We don't think so.

We're also very concerned, on our side of the House, that the unfunded liability of the WSIB will be growing instead of shrinking. The unfunded liability is caused when the board's income doesn't meet projected expenses.

For years, the WSIB has said that this unfunded liability will be wiped out by 2014. What is happening? The unfunded liability is in fact growing and is expected to peak at just over $9 billion. What we should be demanding is that the WSIB produce a concrete plan to wipe out the unfunded liability by 2014. This has to have realistic assumptions on the ways that they are going to get their financial house in order.

In closing, I'd like to say that our party is in favour of working with all parties in this House to see that there are no further injuries to workers. We want to improve programs. For all of those reasons, I am looking forward to listening to the rest of the debate.

Mr. Paul Miller: I also rise in the House and I'm pleased to participate in this very important debate. I would like to welcome the many injured workers who have come to the Legislature to observe their elected representatives in action on this very important issue.

The Ontario Federation of Labour has documented cases of the instances in which workplaces in which fatal accidents have occurred have been deemed safe and worthy of rebates under the experience rating program. Recently, WSIB chairman Steve Mahoney ordered a freeze on any rebates to companies that kill.

In announcing this freeze, Mr. Mahoney reported that he was unaware of the issue. In fact, the OFL has been raising this issue for months in meetings with various people at the WSIB, including providing press releases from as early as October 5, 2007. It is clear that Mr. Mahoney, the WSIB board and the McGuinty government have been aware of the problems with the WSIB program for a very, very long time. It's time for action, not more studies.

Here's a personal story. "Cindy" works at Magna. Magna has a bonus system to discourage the reporting of accidents. Cindy was pressured by her company to keep on working to reduce claims costs, which is what is measured for experience rating purposes. The result of Cindy being forced to work too soon and the employer's lack of concern about the actual modifications that would be necessary for a suitably productive job is that Cindy suffered a number of other compensable injuries.

Over one million workers are denied WSIB coverage in this province. There is also the issue of the coverage under the WSIB. Entire segments of our population in the Ontario economy are not covered by workers' compensation, so statistics for them simply do not exist in the WSIB database. An estimated one third of the workforce in Ontario does not have the mandatory coverage by the WSIB. It is the NDP's conviction that it should be compulsory that all workers in all sectors in Ontario be covered by the WSIB.

There are also employers with a good health and safety program which encourage workers to report claims, but then get targeted by the WSIB and the Ministry of Labour and are called "high risk." This has been incredibly damaging to the health and safety programs in Ontario because it sends the message that those employers would have been better off suppressing claims, as many other employers do.

There are some initial indications that the MOL is moving away from the use of the WSIB claims statistics as a performance measure. If this is true, then this is a good first step. We would encourage the ministry to invest more resources to develop other performance measures it can use in deciding how best to direct its enforcement resources. The ministry must improve its communications and working relationship with the WSIB to probe deeper into health and safety, and use true measures of the strength of health and safety in the workplace.

The decline of Ontario's health and safety system—committee certification is wholly inadequate. The degeneration of Ontario's health and safety system can also be seen in the widespread disregard for the heart and soul of occupational health and safety in this province: joint health and safety committees. These committees are required in all workplaces of 20 or more employees.

Ontario's health and safety efforts are based upon the concept of the internal responsibility system, IRS, which recognizes that there cannot be a ministry inspector at every workplace every day and therefore seeks to establish a joint labour management committee in every workplace of 20 or more workers.

This is how the committee system works. Workers have the right to inspect the premises; investigate critical injuries and fatalities; be informed when there is lost time, injury or illness; refuse unsafe work; and collectively participate in a joint committee with management. Employers are responsible for supporting joint committees; responding to committee recommendations; providing supervision, information and training to workers; and taking all reasonable precautions to protect workers from hazards in the workplace. Governments enforce the rights and responsibilities of both employers and employees. The thing that makes all this work is the certification of key members of the joint committee. Two members—one worker, one manager—of each joint committee must complete a two-part training process called certification. Certification rates are the only available measure of whether the internal responsibility system is working in Ontario's workplaces.

1610

In March 2007, Cheri DiNovo and Andrea Horwath asked Steve Mahoney about certification rates when he appeared at the government agencies committee. Mahoney responded that perhaps about one quarter of workplaces are not certification compliant.

In the summer of 2007, the WSIB established a phone bank to measure certification compliance. The results of this report have not been made public, but showed that less than one half of workplaces are certification compliant.

Employers provide the names of their certified members to the WSIB. The WSIB has completed lists of all premium remitters in Ontario. However, the WSIB refuses to provide to the Ministry of Labour the list of companies without certified members so that they can be inspected and enforced. Recommendation 10 of the recent government agencies review of the WSIB recommends that the WSIB do everything possible to ensure that all employers are in compliance with the certification requirements under the province's Occupational Health and Safety Act. There is little evidence that the WSIB has taken action on this recommendation.

In summary, the WSIB's experience rating program distorts and undermines the province's workplace health and safety system by distorting employer behaviour. The Ministry of Labour's efforts are severely hurt by a dysfunctional committee system, as manifested in the deplorable certification statistics.

Solutions: Short term, the NDP believes that there needs to be an immediate moratorium on all experience rating surcharges and rebates until the WSIB review is completed. We also believe that regardless of the outcome of the review, never again should there be any incentive payments to employers that are not meeting their obligations under the Occupational Health and Safety Act.

Long term, there are alternatives to experience rating. In the longer term, the labour movement has proposed a very constructive idea that we believe the minister should study seriously: an excellence fund. Such a fund would allow the board and employers to go forward with prevention and accommodation, promoting timely and safe return to work. Funding for the excellence program would be transferred from all annual expenditures from the current experience rating program. The excellence fund would be set up as a merit system, or incentive program, which would offer grants and loans to employers who want to make a real health and safety improvement beyond their obligation under the Occupational Health And Safety Act: for example, the addition of patient lifts in health care facilities, or the replacement of toxins with safe substances in workplaces. In order to qualify for a grant, the employer must undergo an extensive audit by the board through an accreditation process. The joint health and safety committee would be involved in the accreditation process. For purposes of the audit, employers would be required to record all lost-time injuries and know lost-time injuries and incident reports. Employers passing accreditation would be publicly recognized, much like the ISO-certified companies are, for example, with a banner. If an employer fails the audit, the board and the Ontario government would not purchase any goods or services from them. Grants would be amortized over a reasonable period of time.

Other activities of the excellence fund could include giving grants to employers to modify the workplace to accommodate an injured worker. This could be the accident employer or new employer willing to hire an injured worker. An employer may be given a prospective rate discount if accreditation is passed and no grant had been awarded during the deemed amortization period of the grant. Rate discounts would be adjusted through regular or spot audits. Audits could be triggered through a Ministry of Labour enforcement action and would allow the board to apply administrative penalties which would go to the excellence fund. Entitlement to grants for employers would modify the workplace to accommodate an injured worker, move with the injured worker on RTW—i.e., with the accident employer and/or a subsequent employer. Compensation for a loss of earnings should resume in the event of a job loss by the accommodated injured worker, which would be adjusted on the merits of each individual case.

I'd like to move to a personal thing that happened to me when I was working at Stelco as an industrial mechanic-ironworker-welder. We had a very high accident rate because of the nature of our trades, a lot of injuries: burns and things falling on us. I thought the company was being really nice letting me come back to work when I was injured. They even sent a taxi to my house to pick me up. They'd asked other workers to do the same thing. I realize that it was only about their experience rating dollars and nothing to do with my health or safety, but when I did go to make a claim, the adjudicator at the WSIB, later on in life when my injuries caught up with me, said, "Mr. Miller, you couldn't have been hurt that badly; you went to work." Obviously, it wasn't a serious enough injury for them to consider my case. Wow.

What I'm saying here is that you do the company what you thought was a favour because you didn't know about the experience rating program. They make it look like they're doing you a favour by letting you come to work, answer phones and sit in a chair all day long. But it wasn't because they cared about me or what would happen to me 30 years down the road. That was obvious, because when I did have a knee problem and I did go to the board, "Mr. Miller, we can't help you. You went to work. You weren't that injured." Disgusting. Trickery. The public were not aware of it, and probably a lot still aren't aware of the system. Brutal.

As a good employee, I came to work and helped the company out even when I should have been at home convalescing, all the while thinking that it was me the company was worried about. No; I know that wasn't true. The company was receiving experience rating lottery winnings on my injured back.

I'll give you a couple of examples. These are actually from the OFL's own records.

"Waste Services ... Inc. (formerly Capital Environmental Resource Inc.)

"Fine: $160,000

"Year: 2001

"Incident: A worker was standing on a riding step at the back of a reversing loading truck. He fell off and was run over by the truck, breaking his foot, ankle, collarbone and ribs. He suffered permanent ligament damage to his knee and neck. The Ministry of Labour investigator also found that only two seat belts were available, but three workers were assigned to the truck.

"The employer was convicted on three charges—failing to provide instruction to the injured worker on the correct use of the rear riding step, failing to take the responsible precaution of ensuring the injured worker did not ride on the rear riding step while the vehicle was reversing, and failing to ensure seat belts were available for all workers" involved in the process.

"Experience rating details:

"Waste Services ... participates in the NEER program. This incident would still be relevant to their 2004 calculations (but not 2005). In 2004, Waste Services ... Inc. received a rebate of $247,995.58, more than enough to reimburse them for their considerable fine.

"Northern Sawmills Inc.

"Fine: $65,000

"Year: 2003

"Incident: There was a logjam on an out-feed conveyer belt of a debarker machine. A worker locked the out-feed machine and stood up on the conveyer belt, trying to clear the log. Even though the machine was locked, a log was somehow pushed through, and it knocked the worker unconscious, causing a fractured cheekbone, crushed sinus, dislocated jaw, cracked left forehead and a concussion.

"The employer was convicted of failing to ensure that cleaning/maintenance work was not performed on the conveyer until motion that may endanger a worker was stopped.

"Experience rating details:

"Northern Sawmills ... participates in the NEER program. This incident would still be relevant to their 2004 and 2005 calculations. In those two years, they received a net rebate of $198,053.30, offsetting their fine by over three times" the amount. A shame, Madam Chair.

This has been happening all over our province, as far as we know, for the last 10 years, and it has been brought to this House on more than one occasion by the OFL and other leaders in the labour movement—ignored, put on the back burner. Even the head of the board didn't know about the $5 million that was paid to a mining outfit up north. They were fined $325,000 on a death, and they received in the same year $5 million in rebates.

1620

"Newmont Canada Ltd.

"Fine: $120,000....

"Incident: Two workers were performing electrical work on a starter motor. The side electrical contact short-circuited and resulted in critical flash burns to both workers. The first received first-, second- and third-degree burns to the face, hands and arms, and the second received first- and second-degree burns to the hands.

"The employer was convicted of failing to provide the workers with/ensure the use of personal protective equipment.

"Experience rating details:

"Newmont Canada participated in the NEER program. In 2005, the first relevant year following this incident, they received a rebate" of $476,000, "four times the amount of their considerable fine.

"Semple-Gooder Roofing Ltd.

"Fine: $150,000

"Year: 2001

"Incident: A construction worker was killed by a reversing tractor-trailer when he was struck and trapped under the wheels and dragged 10 metres. The employer was convicted of failing to ensure that operators of vehicles were assisted by a signaller when the operator's view is obstructed.

"Experience rating details:

"Semple-Gooder Roofing Ltd. participates in the CAD-7 and NEER experience rating programs. In 2005 and 2006 (the last two years that this incident would be relevant to their CAD-7 calculations) they received a net rebate" of $648,000.00, "more than four times the amount of their considerable fine." They also received a rebate of $336 from NEER because it was a co-program.

“General Electric Canada:

“Fine: $50,000

“Year: 2003

“Incident: At a GE light bulb manufacturing plant in Oakville, a worker was caught in the rotating spindles of a fluorescent light bulb-making machine while trying to clear some bulbs that had gone askew. The worker suffered lacerations and tendon damage to the right forearm. A Ministry of Labour investigation found that it was standard operating procedure at the time to clear bulbs while the machine was in operation.”

Once again: a small fine; a large reward.

This system doesn't have to wait a year or even six months for more studies. The minister stands up and says, “We're working on it.”

His own chair didn't even know about the $5-million payoff to the place in northern Ontario. How you can be running a board and not know about sizable payouts of public money on this, what I like to call, reward system?

What does this system do? This system attacks safety and health in the workplace. It undermines safety committees. It makes people forget about safety tours. Even the last year I was at Stelco, we constantly had to fight to get our monthly tours, which were mandatory in my place of employment for years. In the last couple of years, we were lucky if we got one every five months. How do you recognize that an accident or hazardous thing is going to happen in a workplace if you don't even take the safety tours any more? Mind you, Stelco receives some sizable rebate cheques.

I'm now going to share my last few minutes with two speakers. Mr. Prue and Mr. Tabuns would like to say a few words about their own personal situations when it goes in rotation.

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: I'm pleased to join in the debate and speak in respect of the opposition motion to eliminate the experience rating program.

As has been said on the floor of this Legislature, the experience rating program was established to encourage employers to reduce injuries and occupational health diseases and encourage workers to return to work—very good sentiments and things that I think all of us should be hoping for in terms of workplaces and for the constituents whom we represent here.

As the minister himself has said, both he and the Premier have acknowledged that the program is flawed and have stated that some real, serious changes are needed. In the very near term, the WSIB is undertaking an internal review of the program, as they announced on March 10, and that review is under way. In that time frame, the WSIB has placed a moratorium on providing rebates to companies that have had a fatality. That review team is going to report back, and decisions will be made with respect to the fundamental structure of the program.

I have to say that the minister spoke eloquently with respect to why the opposition day motion is irresponsible and uncalled-for. We know that safe workplaces and a strong workplace insurance system benefit everyone. We know that there are changes to be made, and we know that we need to take guidance and study the issue to determine how that is best to go about. We need workplaces across the province to contribute to a strong and productive province and we are committed to improving the conditions for workers in communities right around the province.

We have invested in and brought forward serious reforms already to the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act that have given more than 155,000 injured workers their first real benefit increase in 12 years. We will be reducing, as the minister has said, injuries by 20% through a comprehensive integrated health and safety strategy, but even at that, we know that there is much more work to do and that that is not enough.

In keeping with the need to be on-site in those communities, it is critical that we have kept our promise to hire 200 new health and safety inspectors, nearly doubling their ranks. That is so we can know what is happening in communities across the province. We can keep our finger on the pulse and we can enforce the rules and make sure that workers are not injured, that they are kept safe and that workplaces are good places to go to, so that those workers can return home safely to their families at the end of the day.

As we stand in this Legislature, we are committed to making sure that injured workers are well taken care of. More than anything, we are committed to making sure that there are fewer injured workers, that fewer families have to go through the very difficult circumstance of seeing their father or their mother come home injured or, even more tragically, not come home at all.

That is why it is critical that we take the time to get it right, to make sure that we do encourage employers to reduce injuries and occupational health diseases and that we encourage workers to return to work when they can. For all of us, that is our goal and our desire, and it is important to take the appropriate amount of time to study, reflect, seek expert advice and work with the WSIB and those experts who can bring this issue to the table to make sure that workers in all of our communities are safe and return home safely at the end of their shift.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Thank you for the opportunity to speak to this motion today.

Interjection.

Mr. John Yakabuski: My friend from Beaches—East York didn't think we got up fast enough. He was ready—

Mr. Michael Prue: I thought you were already finished.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Gosh, no. I barely got started. Some days, people would wish I was finished before I got started.

Anyway, it's a pleasure to speak to this motion put forward by the leader of the third party, Mr. Hampton, with regard to the experience rating program of the WSIB.

Interjection.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Peter, I cannot share those feelings with you. The leader of the opposition, Mr. Runciman, is—

Mr. Peter Kormos: Bob's outstanding.

Mr. John Yakabuski: —outstanding.

Anyway, I've got to tell you that I'm going to be voting against this motion. While I appreciate the passion being displayed by the third party on this issue, that only tells some of the story.

This program has been in effect since 1985. In government, all parties have made the decision not to do away with it. That includes the New Democratic Party's government from 1990 to 1995.

I appreciate some of the statistics that my friend from Hamilton East—Stoney Creek was talking about relating to the fines that companies had assessed against them and balancing that against the rebate that they received in a subsequent time frame. They don't mesh very well, because those rebates sounded extremely large—I heard of one for some mining corporation that was in the $5-million range—but we also have to ask ourselves what the actual premiums would have been that were paid by those companies that did receive a rebate.

1630

The justification or logic behind the rebate program is that it acts as an incentive to get workers back to work sooner. I understand what the NDP is talking about: It can be used in a wrongful way to encourage a worker to get back on the job, maybe in light-duty work or maybe just showing up and punching the clock, when they're not ready to be back to work. I can't say that doesn't happen, because in the real world, some things happen that shouldn't happen. But that's not the design of the program. The design is that there's an encouragement for the company to bring injured workers who are ready to come back to work, but who have not exhausted the time frame on their claim, back to work sooner.

Obviously, this program has worked.

Interjection.

Mr. John Yakabuski: I understand I'm going to have disagreements with my friends next door here, but I've had them before.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: That's okay.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Rosie and I have disagreed.

It has worked in the past. We in this House, and employers, employees and members of collective bargaining units across this province have a responsibility to ensure that the rules are working the way they should. I would have a concern if I had reason to believe there were shenanigans going on to bring a worker back on the job when they shouldn't be brought back on the job because their health doesn't allow them to do so and the employer was using the system to benefit themselves and hoping that the worker comes back. I presume it would have to be voluntarily. I have to assume that the worker would have to agree to come back.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: What else is he going to say?

Mr. John Yakabuski: That's easy to say.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Is he going to say no?

Mr. John Yakabuski: I guess anybody can say no. I've said no to many things in my life, and many people have said no to me. And sometimes there are consequences, and sometimes there are not. But if there are any nefarious things going on, I would be concerned about that, and I hope any member of this assembly would be concerned about that, because that's not something we should be supporting in any way, shape or form.

I'm going to be voting against this motion, because it's something that, as I said, governments in the past have supported. Our government supported it. It's easy to say that we just get rid of this experience rating system because there are some instances that parties purport have not worked or have led to disadvantaging a worker. But there are also experiences that support it. Unless we have a system that is going to replace it and work better, then I think we're going to stick with the system we have.

Interjection.

Mr. John Yakabuski: My friend Mr. Miller says, "Bad choice." My ears are too good.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Concentrate.

Mr. John Yakabuski: "Concentrate. Try to stay on subject," Rosie says.

Interjection: Focus, focus.

Mr. John Yakabuski: What I'd like to focus on right now is the head of the WSIB.

Interjections.

Mr. John Yakabuski: The Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing says I'm going on a personal attack. Well, not at all.

But I do have to ask members of this House and the people of Ontario how they feel about one of the highest-paid public servants—if you want to call it that—in the province making hundreds of thousands of dollars, double-dipping, going to Hy's Steakhouse and entertaining members of Parliament from across the country. Wayne Easter, the eastern feaster: Here he comes in from Prince Edward Island; he needed some beef to go with his potatoes up at Hy's Steakhouse, one of the swankiest joints in Ottawa, and maybe in the country. Steve Mahoney entertained these folks because he wanted to talk about something. What was it he wanted to talk about? I can't even remember what it was.

Mr. Michael Prue: Lowering the flag.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Yes: the lowering of the flag on the day of mourning. I guess all of those members in Ottawa have had their e-mail accounts cancelled. No longer does the post office go to the offices on the Hill. The only way you can talk to these people, I guess, is to get them together at Hy's Steakhouse. I know, Madam Speaker, that you're wondering how this relates to the motion, but by the sounds of it there were so many people at that steakhouse that night that it may have made it an unsafe workplace. Those guys, those Liberal MPs, Steve Mahoney and his friends, must have been tripping over one another, and that can certainly lead to an unsafe workplace.

Those are some of the concerns that have not been addressed. We asked questions the other day of the Minister of Labour, and he kind of pooh-poohed the whole thing, like it's a hands-off thing. But then, at the end of the day, he was saying he wanted to speak to Mr. Mahoney about this. I think we need to have rules in place that quite simply prohibit that kind of practice—

Interjections.

Mr. John Yakabuski: That kind of practice at Hy's Steakhouse.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Order. I'm having difficulty hearing the speaker who has the floor. I would ask that we can get some order in the House, please. Thank you.

Mr. John Yakabuski: I appreciate the commentary from the minister. There are times that debate in this House is riveting and there are times that it's not quite so riveting. I've experienced both sides of it, and coming from both sides of the House as well. I don't want to dwell on this point too long.

Some of the concerns we have with the WSIB and workers in my riding—we deal with injured workers all the time—and the way they are dealt with by the WSIB: There have got to be better ways. There have got to be ways of streamlining the process, the waits, the appeals and the fighting back and forth. If Mr. Mahoney spent more time examining how they do their business at the WSIB, how it relates to injured workers and how they can improve the service to injured workers, both short-term and long, instead of taking Liberal MPs to Hy's Steakhouse for some beef, we'd probably see some improvement in the system. So cancel those trips to Ottawa and get down with reforming and working on the WSIB so that it actually addresses the concerns of injured workers across this province.

Getting back to the motion at hand—again, look, I do appreciate, and I always have a great deal of respect for, the passion and fervour with which the members of the third party go after issues. I was here a couple of weeks ago when we had an opposition day motion which they did not support, and yet their arguments had validity. I do respect the way they go at the issues. But while this experience rating system may require some reforms and improvements—I think that one of the reasons we are here is that we're always striving to improve systems that do exist. As it is, it's something that I don't think we should be dropping or getting rid of, but we should always be engaged in the ongoing process of trying to make this and any other system in Ontario work better.

I live in an area that is dominated by forestry. We all know what kind of business forestry is. It's tough, hard work. The Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services comes from northern Ontario and he knows all about it. It's hard work, it's tough work, and the propensity for injury is high in that particular business, in that particular industry. We have to ensure that we are doing the very best for those workers, not only in that industry but in all industries. I speak about the forestry industry because of the pertinence to my riding of Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke, where we have so many sawmills.

1640

What about the jobs at those sawmills? I've got some concerns about this government. They're not facing the issues when it comes to jobs. We see job losses every day in the province of Ontario. The forestry industry is struggling like almost no other, but we don't see a real, concrete economic stimulus plan coming from this government. While the economy and all of the economists are saying we're in for some difficult times, the government seems to just be sitting there, biding their time and hoping that events elsewhere will save their bacon. You know, the MPs had beef at Hy's, and the MPPs in the Liberal party want somebody else to come along and save their bacon.

It's up to the government to bring forth some kind of an economic stimulus package. The leader of the NDP gets chastised by the Premier about not supporting the government's job plans with General Motors or Ford or anything like that. Those workers there—it's important for their safety as well. Healthy companies make healthy workers. There's no question about it.

I saw you looking at me like you may have thought I was drifting. Absolutely not, Madam Speaker. We're right on topic and we're going to stick right to it.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I'm glad to hear it.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Those economic plans that they've had with the large automakers—the leader of the third party I think has been unfairly criticized by the Premier in that regard, because there should be some kind of a connection between pouring public money into something and an expectation that it will actually lead to retaining jobs, not seeing jobs leave this country.

Anyway, I believe that I'm getting the evil eye from the whip. It's time for me to repeat that I will be voting against this motion, although I do appreciate the intentions of the leader of the NDP.

Mr. Michael Prue: I'd like to preface my remarks by thanking two groups that I believe may be here—the first is the Industrial Accident Victims' Group of Ontario, and the second is the Advocates for Injured Workers student legal clinic—for all the research they have done around this issue, not only for today but for many years.

The leader of the third party, Howard Hampton, has stated that experience rating is both absurd and bizarre. I have to echo those exact statements. Then I heard the Minister of Labour talking in what I think were also absurd and bizarre terms, in terms of how and why he was not going to support the particular motion here today.

Experience rating is a system that in effect rewards employers for treating their employees badly: those employees who may be killed on the job, those employees who may be injured on the job, those employees who are forced back to work all too early, those employees who never receive the benefits of the entire WSIB system.

Millions upon millions of dollars are handed out every single month to companies that have abysmal employment records in terms of health and safety. We've heard the statistic that some $1.2 billion has been handed out to these selfsame companies in the past 10 years. This is, indeed, absurd and bizarre, and it is absurd and bizarre that we are even having to talk to this topic today, because the money should be flowing to those who need it—those who have been injured on the job, those who are in need of the support for which the system was originally designed all those years ago back in 1985.

I have two constituents who have been into my office in the last little while with tales that need to be told. I promised that if I could, I would tell them today. The first is Mr. Antonio Mauro. He was severely injured on the job back in 1972. He has been permanently unemployed since that time. From 1972 until 1985, there were no cost-of-living adjustments whatsoever. He saw his amount of money shrink and shrink over those many years. Since 1985, it was allowed to escalate at the cost of living, but you have to imagine, he was 13 years behind, and many of those years were where inflation was at 10%, 12%, 15% and one even, I believe, 20% during the year.

The bills that were put forward in this House, Bill 165 in 1996 and Bill 99 in 1998, did little or nothing to help him at all. He has spent his entire life since 1972 living in poverty. To add insult to injury, he has now turned 65 years of age and they are deducting his old age security benefits, as small as they are, from his WSIB. So even in old age, when one would expect to get a pension—and remember, everybody gets a pension—he is having his clawed back under this absurd and bizarre scheme.

We have written to the minister, we have written to the Premier, and all we get back are letters supporting the legislation as it exists and as it punishes Mr. Mauro. We've written some more letters. I'm hoping the minister takes the time to read and research this one. If he is going to support the legislation, then I think that something is very wrong with the Minister of Labour that would do that.

The second case is that of Mr. Harry Shaw. Harry Shaw was injured on duty in 2005. He was 63 years of age. He did what most workers do: He reported to duty the next day. They asked him if he was okay. He had a torn rotator cuff. He reported to work, and he continued to work. The pain got worse and worse. He finally went to the hospital. He had to have his surgery delayed because the hospital took a whole year to get him to an MRI machine. It took another six months for him to see a specialist. He finally agreed to have some surgery on his rotator cuff. He was told—the WSIB told them—that they won't pay because now he's 65 years of age and more than two years have passed. Now he's not eligible any more.

So he appealed. His lawyer wrote a letter and some people wrote a letter. They said yes, they would pay. He went and had the surgery done, and when he came out from having the surgery done, they told him that now they're not going to pay. His lawyer wrote a letter. I'd like to quote just a little. It's Michael S. Green, barrister and solicitor.

The WSIB is quoted: "Loss-of-earning payments continue until the earliest of ... two years after the date of injury if the worker was 63 years of age or older on the date of injury." Then the lawyer goes on to opine: "The intention of this provision, I am quite sure, was to limit benefits to workers who are 63 years of age or older to two years on the basis that they can be presumed to have an intention to retire. I do not believe the intention was to punish older workers who continue working with pain. If Mr. Shaw had injured his shoulder in January 2008, at the age of 66, rather than in September 2005, he would have been entitled to up to two years of benefits rather than no loss-of-earnings benefit at all. It seems unlikely that legislators intended such an absurd result, but it would be helpful if it was clarified."

We have written to the minister and asked him to clarify it. I know that not a lot of time has gone by, but it has not been clarified. So here are two cases, workers getting the shaft, companies getting millions and millions of dollars when they force those workers back to work, and a WSIB system and a minister who don't seem to care a whole lot at all.

I'd like to leave some more time for my colleagues, but I'd just like to close with saying the experience rating system is absurd and it is bizarre, and so is the treatment that this government and this minister have given at least to my two constituents, these two injured workers. The treatment meted out to them is equally bizarre and equally absurd. I think this minister has a lot of work to do. He should start doing it.

1650

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: It's a pleasure to join the debate today. It certainly is an interesting and timely debate and a very important debate. I thank the leader of the third party for bringing it forward.

Having said that, when you take a look at the motion and the open-ended form in which it's presented, is it worthy of support? The answer would have to be no, because quite simply it tells you what, in his opinion—or in his party's opinion, perhaps—the leader of the third party thinks is wrong with the current system; it says nothing about what should be put in its place. If it's not experience rating, then what type of system should it be? Certainly, if we were just to get rid of experience rating, what does that do for injured workers?

Is there a better system that could be put in place? Perhaps. Are there changes that could be made to the current system that would aid injured workers? Perhaps. I think the answer to that would have to be "probably." When you take a look at the motion that was put before us, while it stimulates an important debate, it really does nothing for the injured workers in the province of Ontario.

The minister has been on his feet and said that he agrees that a review of this system is necessary. The chair of the WSIB also agrees that a review is necessary, and that review is going to take place. If you take a look at the history and you hear about some of the reasons that perhaps we shouldn't have an experience rating system anymore, I think any interested viewer, anybody who was in the House today, might want to know where the experience rating system came from. Surprisingly enough, it was brought in during the NDP government.

Interjections.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: That's exactly what we have here.

Interjection: That's the fact.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: That's the fact. Then—

Interjections.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Can I get some order in the House please? Order.

The member for Oakville.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: Perhaps you should be ashamed of yourself. Then they decided to bring in the Friedland formula. Perhaps Mr. Kormos would like to tell us about the Friedland formula. Tell us what the Friedland formula did to injured workers in this province.

It's interesting that somehow we've scratched a little scab and there's a little bleeding going on on the other side of the House. But certainly, with the Friedland formula that was introduced by the third party and by the Conservative Party, which then brought in an adjusted Friedland formula, injured workers in this province—it's true—have fallen behind when you take inflation into account. The cost-of-living increase simply has not kept up with the payments that injured workers have received.

The motion, as I said, does say to get rid of it, but it doesn't say what it should be replaced with. In my days with the Ministry of Labour, I was privileged to serve under Minister Bentley and Minister Peters as their parliamentary assistant. I worked with good representatives from both labour and business. Despite what the issue was, there was generally agreement around one thing: that we should concentrate our efforts on the bad employers and we should leave the good employers alone. I think that's perhaps what the thinking was behind experience rating when it was first brought in under the third party.

The principle behind this is that safety is paramount in this province for all workers. We want to see people come home at night. We want to see injury prevention. We want to see a workplace that is safe. I think that's something we would all agree on.

Is the current system something we want to take a look at, that perhaps we could make better? I would say, probably that's true. I don't think anybody in this House is suggesting we don't do that; in fact, I think that's something we should do with a variety of programs.

If you look at the progress that has been made: When we inherited government, obviously, from the previous party, the Progressive Conservatives, we found out—that is public knowledge—that they had cut inspectors by 25% during their term. Health and safety inspectors were cut. In fact, we had a lower number of health and safety inspectors in Ontario than any other province in all of Canada. When it came to health and safety inspectors, we were the worst in all of Canada when we took over. Since that time, everybody in this House will know that we've had an almost 100% increase in the number of health and safety inspectors in Ontario; 200 new health and safety inspectors have been hired. It's great progress; good progress. We're well on the road to reducing injuries by 20%. Everybody would like to see us get down to 0%—one injury is too many—but we know we have to work towards that goal.

The review is necessary. In 2003, when we assumed government, where was Canada when you looked at all the other OECD countries? Fifth from the bottom. We can do better than that. That's what we're trying to work toward, and that's what the minister has been talking about. Over the three-year period we've been in government, you look at $1 billion in benefit enhancements for injured workers in this province—good progress. We're well on the road to reducing injuries by 20%.

We simply don't want to return to the days of damage: the cuts and neglect that were inflicted on this system and upon injured workers during the terms of previous governments. We know we can do better. We know that employers are prepared to work with us. We know that the labour movement is behind this; they want to see improvements made. I think Mr. Samuelson has suggested on a number of occasions that there's something wrong with experience rating that needs to be fixed. How big the fix will be is yet to be seen, but I certainly think it's a review that's worthy of consideration and one that is taking place.

Talking about the economy, a strong economy allows companies to have the confidence to invest, to know they are prepared to invest in the training and skills development of their workers and also in the health and safety of their own companies, because anybody who knows anything about health and safety knows that a profitable company is also a company that practises good health and safety. Upon investigation, you'll generally find that a company that has a good health and safety record is a very profitable and successful company, because they get it. They understand that in order to have a profitable workplace, you need to have employees who know they are working in a safe environment. That's something we've been attempting to foster through the Ministry of Labour and certainly through this government.

I'm going to close here. I thank other members of the House for bringing this issue forward. This has allowed us a period of time to talk about some of the issues that are impacting our own communities and that are impacting the workplaces in our own communities. But at the end of the day, when you take a look at the motion, all it does is take away from injured workers. Our intent on this side of the House is to add to the lives of injured workers in a way that's meaningful.

Mrs. Julia Munro: It's a pleasure to rise today in response to the motion of the third party.

I want to begin by saying that, very sadly, I have met on many occasions with injured workers in my riding. I say "sadly" simply because of the fact that their frustration and their very painful stories are certainly ones that I think every one of us, as members, are very conscious of and recognize the importance of being able to find legislative frameworks that are balanced and that provide fairness for everyone. I think that's the intent of today's motion.

By way of commenting on this, however, I must express some surprise at the way this motion is worded. The first point is, "Immediately direct the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board ... to eliminate the flawed experience rating program." The second point is, "Immediately direct the Provincial Auditor to conduct an audit of the flawed experience rating program." I suggest that those should be in the other order. Having the auditor do that would be a method of providing for the kind of debate and thought that needs to go into this.

I also want to take this opportunity to go back to the work done a short while ago by the Standing Committee on Government Agencies. The committee chose to review, as one of its agencies, the WSIB. I want to clarify the positions of some of the people who did come forward and explain some of the issues, particularly the one on experience rating. I think it's important to the discussion because, as I mentioned already, we need to have a balanced, fair and reasonable approach.

1700

The first one I'd like to read to you is from Mr. Ian Howcroft, who was the vice-president of the Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers and Exporters:

"Experience rating has been a long-standing system enshrined in legislation as a program of the WSIB. However, changes to the program have continually contributed to the financial erosion of the plan as a merit program, and hence the impact it can have to improve health and safety. At one time, the WSIB sought the advice of its experience rating working group prior to implementing any changes. That group, in our view, has become disbanded. The WSIB may not have formally disbanded this group, but in reality it has not been called or met in about three years. From a communication perspective, we believe the WSIB and employers would be better served to have us at the table to discuss these proposed changes. We would like to stress our continued support for experience rating and for the safety group program that exists at the WSIB. Safety groups is one of the most successful programs that we've seen, and we feel it still has a great deal of potential to improve health and safety throughout the province of Ontario."

Of course, the issue around the people, then, who have taken advantage of this program is one that Mr. Howcroft responds to. He suggests that it has not been the experience: "Anybody who's hiding claims or not reporting as they should should be subject to the penalty provisions of the act. We take our role very seriously, educate our members as to what the requirements are and provide them assistance. We want them to report everything that they should be reporting. Our goal is to help them eliminate the accidents so that they don't have to report an accident because there wasn't one, not because they're trying to hide something."

I also would like to take a moment to refer to another deputation, that made by Mr. Les Liversidge. He also had some comments to make about experience rating:

"There has always been a worry about experience rating that when you start to hold employers to account for their actual performance, are they going to fudge the numbers? We heard that earlier today. Are they going to put cases under the table and not report them? That's why you have other mechanisms. If a company does do that—first of all, I'll explain two reasons why they ought not to do that; three, really. One is, it's just wrong. But it's also a crime. It's against the law; it's against the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act. Whoever does it, that individual can face a fine of up to $25,000 and up to six months' imprisonment, and the corporation could face a fine of up to $100,000. So if somebody thinks they're going to save a few hundred dollars by doing that, they're mistaken. And the board ... takes that seriously and they do prosecute those cases. They prosecute a lot of those cases when they find them.

"Who would do that? Who's the individual who would engage in that type of behaviour? The experience rating model is designed to focus in on the rational, informed business person who's going to respond in a self-interested manner to look after their self-interest. That's supposed to translate into positive employer behaviour.... That means you're going to avoid an injury and you know there's going to be a reduction in premiums as a result."

I offer these few comments because I think it's part of this discussion. I think it's an important part. I also want to include in the record one of the recommendations the Standing Committee on Government Agencies in its report had, and I quote, "The WSIB should re-establish the experience rating ... group and review the effectiveness of the experience rating program to ensure that it reflects the overall safety practices of businesses."

I think it's very important, in the light of the comments made by some of the members of the government, that this was the work of the committee. This was as a result of varied people, and I don't have time to refer to all of them but certainly there was a balance. Some of the people visiting here also participated in this.

I wanted to bring to the attention of everyone that this was part of the recommendations that were made. A number of the government members have referred several times to the initiation of studies, and I think on this side of the House it is our responsibility to remind them of their commitment.

Mr. Peter Tabuns: I'll share my remaining time with Madame Gélinas.

The human spirit is an incredibly strong thing. We have injured workers here today who are living testimony to that reality, because when companies break or destroy workers and discard them, those workers find themselves at the mercy of the WSIB. They are plunged into a Kafkaesque world where they're offered retraining for jobs that don't exist, in fields where they have no interest. They find themselves in a situation where they're confronted with suspicion, where they're given confusing information.

I say to the Minister of Labour, come to my riding. In my riding, Injured Workers' Consultants has an organization within it called Women of Inspiration. It has public speaking classes for injured workers so they can find their voice, express what has happened to them and tell the world what has happened to them, and it is not a pretty thing.

I say to the Minister of Labour, who has stood up and defended this system, which is wrong practically and wrong morally, that he should listen to those people who have physically gone through the system, who have physically lost a limb, who have been injured in a way that they cannot carry things, cannot carry their children, cannot carry on with their lives. And then I say to that Minister of Labour, come and listen and then vote in favour of the resolution put by our leader. Listen to them, because they speak every language under the sun and they speak with incredible power. You only have to be there a short time, you only have to listen to one or two stories, as my colleague from Beaches–East York set out. These stories are heart-rending.

This government knows what's going on. It knows this system leads to cover-up, leads to people abandoning their rights, leads to breaking of their lives as well as their bodies. This government could make a big difference. It has the power in its hands. It doesn't have to wait for a report. It could change the system now. It could bring in—and this is not directly related to the motion, but related to worker safety and health—card certifications so more people in this province could be unionized to protect themselves. This government could act. This government must act if it wants to show any moral fibre whatsoever.

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: I'm very pleased to enter into the debate and I want to state my position right at the very beginning. I will not be supporting the motion from the third party and I'd like to explain why I will not be supporting it.

I want to be very clear: I know the member who just spoke had a lot of passion in his voice when he spoke about the workers. Every member in this House recognizes that we want to ensure that we make the workplace as safe as possible. I can tell you from my own personal experiences—my husband works in mining—and it can be very difficult. To receive the phone call, when you hear that anyone in your family has been seriously hurt—I have received the phone call. It is a very traumatic time that you go through. Certainly, the whole process that you go through is very difficult: to get back to work and also to ensure that everyone in your family continues to move forward. It is a very difficult process. Anything we can do as a government to ensure that we are as helpful as possible, in my mind, is all of our roles.

1710

I know that the intent of the motion that was brought forward today certainly was to do that. I am very pleased to say that not only the Premier but also the minister do acknowledge that the program is flawed. They do acknowledge that work needs to be done. It was announced on March 10. There has been a moratorium placed if there is a fatality within the workplace, and the WSIB is committed to bringing forward a report that will deal with this. I see that as a significant step forward. There has been so much work done on the WSIB. I don't want anyone to think for one minute that I don't believe there is more work to do. I recognize that.

I did want to share a couple of things. I had the opportunity within my riding, as you know. You've heard me speak to it many times. My largest employer is Bruce Power. I know that a number of the members of the third party have never been on site, and probably never will be on site, but I did want to share with you some of the things—

Interjection.

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: I didn't say all; I said some.

I did want to share with you one of the things that was talked about for the day of mourning, because there were fatalities when the original Douglas Point was built. I did want to share some facts with you about how things have changed in the largest employer within my riding.

Bruce Power has gone six million hours without a lost-time injury, and that is absolutely incredible when you think of the thousands and thousands of workers who are there. As many of you know, they're going right now in a restart program, which is one of the largest infrastructure projects in Ontario, and that has gone nine million hours. I can tell you that is quite a feat.

What we can do is to ensure that we have the education, the legislation and also the willingness to continue to listen when things need to be changed. After all, that is our role. Clearly, I see that that is the direction we are headed. The recognition that something needs to be changed and a review begun, to me, signals from the government that change is coming, as there have been a number of changes to the WSIB. I do recognize that there has been a significant amount of work within many workplaces, and I also shared my personal experiences on how difficult it is to get back in the workplace when one has been seriously injured.

What we can do as a government is to recognize the different workplaces and the strengths and weaknesses that come forward, and then ensure that we have a program in place that meets the needs of all employees. After all, it is our responsibility to ensure that we have safe workplaces so that all people will return home safely.

Mr. John O'Toole: First, I want to recognize the people in the galleries today. With the change in the standing orders, this is an important issue. Many of the people I recognize—a number of the people there—were here when the reviews were going on in 1995-96. At that time, the Minister of Labour was Elizabeth Witmer, the member from Kitchener–Waterloo, and I recognize members in all the galleries who have appeared over the years.

Certainly in the time I've been here, I know of three reviews—and the member from York–North just spoke. She was referring to the report from the Standing Committee on Government Agencies that held public hearings for the review of the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board, and admirably reported, as she's a very hard-working member of that committee.

Before that committee, certainly the Federation of Labour—Wayne Samuelson—was there, and he's here today. Other members of the community—Mr. Liveridge, who's practised law in that area. He reported back in 1995-96 with the Cam Jackson review. So it's not a new issue, but it's a very complex area.

In fact, looking back at the resolution, it's a bit strongly worded. I'm looking here at the order paper and it's really overstated. That's the problem that I find with Mr. Hampton's motion, the NDP motion. I just think it's important to read some of it. This is the strong wording:

"Immediately direct the Workplace Safety and Insurance Board, WSIB, to eliminate the flawed experience rating program." That's pretty direct.

"Immediately direct the Provincial Auditor to conduct an audit of the flawed experience rating program;

"Recognize the fact that tens of millions of dollars have been drained out of the WSIB's accident fund each year by employers who have learned how to play the game of experience rating." These are sort of loaded phrases.

"Recognize the fact that the practice of experience rating actually encourages employers to mis-report or under-report injuries and occupational disease, force injured workers back to work before they are medically ready...

"Recognize that this hides the true extent of workplace injuries...."

I have no disagreement that this is something that should get full scrutiny. Certainly the chair, Mr. Mahoney, a former federal minister—and just reported in the press recently in an article called "Head of Worker-Safety Board in Hot Water for Hosting Ottawa Bash." That's inappropriate and unacceptable, and I think the lack of any decisiveness on the part of the minister or the Premier—to send the right signal during this discussion about Mr. Mahoney's behaviour or his comments would have been the right thing to do.

To find a solution, you're always looking for the balance. In any discussion, you're looking for the balance. And I'm saying that I want to give some respect to the work done by the member from Hamilton East—Stoney Creek, Paul Miller, who gave a good account of his work and his time at Stelco. I can tell you he did a very good job this week at the Standing Committee on Estimates, which was reviewing the work of the Minister of Economic Development and Trade, Ms. Pupatello. He actually put her through the grill, if you will, with very stern questions on accountability.

That's what's really more important here—rather than whether or not we know the history or the nuances of this particular discussion on experience rating. I think you'd have to look back to—the work done generally by the NDP is commendable. They're the right questions, which may be different from our questions, but certainly the intent and the genuineness of the motion are recognized.

I think once you look at the work that Mrs. Munro mentioned in her report, under the experience rating—there are a number of different opinions on it, for sure.

You can look at my riding of Durham. I know there are people here from that riding. Probably the largest employer, at one time, was General Motors, and that's unfortunately not the case anymore. The auto sector generally is in a state of challenge. I worked there 30 years. In fact, I worked indirectly in that area. I worked in the computer department for a long time, but more importantly, I worked in the personnel area and I worked in a period attached to the labour relations component, which was part of the program of bringing people back to work. I have some comments, and if I have time, I'll mention them.

It's very important that if a person is out long-term and after a severe injury—there's no one disputing the legitimacy of the claim at all, nor should they. Every accident should and must be reported. If they're on pain medication, I think sometimes it's hard for them to get back to work. We used to call it work hardening—getting people up and getting them to work. That's as much of the job as getting ready, getting there, travelling, often from Peterborough or Lindsay or further, back to General Motors plants. It's very difficult to have a long car drive if you've had a back injury, a repetitive strain injury, carpal tunnel or those kinds of things and you're on medications for pain. It's better to have a routine that pulls you along in life.

1720

I was all in support of the early return. I had discussions often with the district committee men representing the union, saying that what they should do is set aside a number of jobs for these—because seniority prevails in the workplace. The light-duty jobs tend to be high-seniority jobs, and if you had a young worker injured, strained or something like that, maybe it would be better if they had a light-duty job for a little while. I think there could be co-operation, to work through, to make sure—what's this all about? The most important thing, in fairness, is to first of all recognize and treat the people fairly, and secondly, encourage them to keep going despite the setback of the injury. Look at persons who have special needs, physically or mentally. They have to come along in life and participate alongside the rest of us who may have our own problems.

More recently, I was reading an article in the same paper, "The Hard Search for 'Good' Jobs." That's the balance. "Former US President Bill Clinton had it right when he said, 'The best social policy is a good job.'" With that comes dignity and respect: "I've earned my way. I have an equal voice."

If you look at what the CFIB said during those hearings, they said that generally—they're small employers, by and large—they support it.

The other employers in my area would be OPG, General Motors and the auto sector, but also the agricultural sector. There's a young man, 46 years old, and I went to his wake and funeral just last week. He was killed, run over by a tractor. His father was actually driving the tractor. It's tragic. He was married and all the rest of it. Any injury is very sad, specifically this type of injury.

But what I want to make sure is—the record here is this review that's being done on experience rating. There was a legitimate reason when it started under David Peterson. This is the important fact here: That's when it started. It was carried on under Bob Rae.

In 1995, I was working at General Motors, in fact in this area. I was an area manager in part of the plant. It was right in the plant; it wasn't some kind of office job. The big deal was the number of injuries or those kinds of actions within the plant. They were a very important part of my rating, if you will, as a supervisor.

I would say that I wouldn't support this resolution, because I think what it needs is to be enforced properly, so that employers who are doing what Mr. Hampton is suggesting are severely penalized for not conforming. Experience rating employers should be able to earn their way back. The last thing we want to do is jeopardize jobs in the province. We shouldn't lower standards; we should have very strong safety records.

There's one last thing I want to put on the record. Over the many years that I've been here, Paul Kells, whose son was killed at work, has led a crusade in his life to have young people well trained before they enter the workplace with summer jobs. At this time of year—it's a signal and it's a good time to talk about the positive things—young people and employers have a responsibility to make sure of workplace training and the certification of the workplace, so that everyone has the opportunity to work in a safe environment, and WSIB is an important part of that. That's why I think the report that will be filed shortly by the Standing Committee on General Government—let's wait for the report and see what the minister says, and let's worry about the liability as well.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I too want to share an experience with you. My neighbour died in a mine. He left behind his wife and his 8-year-old daughter. The mining company was fined a hefty fine for what happened, but the same mining company received 10 times that amount in WSIB rebates. His death was not considered a lost-time injury. It didn't count. How can we continue to support a system that treats the death of a worker as a better outcome than a lost-time injury? To me and to all of the workers who lost their life on the job, it doesn't make sense. It needs to be changed. We need to support this proposition.

Mr. Vic Dhillon: I'm extremely pleased to be able to respond to the motion brought forward by the honourable leader of the third party, in which Mr. Hampton wants to get rid of the experience rating system used by the WSIB.

As the minister said, it would be very difficult, and even impossible, to get rid of this system. But instead, we launched a review of the system on March 10, just a little over two months ago. The WSIB is conducting a review of its experience rating program. Their review team will look back at the decisions regarding the fundamental structure of the program by March 2009.

The board is also making immediate changes to the program. Effective immediately, if a company is responsible for a workplace fatality, it is ineligible for a rebate in that calendar year. The review will also consider requiring employers to be in compliance with the Occupational Health and Safety Act, the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act, 1997, and a long-term plan to tie the board's incentive programs to proactive health and safety initiatives.

Let me take a few minutes to review the background to the WSIB's experience rating program. Under the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act, the WSIB has the discretion to establish experience and merit rating programs. The purpose of these programs is to encourage employers to reduce injuries and occupational diseases and to encourage workers to return to work. The incentive works by rewarding good performers with rebates while imposing surcharges on poor performers.

The WSIB currently administers three experience rating programs. The first is the new, experimental experience rating program. This program automatically applies to companies which pay more than $25,000 per year in premiums and are in a non-construction rate group. Through this program, a company can earn rebates on its premiums by maintaining a good health and safety record. If it has a poor health and safety record, it may be assessed surcharges. Next, there is the CAD-7 program. This is a prevention incentive program that applies to employers in the construction sector whose average annual premiums are more than $25,000. Through CAD-7, construction companies can earn refunds on premiums by maintaining a good health and safety record. If they have a poor health and safety record, they may be assessed surcharges. There's also the merit adjustment premium plan, which is designed specifically for small employers. Each program uses premium adjustments, rebates and surcharges to encourage workplace health and safety.

I want to assure members of this Legislature that the WSIB does not stand pat on its programs. The purpose of these programs is to provide incentives to employers to help reduce workplace injuries.

I want to point out that the WSIB does not stand alone in seeking to reduce workplace injuries and deaths. The Ministry of Labour also plays a large and vital role in its legislative, educational and enforcement activities. The Ministry of Labour has a primary responsibility to ensure that workplaces comply with Ontario's Occupational Health and Safety Act and related legislation. This means ensuring that a strong internal responsibility system is in place. A strong internal responsibility system means, in part, having a system of well-functioning joint health and safety committees that foster a strong, sustainable culture of workplace health and safety.

A strong health and safety workplace culture consists of:

- (1) Competence—having appropriate knowledge and training systems for responding to events and a properly functioning joint health and safety committee;

- (2) Commitment—a demonstration by the employer of leadership on safety, appropriate policies and procedures to protect workers, low tolerance for poor health and safety practices, and insistence upon full compliance; and lastly

(3) Capacity—having adequate resources for preventing injuries and a good system for obtaining assistance from sector health and safety associations and the WSIB.

1730

To build a strong health and safety workplace culture takes many people working together. It takes partnerships among the wide range of organizations that are striving to keep Ontario a leader in workplace health and safety. The health and safety of Ontario workers is our highest priority.

Just before I finish off here, having been the PA to the Minister of Labour since October 2007, I cannot tell you the satisfaction I get from knowing and learning about the programs that are in place and attending functions.

I believe my colleague from Durham was mentioning the story about Rob Ellis and his crusade after the death of his son as a result of a workplace injury. It's a truly moving presentation that Mr. Ellis gives all over the province; it's just priceless. I had a chance to go to a Mississauga high school where Mr. Ellis and the folks from the WSIB had a seminar for young kids. You could really see on the faces of these teenagers, grade 12 and 13 students who are just about to enter the workforce, the effects that workplace injuries have on families. There is a way to prevent it. These young folks are just about to embark on their working careers, whether it's a part-time job or a full-time job if they aren't pursuing any post-secondary education. It's really important that we get them young and teach them about their rights and responsibilities, about the labour laws and how they can be safe wherever they work, things such as refusing unsafe work. A lot of people didn't know these laws existed, so I was truly satisfied with what we're doing.

Again, as our minister stated before, there's more work to do, because until we get to that goal of zero injuries or deaths, I think our job will never stop. I don't know which minister it was, but we initiated a target of reducing workplace injuries, and we have reduced lost-time injuries by 20%. That's a good start, but I think we have a lot more work to do. Like I said before, until we reach that zero number, I don't think we should rest. I think people from all three sides of this House would agree that we should aim for that zero number. We should all work together to ensure that we don't see any injuries or loss of life as a result of workplace injuries. Thank you very much for letting me make this presentation.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate? It being almost 5:35, I'll now be putting the question. Mr. Hampton has moved opposition day motion number 3. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

All those in favour, say "aye."

All those opposed, say "nay."

I believe the ayes have it.

Call in the members. There will be a 10-minute bell.

The division bells rang from 1735 to 1745.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): All those in favour, please rise and be recorded by the Clerk.

Ayes

Bisson, Gilles	Hampton, Howard	Miller, Paul
DiNovo, Cheri	Kormos, Peter	Prue, Michael
Gélinas, France	Marchese, Rosario	Tabuns, Peter

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): All those opposed, please rise and be recorded by the Clerk.

Nays

Aggelonitis, Sophia	Flynn, Kevin Daniel	Phillips, Gerry
Albanese, Laura	Gerretsen, John	Qaadri, Shafiq
Arnott, Ted	Hoy, Pat	Ramal, Khalil
Bailey, Robert	Jaczek, Helena	Rinaldi, Lou
Balkissoon, Bas	Jeffrey, Linda	Sandals, Liz
Bartolucci, Rick	Leal, Jeff	Sergio, Mario
Bentley, Christopher	Mangat, Amrit	Shurman, Peter
Brotten, Laurel C.	Martiniuk, Gerry	Smith, Monique
Bryant, Michael	McMeekin, Ted	Smitherman, George
Caplan, David	McNeely, Phil	Sousa, Charles
Carroll, Aileen	Miller, Norm	Takhar, Harinder S.
Colle, Mike	Mitchell, Carol	Van Bommel, Maria
Craiton, Kim	Moridi, Reza	Watson, Jim
Delaney, Bob	Munro, Julia	Wilkinson, John
Dhillon, Vic	Naqvi, Yasir	Yakubski, John
Dickson, Joe	O'Toole, John	Zimmer, David
Duguid, Brad	Oraziotti, David

The Clerk of the Assembly (Ms. Deborah Deller): The ayes are 9; the nays are 50.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I declare this motion lost.

Negated.

ROYAL ASSENT

SANCTION ROYALE

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I beg to inform the House that in the name of Her Majesty the Queen, His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to assent to certain bills in his office.

The Deputy Clerk (Mr. Todd Decker): The following are the titles of the bills to which His Honour did assent:

Bill 12, An Act to amend the Vital Statistics Act in relation to adoption information and to make consequential amendments to the Child and Family Services Act / Projet de loi 12, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les statistiques de l'état civil en ce qui a trait aux renseignements sur les adoptions et apportant des modifications corrélatives à la Loi sur les services à l'enfance et à la famille.

Bill 35, An Act to authorize the Minister of Finance to make payments to eligible recipients out of money appropriated by the Legislature and to amend the Fiscal Transparency and Accountability Act, 2004, the Ministry of Treasury and Economics Act and the Treasury Board Act, 1991 / Projet de loi 35, Loi autorisant le ministre des Finances à faire des versements aux bénéficiaires admissibles sur les crédits affectés par la Législature et modifiant la Loi de 2004 sur la transparence et la responsabilité financières, la Loi sur le ministère du Trésor et de l'Économie et la Loi de 1991 sur le Conseil du Trésor.

Bill 44, An Act respecting Budget measures, interim appropriations and other matters / Projet de loi 44, Loi concernant les mesures budgétaires, l'affectation anticipée de crédits et d'autres questions.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): This House now stands adjourned until Thursday morning at 9 o'clock, on May 15.

The House adjourned at 1748.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.
Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters
Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller
Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum
Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest	Attorney General / procureur general
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craitor, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener—Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin—Middlesex—London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough—Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches—East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London—Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming—Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland—Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds—Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton—Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto—Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga—Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton—Kent—Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West—Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest—Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth—Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe—Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener—Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craiton, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziotti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziotti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craiton,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qaadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qaadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Gasoline prices

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk ..... 1926

Home care

Mme France Gélinas ..... 1926

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Mario Sergio ..... 1926

Lord's Prayer

Mr. John Yakabuski ..... 1926

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson ..... 1926

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk ..... 1927

Graffiti

Ms. Laurel C. Broten ..... 1927

Alma College

Mr. Khalil Ramal ..... 1927

Gypsy moths

Mr. Tim Hudak ..... 1928

Hospital funding

Mr. Bob Delaney ..... 1928

Gas wells

Mr. Tim Hudak ..... 1928

Mary Fix Park

Mr. Kuldip Kular ..... 1928

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Gerry Martiniuk ..... 1928

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

Events in Penetanguishene

Mr. Garfield Dunlop ..... 1929

Asian Heritage Month

Mr. Yasir Naqvi ..... 1929

Alma College

Mrs. Julia Munro ..... 1929

Sault Ste. Marie economy

Mr. David Oraziotti ..... 1930

Durham Support Our Troops Rally

Mr. John O'Toole ..... 1930

Nurses

Mme France Gélinas ..... 1930

Health care

Mr. Phil McNeely ..... 1930

Certified Management Accountants of Ontario

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn ..... 1931

Le traitement du cancer / Cancer treatment

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri ..... 1931

Visitors

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) ..... 1931

DEFERRED VOTES / VOTES DIFFÉRÉS

Budget Measures and Interim Appropriation Act, 2008, Bill 44, Mr. Duncan / Loi de 2008 sur les mesures budgétaires et l'affectation anticipée de crédits, projet de loi 44, M. Duncan

Third reading agreed to ..... 1932

Access to Adoption Records Act (Vital Statistics Statute Law Amendment), 2008, Bill 12, Mrs. Meilleur / Loi de 2008 sur l'accès aux dossiers d'adoption (modification de lois en ce qui concerne les statistiques de l'état civil), projet de loi 12, Mme Meilleur

Third reading agreed to ..... 1932

OPPOSITION DAY / JOUR DE L'OPPOSITION

Workplace Safety and Insurance Board

Mr. Howard Hampton ..... 1932

Hon. Brad Duguid ..... 1934

Mr. Robert Bailey ..... 1936

Mr. Paul Miller ..... 1937

Ms. Laurel C. Broten ..... 1940

Mr. John Yakabuski ..... 1940

Mr. Michael Prue ..... 1942

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn ..... 1943

Mrs. Julia Munro ..... 1944

Mr. Peter Tabuns ..... 1945

Mrs. Carol Mitchell ..... 1946

Mr. John O'Toole ..... 1946

Mme France Gélinas ..... 1948

Mr. Vic Dhillon ..... 1948

Negatived ..... 1949

Royal assent / Sanction royale

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath) ..... 1949

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Wednesday 14 May 2008 / Mercredi 14 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Access to Adoption Records Act (Vital Statistics Statute Law Amendment), 2008, Bill 12, Mrs. Meilleur / Loi de 2008 sur l'accès aux dossiers d'adoption (modification de lois en ce qui concerne les statistiques de l'état civil), projet de loi 12, Mme Meilleur
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	1903
Third reading vote deferred .....	1903
Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act, 2008, Bill 69, Ms. Best / Loi de 2008 modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée, projet de loi 69, Mme Best
Mme France Gélinas.....	1903
Ms. Laurel C. Broten.....	1907
Mr. Ted Arnott.....	1907
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	1907
Mr. Kuldip Kular .....	1908
Mme France Gélinas.....	1908
Mr. David Oraziatti.....	1908
Mr. Kuldip Kular .....	1910
Mr. Peter Shurman.....	1910
Mme France Gélinas.....	1910
Ms. Helena Jaczek .....	1911
Mr. David Oraziatti.....	1911
Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	1911
Mme France Gélinas.....	1913
Mr. John O'Toole .....	1914
Mr. David Oraziatti.....	1914
Mr. Ted Arnott.....	1914
Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	1915
Mr. Mike Colle .....	1915
Second reading debate deemed adjourned.....	1916

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	1916
--------------------------------------	------

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Automotive industry

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1916
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	1916

Native land dispute

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1917
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	1917

Automotive industry

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	1918
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	1918

Automotive industry

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	1919
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	1919

Automotive industry

Mr. Ted Chudleigh.....	1920
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	1920

Workplace Safety and Insurance Board

Mr. Paul Miller .....	1921
Hon. Brad Duguid.....	1921

Immigrants' skills

Mr. David Zimmer.....	1921
Hon. Michael Chan.....	1921

Native land dispute

Mr. Toby Barrett.....	1922
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	1922

Pickering nuclear generation station

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	1922
Hon. Gerry Phillips .....	1922

Assistance to farmers

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel.....	1923
Hon. Leona Dombrowsky.....	1923

Access to health care

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer.....	1923
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	1923

Natural gas rates

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	1924
Hon. Gerry Phillips .....	1924

La jeunesse francophone

M. Jean-Marc Lalonde.....	1924
L'hon. Madeleine Meilleur.....	1924

Steven Truscott

Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	1925
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	1925

Child care

Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	1925
Hon. Deborah Matthews.....	1925

Continued on inside back cover

No. 46

May 4 & 2008

N° 46

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report of Debates (Hansard)

Journal des débats (Hansard)

Thursday 15 May 2008

Jeudi 15 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Thursday 15 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Jeudi 15 mai 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ONTARIO FRENCH-LANGUAGE EDUCATIONAL COMMUNICATIONS AUTHORITY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'OFFICE DES TÉLÉCOMMUNICATIONS ÉDUCATIVES DE LANGUE FRANÇAISE DE L'ONTARIO

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 5, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 55, An Act to enact the Ontario French-language Educational Communications Authority Act, 2008 and make complementary amendments to the Ontario Educational Communications Authority Act / Projet de loi 55, Loi édictant la Loi de 2008 sur l'Office des télécommunications éducatives de langue française de l'Ontario et apportant des modifications complémentaires à la Loi sur l'Office de la télécommunication éducative de l'Ontario.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I appreciate the opportunity to participate in this debate on Bill 55, which, as I understand it, in essence is creating a stand-alone network to serve Franco-Ontarians.

Je suis un étudiant de français. Je ne suis pas un bon étudiant, mais je fais un effort. I'm not going to deliver my speech in français, but to suggest that we're not supportive of that community in this province would be totally incorrect.

Obviously we, on this side of the House, are fiscal conservatives. To put some points on the record with respect to the expenditures involved here, I gather, would be appropriate. I want to contrast it with what I consider to be some shortcomings and some areas that could stand to be improved in terms of TVO coverage and its linkages with TFO.

For some time, going back to the late 1980s, I've been a very strong advocate of increased and improved coverage of what goes on in this place, its committees, with the opposition parties, with private members' legislation—all the host of, I think, very interesting and in some cases complex and involved matters we deal with on a daily and a weekly basis as members of this Legislature.

TVO and TFO are arms, if you will, of the Ministry of Education—an education network; that's what it's all about. I recall, going back many years ago—I won't mention the union, but they were having a lobby day at Queen's Park. There were a couple of folks from my riding, and they met with me for half an hour and discussed their issues. Then I asked them if they'd like to go in and watch question period. I gave them a couple of passes and they came in—I was in the third party at that point in my political life.

They came out after question period—these were ladies in their 40s—smiling from ear to ear. They thoroughly enjoyed themselves and said, “We didn't realize this happened in Toronto; we thought it only happened in Ottawa.” These were individuals who had been in the working world for 20 years, had gone through the Ontario educational system and were representing their fellow workers in a lobby day at Queen's Park, but didn't appreciate or didn't understand or didn't realize that we have a question period in the Ontario Legislature. That sort of elevated my concern with the coverage we get in this place.

If you fast-forward to today, we know what's happening with the decline in membership in the press gallery here. I was talking this week to Richard Brennan, who was here to see his daughter graduate as part of the Queen's Park security service. Rick, as some of you will recall, was also known as the Badger around this place—a very aggressive and, in many respects, fun-loving member of the press gallery at Queen's Park. He's now president of the press gallery in Ottawa. He was telling me that they have over 400 members in the press gallery in Ottawa, covering everything from who's dating the Minister of Foreign Affairs to whatever the hot national topic of the day might be.

What happens in this place? We see reduction after reduction. CHCH moved their reporter out of here, and now we have Randy Rath, who is a cameraman—a great guy, but he's doing double duty. We see TVO closing their Queen's Park bureau, which really deeply offended me. This is an arm of the provincial government, an educational network. Ontarians have increasingly limited coverage of what goes on in here, and increasingly underappreciate the responsibilities, the workload, the challenges that face all 107 of us sitting in this place. We should all be concerned about this.

Going back to the late 1980s, when I chaired the Standing Committee on Government Agencies, a fellow by the name of Peter Herndorf was appointed by the Peterson government to chair TVO. During the review for his appointment, I asked him about the idea of TVO producing a show that focused solely on Queen's Park. I used as a model a show I had watched for many years called Inside Albany, which is a PBS show covering affairs in the New York state Legislature. Mr. Herrndorf agreed with me; he thought it was a good idea and said he would pursue it.

To given him his due, he did pursue it. His answer was the Fourth Reading component of Studio 2, which was a very modest component, but it was helpful. It was helpful, but it was, what, a 15-minute or half-hour segment once a week? Mr. Herrndorf said afterward, "That's my answer to it," and I said, "Well, I appreciate what you've done, but it isn't what I feel should be done and hasn't been done over so many years." I contacted Lisa de Wilde, the new president or CEO—whatever her appropriate title is—of TVO, on a couple of occasions and have been spurned. Her answer is that this new show called The Agenda is the answer because they, on occasion, deal with provincial issues. Well, that's fine and dandy. The Agenda is an outstanding production, I don't think there's any doubt about that, but it's not what we need.

0910

What we need is a show that focuses solely on Queen's Park. I had the legislative library do a bit of research on this, looking at neighbouring jurisdictions. Virtually every other jurisdiction does something to cover the happenings in their state legislatures. We're alone in this. In fact, what TVO has done is quite the opposite: by closing down their Queen's Park bureau and losing Sue Kelley, who covered this place extremely effectively and is no longer employed by that agency of government.

I've talked about the coverage at the federal level and the inane topics that get unbelievably intensive coverage, while we are dealing with serious issues in this place. If you look at hospitals, if you look at the health care system, if you look at policing, if you look at education, primary, secondary, post-secondary—you can go down the laundry list—transportation, these are all provincial issues. We see this in our own constituency offices: the municipal government issues.

But we simply get very limited coverage or understanding of what's going on in this place. I think the Ministry of Education and the government have a significant role to play here and can do it through TFO and through TVO. Again, at the federal level, just look at the CBC politics show with Don Newman, and we've got Mike Duffy on a daily basis—these are daily shows—CPAC covering the federal scene in both French and English; and question period on CTV. There's intensive coverage of the happenings.

We have Focus Ontario once a week on Global. So that's it, folks. That's the kind of coverage. Maybe the government of the day appreciates that lack of coverage and lack of scrutiny of what they're doing, but I don't think it's appropriate.

And I don't think it's appropriate for this arm of government, this arm of the Ministry of Education, not to fulfill its mandate with respect to what's going on in this place. I think it's an obligation. If you look at the monies going into the establishment of a stand-alone TFO network, I've heard the number of $15 million being circulated. If that's wrong, someone can correct the record later.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: I think it's $60 million.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: It's $60 million?

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: Yes, I think—

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: That's a significant amount of money. I'm not minimizing the impact on the Franco-Ontarian community, but we know the viewership. I've seen these numbers over the years. All of us who have taken a look at those viewership numbers know they are relatively modest numbers; so $60 million for a relatively modest number of viewers, versus ignoring what's going on in this chamber for year after year, and in fact, even diminishing it further by closing their Queen's Park bureau.

It's a slap in the face to Ontarians; it's a slap in the face to all of us sitting in this place. It really is. We know how we've downgraded our roles in this place over the years—all governments have been responsible for that—diminishing ourselves, and here we're doing more of the same by allowing TVO and TFO to walk away from this place, to join the mainstream media in walking away from this place, and minimizing coverage of very important decisions and very important consultations: Look at the committee work in this place, look at the roles of individual members, the kind of workload that individual members take on in this place, and the accomplishments of individual members, which get no recognition at all.

I'm pleading with the government members here to raise this issue with their Premier and with the Minister of Education. I sent a note to the Premier some time ago, prior to the budget actually, saying, "Here's an opportunity to put a reference into the budget with respect to TVO," and funding TVO, or requiring through the transfers that go to TVO now, saying that we want a production that's going to solely cover Queen's Park. They have the ability to do it.

Let's face it: If you're finding $60 million to create a stand-alone network, you can find enough money to produce a weekly half-hour television show—Inside Queen's Park, or whatever you want to call it—that covers the happenings in this place.

I think that all of you should consider this a non-partisan issue. I've been an advocate for streaming of the proceedings on the Internet, and I want to compliment the Speaker for moving very quickly on this. I don't think I'm spilling the beans or anything, but the Board of Internal Economy approved funding for that yesterday. So that is going to happen, and that is going to somewhat improve the ability of Ontarians to find out what is going on in this place. But we know that Rogers has moved access to coverage of this place up into the sky, and Star Choice and many others don't even cover Queen's Park or make it available in terms of access to their network.

Ms. Laurie Scott: Star Choice does.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: Star choice does?

Ms. Laurie Scott: Bell doesn't.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: Bell doesn't. Again, I think this is worthy of our consideration. It's worthy of us moving ahead on this and requiring—we have the ability, especially the government, obviously. You control the purse strings; you appoint the head of TVO.

I'm encouraging the members to take a serious look at this. This is a non-partisan issue. It should be a non-partisan concern about giving Ontarians a better opportunity to understand the role we play in this place: the debates, the discussions and the consultations. I think it would help us in terms of gaining a better understanding, in our own ridings and throughout the province, of the role we play and the serious issues we have to deal with on a weekly and daily basis.

I'll wrap up my comments with that. We are supporting the legislation. We obviously have some concerns about the decisions being taken at TVO and the failure to really, in my view, fulfill its education mandate with respect to this place, and we encourage them to do just that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Questions and comments?

Ms. Laurie Scott: It's a pleasure to rise and comment on the great oratory we've just heard from the member for Leeds—Grenville; he puts out a lot of good points. We should be educating people more on what goes on in the Legislature. Our role has been diminished over the years, and we need to re-establish that in the public's eye. They need to see what we do here to engage them. It also helps us do our job a lot better. It is frustrating when there is less and less coverage of the Legislature. People at home really don't know what we do; the difference between MPs, MPPs and municipal politicians gets confused all the time.

We're not helping ourselves or the democratic process by diminishing any coverage that exists here. I know that when I first got elected to the Legislature, my mother wanted to watch at home—I was kind of discouraging that for the first while. We had to change satellite companies in order to get coverage so she could watch the legislative channel. She makes sure I'm at work when I'm supposed to be and probably watches more than the average person at home.

Since 2003, I've seen the diminishing of coverage of the Legislature, and I don't think that does anybody any good. The member from Leeds—Grenville made good points: This should not be a partisan issue; TVO/TFO is an arm of the government.

It was a big loss for Susanna Kelley to go. I remember when the Frost centre suddenly closed under the Liberal government. She helped all of us—the member from Peterborough, all parties—in getting that Frost centre up and going. She did a series. She went up to the Frost centre, to the riding of Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock, and to Parry Sound—Muskoka—we just about there. She covered that. She educated people. She helped us get the public on board. We've seen a great success story of FCI, with Al Aubry taking that over, educating youths, not only from this country, but internationally, on the importance of environmental sustainability. That's a success story that TVO helped us bring forward to the public. I hope the government reconsiders that.

0920

M<sup>me</sup> Laurel C. Broten: C'était très intéressant d'écouter le membre de Leeds—Grenville. La seule difficulté est que les débats aujourd'hui regardaient le futur de TFO, le programme francophone, qui est très important pour les familles franco-ontariennes, pour accélérer et avoir une avenue pour regarder et écouter des programmes francophones pour nos enfants et pour le système d'éducation en français.

Alors le débat est centré dans le domaine de TVO et le futur de TFO, ce qui est quelque chose de très différent d'un TFO indépendant. C'est quelque chose que je crois est très important d'exprimer pour les gens qui demeurent dans ma circonscription d'Etobicoke—Lakeshore qui prennent avantage d'une école francophone. On a beaucoup de gens dans notre communauté qui sont dans un milieu anglophone et essaient d'avoir des enfants et une famille francophone, francophile et franco-ontarienne. Alors c'est quelque chose où on doit mettre un effort pour s'assurer que nos enfants et les générations de l'avenir vont être francophones ici dans une province où on a une histoire bilingue.

Pour moi, encore aujourd'hui, je donne mon appui à un TFO indépendant et j'espère que tous ceux dans la législature vont aussi donner leur appui. Je remercie le membre de Leeds—Grenville de dire qu'il veut donner son appui, et j'espère qu'on va pouvoir filer en direct à chaque famille en Ontario, un TFO indépendant dans les jours qui viennent.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further questions and/or comments? Seeing none, the member from Leeds—Grenville has up to two minutes to respond.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I appreciate the interventions. The member for Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock hit a good note when she talked about constituents not understanding the different roles and responsibilities of MPs and MPPs. If we want to be honest about that, we in our constituency offices bump into that every week. I think it reinforces the point I'm making that TVO and TFO, as educational networks, have a responsibility here, in my view, to better inform Ontarians, starting with the educational system, of just how the provincial government operates, the roles and responsibilities of their MPP and the challenges, the legislation, how a committee works. All of those things can only benefit the people of this province, especially the young Ontarians who are currently in the education system. Again, I encourage the government members to take this seriously, to encourage their Minister of Education and their Premier to take this seriously and to undertake an initiative to ensure that TVO and TFO produce programs that will cover solely the happenings and responsibilities and undertakings of this great historic assembly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Thank you for your contribution to the debate. Further debate?

Mr. Peter Shurman: I had the occasion to do the lead-off speech on this particular piece of legislation, and I'd like to take this opportunity—

Hon. David Caplan: No, you can't speak again.

Mr. Peter Shurman: I can speak again on this, can't I?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): I guess you can't, no. Sorry, I didn't know you had spoken before. Further debate?

Mr. John O'Toole: I think the member from Leeds–Grenville said most of what we wanted put on the record. The member from Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock also mentioned the importance of that voice for Ontario and the francophone community and its challenge with respect to the whole issue around assimilation. I think it's important to strengthen it.

My understanding is that most of the organizational changes that are recommended in Bill 55 indeed have happened and this is just an affirmation of what has actually gone on. TFO already has its own board of directors, an office in Toronto and manages its own budget of $23 million per year. The total operating budget includes provincial funding combined with federal funding and revenues from cable subscribers. This is in place. It's a matter of formalizing and strengthening it.

If I want to talk in a sincere tone, like the member for Leeds–Grenville, who summarized pretty well how I feel about the bill, since the province is one of the partners in a non-commercial station, we should have a presence here at Queen's Park. The province of Ontario, the people of Ontario, the voice for Ontario: the unifying effects all transcend and happen right here in the dynamics of an opposition and a government and third party. In that, I can say that Susanna Kelley was actually a very sincere and genuine reporter who I thought did a very commendable job. Now, Steve Paikin, that's a whole other story, a whole other level. He's at the level of CNN. The best program on television, in my humble opinion, is The Agenda. That program is the most informative program on television for Ontarians and Canadians, and I commend it to anyone listening to this parliamentary channel. You might be wasting your time; if you want some real content, you should be listening to The Agenda with Steve Paikin. The producers of that show have a continuous blog, as well. It's a very interactive learning and dynamic channel in that respect.

I hope they have the same luxury of content in the French-language format. I would hope to engage people. I belong to the francophone committee here at Queen's Park to learn. Like most people, I don't have enough vocabulary. I understand general themes, but it's by listening and participating—and I'd encourage anyone, especially the young pages here. If you have one, two or more languages, so much the better. Having a second language is like having a degree; it's that valuable. So take advantage. Some of you may be in French immersion or in French-language schools, and so much the better; and whatever other languages in a global economy.

That brings me back to the fundamental premise of my comments today in support of TFO. The reason I say that is that Mr. Runciman was right. As our leader here, he wasn't being critical of the station; he was critical of pulling out the anchor of this whole place. We have our parliamentary network, which may not be widely subscribed to. In fact, when Rogers reconfigured their cable service packages, I had to get another package to be able to get the parliamentary channels. I enjoy CPAC and other dialogue programming, and that's what I'm trying to say is important for the francophone community as well. We wouldn't be opposed to that. I think there is some discussion in things I've read, and I have some notes here which—perhaps some wish that I would stick to the notes.

Interjection: No, you're doing a great job.

Mr. John O'Toole: Actually, I'm waiting for one of our caucus adviser groups to tell me where this is going to go in committee before we stop talking about it.

I still go back to some of the important issues. I thought Steve Paikin's Agenda program on the 60th anniversary of the state of Israel and Palestine was phenomenal. They presented in a most professional, balanced and fair way, a very complex, often emotional and certainly very sensitive issue. You couldn't read and learn as much as they presented in the series of programs that Steve Paikin and his producers put together.

In fact, I'd go so far as to say I have some very good friends who are from the—my sister actually was married to a Jewish fellow. He, unfortunately, passed away within the past year. She's very integrated into that community. I said to her it's the most balanced program I have watched. There is a highly emotional debate in that whole discussion, but it's a lesson to all, as we become such a cosmopolitan or multicultural community in Ontario, and in fact in our country and globally: Where are the boundaries, where are the limits, where are the tolerances, and where are the thresholds?

0930

We're talking about a country that ostensibly is officially bilingual. I'm from the generation where that wasn't as advanced. In fact, I would say that even when our children were starting school and they had French immersion programs, it was rather shaky whether or not they would continue. So I would have put my oldest boy into French immersion, but it just wasn't quite on solid footing. He ended up going to the Royal Military College where, to graduate, you had to be functionally bilingual. So it was unfortunate that he hadn't had that background.

But I have a number of members of the family—in fact my first grandchild is now in a French immersion program. She just immigrated from Australia. So here's a young child who's three, four years old, whose first three or four years of her life were in Australia, which is a different language entirely.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: Does she speak the language?

Mr. John O'Toole: She speaks Australian. Mr. Chudleigh, don't get me into trouble.

What I'm trying to say is that the world as we live in and inhabit is getting smaller. We must become more tolerant and understanding. TFO and TFO serve a function of educating us, thereby expunging ignorance and encouraging understanding. It's a responsible position.

I would say that if you look at the background, in June 2006, Minister Papatello oversaw the overhaul of TVO, with revamping of programming and conversion into a digital format and preparing to turn French-language TFO into a separate entity. According to a Globe and Mail article, on June 30, 2006, "The new content, to be rolled out over the next 15 months, is aligned with the Ministry of Education's priorities and follows a strategic review done at the request of the government."

So the government is hands-on trying to, in a policy way, direct this transformation of TFO, giving it a bit more strength and independence. At the time, our leader, John Tory, told reporters that "The cancellation of Studio 2 seems like an attempt to line up the political policies of the government with the editorial policies of TVO". This is the issue when governments actually start interfering, which has been talked about with the Caledonia issue, that the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and the Attorney General could perhaps be involved in influencing things. We don't want that.

Some of the best programming is BBC. It's like TVO. It's high-class programming. Maybe some people don't like Coronation Street—I don't, but a lot of people do. But there is a lot of really good, global content. That is one of the global channels that I watch, because one of my daughters lives and teaches in London, England. I have another daughter who actually lives in the Isle of Man, which is in the Irish Sea, and she's taking her master's degree in England, at some school in England. It's not an executive MBA, it's a full MBA. I think it's an MBA or MPA, I'm not sure which, really.

My point is that I watch the programs because even there, when we talk to them, it's the importance of these mediums, it's so important to understand. When we talk to them on the weekends—a week ago, my daughter, the one from Isle of Man, was vacationing in Switzerland, and it's interesting—

Mr. John Yakabuski: You've got to be kidding me.

Mr. John O'Toole: Yes, she—

Mr. John Yakabuski: How did she like Switzerland?

Mr. John O'Toole: She did, she loved it.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: Does she speak the language?

Mr. John O'Toole: Yes, in fact, she does speak a bit of French.

She was on Skype, and we were speaking to her from Italy on Skype on the computer, and in the background were the Alps. Do you understand? It's quite incredible when you think of the how small the world is getting. She was sending pictures of their trip through—they were staying in Geneva at the time so it's—I could go on.

The main reason I'm standing up here is that I've been given information that it appears we have all-party consent to have this go to a committee. I'm glad to see that TVO and TFO are progressing well, and that the French language and community are strong and strengthened in our community.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and/or comments?

Mr. John Yakabuski: It's certainly a pleasure to follow my esteemed colleague from Durham on some of his chatting and, how would I say, evaluations of not only the bill but the general human condition, you might say. He raises some very interesting points about the value of TVO today and questions why the McGuinty government would be yanking it from the precinct here—it's just unbelievable—and why the McGuinty government wouldn't have stood up and said no when those cable companies were yanking the legislative channel from basic cable. Now you've got to get a digital box in order to watch the legislative channel. I know my colleague talked about how much he enjoyed watching the Canadian Parliamentary Channel, but now he has to upgrade his cable package in order to get the legislative channel. Believe it or not—and I know a lot of those Liberals would wonder why—there are some people who actually want to watch this channel, because they find it interesting.

The other thing is—and I'd like to point this out about the legislative channel itself—why isn't the McGuinty government doing something to put pressure on Bell ExpressVu, for example, to bring that channel to people in rural Ontario? Bell ExpressVu, believe it or not, while it covers the Saskatchewan legislative channel, doesn't carry the legislative channel from the most populous, most prosperous province in the country, the one with the most important Legislature, the one that we serve in Ontario. Why is the government not doing something to pressure Bell to put that channel on ExpressVu?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm really not quite sure what all this chit-chat is about regarding decisions made by Rogers Cable. I too am frustrated by the decision by Rogers Cable that you have to get a box to watch the legislative channel, but that has nothing to do with TFO. What is true of TFO is that it's on the mainstream cable service. It's a wonderful service to francophones in Ontario and it's particularly a wonderful educational service. I was actually just talking to page Isabelle Love's mother, who happens to be here to visit today. Isabelle's mom happens to be a principal in a French-language school in Ontario, and we were just chatting about what a valuable service TFO is for francophone students in Ontario.

This is an important bill. It's an important bill for the francophone community in Ontario. I hope we'll have people's support, and we need to get on with voting.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: It's interesting that the member for Leeds–Grenville talked about the lack of coverage in this place. When we look at how government touches the people of Ontario most—is it the federal government where there are 400 members of the press gallery, or is it the Ontario Legislature that has a shrinking number from the press gallery?—the provincial government covers health, which touches people all too often; it covers education, which touches people daily; it covers major roads, bridges and construction of major thoroughfares, which touches everybody every day.

None of these things is covered by the federal government. People are hard-pressed to name one thing that the federal government does that touches their lives on a daily, weekly or even monthly basis, other than collecting income tax. They run the major courts, which don't touch individuals in Ontario on a daily or monthly basis, or perhaps in a lifetime. Most Ontarians who obey the law, who go to work and come home to their family every night are not touched by the courts.

Yet the federal government takes two thirds of your pay envelope in tax dollars. When you see that tax deduction, some of it comes to the province of Ontario but about two thirds of it goes to the federal government, yet they don't touch the lives of Ontarians in the same way the Ontario Legislature does. That's why I think it's a great shame that TVO and TFO don't have the kinds of coverage of this place that they should have, keeping the people of Ontario informed of how the majority of their tax dollars are spent in this province.

0940

M. Phil McNeely: Je suis très fier de voir que la Loi 55 est devant nous. Ça va beaucoup aider les francophones de l'Ontario, surtout pour moi avec 35 % à 40 % des francophones dans notre circonscription d'Ottawa-Orléans. Je suis très fier que notre gouvernement marche de l'avant avec la Loi 55.

Une chose qui est très importante, c'est que les distances en Ontario sont très grandes pour les francophones, surtout dans l'ouest et dans le nord. On est plus chanceux à Ottawa. On a à peu près 150 000 francophones dans nos trois circonscriptions : celle de la ministre Meilleur, de Jean-Marc Lalonde et moi-même.

Pour l'autre partie de l'Ontario, c'est très important pour l'éducation et la culture pour que les francophones aient de meilleures manières de communiquer. Je vois que l'office pour créer des programmes d'enseignement à distance est très important. On a eu ça à Orléans, le programme a commencé dans le nord et ça marche très bien avec ces programmes-là.

Alors, plus d'argent pour ces programmes va aider beaucoup les francophones : pour l'éducation et pour la culture. Ça va être très important pour avoir une francophonie plus forte dans notre province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The honourable member from Durham has up to two minutes to respond.

Mr. John O'Toole: It's very encouraging how the debate was awakened. All of a sudden, it's taken on a bit of life—to show the interest in this legislation.

I think the key point made by a number of speakers was the importance of the parliamentary channel itself. I know we're talking about TFO, and that's important. But in that whole discussion of the communications function, a number of points have been made about expanding that. TFO and TVO and CPAC and the legislative channels, in a nutshell, summarize the important functions that are going on here, whether it's health care, education, the environment—the next bill to be discussed is the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act, Bill 64.

For the people of Ontario to really engage, at whatever level they wish, whatever age they are, with the transformations in globalization and agriculture—all of these things are important. And in more languages, not less; and in more opportunities, not less. Rogers, as well as the parliamentary channel here, should be scolded for not putting that stuff out there so people can choose to watch good-content television. In fact, it's meaningful content and it's educational content. It breeds tolerance and acceptance through education. Ignorance is the enemy that we often deal with on important issues. But I commend the government for formalizing this.

There are a couple of points, just in a technical sense, while I conclude. The Lieutenant Governor in Council appoints the chief executive officer for a term of five years and can reappoint him. So there's the potential for political appointments here, which is often troubling. But qualified people who should go through the agencies, boards and commissions—I'm in support, in that respect.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Seeing none, Mr. Bryant has moved second reading of Bill 55. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Hon. David Caplan: I would ask that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Agreed? Agreed.

COSMETIC PESTICIDES BAN ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'INTERDICTION DES PESTICIDES UTILISÉS À DES FINS ESTHÉTIQUES

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 12, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 64, An Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes / Projet de loi 64, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les pesticides en vue d'interdire l'usage et la vente de pesticides pouvant être utilisés à des fins esthétiques.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Mr. John Yakabuski: I didn't realize we were the first ones up to debate this. Normally, I thought it would be—

Mr. John O'Toole: It's supposed to be the NDP.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Okay. Well, we're here. No problem.

I recall when this issue came up during the provincial election of 2007, and the Liberals were saying they were going to ban pesticide use across the province, etc. Of course, I was asked, "Well, how do you feel about banning pesticides across the province?" What I basically said was, "Based on what?" Based on the science that has determined that pesticides should be banned? No, we don't have that.

What we've got is a party that's looking for a political wedge any way it can get one, so they decided they were going to take the stand that they were going to ban the cosmetic use of pesticides across the province of Ontario, which, depending on your numbers, accounts for between 4% and 6% of all the pesticides used in Ontario. They're going to ban the cosmetic use of pesticides on the lawns of homes and businesses in the province of Ontario—the lawn here at Queen's Park.

I must tell you that I've got an interesting little letter here. I thank my colleague Sylvia Jones from Dufferin-Caledon for getting this. We asked the people at the precinct—I won't name names, because that would be unfair, although the name is here:

"Sylvia:

"You asked me to find the answer to the following question: What pesticides, insecticides, herbicides and lawn care fertilizers are used at the Legislative Assembly of Ontario?"

The answer came back, "I spoke with" so-and-so "at precinct properties." So-and-so "provided the following response.

"We have used no chemicals on the front lawn of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario for the past six years. That is why there are so many weeds on the front lawn. If you look at legislative buildings around the world, the lawns look beautiful because they use pesticides. We didn't use chemicals, and this is why our lawn is in terrible shape."

That came from a staff member here at the legislative precinct. Interesting stuff.

The one thing we do know we're going to get with a pesticide ban is a lot of weeds, and some of those weeds have been proven, not because Rick Smith from the environmental people says so, but because it has been proven by health professionals, to cause tremendous allergic reactions for people, and some can actually cause toxic reactions in people.

I'll tell you one thing: If this ban goes through, you might want to get to your stockbroker or call E*Trade Canada for that $9 trade, or whatever it is, and buy a lot of stock in the people who make Reactine or Benadryl or any of those kinds of things, because the allergies in this province are going to be over the top. Everybody who suffers a little bit from allergies is going to be over the top. Then the McGuinty government is going to have to make some kind of excuse why everybody is walking around sniffing or choking or gagging or whatever. There are tremendous allergic reactions to a lot of natural substances in the environment, and that's one of the reasons that pesticides were ever asked for.

While I'm at it, I don't think there are enough people in this House, so I like to call for a quorum count, if I could.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Do we have a quorum?

The Clerk-at-the-Table (Ms. Lisa Freedman): A quorum is present, Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Continue the debate.

Mr. John Yakabuski: You just never know where those Liberals are going to appear from. I think a couple got out from underneath their desks. Anyway, back to the issue.

0950

Hon. David Caplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Where is the official opposition? There's only one member here.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): That is not a point of order. We're not to refer to the absence or attendance of members.

The honourable member from Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke has the floor.

Mr. John Yakabuski: You know, that minister's a cagey one. He'll do anything to steal some of my time.

We want to talk about the science. We go down a fairly slippery slope when we base legislation on politics, as opposed to science. If you're using that precautionary principle, if you asked somebody on the street, or tell them, or say to them, or you raise the issue, and they haven't done a whole lot of research themselves—I mean, people out there are very busy, they're trying to earn money, to make a living, support their families, whatever. They take some of this stuff at face value. They don't do a whole lot of investigation on that, because they're too busy. But the McGuinty government seems to have time to sit down with all of its stakeholders, the ones that they know they need—they want their support and they'll do anything to get it, to keep getting them elected. They'll base legislation on politics, as opposed to science. They did it with the greenbelt; they did it with the Endangered Species Act—and that's coming back to have some real detrimental effects on some of our forestry people. I hope the government addresses that, but I'm quite certain they won't.

They base these things on politics. If you said to the average person—and we'll just use a name, take a name out of the hat: "Do you know what, Mr. Leal? Those pesticides that people are using, and that are being sold, they're bad. They shouldn't use them. We have proof. We're not going to show it, we can't produce it, but we have proof that they're bad." If that person is asked that question in a poll, "What do you think about a pesticide ban?" they're going to say, "You know what? I've heard those things are bad. I've heard that we have to get rid of them. We have to protect our children. They can't be rolling on the front lawn, where pesticides have been used"—even if they've been used three weeks earlier and the rain has washed them in and blah, blah, blah. "You can't have that use." I know that I would make sure at any time—my kids are old enough now that I think they can probably make that judgment themselves. But if they were younger, I'd make sure that if I sprayed my lawn, they wouldn't be anywhere around it for several days, at least as many days as Health Canada—which has approved these substances—would recommend that we not allow human contact, or pets, or otherwise. But no, the McGuinty government throws out that big scare. The reaction—not the Reactine—of people is going to be, “Hey, yeah, let’s err on the side of caution.” But the unintended consequence, or the unexpected consequence, for the public is what they’re not considering: what things are going to look like in five or 10 years.

Then the McGuinty government says, “We think these things are terrible and you shouldn’t have your children rolling around on the lawn when there are pesticides. However, if you don’t mind if your little four-year-old likes to hang on to your putter, or get you your tees on the golf course, no problem; take him out there. If he wants to roll around on the greens or on the fairways, that’s a great idea—some time for fathers and sons.” Oh, did I tell you? The golf course is exempt from the pesticide ban. So the McGuinty principles, again, always seem to be sort of like a teeter-totter: They’re up, they’re down; this way and that way, variable like the weather. So, “It’s okay, we’re not going to protect your children if they’re frolicking on the 18th green at Glen Abbey. We’re just going to tell you that we’re not going to let you put that weed killer on the lawn at home.” So we’re not going to take the kids to the golf course anymore.

I’m going to call up Uncle Joe and say, “I want the kids to get good, country-fresh air. I’m going to bring the kids out to your farm, Joe.” What could be more healthy, Mr. Speaker, than taking the kids to the farm? Oh, did I tell you—I may have missed that—that the farm is exempt from the pesticide ban? Goodness gracious me, don’t take the kids to the farm. They could come in contact with the pesticides. My goodness, now I can’t take the kids to the farm.

Do you know where I would be able to take my kids here in Toronto? No, they’re too old, but if they were between the ages of 9 and 15, I’d be able to take them to a graffiti school—that kind of activity. We can’t take them to the farm any more. Pesticides, so the McGuinty government says—bad for them. Can’t take them to the golf course—pesticides. Do you know what we can do, though? We can take them to a graffiti school here in Toronto where they can learn how to spray-paint graffiti on buildings. And they’re spending $350,000 to teach that to kids. Excuse me, when I think about that I get a headache, so I’m going to ask for some water.

The slippery slope. What happened a couple of weeks ago? The Premier and the environment minister had a bit of a tiff.

Interjection: No.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Oh, yeah. Dalton and John weren’t kissing cousins that day. No, no, no. Because you see, what happened was that apparently either the Premier or the Minister of the Environment didn’t know what they had actually written in this bill. They got themselves kind of caught, which they do quite often, but I’ll tell you one thing: They are very good at wiggling out of things.

Ms. Laurie Scott: Professional squirmers.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Oh, they are the best squirmers you’ve ever seen.

They couldn’t seem to agree as to whether municipalities could have a tougher ban than this. The Premier and the environment minister seemed to contradict one another. Our understanding is—and of course these things happen behind closed doors. It’s like, if my wife and I have a disagreement—you can rest assured, she will win every one of them—they tend to happen behind closed doors. The Premier and the environment minister had that. We’ve heard rumours. Rumours are that the environment minister was, as we used to say back home, taken out to the woodshed. Yes, had to get a little education—a little education with the hames strap. Apparently he’s been whipped back into shape and is on board now. And whenever he sees it looks like the Premier is going to open his mouth, his automatically closes. It’s just like two coordinated robots. There is the environment minister and his mouth is open. The Premier shows up and his lips twitch a little bit, and the environment minister’s mouth closes, because he does not want to be caught contradicting the boss.

Mr. Bob Delaney: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Standing order 23(h) prohibits the making of allegations and the imputing of motives toward another member.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I’ve listened carefully to what the honourable member’s been saying in this debate and I think his debate is appropriate. Carry on.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would request that I get some time from the honourable member from Mississauga–Streetsville when he’s speaking. He’s almost as persistent as the Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal—almost.

Industry is very concerned about this bill, because they’ve never really been consulted on it. They’ve never been asked for their input. The McGuinty government wants to ban these products because they see this as a vote getter, not as a health issue. That’s really a cynical way to operate the province.

1000

Anything the government does should be justifiable from a scientific point of view, not because they see there’s a constituency out there that, without giving a whole lot of regard to the meat of the matter, will say, “Hey, you know what? If they ban them, then we’re not taking any chance that they might be bad; we’re just going to get rid of them.” We’ve got little science that says that these pesticides, approved by Health Canada, are detrimental. I’m not suggesting that you fill the barrel in the backyard and wash your hair in it, but used as directed by Health Canada, we’re told they’re completely safe. The natural inclination for people is to say, “Well, if there’s a chance, let’s err on the side of caution.”

Do you know where we do have science? We do have science—and even the member for Peterborough has agreed with me on this many times—on smoking tobacco. There is no debate any longer about the dangers of smoking—absolutely. The member for Peterborough and

I agree on that 100%. I don't think there's a person in Ontario who would disagree that the proof is out there that tobacco is detrimental. It has been proven a hundred times, a thousand times, a million times. Yet does the government say, "We're going to ban tobacco"? No, no; nay, not so. Do you know why? Even though they're not getting as much revenue as they should because they're not doing anything about the illegal contraband tobacco that is being sold in the province, they still get billions in revenue from people smoking in the province of Ontario.

They talk about the environment. One thing the fellow in precinct properties here says is that we're going to have one heck of a mess on the lawn. We already have it; it's just going to get worse. Do you know what's going to happen? There are a lot of things you can do about weed control. One of them is to get out there on your hands and knees.

My yard is about an acre and a half, and I ain't getting out there on my hands and knees—although the member from Ajax-Pickering, I think it is, would suggest that I spend more time on my hands and knees, or at least on my knees, particularly praying for him. I know he makes that suggestion all the time. But I'm not going to be doing that on that one-and-a-half-acre lot.

Interjection: Why not?

Mr. John Yakabuski: Because it's just too big and I'm getting too old. It might work on a little postage-stamp lot like some here in the city of Toronto where the lawn's not very big, but it's a little hard in the country.

But there are ways you can control them. If you're not going to get out there and pick the weeds, dig them out or whatever, a lot of people will also opt to—you know what we can do? When we cut the grass more often, the weeds are there, but they don't show. So we could—

Interjections.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Would the member for Peterborough agree that we should cut the grass more often, maybe?

Mr. Jeff Leal: I pay my son 20 cents a dandelion.

Mr. John Yakabuski: The member for Peterborough is paying his son 20 cents a dandelion. I'll tell you what: I'll bring my son to Peterborough, and he'll do it for you next week.

But the member for Peterborough agrees that you could cut your lawn more often. So we cut the grass more often. What does that do? Well, that just gets more of those very inefficient small engines puffing out more fumes into our environment. So now we have a bill where we're worried about the environment, we're worried about health, and now we're going to have people who are out there more often with the little lawn mower cutting that grass because they can't stand the sight of it. They can't put anything on it. Or we could hire a goat or we could hire the member for Peterborough's son, who, for 20 cents a dandelion, will take care of your lawn.

I can't believe that I'm out of time. There's so much to be talked about here. I'd like another opportunity. If I could get unanimous consent for more time, I'd appreciate it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Are you asking for unanimous consent? Do we have unanimous consent to give—

Interjection: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): No. That idea didn't go too far.

Questions or comments?

Ms. Andrea Horwath: It's my pleasure to make a few remarks on the speech that was just delivered so eloquently by the member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke.

I have to say that there is no doubt that it's long past time for the province of Ontario to deal with the pesticide issue. We know that municipalities have been far ahead of the game when it comes to dealing with cosmetic pesticides in communities across the province. My own community has been dealing with putting bylaws in place around pesticide use, and successfully did so a couple of years ago. The reality is that the municipal sector is the sector that has been far and away the lead on this particular file.

It's very anguishing, then, for municipalities to realize that when the province finally catches up to the game, when the province finally gets the picture that this is an important issue for Ontarians, they put a bill together that basically says that even though municipalities were in the game far in advance—they had been on the ball on this issue, they had been leading the charge, if you will—if municipalities have pesticide bans that are more stringent or list more types of chemicals or pesticides in their bylaws, their bylaws no longer are usable. They have to go to the lowest common denominator, which will be set out here in this legislation. I think that's actually inappropriate, and I'd hope that when this bill is finished its debate at second reading it goes to committee and the government would consider some amendments that would give the municipal sector the respect and the due they deserve and take out that odious clause that prevents municipalities from getting ahead of the game on pesticide issue.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: It's a pleasure to join the debate and to pass some comment on the remarks of the member for Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke. Certainly, I think there was some wisdom in the words that he put out today for our consideration, but the problem is, it sounded like a speech from the 1950s or the 1960s. The attitude that we used to have toward pesticides and chemicals in our society is one that I think was fairly portrayed by the member there.

Certainly, times have changed. Society's attitude toward these pesticides has changed, and what Ontarians are asking for now is equal protection. A person in Renfrew or Nipissing and, of course, Oakville—

Mr. Jeff Leal: Barry's Bay.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: —or Barry's Bay should have the same protection as everybody else in Ontario when it comes to pesticide reduction.

What we've brought forward, we think, based on overwhelming positive public response, is a bill that is very balanced. Should it meet the favour of the House, should it move forward, certainly if there are suggestions that are to be made by municipalities along the way, I know our government is open to hearing those things. If you look at it on balance, what it does and what I think is a major improvement over any other municipal bylaw in the province—we should thank the municipalities that had the foresight and the courage to move ahead in the first place in this regard and implement bylaws of their own in the absence of any provincial response from previous governments—is the fact that the province has the ability to ban the sale of pesticides. Municipalities never had that option, never had that ability. Certainly that, by default, makes the provincial law much stronger than any municipal law that's in effect without taking anything away from those communities that have had the courage to step forward on this issue.

1010

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further questions and comments?

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for the opportunity to speak to the fine presentation made on this pesticide-ban law by my good friend from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke. He made a couple of very important points that I think warrant reinforcing. One deals with the member from Oakville's comments about being equal to everyone, that everyone deserves equal treatment. If there's science to back up this piece of legislation, then equal treatment would mean there would be no exemptions in it, because obviously if you can spray it in one place and you can't spray it somewhere else, that's not equal and fair. If there's a science-based risk here, then obviously the elimination of that should be equal to everyone. I would be as protected on the golf course as I am in my backyard, and that doesn't seem to be what this law is doing.

I'm sure the member on the government side will produce the evidence, shall we say, the science base for this legislation, so we can make a decision based on whether it should be banned across the board or banned nowhere. I think that's a very important part.

The other part I just wanted to talk about was the difference in lawn sizes in rural Ontario. Obviously it's going to be very difficult to deal with the large areas that are presently being cut and used as lawns and the adjacent pastures or fields right beside them. If we can't control the weeds on large lawns—and the member from Peterborough suggested that we can pull all these weeds out by hand—if we can't control those weeds on this large acreage around buildings, we can't control them on the rest of our farms, and we have to spray more there.

I think much more work needs to be done on this legislation.

Mr. Paul Miller: There are some oversights in Bill 64, and hopefully the bill won't get shot down, like all our opposition bills do, in committee, even though they are good bills that we bring forward.

Our municipalities have taken the leadership role in pesticide control. The communities have done the heavy lifting on this legislation. This bill needs some amendments that will be dealt with at committee. We, as team players, support this bill and legislation with the proper adjustments. We should not cancel out all the good work that municipalities have done in this province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The honourable member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke has up to two minutes to respond.

Mr. John Yakabuski: I appreciate the comments from the members for Hamilton Centre, Oakville, Oxford and Hamilton East–Stoney Creek and their input on the bill.

In two minutes I can't get back into everything, but clearly the science—the member for Oakville talked about attitudes changing. There's no question about it: Things should be based on science, and I want to talk about the agricultural industry when I wrap up.

One of the reasons agriculture is exempt is because this government knows that if we don't have pesticide use in our agricultural industry, we can't produce food. It's as simple as that. We cannot produce the amount of food we need.

I used to be in the hardware business. We sold products for home and garden use: pesticides, insecticides etc. Up in the Barry's Bay area, everybody got a little bit of garden. One of the things they plant, along with many other things, is potatoes. When the potato bugs roll in in the second half of the summer, if you don't treat those plants, you don't have any potatoes. It's as simple as that. The bugs are just wild. They're just rampant, the way they attack potato plants. So if you don't have some way of dealing with them, you don't have potatoes. Under this proposed legislation, all of these people who have a little garden are actually going to have to be licensed to get a pesticide or get a farmer's licence to have a little bit of garden, a small plot of garden just around their home, which is very common in rural Ontario.

The government needs to send this to committee. We've got to talk to people, not just base things on politics.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Mr. Paul Miller: Mr. Speaker, I'll be sharing my time with the honourable member from Hamilton Centre.

New Democrats are pleased to be able to speak to the legislation, which aims at implementing a provincial ban on the sale and application of pesticides for aesthetic purposes. This legislation is long overdue, and given the time the McGuinty government has had to observe the leadership role of the municipalities, many of which have already implemented bans on the application of pesticides for aesthetic purposes, we would have liked to have seen the legislation introduced with a few more of the kinks worked out with amendments. But this is what the committee process is for, and New Democrats look forward to hearing from environment and public health groups as we move forward in ensuring the legislation is strong and enforceable.

Before offering our perspective on the bill's shortcomings, which we'll aim to address in committee, I think it's important to discuss how we have finally arrived at this legislation.

The proposed provincial pesticide ban in context: When it comes to pesticide bans, it is extremely important that we acknowledge the leadership of Ontario's municipalities for their efforts in this area. We owe municipal leaders and the numerous community activists across this province and across the country a great deal of thanks for their tireless work to bring the debate on pesticides to Queen's Park. It is important to acknowledge that they have done the heavy lifting on banning the aesthetic use of pesticides in Ontario. Yet while the provincial government talks glowingly about the efforts of our municipal partners, why is it that the proposed legislation takes away their ability to continue their efforts?

We know pesticides kill indiscriminately, and it's estimated that only 5% actually reach their targets due to incautious application. The World Health Organization estimates that 200,000 people are killed worldwide each year—up from 30,000 in 1990—and another three million people are poisoned annually by pesticides, many of them children. So when we know of these dangers and of the leadership provided by our municipal partners on this issue, and because it's clear that the province is a late-comer to the dance, why would the McGuinty government bring forward a law that cancels out existing municipal bylaws? Environmental and health groups want this section removed, and New Democrats concur.

As stated earlier, in the case of banning pesticides, it is the municipalities who have led while the province followed, and the community activists are rightly concerned that the legislation as written will needlessly tie the hands of municipalities in taking future action with respect to pesticide use within their respective jurisdictions. For example, it could be the case that a municipality might want to ban the use of pesticides on golf courses. They would not be allowed to take such action under the bill as written. Having the province set a standard which must be met across the province is welcome, but only if the municipalities who in the future may wish to introduce a stricter standard are still able to do so.

The province can't talk about treating municipalities as equal partners, and then once again turn around and strip them of their jurisdictional powers to regulate their local environment regarding pesticides. Municipalities have been leaders in the area of protecting their citizens from pesticides and they should be allowed to continue in this vein. This bill needs some doctoring before it actually is put into law.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: It's my pleasure to take a few minutes to participate in the debate.

It's not surprising, I think, that there is a pesticide bill in front of us. I say that because all of us recognize that the municipal sector has been very active on these issues for quite some time. So it's not a surprise, it's not a shock and it's not in anyway difficult to understand why eventually so many municipalities have undertaken this work and that the province finally got the eureka moment that they needed to put something together to deal with this, as it is an ongoing and significant issue around the province. Municipalities have, in fact, taken on the responsibility for the protection of the health and well-being of people living within their municipal borders when it comes to exposure to the toxins that are present in pesticides that are freely and openly used and marketed here in Ontario.

1020

This government's response to that grassroots movement that has taken place in a number of municipalities is to come up with this bill we're debating today, Bill 64, the cosmetic pesticide use bill. I'm certainly one who would say that I'm glad it's finally here. We're definitely pleased that the government has seen fit to do the right thing and, although coming late to the dance, finally getting here and putting before legislators a bill that would seek to address some of the ongoing concerns out there around the use of pesticides in municipalities and in every community across the province.

It's interesting, though. Where does this come from? When I say it comes from the grassroots, in Hamilton, the community I live in, the city council has been very active on this file. It's come from a couple of places—certainly the environmental movement. We have some great environmental activists in Hamilton. We have Environment Hamilton, run by Lynda Lukasik and Brenda Johnson; the Conservator Society; Friends of the Red Hill Valley; a number of different community-based activist groups that are always pushing the envelope, which is what needs to happen. In fact, I really believe that we wouldn't have a number of significant pieces of legislation or bills around, or anything at all, some of these environmental areas if it wasn't for the grassroots activists, the people in communities who become aware and raise awareness of legislators at every level and push and push and make sure that the issue stays on the front burner and not the back burner.

In many cities, including mine, this issue has been bubbling on the front burner for quite some time. Bylaws exist, but everyone knows that a big challenge is the raising of awareness, the education, and bringing people along and getting that commitment to happen.

I can remember when debates and discussions first started around pesticide use in my own community. There were a significant number of people who were skeptical, I guess I would say, not quite sure whether it was that big a deal: "Our lawns need to look picture-perfect, postcard-perfect, so we need to use pesticides." These were the kinds of discussions and reactions that were initially on the table at the community level when the pesticide ban was being considered.

There were also discussions around golf courses and sports fields, concerns about kids going over on their ankles if the fields weren't maintained, and the theory that the only thing that would maintain those fields was the regular application of pesticides on the playing surfaces. A couple of years have gone by, solutions have been found and changes have been made. The sky hasn't fallen, but what has happened is that we've made our environment less toxic, particularly for those people who are more vulnerable to the effects of exposure to the various toxins that make up these kinds of pesticides.

The reality is that young children who are playing in sports fields—which ironically was the one place where people were adamant that they didn't think the ban should apply—are close to the ground, have smaller organs, smaller bodies, so the absorption of these toxins by a smaller person, a child particularly, would have a much more significant impact. It's very obvious that young children would be much more negatively affected than anyone else when it comes to pesticide use.

We also know that people who already have health concerns—people with asthma, senior citizens who sometimes have respiratory or breathing problems or other kinds of ailments—also would be more likely to be negatively affected by the use of pesticides.

There's no doubt that this bill will have great benefits. That is why many, many municipalities have already gone the extra mile, had the public debate at the local level, and dealt with all of the issues coming up. Again, it's probably safe to say that in most communities where there is a municipal bylaw dealing with the application of cosmetic pesticides, it is likely that grassroots community organizations and environmental organizations will have made that effort to not only educate the councillors, but to bring the public on as well.

It's interesting as well, because most of those organizations are volunteer-based. They don't have a lot of money. They don't have a lot of grants or operating funds, and they certainly don't have scads and scads of staff. They don't have that kind of infrastructure, if you will.

But darn it, those people really do deserve a great deal of thanks and respect from people like us. They fight in the trenches on these issues, they do the research on their own, and they do it on a volunteer basis. They do it out of passion and belief in the issues that they are tackling, whether it's cosmetic use of pesticides or whether it's one that came up recently at the public accounts committee—the issue of hazardous waste.

We were dealing with the auditor's report and the hazardous waste section of that report, which spoke to the ministry's lack of ability to track hazardous waste from the place where it's generated through the transportation process into the landfill site. At some point, there is a weight that's taken at the beginning of that process, and at the end of the process when the load gets to the dump or to the landfill site, the hazardous waste-land fill site, there is not as much weight. So somewhere between point A and point B, there was quite a possibility that hazardous waste was being lost or had gone missing.

Through the process of that committee, we learned about the systems, or lack thereof, that are in place. One of the things that I became aware of was, again, the fight that is being undertaken by a number of grassroots-based community environmentalists who are looking to other jurisdictions that have jumped ahead of where we are here in Ontario. So just like the McGuinty Liberal government didn't have this on their radar, it took municipalities to take the leadership role, often based on community activism. Not dissimilarly, community activists are saying there are lots of places where the McGuinty government needs to pull up its socks in terms of the environment and environmental issues. I know my colleague who is our environment critic is often critical of the government for its lack of action on a climate change plan, for example.

Going back to the public accounts committee, I was surprised to know that other jurisdictions are quite wide open and transparent about the companies that are generating toxins. They have a website that's publicly accessible, which lists and shows quite clearly—for free—the companies that are producing toxins in the States. This is just south of the border, in the States. Their registry of toxin producers is as clear as a bell. It's there for everyone to see. In Ontario, on the other hand, you have to pay a fee to be able to have access to information about toxin producers.

It seems to me that control of pesticide use in this bill in particular, Bill 64, is definitely a step in the right direction. It's unfortunate that the government has decided in their—I don't know why and I'm really hoping, as my colleague from Hamilton East-Stoney Creek, Paul Miller said—New Democrats really are hoping—that after this bill finishes second reading and goes to committee, we will be hearing from many grassroots environmentalists, as well as municipal representatives.

1030

I certainly don't want to prejudge, but I suspect that we will have people coming to committee, to the public hearings, who will say, "Get rid of that clause in the bill that says that where municipalities have standards that are greater than the ones included in Bill 64, those standards will not apply; only the standards in Bill 64 will apply." I think that's a problem, and I think that's an issue we can probably overcome.

I'm hopeful that the government will see fit to acknowledge, respect and support the work of grassroots environmentalists and municipalities that have gone further than this province is prepared to go and will acknowledge that some municipalities are going to continue to take a leadership role and this bill shouldn't squelch that leadership role. This bill should support and encourage municipalities and communities to stay vigilant on the environmental file, to keep pushing, if you will, because the reality is, that's the only way that positive change will occur. I would really urge this government to please consider seriously getting rid of that clause, because it sends a wrong message on a number of levels.

I have to say, I think it was embarrassing for the Premier when he said one thing and the minister was saying something else and there was a whole bunch of confusion. Lo and behold, we found out that the Premier was incorrect in what he was indicating was in the bill. I think a lot of people are quite disappointed. They would have preferred that things were the way that Dalton McGuinty thought they were. Hopefully, between that and the public hearings, when we hear from the community and from municipalities and others—I believe that at the end of the day it will only do us better as a province and do municipalities better as communities where people live and raise their children and work and engage in civil society—it will only help to have that clause removed and give the community and the municipalities the due that they deserve in terms of their ability to set higher standards, to require greater protection of the public. It's never a wrong thing to make sure that the health and well-being of young children and of people who are frail, people who have breathing problems—asthma and other kinds of respiratory concerns—are protected.

It's amazing the number of things that we now, at this point in time—we had the people dealing with cancers yesterday. The things that we now acknowledge and recognize that cause cancer or are directly related to the possibility of cancer being developed: 15, 20, 25 years ago, a lot of that—bisphenol A is one that very recently, in the last little while, has been banned in terms of its potential for causing cancer. Our environment is something that we really need to pay significant attention to, because if we don't—and this is what that message was yesterday for those MPPs who had the opportunity to hear from the people who were here. It's a matter of saying that we will certainly, at the end of the day, be in a much better position if we can control and end, as much as possible, the things that cause diseases like cancer. If we can't necessarily cure cancer, there have been great strides as well in the way that different types of cancers are managed. But the reality is, why don't we spend that money, why don't we spend that energy, why don't we make that effort in making sure that the things to which we are exposing ourselves and our children and all the people in this province and in this country—to get rid of those potentially dangerous exposures. Then you won't end up getting the kinds of cancers, or we'll start reducing the kinds of cancers that are prevalent in our society today, and a lot of pain and anguish of families and individuals will be reduced.

Yes, that means things like the cosmetic use of pesticides. But it also means a toxin reduction strategy that is forward-thinking and quickly implemented. I know that there is some kind of process that's going to take maybe the next year or so before it goes onto the Environmental Bill of Rights, the posting for the feedback. All of that is necessary, but let's make sure that we're staying on top of these files. Whether it's pesticide reduction, whether it's toxic substance reduction in our environment over all, it's really our obligation to ourselves, to our children, to their children, to make sure that we are maintaining the health and safety and well-being of people in our province. If that's not our job, our obligation, our responsibility, I don't know what is. I look forward to the government making sure this bill is stronger and not weaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Questions and comments?

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: I'm certainly listening with great attention and interest to this debate. I think there have been a few things that need to be clarified in this.

I certainly was interested to hear that someone seems to think that all farm properties are exempt, including the farm lawn, and that taking your kids to the farm is not a good thing to do. I happen to live on a farm, a very active, working farm. There is no exemption for my lawn. My lawn and my neighbour's lawn are being treated the same as our city cousins. We are not going to be able to spray our lawns either. I think that's proper.

I have 12 grandchildren who live within 20 minutes of the farm. They come to play there. I don't want to see them exposed to pesticides either.

Now, as a working farm, of course, we have an integrated pest management plan. My husband is licensed to use pesticides. He knows at what time they should be used and he knows the quantity. There is no concern, as a farmer, that there would be overuse. Anyone who understands the cost of these pesticides understands the reasons why farmers are very careful in how they use them and when they use them. It's a necessary and essential use of a pesticide. But nevertheless, it's not going to be on my lawn.

In terms of what do we do instead—the member for Peterborough talked about his son going out and pulling the dandelions—I might also suggest that you use more grass seed. Amazingly, grass does choke out weeds. So in the spring, Rene and I, before we roll our lawn, we put on more grass seed. It's not hard to do.

We use mulch around the trees. We have a tree that falls, we get it mulched, we put it around the other trees. There's nothing that can't be done naturally that we—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Thank you. Further questions and comments?

Mr. John O'Toole: I'm always pleased to participate and respond. The NDP are always passionate about these issues. I just caution members: Let's not get carried away. Bill 64 is one page. This bill here is one page. A lot of fuss being made about it; we don't know what they're talking about. Actually, the Premier, when he introduced the bill, had no clue. His minister standing beside him? No clue. The point is, this bill is all in regulation. Section 7.1 is being added.

Interjections.

Mr. John O'Toole: Let's be careful now, don't get too emotional.

It's all in regulation. We won't know until the regulations are established. I read—or am understanding—that Roundup, one of the most invasive products, may not be banned. So we don't know.

It is the right thing. It's sort of like motherhood and apple pie. It's all good. We support the idea. The problem here is that some of the exemptions simply don't make sense. I have to laugh. This is the problem. We have a feel-good type of government.

This is an article from the paper. It's not me saying it, it's not John Tory saying it. Here's what it says: "So it's fine to use the pesticides on crops we're going to eat, but not fine to use them on our gardens." That's in the St. Catharines Standard on April 26.

You have to wonder what the goal here is because all this material is regulated federally by Health and Welfare Canada. The province and the municipalities are all sticking their finger in the apple pie here. We need to get the regulations out. We need to have the Premier and the minister tell us exactly what the goal is here.

How come you're exempting golf courses? The ground runoff runs into the streams. You've got to look at this thing. I'm suspicious. I'm going to speak later on this bill.

1040

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's a pleasure to speak, if only for a couple of minutes, on this bill. First of all, as my colleagues have said, with great insight and great research to back them up, this is a bill that actually does less to ban cosmetic pesticides than what's already in place, for example, in a city like Toronto. It's set against a backdrop, I must say, of inaction on the entire environmental file. Here we have an environment minister who has not come forward with a climate change plan, which has been promised. We know about the travesty that accompanied the coal-fired plants, where they were promised to be shut down—what was it, 2007, and now 2011, or whenever; also, a government that's planning on putting $40 billion to $50 billion into nuclear reactors and that refuses to uphold the Kyoto protocol.

Again, we've called on them to do all of this. Instead, what do they do? They bring forward a very small bill here, a bill to ban cosmetic pesticides, when the city of Toronto already has stronger legislation in place that this would conceivably pre-empt, unless they do something about that particular clause.

Set against a background of inaction on the environment file, which is truly a sad commentary—a government that said that they were going to be proactive on this and have not been. No Kyoto protocol—

Interjection.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: I'm being heckled by the Minister of the Environment, but he knows as well as I do: no action on the Kyoto protocol, no action on climate change, and yet a rush to nuclear reactors, to the tune of $40 to $50 billion. One has to hope that those nuclear reactors are not built in your backyard—whoever's listening to this—and certainly if you are listening to this, I would write in about that issue, if not any of the other issues that we've spoken to at great length in this House.

Again, it's a pleasure to speak to this bill. I wish it was stronger. I wish they had an environmental plan.

Mr. Bas Balkissoon: I'm pleased to join in on this debate on the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act. To be honest, this piece of legislation is long, long overdue. To give you a little bit of background, I got elected to municipal council some 20 years ago, and I know municipalities have been talking about this for a long time. But the bureaucracy used to always advise the elected officials that the sale and use of pesticides within a municipality is not within the council's realm of mandate to ban. We have to credit the municipality of Hudson, Quebec, because they ignored that bureaucratic advice and decided to pass a bylaw, which eventually went to court and the court ruled in favour of the municipality.

What is happening now is that a domino effect has taken place throughout Canada. I have to say that, as a member of Toronto council previously, it was difficult to accept this ban within the confines of the city of Toronto, because it was difficult to picture how you could ban it within a municipality yet it was available for sale at all the stores, including the municipality next door. I have to say, as a member of Toronto council, we did it. It did work.

What this government is doing today is going to strengthen that particular ban by municipalities, in fact, because the actual sale of these cosmetic pesticides will not be available in the stores anymore. So home use of it will definitely be controlled. I think if you speak to the experts in the medical field, they'll tell you that that was the biggest concern, the home use of—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Thank you. The member for Hamilton Centre has up to two minutes to respond.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: I want to thank the members from Lambton-Kent-Middlesex, Durham, Parkdale-High Park and Scarborough-Rouge River for their comments on the remarks of my colleague Paul Miller and myself regarding Bill 64.

It's interesting, because one of the things that the member from Lambton-Kent-Middlesex talked about is the fact that we can use natural means to control weeds, and that's something that we all need to become more educated about. Having said that, it's interesting to note that in my own community, just adjacent to where my riding ends, is a producer, a manufacturer of pesticides. Interestingly, that manufacturer had a fire, and as a result of that fire, a creek nearby was contaminated with toxic runoff and a number of fish were killed. The reality is that the surrounding neighbourhood continues to this day to be quite concerned, because not only were the fish killed, but there have been rippling effects on the ecosystem around Spencer Creek since that fire took place.

So it's not only a matter of getting rid of the pesticides that we are using in a cosmetic way, but we also need to take a real hard look at where the manufacturing of some of these chemicals takes place. In this particular situation, these chemicals are manufactured right on a water system, on a creek that feeds into other water tables in the area. It's in a residential neighbourhood—literally right in a residential neighbourhood—and the impacts from not only the ongoing production but the possibility of a spill or a fire are significant and deadly.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for debate has ended.

Second reading debate deemed adjourned.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to take this opportunity to introduce a number of guests to the Legislature today.

On behalf of the member from Durham: Mr. Gary Cooke, past chair of Community Living Ontario.

On behalf of the member from Guelph: Richard Sandals, her son; Allison Dawes, her daughter; and William Dawes, her grandson, will be visiting this afternoon.

On behalf of the member from Parkdale–High Park: John Paterson, Sylvia Paterson and son Teddy Paterson, in the Speaker's gallery today.

On behalf of page Vanessa Chiarello: Augusto Chiarello, her father; Michael Chiarello, her brother; Vincenza Chiarello, her mother, in the west members' gallery.

On behalf of page Mikaela Henderson: Holly Henderson, her mother, in the east members' gallery.

On behalf of page Matthew Chaput: Audrey Chaput, his mother; and Norah Chaput, his sister, in the east members' gallery.

On behalf of page Hannah Jansen: Ellen Jansen, her sister; Colin Jansen, her brother; Val Millson, her mother; and Steve Jansen, her father, in the public galleries.

On behalf of page Isabelle Love: Linda Love, her mother; Chris Love, her father; Sebastien Love, her brother; Oliver Love, her brother; Rose Love, her grandmother, in the west members' gallery.

On behalf of page Thomas Parker: John Parker, his grandfather; Margaret Parker, his grandmother; Emily Parker, his sister; Michelle Parker, his mother; Alison Parker, his sister; Megan Durkin, a friend; Chris Parker, his brother; and Al Parker, his father, in the east members' gallery.

On behalf of the Minister of Community and Social Services, I'd like to take this opportunity to welcome the representatives of Community Living Ontario and Community Living Toronto, as well as community living agents, self-advocates and clients who are present today throughout the galleries.

On behalf of the member from Toronto Centre: in the east gallery, as part of the Community Living delegation, we'd like to welcome Jim and Dianne Turner here today.

On behalf of the member from St. Paul's, we'd like to welcome, in the east members' gallery, Elijah Harper, former Manitoba MPP and MP. Welcome today.

We'd like to welcome Murad Velshi, member from Don Mills in the 34th Parliament.

To everyone who wasn't introduced today, welcome to Queen's Park.

MEMBERS' COMMENTS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): On Thursday, May 8, the Leader of the Opposition raised a point of order during question period concerning comments that he said were being made over a period of time by members of the government benches which, he contended, were not accurate reflections of the policies of the official opposition.

The Leader of the Opposition indicated he would be writing to me to address this matter in more detail. I have now received his letter, and I thank him for that. In it, Mr. Runciman reiterates his concern that members of the government, when addressing the House, sometimes make reference to policies of his party in a manner which he feels distorts them or, conversely, ascribes policies to the opposition which it does not have.

I hope the member will appreciate, and I think the undertone of his letter anticipates, that the Speaker is not really in a position to address what amounts to a difference of opinion between him and certain members of the government.

The Speaker does, though, have a role to maintain order and decorum in debate but cannot interject himself into the interplay of ideas that debate represents or attempt to referee the nuances or precision of everything that is said in the chamber. It is a given that all members are both assumed and expected to conduct themselves honourably, and I think it is sufficient for the Speaker to leave the matter at that.

1050

ORAL QUESTIONS

ONTARIO ECONOMY

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I have a question for the Deputy Premier. It has to do with his government's inability to grasp the gravity of Ontario's economic situation, a crisis in many respects. Eleven hundred jobs lost at Dell in Ottawa, 300 at Sitel in Ottawa, 900 at GM in Oshawa, 325 at Quebecor, 1,400 at GM in Windsor, and today 27 in Cornwall—that's over 4,000 jobs in just two weeks. Four thousand people—that's the size of a small town, Deputy Premier—don't know how they're going to pay their mortgages, feed their families or put their kids through university. More and more people, on a daily basis, are becoming alarmed for their family's future.

Deputy Premier, your government's response seems to be to rearrange the deck chairs on the Titanic. Where's the sense of urgency? Where's the economic stimulus package that Ontario very clearly needs today?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Finance.

Hon. Dwight Duncan: The economic stimulus package was voted on and approved yesterday by this House.

Let me remind the Leader of the Opposition: You voted against $1.5 billion for skills training; you voted against investments in innovation that will create new jobs; you voted against a capital tax reduction that Ontario manufacturers will see this fall; you voted against partnership with the federal government; you voted against standing up for Ontario.

We laid out a plan that recognizes and begins to address the challenges in our economy that are portended by the world price of oil, by the state of the US economy and by the value of our dollar.

The McGuinty government has a plan; it has laid it out. It's a plan that works well. We need the federal Conservative government to stand up and protect Ontario the way we are, and we ask you to join us in that.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: There's an old saying, "You don't have to be much of a musician to toot your own horn," and that certainly applies to the Minister of Finance. His government talks about a five-point plan. The five points are "duck, dodge, dip, deny and defer."

These last two weeks have really laid bare the blinders this government has on when it comes to stimulating the economy. Throw $235 million at GM, and GM throws 2,300 people out of work. Even if a small portion of that money that went to GM had gone to drop business taxes, it would have benefited all companies, big and small—saving jobs, creating jobs, encouraging investments.

Minister, your plan isn't working. You need to change your strategy. When are you going to come to your senses and do that?

Hon. Dwight Duncan: The Leader of the Opposition talks about the government wanting to talk about its plan. Let's hear what some other people say about the government's plan.

BMO, on May 12, reported this: "Job growth in Ontario has perked up to 2.2% in the past 12 months, above the national average and one of the strongest performances of the past four years."

In the meantime, the unemployment rate has actually dropped three tenths of a percentage point from a year ago—and by the way, it's down almost seven tenths of a point from when that member sat on the government side.

There is no question that sectors and individuals and families are facing a challenge. What the people of Ontario know is that they have a government in Ontario with a five-point plan. What we need is a federal partner. What we need is a federal government that will answer the call of Ontario's challenge. Stand up with us and help us convince them of the need to invest in Ontario—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: As a member representing Windsor, a community that's been really hard hit by auto sector closures, I think the minister should have paid attention to quotes that I've put on the record here in the past two days from a senior official in the auto manufacturing area saying that Ontario has become one of the most expensive jurisdictions in the world in which to produce automobiles.

That's your responsibility, Minister. You've been sitting in government for almost five years now. This is not simply calling on the federal government. It has to do with your policies, with your taxation, with regulation, with the onerous burden you've placed on every business doing business in this province. That's your responsibility, which you have continuously, on a daily basis, declined to accept.

Shape up. Start doing your job. Bring in an economic stimulus package and do it today.

Hon. Dwight Duncan: The member opposite voted against the capital tax cut that manufacturers will see in November. The member opposite voted against the tourism stimulus package, including the new Casino Windsor initiative that will open next month. The member opposite voted against getting Ford Motor Co. to invest in Windsor.

There is no question that there are challenges in our economy. The people of Ontario recognize that their government, the McGuinty government, has come to the plate with money for training and skills development, with money for automotive and other investments in next-generation jobs, with appropriate tax cuts, properly targeted, that will assist all sectors in all communities.

This government has a plan; it's implementing it. What we need is a federal government that will respond to Ontario's very real challenges today.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: He continues to play the blame game as jobs leave this province.

NATIVE LAND DISPUTE

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: My question is to the Deputy Premier regarding Six Nations Chief Montour's letter of April 29, thanking the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs for intervening with the OPP in Caledonia.

Today in the Hamilton Spectator, Chief Montour is quoted as saying, "I asked Minister Bryant if he had any influence on his fellow cabinet colleagues to look at ways we could relieve the situation." He was referring to the blockade in Caledonia.

Montour quotes Minister Bryant as saying, "Look Chief, you know I can't act directly with anyone, but I'll see who I can talk to and see if something can be done."

The minister said he would get involved, and the chief was left with the distinct impression that as a result of the minister's intervention, the OPP stood down.

Deputy Premier, will your government investigate what are clearly serious allegations?

Hon. George Smitherman: Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.

Hon. Michael Bryant: Chief Montour certainly didn't refer to any serious allegations. He referred to the efforts of the official opposition as a "witch hunt." Chief Montour is of the view that in fact there was a peaceful ending, that it was positive, that there were open lines of communication between the OPP and Six Nations leadership. Commissioner Fantino has indicated that everything proceeded exactly as it should and that he has never been a part of or associated with interference in any fashion.

I would repeat again what Commissioner Fantino said: "At no time during this event, or in relation to any police operation, did anyone in government or elsewhere tell the OPP to stand down or direct the operations of the OPP."

I'm sure that the member will accept the commissioner's word.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: There's no question it is a hunt, but it's a hunt for the truth, and we're certainly not getting it from this government.

I have to say it's unbelievably inappropriate, when allegations are being made about a minister, in terms of his conduct, by a very credible individual in this province, that the question is referred to the individual in question. That is terribly, terribly inappropriate. How are we going to get a straight answer with respect to whether or not there was interference with police decisions in this situation if the minister in question is having the questions referred to him? It boggles the mind.

Will the minister stand up and tell us who he did speak to, what was discussed, what else we are going to do? That's your position—you're referring everything to him. Get up and start answering some questions. Who did you talk to? What was discussed? Will you give us an independent investigation?

1100

Hon. Michael Bryant: The leader of the official opposition refers to Chief Montour as a very respected individual, and of course that's absolutely true, that's absolutely right, and I absolutely agree with him. I speak to Chief Montour on a very regular basis. I exchanged messages last night with him with respect to the new relationship fund that was established today, a very important fund that will allow the levelling of the playing field in discussions between governments and First Nations.

This very credible individual has referred to the efforts of the member, today and otherwise, in this House with respect to this issue as a witch hunt. So I would ask the member to take the word of the highly respected individual, Chief Montour, to take the word of the highly respected individual, Commissioner Fantino, and accept that everything happened exactly the way it ought to happen, and that at the end of the day, there was a peaceful resolution—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary?

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: Not surprisingly, the minister again refused to answer the specific questions, and the questions raised by the chief in his letter. He assured the chief that he would get involved, he'd make some calls, he'd see if something could be done. We've asked him today to explain that, to explain what he said to the chief. He says the chief is a credible individual, and he's making some credible claims here that you have a responsibility to respond to. These are serious, serious allegations.

How many other times did the minister make a call to see if something could be done? Is that why we have had such lawlessness in Caledonia for the past two years?

If this government fails to commence an immediate and independent investigation into this matter, from here on, everything this government and the OPP do with respect to Caledonia is going to continue to fall under a cloud of suspicion. Will he call in an independent body to conduct an investigation and do it now?

Hon. Michael Bryant: Well, there we go. I think everybody heard loud and clear what the concern here is. It's not, in fact, that there were discussions between the government and the OPP, which did not take place; it's that somehow there have been peaceful results. It's that at the end of the weekend, as the member for Haldimand says, "There were no arrests in Caledonia. There were in Deseronto, but none in Caledonia."

There's been an independent investigation all right: It's called the Ipperwash inquiry. In the Ipperwash inquiry, there were findings and there were recommendations. Obviously one of the recommendations is that the police be independent. The Leader of the Opposition is absolutely wrong when he suggests that there has been any inappropriate contact between the government and the OPP. And who do I cite in support? I cite Chief Commissioner Julian Fantino, who says that at no time has there ever been interference. I will accept the word of Commissioner Fantino.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Howard Hampton: My question is for the Deputy Premier. Three years ago, the McGuinty government, with much fanfare and thumping of the chest, announced a $235-million provincial government investment in General Motors. At the time, the Minister of Economic Development said that General Motors committed to maintaining an average of 16,000 workers in the province. When asked what would happen if they failed those commitments, he said, "If they don't meet their commitments by way of our Beacon project contract, we will claw back any funds that won't meet those commitments."

Three years later, General Motors has laid off thousands. They're now below the 16,000-workforce limit that was set. Why did the McGuinty government cave to corporate pressure and fail to negotiate tough job guarantees in its agreement with General Motors?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I'm happy to once again stand up for the automotive sector in Ontario. What's very important for the member opposite to understand is, yes, there were guarantees in a contract signed with General Motors and the Ontario government. What this member should recognize is the historic success of General Motors in Ontario. In fact, even the number that was calculated, at 16,000, is a figure that is met by General Motors. There is not one of our Ontario automotive investment strategies signed with assemblers here in Ontario that is in breach of contract. Let me say this again: There is not one contract signed with the Ontario government that is in breach. We expect that our companies will be strong and will continue to be strong in Ontario, because the Ontario government is supportive of the automotive sector.

Mr. Howard Hampton: There's only one way that could be true: Either the 16,000-employee base that was set wasn't true or the McGuinty government is not insisting on that 16,000 base being met, because General Motors is now below 16,000 workers. But Ford committed to retaining 4,000 jobs in return for a $100-million provincial government investment. At least that's what the freedom of information document says, which we released a couple of days ago. Ford has announced layoffs totalling 2,700 workers. Can you tell us what are the specific clawback provisions that Ford has to deal with, should they fail to meet their job commitments, and when will the McGuinty government enforce those clawback issues?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I think it's very important to note that the member opposite, despite feigning support for auto workers across Ontario, has absolutely no relationship with them or he would know that General Motors has been in excess of 20,000 for these last five years. What matters is, when we make calculations with our automotive partners, we talk about long-term averages. It's important to note what we can control and what General Motors can control as it relates to sales of their vehicles.

It is very important to note that we stand behind our automotive companies. It's important because we know that there's a worldwide change in that economy, and we are there to support them. They have provided good jobs for Ontario historically, but I think it's fair to say that back, in 2000, this particular member made it very clear what his relationship was with the CAW membership: "We could blow our brains out trying to talk to these guys. It's not worth it."

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The reality is this: I think there's something wrong when literally thousands of auto workers are being put out on the street at the same time that the McGuinty government has handed over $400 million to companies, and the McGuinty government has said to people at the time that these jobs are guaranteed, that these jobs are going to be sustained.

Now, it seems to me that the McGuinty government had a choice. When you handed over $400 million, you could have insisted on strong job guarantees and you could have insisted on some clawback provisions. Why, if the McGuinty government says it cares about these workers, didn't you insist on strong job guarantees, and why didn't you insist on clawback provisions to protect those workers from being laid off and being put out on the street?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Let me assure this House and all auto workers who work for all of our assemblers, this Ontario government stands behind the auto sector. It is what made our manufacturing sector strong and has fed the nation in its GDP output for decades, and just now, when they are under fire around the world, this is exactly when these folks need to see that there is a government that stands behind them and prepared to invest, as they will invest again.

We recognize more than most that we are having a challenging year. We recognize, too, that our investments are what will lead to a better automotive sector: more productive, more innovation, better technology and higher automation. These are going to be the things that see us through. When we speak about General Motors, Ford or Chrysler, we've been through tough times before. But I suggest that this member ask Buzz Hargrove—surely you've had time to talk to him since Monday—and ask him how he feels about the Ontario government's role. He who really speaks—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

1110

MANUFACTURING JOBS

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Deputy Premier: New Democrats simply believe that if the McGuinty government is going to make $100-million investments in companies, you have a duty to the workers who work there to get some job guarantees that workers are in fact going to benefit. But what we've seen is the McGuinty government is handing out hundreds of millions of dollars with no job guarantees.

My question to the Deputy Premier: Can the Deputy Premier tell us how many other companies received provincial money and then turned around and announced job cuts, worker layoffs?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Economic Development and Trade.

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I think, or at least I would hope, that the member opposite has watched very carefully the kinds of programs that this government has come forward with in our entire first term, with a serious focus on manufacturing Ontario, understanding where our strength is and also recognizing the partnership with industry, as they face challenges that they have never seen aligned like this before: a very high price for a barrel of oil, a very high and strong Canadian dollar, and a weakening US market, where 80% of all of our products across sectors go to the United States. That means that when we step forward, it's to help our companies be innovative, be more productive and understand the world challenges that they face. That is where we have put our funding on the table: to help bring those investments that need more productivity to be more competitive. Does that mean that we're not still going to face challenges in these sectors? Of course it does. Any one of you who knows this sector would know that's the case. We will backstop our manufacturing sector, because we will be strong again. That is something I expect from opposition benches—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. Supplementary?

Mr. Howard Hampton: I'm still waiting for an answer to the question, but let me help the minister out. In May 2007, she announced a $2.5-million subsidized loan to Skyjack, a subsidiary of Linamar, another large multinational corporation. The minister said at the time: "We are partnering with Ontario's most innovative companies to generate new jobs and investment in the province." In December, Linamar announced that Skyjack would be laying off workers in Guelph. Last week, they announced that more workers at Skyjack were laid off, over 100 workers now. Tell me, does the minister think that was a good deal for those workers? The company gets government money, and workers get pushed out the door. Do you think that was a good deal for the workers?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I would hope that this member opposite took the time to understand exactly what our funding with Linamar was to do—Linamar, an international company with a footprint in many countries around the world, but housed right here in Ontario. This is a company that came to the government saying: “We can have a centre of excellence for the production of new products developed right here in Ontario, an R&D facility where we can take products and develop and commercialize them for sale around the world.”

These are the kinds of projects that our government stands behind, because we recognize that we are an export jurisdiction. So I ask the members opposite: When we understand the challenges in manufacturing due to a whole variety of factors that we wish we could control but can't, do we stand behind manufacturers? Do we stand behind them in ways that will make them stronger in the future? I say the answer is yes, we do.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I think what the minister just admitted is, yes, the McGuinty government gives $2.5 million to the international corporation, and 100 workers go out the door, and the McGuinty government is fine with that.

Let me ask you about a couple of others. FibraTech, a company in Atikokan, received $5.6 million in provincial grants and loan guarantees. On October 11, 2007, the day after the provincial election, the company suddenly went into receivership—another 100 jobs gone.

North American Charters received $2 million in provincial grants and loan guarantees to build a three-storey building in the Thunder Bay airport. The building is empty, the company is gone and workers are out of work. Koolatron received $2.3 million in provincial loan guarantees and then laid off workers. I'm asking you again, is this the McGuinty government strategy: millions of dollars for corporations, while workers get pushed out the door?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: When members of his party and the official opposition would name particular companies, it became very clear that they in fact did not present the facts at committee, nor are they presenting the facts today in the House. That is really unfair to companies who are trying to move through some very challenging times—just like the numbers that they purport to bring into this House in fact are inaccurate, and every one of those job numbers that they get wrong means families that worry about whether they will have a job in the future. It is no thanks to this party whether they would have any look to the future for their sector.

This is in fact the only government, in the absence of federal support, where we can truly say that we support our manufacturing sector. We recognize and will stand with them even in these challenging times, because our manufacturers will be strong again. That, they can take to the bank.

ENDANGERED SPECIES

Mr. Norm Miller: I have a question for the Minister of Natural Resources. Minister, in 2007 your government promised the Ontario Forestry Coalition—and that includes municipal leaders, First Nation communities, chambers of commerce, labour unions and industry—that your Endangered Species Act would complement the already significant stringent regulatory framework the industry follows.

Your then-Minister of Natural Resources said steps would be taken to provide a section 55 regulation that offers “specific recognition of the Crown Forest Sustainability Act and forest management plans as equivalent processes which plan for species at risk.”

Minister, have you honoured your commitment to our vital forestry sector by putting in place a long-term regulation recognizing that the current forest management in Ontario is world-class and meets all the objectives of the Endangered Species Act?

Hon. Donna H. Cansfield: I'm pleased to respond to the question by the member from Parry Sound. We've been working very closely with the forest industry. As you know, the Endangered Species Act comes into effect at the end of June 2008. We recognize our first obligation, of course, is to those species that are at risk, threatened or endangered. Every day, some 600 species are made extinct on this planet.

It is our responsibility and, I would suggest, our obligation to ensure wherever possible to work with our industries and with our companies—actually, with everyone in Ontario—to ensure we do everything we can to protect those species that are threatened or endangered. In fact, as I said, it is our obligation to do so.

We will continue to work with the forest industry. There is no question that excellent progress has been made through the forest management plan and we will continue to work with them as we integrate the species at risk into the forest management plan.

Mr. Norm Miller: Minister, you didn't really answer my question. Previously, your government said you would recognize the work that the forestry sector does. Now, they say you're breaking your word. They are saying the government has gone back on its word. They're saying that you're putting in place an unnecessary duplicate layer of red tape that will not only suck up more resources and revenues from a struggling industry, but, in fact, puts the entire forest industry sector on its knees.

In fact, Jamie Lim, president of the Ontario Forest Industry Association says: “The government needs to honour its commitment to 230,000 working families and develop a long-term regulation that recognizes the efficacy of the Crown Forest Sustainability Act and forest management plans in protecting endangered and threatened species and avoids the creation of crippling process that would bring the forestry industry to its knees.”

Minister, will you honour your commitment to our proud forestry-based communities and to the forest industry?

Hon. Donna H. Cansfield: Without question, the Premier was very clear that we will integrate the Endangered Species Act into the forest management plan. I believe we can coexist. We do have an obligation to both—not to one in spite of the other, but to both—to the species that are at risk and to the industry. We have clear indication that many companies are already doing a phenomenal job of doing exactly that and I think a good example is the bald eagle. At no time will we put one at risk of the other. We can sit down, work through and manage to do what we need to do to coexist with species at risk and with industry.

DIALYSIS

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: My question is for the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. I would like to know, when does the minister intend to expand nocturnal home hemodialysis to residents of northern Ontario?

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to thank the honourable member for the question. I've heard about this matter a lot from the member for Sudbury, and his advocacy on behalf of his constituents has been extraordinary.

I do want to correct an impression that is sometimes advanced that this is a service that is advanced in southern Ontario and not in the north. This is actually not accurate. It's relatively available in very few places, but we do plan to make improvements on that. I don't have all the details at hand, but I can tell the honourable member that I've worked on these issues even this week and hope, in a matter of a relatively few short months, to be in a position to make announcements that would expand the capacity to support people with advanced kidney disease and the associated challenges that mean they need dialysis in a variety of forms. Advancing nocturnal dialysis most certainly is a priority amongst those, and I look forward to working with all members of the House on its expansion for the benefit of our constituents.

1120

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: Residents of northern Ontario, such as my constituents Homer Seguin and Richard St. Amour, have been urging the ministry to expand nocturnal dialysis to Sudbury for years. Groups such as the Sudbury Health Coalition, which represents over 20,000 people in the Sudbury area, have urged the minister to fund nocturnal dialysis at Sudbury Regional Hospital.

The minister claimed that the government cannot afford the program in northern Ontario. This completely ignores the benefit of nocturnal dialysis and is a signal to northerners that they should accept second-class health care services. Nocturnal dialysis has been available in southern Ontario for many, many years. Why is the minister refusing to provide nocturnal dialysis to residents of northern Ontario now and to force northerners to accept second-class health care services?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's very unfortunate that in light of the answer I gave, the honourable member still chose to read a second question that frankly bears a long way from reality. It is not that there is widespread access to nocturnal dialysis in southern Ontario; that's not an appropriate perception. I know that it is advanced sometimes in the north.

It isn't about two tiers or two classes; it's about making an advance in the province of Ontario that offers the benefits—which I agree with—in terms of nocturnal dialysis much more broadly to Ontarians, in all parts of our province. There are sporadic programs indeed, but overall this is an area where we have a strong opportunity to make an advance in a way that is good for health care because you don't have to build a building and is very good, of course, for the clients because they can get the care at home and aren't disrupted by going into satellite dialysis.

I can tell the honourable member: Since 2003, we've invested more than 158 million new dollars to expand access to dialysis. We have more work to do on nocturnal dialysis, and efforts on that front are forthcoming.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

Mr. Khalil Ramal: My question is to the Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services. Minister, as my riding of London-Fanshawe is along the 400-series corridor, my staff and I, and of course the citizens of my area, including my constituents, spend a lot of time driving these highways to join with tens of thousands of other motorists as we drive back and forth across the province. The 400-series highways are among the busiest roadways anywhere in the world, with more than 420,000 vehicles making use of them each day. As you know, a lot of crazy drivers are driving this highway and cause a lot of accidents and cause a lot of damage to many other passengers and drivers. Minister, unfortunately the long weekend is especially dangerous for many drivers, and I heard that you funded the OPP for a special plan to make sure our highways are very safe. Can you tell the House and tell—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: I want to thank the member for the question.

Listen: Highway safety is vital to everyone in this House. We all encourage and agree that we have to promote safety on our highways. That's why, just recently, we introduced the new aircraft enforcement program. It's an excellent program that allows the OPP, in a Cessna 206, to observe the highway patterns, the driving patterns, from about 2,500 feet.

Let me encourage every Ontarian to drive safely, to follow the speed limit on this long weekend, to drive defensively, because at the end of the day, we want what everyone wants: safety on our highways.

Let me tell the people of Ontario: I was up in the plane just recently. The eye in the sky will catch you if you're a reckless driver or a speeding driver.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: Hopefully this new tool will encourage those who would fly along the highway to put a curb on their reckless behaviour. I hear on occasion from frustrated constituents who try to report such careless drivers, only to see them pull off the highway or out of sight before they can get a full description of the offending vehicle. This plan will allow for the police to monitor these individuals more carefully.

Can you tell us what the government is doing to make sure those people will be monitored and pulled off the highway to make sure our highways are safe for the many people who enjoy driving back and forth or to go to work? I think it's a good initiative, but I want to ask the minister to tell us more about this initiative and how we can make sure all these people are monitored and pulled off the highway.

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: I refer to this the Minister of Transportation.

Hon. James J. Bradley: Even though Ontario was declared to have the second-safest highways in all of North America in the last figures available, behind only the Northwest Territories, there's much more that has to be done, without a doubt. For instance, let's give an idea of what consequences people could face.

Any driver found stunt driving or driving over 50 kilometres an hour over the speed limit has the vehicle impounded on the spot and the licence revoked for a seven-day period, and if convicted of racing, can face a maximum fine of up to $10,000, the highest in Canada. When it comes to impaired driving, one of the sanctions is that they can have a 90-day licence suspension for drivers who blow over the legal limit and other consequences.

I also recommend that people listen to Sergeant Cam Woolley on the weekend and other police officers—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you very much.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is for the Minister of Health. I regret that you and your government have been unable to grasp the seriousness of the C. difficile outbreak and the fact that more than 120 people have died as a result. Those are just the ones that we know about.

Recently Dr. Allison McGeer, director of infection control at Toronto's Mount Sinai, stated: "We've had hundreds of preventable deaths in Ontario because of C. difficile.... Joe Brant makes it clear that we do not have an adequate handle on the situation."

Minister, today our leader, John Tory, sent a letter to your Premier asking for an independent investigation into the widening C. difficile tragedy to determine what happened, why and where. Will you today, immediately, commit to appoint an investigator to take a look at this situation?

Hon. George Smitherman: No, it's not the intention of our government to do that, in large measure influenced by the fact that a coroner's inquest which is, I think everybody would agree, quite independent has been conducted very recently into events which occurred at Soo area hospitals in Sault Ste. Marie, which bear rather too much resemblance, frankly, to the circumstances that have occurred and been publicized very dramatically recently in the Burlington community.

We think it's more important to get on with the action of implementation of the recommendations and building on the efforts that we've made so far. At Joe Brant hospital, we've had two infectious control officials, paid by the Ministry of Health, who have been there. We've initiated a substantial hand hygiene initiative in the province. We formed the provincial infectious disease advisory committee, created 14 infection control networks and more than doubled funding for public health in the province of Ontario. We know that there's a great degree of necessary vigilance on the part of those who operate our hospitals. We'll be working alongside them to enhance protection—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: We know that our hospitals work as hard as they can. However, they can't do much if they don't have the support of the Ministry of Health and the appropriate resources.

Considering that more people have died from C. difficile—those are only the ones that we know about—than SARS, I ask you again, will you launch an immediate province-wide investigation into the C. difficile outbreaks in our hospitals and report back to this Legislature in 90 days? You owe it to the hundreds of family members who have lost loved ones, and you owe it to those individuals that you are putting in risk if you don't undertake this type of investigation now.

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member is on the one hand asking me to initiate an independent investigation and then commit today to returning within 90 days to report on what that independent investigation would look like. She earlier used the word "inquiry," and we all know those don't happen in 90 days.

The point is that a matter of urgency is there. It's being addressed substantively by the people on the front lines who run hospital organizations, but we'll be enhancing these efforts by moving for mandatory reporting of C. difficile as one of a wide range of indicators, and we'll be looking to establish clearer leadership, from the ministry standpoint, that can help to drive these initiatives in the hospitals.

1130

But the honourable member's credibility on these points where she asks for additional resources really runs up against the reality, which is that more often they're asking for health care spending to be reduced by $3 billion through the elimination of the health premium.

I do accept that this is a big challenge for health care. We have the capacity to get on with it and to make progress on behalf of our patients. We will not delay it for a review to do that. We'll work relentlessly to implement the recommendations that have been advanced already from the coroners' investigations.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: We have never said we're going to cut health care spending.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I remind the member that it's not a point of order. The issue was raised and I responded to it in a prior question period.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: My question is for the Minister of Community and Social Services. I'm delighted today to have Teddy Paterson and his parents, John and Sylvia, here from my riding in the Speaker's gallery. Teddy was born with cerebral palsy, and John and Sylvia have been his loving and willing caregivers since birth. But in an all too familiar case, the immense cost of Teddy's support is crushing this family.

Teddy is going to graduate from high school soon. We're really proud of that, but he will require full-time assistant care. We're speaking here of 24 hours a day, seven days a week. He's not even able to operate a power chair. So my question for the minister is, what is her ministry prepared to do to help Teddy stay at home with his family?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: Merci beaucoup pour cette question. First of all, I wanted to commend the parents for the good service that they provide to their son. I know that it's very challenging. I want to let you know that this government is working towards helping families like yours with your challenge, to provide the best service that they can for you to be able to keep your son at home.

That's why, under our leadership, we have started this passport program. The passport program is exactly for that: to help, to support parents and to buy services for their loved one to keep them at home, or to provide them with services that are already offered in the community. This afternoon, this government is going to introduce new legislation that will enhance the service to those with developmental disabilities.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: The minister knows all too well that there are over 5,000 families on waiting lists—and so is Teddy—for that very program. We have written letters to this minister and to the Minister of Health, and so has the family. We get letters back, but never any answers. We're asking you to meet with this family and actually look at their particular case. This hasn't happened, and this family is not being serviced.

Teddy doesn't want to go into an institution. What this government is doing is placing more and more young people in institutions, with people three times their age. We know that the minimum standard of care there is not even 3.5 hours a day. He needs 24-hour-a-day care, seven days a week.

So I'm going to ask again, and I would like an answer this time for Teddy—not a bureaucratic answer, but an answer for Teddy: Why won't this minister commit to this family so that they can look after Teddy at home?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: First of all, every case of developmental disability or handicap is being evaluated for the services that they need. I cannot, standing here in this room, say that he will get this or he will get that. Every case is being evaluated.

This new legislation that we're bringing about will have a standard tool for assisting a case like this. I can say to you today that this government, every time we move forward with putting in money to improve the quality of service for those with developmental disabilities or the handicap—this party was always standing up and voting with the Conservatives against everything we offered.

NURSES

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: My question is for the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. Minister, I know that you have been busy attending events and announcements to celebrate Nursing Week. I want to thank the nurses who work so hard in my riding of Hamilton Mountain, as well as nurses right across this province, who keep us healthy.

Minister, I have heard from some people who are concerned about retaining our new nursing graduates. What are you doing to make sure that our new nurses aren't leaving the province or country to find jobs?

Hon. George Smitherman: I want to thank the honourable member from Hamilton for her excellent question. One of the biggest challenges health care faced for a long time was that graduating nurses didn't get an opportunity to transition easily into full-time work. With last year's institution of the new graduate guarantee, we've made enormous strides. Thirty-two hundred new nursing graduates participated last year and, of them, 86% transitioned to full-time employment. Indeed, as I've been in a variety of health care settings this week, I've had the chance to meet so many of the impressive new nurses. In Hamilton alone there are 252 new nurses who have graduated into full-time employment—178 at Hamilton Health Sciences, three at St. Peter's and 71 at St. Joseph's health care—meaning that through the new graduate guarantee, with $90 million a year of provincial government funding, we've solved one of the biggest problems, where we didn't take proper advantage of the skills of our newly minted nurses. We've made great strides and those improvements are paying results for patients and health care in Ontario.

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I know how valuable nurses are to our health care system and their importance to our community, whether they are delivering care in a hospital, long-term-care home, in the community or any other location. In fact, next Tuesday I too will have the privilege of job-shadowing some of our nurses in the community.

Minister, I've heard concerns from my constituents about a shortage of nurses in Ontario. What are you doing to make sure that Ontario has access to enough nurses and that nurses currently in the profession are receiving the support they deserve?

Hon. George Smitherman: The data from the College of Nurses of Ontario demonstrate that there are thousands more nurses working on the front lines of health care. We want to continue to build on that progress.

Of course, the new graduate guarantee is a foundation of success, because it means we don't lose our nurses to other jurisdictions. We intend over the next three years to invest more than five hundred million new dollars to create opportunities headed toward 9,000 additional nursing positions. This represents 17.5 million annual hours of additional service to the patients of the province of Ontario. In addition, working with nurse practitioners, we've created a very exciting new role—the first one of these is in Sudbury—of the nurse-practitioner-led family health care clinic. In addition, we're going to dedicate ourselves, working with the Ministry of Labour, to enhancing the workplace safety circumstances for our nurses. There are improvements that we can make in making healthier workplaces, and this is going to be a big priority in sustaining our nursing workforce.

TOURISM

Mr. Ted Arnott: My question is for the Minister of Tourism. The Victoria holiday weekend is upon us, and this is traditionally the beginning of the summer travel season in Ontario. What new initiatives can the Minister of Tourism announce today to provide leadership and give the industry hope as the summer begins? And what specifically is the government going to do to welcome back American tourists to our province?

Hon. Peter Fonseca: I thank the member for Wellington-Halton Hills for the question and the opportunity to share with this House all that's happening in tourism in the province of Ontario. First, our government is very committed to a vital and sustainable tourism industry. Two days ago I was up in Wasaga Beach, and we were announcing $100,000 to PR the great Wasaga Beach. What a great family outing over that long weekend—the longest freshwater beach in the world. They see over two million visitors. We want to make sure that they continue to break records, to get more than two million visitors up there. We have a great cultural renaissance going on in this city: going to the ROM, the AGO, the Gardiner Museum. There is so much to do and see in Ontario.

Mr. Ted Arnott: The question was, what are you going to do to bring back the American tourist? It appears from the answer that the government has written off the American tourist market, which has traditionally been the mainstay of our tourism and hospitality industry. That important industry is facing multiple blows from a strong Canadian dollar, high gasoline prices and confusion at the border. The fewer tourists who are visiting are less satisfied with their experience here, according to the recent Toronto tourism report. In the five years since the McGuinty Liberal government has been in power, they have neglected Ontario's tourism industry in its time of need. When will this government take effective action so that Ontario regains its status as a destination of choice for the world?

Hon. Peter Fonseca: This government is very committed. In our fall economic statement, we pledged another investment of $30 million to be able to promote this magnificent province and to those key markets in the United States.

We have a terrific marketing campaign—There's No Place Like This. It's been a huge success. Many of us, hopefully all of us, have seen it on TV. It's run in Detroit, Buffalo, New York, Boston. We are getting those American visitors to see all the great offerings that we have here in Ontario.

Our greatest market is actually within. We want Ontarians to travel and be tourists in your own town. Some 89 million tourist visits happen in and around Ontario.

1140

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Howard Hampton: My question is for the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs. Minister, Neskantaga First Nation sent a notice to your government and the mining industry asking that mining exploration companies meet with the First Nation before staking mining claims. Company X complied with Neskantaga's request and began a consultation process. Another company, Temex Resources, completely disregarded the First Nation, went on their traditional territory, started cutting lines and staking claims, even after the First Nation requested them to stop. The McGuinty government recorded the mining claim of Temex Resources, the company which shows no respect for the First Nation. The other company, which tried to show respect for the First Nation, is out in the cold. Is this the McGuinty government's idea of a mining exploration process that is fair to First Nations and fair to mining exploration companies that respect First Nations?

Hon. Michael Bryant: I can't speak to the specifics. I'm sure the member will understand. I know that the Minister of Mines would be in possession of that information. But I certainly can speak to the approach that has to take place, and as a starting point, it should be very similar to the one that the Assembly of First Nations signed with the Prospectors and Developers Association, which in fact did involve the appropriate level of consultation.

There have to be changes to the Mining Act—and the minister of mines and the Premier have said that—and we are going to change the Mining Act. As the member knows, it's over 100 years old. So we will consult with First Nations as we do the important work that has to be done to make the changes to the Mining Act in order to ensure that we, yes, support First Nations economic development, support the mining industry, but also support the rights of First Nations and Metis people.

Mr. Howard Hampton: Here's the reality: The McGuinty government talks; meanwhile, companies that actually want to show respect for First Nation rights and interests get pushed to the back, and companies that show no respect for First Nations get their mining claims recorded by the McGuinty government.

This is how the chief and council at Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug wind up in jail—because they're dealing with a company that showed no respect. This is how the chief of Ardock First Nation winds up in jail—because they're dealing with a company that shows no respect.

This is not just a provincial issue anymore. The Financial Times, last week, ran an article pointing out the injustices of the mining exploration system under the McGuinty government.

When are we going to hear the end of talk and see some action from the McGuinty government? When are you going to stop giving companies that don't respect First Nations first chance at mining claims?

Hon. Michael Bryant: The member has asked questions before about the need for governments to consult with First Nations and engage in collaboration and consultation, and in fact that's why we are doing that with respect to the changes to the Mining Act. A unilateral approach, where the government just said, "Okay, here's what we're doing," may have been the approach many years ago, but it's not the approach that is undertaken today.

It's with that in mind that the government today announced the very important, I think, historic agreement to set up a new relationship fund, a $25-million fund over the next two years that will provide First Nations and Metis people with the ability and the capacity to engage in the very negotiations that we need to engage in and the consultations that we need to engage in in order to make the very changes that the member wishes to make.

AIR QUALITY

Mr. David Oraziatti: My question is for the Minister of Environment. Recently, I had the opportunity to attend a public meeting in my community regarding environmental issues and emissions from Algoma Steel. Residents in Sault Ste. Marie are concerned about the air quality in our community. They want assurances that additional pollution control mechanisms will be on facilities at Algoma Steel. As the minister knows, I've raised the issue with him, his office and MOE staff on several occasions over the past few months. Minister, residents want to know, what steps will be taken to improve the air quality in the Soo and area?

Hon. John Gerretsen: First of all, I want to compliment this member on being very persistent and having raised this issue with me and the MOE staff on a number of occasions. I also want to compliment him on how he's worked constructively with our MOE staff in Sault Ste. Marie and the representatives from Algoma Steel, as well, on ensuring that Algoma Steel is in compliance with our government's tough air pollution regulations prior to the plant expansion.

Algoma has a recent initiative to install temporary baghouses, and we will be continuing to work with them to encourage further environmental improvements in the future.

As I told this member previously when he raised this concern with me, the ministry is continuing to work very closely with Algoma Steel and community organizations to ensure compliance with the ministry standards and provide reports and background information to the local communities.

As a matter of fact, Algoma Steel is holding two public meetings next week and I encourage people to attend. Ministry officials will be—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary.

Mr. David Oraziatti: Minister, as you're aware, Algoma Steel intends to restart blast furnace number 6. While my community certainly welcomes the proposed expansion at the steel plant, which will bring additional jobs and economic benefits, they want to know that safeguards will be in place before development occurs.

This is about air quality in the immediate area. Residents deserve the opportunity to voice their opinions and concerns before this project gets any approval from the ministry. I can tell you that what they will want to know is that the furnace will not be restarted until appropriate pollution control mechanisms are in place and that there's a certificate of approval that will protect the air quality in the community.

Will the ministry ensure that if this goes ahead, there will be the necessary pollution controls in place?

Hon. John Gerretsen: As the member knows, the process for certificates of approval for Algoma Steel to restart blast furnace number 6 is currently underway. I can assure him that the ministry staff will review the application to ensure that the plans for pollution control equipment will result in improvement of the air quality for the area residents.

He can also be assured that regardless of the local federal member's actions, the decision reached by the independent Ministry of the Environment officials will be based on sound scientific assessments rather than political rhetoric.

Regulation 419 sets out air quality standards that industries across Ontario must meet. Those air quality standards have been improved in 57 different ways over the last couple of years.

The member can tell his community that details of the application will be posted on the EBR registry for public review and comment.

Once again, I encourage everyone who is interested to submit public comments when the application is posted because the ministry will review and consider closely any comments that have been made.

SCHOOL TRANSPORTATION

Mr. John Yakabuski: My question is for the Minister of Education.

I've raised the issue of rural school transportation funding repeatedly, and the minister continues to ignore it. I recently warned her by letter that the day was fast approaching when her inaction and broken promises could lead to a loss of school busing in my riding entirely. Yesterday, school bus operators in Renfrew county said in a press release that "school buses in Renfrew county may be a thing of the past."

Despite the minister's promise to change it, she continues to support a transportation funding formula that severely punishes rural school operators. When will the minister abandon her plan to sit and wait while school bus operators have to decide whether they can afford to stay in business or not? Bring forth a fair funding formula now.

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I have been exceedingly clear in this House and with the school bus operators and with school boards that we're committed to providing funding so that small operators as well as the large operators can stay in business.

We have increased funding by 29% to school bus transportation since we came into office. We're working with the school bus operators.

I've been very clear that in the go-forward we are committed to making sure that small school bus operators—and the School Bus Operators' Association of Ontario knows that. They've met with me, they've sat with me, and they're encouraged that we're moving down this road. They're part of the process, they're feeding into the process, and we are committed to keeping those small operators, as well as the larger operators, in business.

1150

Mr. John Yakabuski: Minister, that is a load of you-know-what. She talks about increased money; school bus operators talk about skyrocketing costs—licensing fees, insurance, and fuel costs that have gone up 57% since last September. You know what they got from you? This year, it was 1.35%, with all of those expenses going up.

You continue to support a formula that treats urban school bus operators much more fairly than rural school bus operators. You are ultimately jeopardizing all rural school bus operators in this province, particularly those in Renfrew county, and ultimately you are jeopardizing the safety of children. Do something about this formula now or suffer the consequences. Take responsibility for what happens on your watch.

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: That was quite a performance. In fact, we just invested another $10 million in the wages of school bus operators. We also provided $15.4 million to deal with the rising cost of fuel. I am well aware that the school bus operators in this province need to have a fair deal. They need to be able to work with government and work with school boards in order to drive the thousands of children every day that they do.

I want to say that we owe a debt of gratitude to the school bus drivers in this province. They are terrific people, and I don't think that they are well served by the kind of bluster that we're hearing from across the way. What they need is a minister and a government that's willing to work with them to make sure they have a fair wage and fair cost benchmarks. That's what we're doing in the interests of the kids in this province.

LEGISLATIVE PAGES

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to ask all members to join me. This is the final day within the Legislature for our wonderful group of pages. We want to say thank you for the great service they've provided to each and every one of us. We wish all of you all the best in your future endeavours. We trust that one day you will be here and you will have learned from your experience. When you are here, you will help to bring a new sense of decorum to this wonderful chamber.

Let's thank them all very much.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: The former pages who were here before know better.

VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I just want to remind members as well—the changes that took place regarding the introductions: I am but a servant of this House. I do what the standing orders ask me to do. I would encourage you to talk to your own respective House leaders or the government House leader if you have some issues dealing with introductions.

PETITIONS

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Norm Miller: I have a petition to do with maintaining the Lord's Prayer in the Ontario Legislature. It reads:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I support this petition.

HOME CARE

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: It gives me great pleasure to introduce this petition of SEIU and the people of Brampton:

"Whereas the Ontario government has continued the practice of competitive bidding for home care services; and

"Whereas the competitive bidding process has increased the privatization of Ontario's health care delivery, in direct violation of the Commitment to the Future of Medicare Act, 2004; and

"Whereas competitive bidding for home care services has decreased both the continuity and quality of care available to home care clients; and

"Whereas home care workers do not enjoy the same employment rights, such as successor rights, as all other Ontario workers have, which deprives them of termination rights, seniority rights and the right to move with their work when their employer agency loses a contract;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"We call on the government of Ontario:

"(1) to immediately stop the competitive bidding for home care services so home care clients can receive the continuity and quality of care they deserve; and

"(2) to extend successor rights under the Labour Relations Act to home care workers to ensure the home care sector is able to retain a workforce that is responsive to clients' needs."

I fully support this petition, will affix my name to it and send it with page Evelyn.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly. I'd like to thank Dr. Tom Short for sending this to me, and also his patients for having signed it. It reads as follows:

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I thank those who signed the petition. I'd like to sign and support it and ask page Emily to carry it for me.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jim Wilson: I want to thank the members of the congregation of the Lighthouse in Wasaga Beach for sending this petition to me.

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I've signed this petition and I agree with it.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the growing number of unlawful firearms in motor vehicles is threatening innocent citizens and our police officers;

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and being found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I agree with this, and I put my signature and give it to page Emily.

LORD'S PRAYER

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member from Durham.

Mr. John O'Toole: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Someone in the second row getting recognized this soon is surprising and rewarding.

I'm pleased to read a petition from my constituents in the riding of Durham, which reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its rightful place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition: It is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I'm pleased to present it to page Hannah on her last day here at Queen's Park.

1200

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas it is important to ensure that the new birthing unit at Centenary hospital, a $20-million expansion that will see 16 new labour, delivery, recovery and postpartum (LDRP) birthing rooms and an additional 21 postpartum rooms added by October 2008, will not cause any decline in the pediatric services currently provided at the Ajax-Pickering hospital; and

"Whereas, the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government—it is important to continue to have a complete maternity unit at the Ajax hospital; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for the Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding; and

"Whereas the parents of Ajax and Pickering deserve the right to have their children born in their own community, where they have chosen to live and work;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service; and

"That our Ajax-Pickering hospital now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain its full maternity unit."

I will affix my signature to that and pass it to Emily.

HEALTH CARD RENEWAL CLINIC

Mr. Tim Hudak: I'm pleased to present a petition about bringing health card renewal services closer to Glanbrook residents.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas seniors, the disabled, families with young children and other Mount Hope and Binbrook residents are forced to drive to downtown Hamilton to renew their Ontario health cards; and

"Whereas the province of Ontario mandates that health cards be renewed on a regular basis and that an Ontario health card must be presented to receive OHIP health services; and

"Whereas the Dalton McGuinty government has increased taxes and fees on local residents but has not improved services;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"To work with the Ontario Ministry of Health to bring a mobile health card renewal clinic to the Mount Hope and Binbrook area so that residents can more readily renew their Ontario health cards without the drive to downtown Hamilton."

In support, I affix my signature.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mrs. Laura Albanese: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the growing number of unlawful firearms in motor vehicles is threatening innocent citizens and our police officers; and

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I agree with this petition. I therefore affix my signature and pass it to page Hannah.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mrs. Julia Munro: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I affix my signature to this as I'm in complete agreement, and I've given it to Jillian.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have a petition today from Kathy Moorehead, who lives at 1560 Carrington Road in Mississauga.

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I agree with this petition and will affix my name to it.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Mr. Jim Wilson: "Whereas the legacy of Pope John Paul II reflects his lifelong commitment to international understanding, peace and the defence of equality and human rights;

"Whereas his legacy has an all-embracing meaning that is particularly relevant to Canada's multi-faith and multicultural traditions;

"Whereas, as one of the great spiritual leaders of contemporary times, Pope John Paul II visited Ontario during his pontificate of more than 25 years and, on his visits, was enthusiastically greeted by Ontario's diverse religious and cultural communities;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario to grant speedy passage into law of the private member's bill ... An Act to proclaim Pope John Paul II Day."

I agree with this petition and I have signed it.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: A second petition in reference to the Ajax-Pickering hospital:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network ... has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital"—I'm going to just cut to the quick on some of this because of the time allocation—"this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary" unit; and

That "would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I will affix my signature and pass this to Hannah.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Mr. Tim Hudak: I'm pleased to present a petition calling for the creation of Pope John Paul II Day. It reads as follows

"Whereas the legacy of Pope John Paul II reflects his lifelong commitment to international understanding, peace and the defence of equality and human rights;

"Whereas his legacy has an all-embracing meaning that is particularly relevant to Canada's multi-faith and multicultural traditions;

"Whereas, as one of the great spiritual leaders of contemporary times, Pope John Paul II visited Ontario during his pontificate of more than 25 years and, on his visits, was enthusiastically greeted by Ontario's diverse religious and cultural communities; and

"Whereas Bill 194, the Pope John Paul II Day Act, 2007 did not pass before the Legislature was adjourned three weeks early for summer recess;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly as follows:

"That the Legislative Assembly of Ontario designate a day as Pope John Paul II Day in honour of his extraordinary contribution to our communities."

In support, I affix my signature. This petition was sent by Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church in St. Catharines.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions has expired. This House stands recessed until 1 p.m. this afternoon.

The House recessed from 1208 to 1300.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

ALLISTON HORNETS HOCKEY TEAM

Mr. Jim Wilson: I rise to congratulate the Alliston Hornets hockey team for winning the all-Ontario 2008 Ontario Hockey Association's Schmalz Cup, an accomplishment that no other Alliston junior C hockey team has been able to do in the hockey club's 37-year history.

The Hornet's historic season came to an end the night of May 3, in the sudden-death overtime of game seven against the Essex 73's of the Great Lakes, when an unassisted goal scored by the Hornet's Kyle Brossard brought home the win to Alliston. This outstanding victory is evidence of the team's incredible dedication to the game of hockey and to sportsmanship.

In addition to the respect the players have earned throughout our community for their win, they are also being praised by opposing teams, coaches and fans for their performance on and off the ice. The team's clean and positive approach has gained them an admirable reputation throughout Ontario.

On behalf of the residents of Simcoe-Grey, I want to commend the team for the immeasurable amount of time, commitment and sacrifice made toward their sport. This accomplishment is something to be admired. They should all be very proud of themselves for a job well done.

The town of New Tecumseth is hosting a congratulatory party for the Hornets on Saturday, May 24 at the New Tecumseth Recreation Centre. I want everyone to know that they are more than welcome to come out and join in the celebration.

BOYS AND GIRLS CLUBS OF CANADA

Mr. Paul Miller: On behalf of the Ontario NDP, I'm honoured to welcome the Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada to Hamilton for their biannual national conference, from May 21 to May 24. This year's conference, entitled Champions: Out in Front for Children and Youth, is being hosted by my constituency group, the Hamilton East Kiwanis Boys and Girls Club. In support of the 2008 national conference, my colleague from Hamilton Centre, Andrea Horwath, and my federal counterpart for Hamilton East-Stoney Creek, Wayne Marston, will be attending and promoting a number of conference events.

For over 60 years, the Hamilton East Kiwanis Boys and Girls Club has provided recreational and social development programs for youth in Hamilton. Their efforts to level the playing field and make their programs accessible and affordable to all children are a model for other organizations. I am always very pleased to support the Hamilton East Kiwanis Boys and Girls Club because they stand for many of the same core values I uphold in my riding: inclusion, opportunity, respect, belonging, empowerment, collaboration and speaking out.

As well as welcoming the Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada participants to Hamilton for their 2008 national conference, I encourage all members of this House to contact their local boys' and girls' clubs to wish them the best during their upcoming conference. After all, we are working very hard in Hamilton to make our city the best place to raise a child. I know that you will want to send the same message to your communities.

GOOD SHEPHERD

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I would like to tell you about an organization in my community of Hamilton called the Good Shepherd. The Good Shepherd is a social service agency in Hamilton. They live by the motto, "Charity Unlimited ... Never Stop Loving." It is with this spirit that the brothers of Good Shepherd continue to help those that need it in our city. Through their hard work and commitment, they help troubled youth, abused women and children, the mentally and physically challenged, the hungry and the homeless.

Earlier this week, Minister McMeekin and I had the honour of welcoming the Minister of Community and Social Services to Hamilton to announce a $5-million investment that will go towards building the Good Shepherd's women's centre. This funding will allow the Good Shepherd to continue to enhance the quality of life for women and children who seek assistance and support.

I would like to thank the minister for her continued commitment to organizations such as the Good Shepherd and for always recognizing how important these organizations are to our communities. I would also like to take a moment to recognize Brother Richard of the Good Shepherd for continuously addressing the needs of our community and supporting our residents.

C. DIFFICILE

Ms. Laurie Scott: I rise with full respect to the families of the victims of C. difficile in health facilities across Ontario. Today, the Minister of Health flatly rejected Ontario's Ombudsman, who has said that the minister's response to this outbreak has been inexcusably lax and deserves a public inquiry.

It should be noted that the minister has taken a completely opposite direction than the one he has in the past. In June 2003, George Smitherman is quoted: "There is no good excuse to reject the idea of a public inquiry." His response today is much different.

There's more. In March 2004, Mr. Smitherman said: "Ontarians are smart people and deserve to know the facts." Today, when asked if he is willing to share the facts with Ontarians through an inquiry, he refused.

This C. difficile outbreak, which the minister has chosen to ignore, has claimed more lives than the SARS outbreak in 2003, when Mr. Smitherman stated: "It's critically important that at a time and age where we know that there will be more complex situations like this that confront us, we take every advantage that we can, that we reach out to all of those who have a voice and we hear of their problems and we take them seriously and we act to address those concerns, not in some review where nobody knows who's asking what questions and under what mandate, but under a commission of inquiry that is independent, thorough and transparent."

Today, this same person—so profound and courageous in opposition—has chosen to ignore the fact that people are dying of this serious infectious disease and is evading his responsibility. These are facts. The minister and Deputy Premier should explain himself to the victims of the tragedy.

LEON PAROIAN

Mr. Bruce Crozier: I rise today to pay tribute to Windsor lawyer Leon Paroian who died at the age of 71 Saturday morning after a lengthy illness.

With quotes from the Windsor Star, and on behalf of my colleagues Dwight Duncan, Sandra Pupatello and all the residents of Essex—Windsor, I must say that Leon is remembered as a gregarious man, as a committed lawyer who often fought long and hard for the underdog and as someone for whom family and friends meant everything.

"No one loved his family more and no one was more generous with his friends," said Leon's son, Phil.

"Dad, I think, is someone who has changed all our lives in a way that will stay for good."

Phil said new friends often found it hard to believe that his dad was considered the quiet one in the family, but once they made their first visit to the home where his father would hold court, they understood.

Paroian's long-time law partner, Gabe Courey, commented that this buddy not only helped his clients, but helped him.

"My entire adult life Leon was my friend," Courey said. "There was never a burden I had that he didn't help me carry."

Former Ontario Conservative cabinet minister John Snobelen listed three passions he felt were most important to Leon: "family, law and justice."

Besides acting as a lawyer, sometimes against long odds, Paroian was gentleman farmer, a philanthropist and a past solicitor for the Windsor Police Association and the Police Association of Ontario.

Leon, you were highly respected and loved. You will be missed, but remembered. Our prayers and thoughts are with the Paroian family.

PREMIER OF ONTARIO

Mr. John Yakabuski: It appears that the good ship McGuinty is showing signs of corrosion and may have even developed a few leaks. It turns out the rusting is happening from the inside out.

A recent article by Robert Benzie of the Toronto Star pointed out that many of its sailors are tiring of the fact that Captain Dalton ignores their advice, choosing rather to listen to his advisors in port, most of whom have never actually been out to sea. While these sailors gleefully took their orders from the captain's landlubbers on their first voyage, hoping for a promotion to the officers' club, they are coming to realize that the long-awaited call from the captain is not about to happen.

It has become apparent to the crew that the captain just doesn't trust them as much as his hand-picked advisors, and there are a lot of them. In fact, Captain McGuinty has more people in his land-locked office than he has on his ship. No wonder he has told his sailors: "You don't have to think. Just show up, keep up and shut up."

Many of the officers themselves are beginning to question whether or not Captain McGuinty himself has lost his edge, that he's losing his focus as his ship heads for stormy seas. They themselves are forced to consider their options: (a) get off at the first port of call; (b) check the lifeboats; or (c) dare I say, mutiny.

Stay tuned. Ahoy, I see an iceberg.

GEMS OF THE LAKESHORE

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: I'm very pleased today to rise to inform this Legislature about an initiative in my community of Etobicoke—Lakeshore, called Gems of the Lakeshore.

Following extensive community meetings, the Gems of the Lakeshore project was launched last year in partnership between my office, the Lakeshore BIAs and the Lakeshore Community Partnership to highlight the importance of strong and vibrant community organizations and innovative and unique businesses.

You see, south Etobicoke understands the important role that both businesses and service organizations play in our community, in particular when it comes to our collective and continued efforts to strengthen and revitalize our neighbourhoods.

1310

The Gems has given local residents an opportunity to recognize their favourite neighbourhood small business and community service organization. Collectively, we have been able to formalize the word-of-mouth advice and good news we regularly hear about these local groups from our family, friends and neighbours. In other words, it's a chance to say, "Thanks. You're doing a great job every day, and we appreciate that."

For the second year in a row, we join together to celebrate the success. This year, we were pleased to recognize Storefront Humber, Timothy's Pub, Jakeb Tyler Home Décor and Gifts, Lakeshore Village Mind and Body Integrated Medicine and Lakeshore Arts.

I want to extend my appreciation to the community for thoughtfully submitting recommendations and for taking the opportunity to acknowledge and pay tribute to the many gems that make our community sparkle every day.

JOHN BROOKS

Mr. Mike Colle: Canada's Jamaican community and all Ontarians have lost a great visionary, John Brooks.

Named to the Order of Canada in 1993, John Brooks was also a member of Jamaica's Order of Distinction and the Order of Ontario.

Most notably, he was the founder of the John Brooks Community Foundation and scholarship fund. Established in 1981, the fund provided financial support for hundreds of young students, primarily of Jamaican and African descent.

John was awarded an honorary doctorate from Queen's University for his contributions to education.

John was born in Stony Hill in St. Andrew, Jamaica, and moved to Canada in 1962 with his wife, Patricia, and worked as an electrician.

Brooks' dedication to improving the life of new arrivals to Canada led him to co-own and operate the Latin Quarter, one of Toronto's landmarks in the Yonge and Dundas street area.

He will certainly be missed by the Jamaican-Canadian community as an educator and mentor.

Anne-Marie Bonner, Jamaica's consul general in Toronto, said, "The community at large suffers a great loss with the passing of an irreplaceable stalwart."

Brooks leaves his wife, Patricia, children Doreen, Glen, Martinette, Donna and Richard, and seven grandchildren.

As Courtney Betty, a protege of John Brooks, who's now one of Toronto's leading lawyers, said at his funeral, at St. Chad's church, "John is the reason why I succeeded in life, and without John's help, I couldn't have done it."

We miss you, John. Goodbye.

ANTI-SMOKING LEGISLATION

Mr. Jeff Leal: Mr. Speaker, I want to tell you that I'm absolutely astounded by comments made right here in this House yesterday. You just can't have it both ways: You either support protecting our children's health or you don't. I'm talking about Bill 69, the bill that's supported by Ontario Medical Association, the Canadian Cancer Society, the Heart and Stroke Foundation and other groups that know something about health care in this province.

Take yesterday as an example. On one hand we're told by the member from Thornhill that "your opposition friends will support the bill." Then that same member went on to call the bill "nanny state legislation," and suggested we're making it "illegal to be a moron in Ontario" because of the bill.

I wonder if he's talked to his caucus colleague, who just yesterday reminded us that she supported and would have introduced the legislation but for my friend from Sault Ste. Marie. I'm wondering, if she had introduced the bill, what would have happened behind closed doors in that caucus.

Let me tell you, my children and my friends' children and all those kids in my constituency of Peterborough deserve a lot better.

OFFICE OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I beg to inform the House that, pursuant to section 28 of the Auditor General Act, I have today laid upon the table the audited financial statements of the Office of the Auditor General for the year ending March 31, 2007.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

SERVICES FOR PERSONS WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES SERVICES AUX PERSONNES AYANT UNE DÉFICIENCE INTELLECTUELLE

Mrs. Meilleur moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 77, An Act to provide services to persons with developmental disabilities, to repeal the Developmental Services Act and to amend certain other statutes / Projet de loi 77, Loi visant à prévoir des services pour les personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, à abroger la Loi sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle et à modifier d'autres lois.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The minister for a short statement?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: I will keep my comments for the unanimous consent statement.

PROPERTY TAX DEFERRAL ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LE REPORT DES IMPÔTS FONCIERS

Mr. Shurman moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities / Projet de loi 78, Loi visant à accorder des reports d'impôts fonciers aux personnes âgées à faible revenu et aux personnes à faible revenu atteintes d'une invalidité.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for a short statement?

Mr. Peter Shurman: To date in Canada, property tax deferral programs are offered at the provincial level in British Columbia, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia. Similar programs are offered at the state level across the United States. In Ontario, property tax deferral programs are at the municipal level under the Municipal Act.

This bill, if passed, would create a province-wide and provincially administered program whereby low-income seniors and disabled persons can defer property taxes payable on properties used as their principal residences. This new program will help ease the burden shouldered by municipalities and provide an even playing field and one-stop assistance for low-income seniors. This is a win-win and has broad support from the seniors' community.

NORTHERN YORK REGION POWER CONSERVATION ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'ÉCONOMIE D'ÉNERGIE DANS LE SECTEUR NORD DE LA RÉGION DE YORK

Mr. Tabuns moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 79, An Act to promote the conservation of power in Northern York Region and the Town of Bradford West Gwillimbury / Projet de loi 79, Loi encourageant l'économie d'énergie dans le secteur nord de la région de York et la ville de Bradford West Gwillimbury.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for a short statement?

Mr. Peter Tabuns: The bill prohibits the operation and construction of single-cycle generating stations with an electrical generating capacity greater than 30 megawatts in certain municipalities. The bill also requires the Ontario Power Authority to make every reasonable effort to implement conservation measures in those municipalities in order to reduce electricity consumption to meet the overall peak demand for electricity.

COMMUNITY LIVING DAY JOURNÉE DE L'INTÉGRATION COMMUNAUTAIRE

Hon. David Caplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I believe we have unanimous consent for a member of each party to speak for up to five minutes regarding Community Living Day and services for persons with developmental disabilities, following which a member from each party will speak for up to five minutes regarding the International Day Against Homophobia.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: This is a proud moment for me and for our government. Today I have the privilege of tabling legislation to create the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, 2008.

With today being Community Living Day at the Legislature, introducing this bill today is both symbolic and significant: symbolic, because we are letting Ontarians know that the McGuinty government is taking the next big step in laying the groundwork for our long-term plan for developmental services; significant, because we are demonstrating that we are a government of action, not words.

1320

Before I go on, I want to take a moment to recognize a number of people who are with us today in the gallery, people who have indeed made a real difference in the lives of many Ontarians with a developmental disability. Please join me in welcoming representatives from Community Living Ontario, Community Living Toronto, OASIS and Reena, to name a few. Welcome.

Monsieur le Président, la législation que nous proposons, si elle est adoptée, remplacerait la Loi sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle.

Cette loi, qui est en vigueur depuis 1974, était à l'époque une législation modèle et importante. Mais avec le temps, cette politique est devenue désuète et archaïque.

It speaks to a time when we supported people in institutions, not communities. We need legislation that recognizes that people with developmental disabilities can live much more independently in their communities, with the right supports.

When we came to office five years ago, nowhere was the need for modernization greater than in the developmental services. We heard loud and clear from people with developmental disabilities, their families and community agencies that the system of supports needed to be easier to navigate, people needed services and supports closer to home, and they needed more choice and flexibility in the support they received.

Et nous nous sommes engagés à répondre à ces besoins. Nous avons élaboré un plan de réorganisation global visant à rendre le système plus équitable, plus accessible et plus durable. Nous avons annoncé la fermeture des trois derniers foyers gouvernementaux pour les personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, dès la fin de mars 2009. Et nous nous sommes engagés à développer un plan d'action pour l'avenir, un plan réaliste, novateur et évolutif.

Our proposed legislation will lay the groundwork for that plan. This is a bill with families in mind. It responds to what families and people with developmental disabilities have told us through our province-wide consultations, and builds on that advice.

Si ce projet de loi est adopté, il nous permettra d'améliorer les services, car les personnes n'auront à s'inscrire qu'à un seul endroit pour obtenir des services, d'offrir plus de choix, car les personnes pourraient recevoir des fonds directement et à la mesure de leurs besoins et, ce serait plus équitable car les personnes concernées utiliseraient la même trousse d'évaluation des besoins; la priorité serait accordée aux personnes dont les besoins sont les plus grands.

That's what this bill is all about. It's the critical next step in the evolution of services for people with developmental disabilities in this province. This province has come so far since 1974, when the current Developmental Services Act became law. But we have so much further to go, and we are committed to the journey. With the passage of this bill, we could really move forward.

Ce projet de loi est une évolution importante de l'engagement social de l'Ontario envers ses citoyens, envers des personnes qui ont une déficience intellectuelle, pour leurs familles et pour les personnes qui les soutiennent.

If this bill is passed, we will be able to look back and say, "We took a giant step forward in building stronger and more inclusive communities for all Ontarians."

I encourage all members of this House to support this important legislation.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Responses?

Ms. Sylvia Jones: It is a pleasure to rise on behalf of the Progressive Conservative caucus to mark the ninth annual Community Living Day at Queen's Park. We need to celebrate the many innovative and meaningful community living programs across the province. I know about the fabulous work that is done in my community to support people with developmental disabilities, and I know that the focus is on their abilities, not their disabilities.

I would like to thank the staff who work in this rewarding field, individuals like Ann Smith, an employee of Brampton Caledon Community Living, who's been awarded the 2008 Community Living Ontario Inclusive Education Award by the Canadian Association for Community Living. For more than 25 years, she's been a tireless advocate and resource to students who have a disability and their families in Peel region.

I would also like to acknowledge and thank the families who care for their children into adulthood, volunteer to support programs and fundraise to make a difference. Families are an integral part of the support that people with disabilities need for a fulfilling life. We need to recognize and thank those parents, and ensure that programs and policies support their needs and goals for their children.

There are two wonderful community living agencies in my riding of Dufferin-Caledon. I've had the privilege of working with both for the past 15 years. For more than 50 years, Brampton Caledon Community Living has supported people with developmental disabilities, in partnership with their families, to lead enriched and meaningful lives. Their vision is that people with developmental disabilities have the right to live in the community, to enjoy all that their community has to offer and to make a contribution to community life. This vision is something we can all support and strive to work toward.

In Dufferin, we have an exciting new initiative. The Building Dreams Together Campaign is an innovative partnership between Community Living Dufferin and Theatre Orangeville. The campaign is being launched to support the construction of a new building, which will be shared by both organizations. An exciting benefit of this partnership is the opportunity for Community Living Dufferin clients to be involved in various aspects of the theatre's operation. Working together, they will be able to break down barriers and be a model for how persons with developmental disabilities can fully participate in our community. The two organizations have already formed a groundbreaking partnership to create program for drama classes for people with developmental disabilities. It's called Creative Partners on Stage.

Today is a day to celebrate the many achievements of community living organizations. But at the same time, this Liberal government must not ignore the needs of families who care for children outside of community living agencies. These families are also caring for their children into adulthood, and should be given the same priority as other families. I'm hearing from those families that the new passport funding for 2008-09 to allow them to hire personal support workers and provide services for their children has been frozen. Many families are already on waiting lists and struggling.

Grassroots, family-governed organizations like Families for a Secure Future have been providing a valuable service by offering education and support to families. They have worked for many years to build a network of family support circles, and it seems a shame to allow this organization to disband because they are ahead of government in their transformation agenda.

Finally, today, government introduced amendments to the developmental services legislation. We asked the government House leader to provide us with a separate opportunity to respond to the bill, but this request was denied. I would have liked to have an opportunity to comment separately on those proposals, but I will reserve my comments for a later date.

Community living organizations across Ontario are dedicated to enabling people with disabilities to lead enriched and meaningful lives. They are reaching out to the community so that individuals can realize their full potential. It's all about the possibilities and the independence. I am pleased to have the opportunity to highlight their achievements and congratulate them on their advocacy.

Mr. Michael Prue: I rise to celebrate Community Living Day and to thank all of the people here from Community Living for being part of our community, for being the wonderful people that you are who show each and every one of us in this Legislature your commitment to the people of Ontario, your right to live with us and amongst us, and to be part of us as we are part of you. This is a monumental day, the ninth year that this has taken place in this Legislature.

1330

Community Living is an organization of inclusion. It stands for, in my belief, three things: all people are afforded human dignity; secondly, all people are given an opportunity to participate; and thirdly, all people have an opportunity to integrate within the community. If any organization in this province has been successful in delivering its mission, it is Community Living Ontario. They have done a tremendous job over all of these many years.

As New Democrats, we believe that everyone should have access. We believe that everyone should have the right to a decent income. For those who live on Ontario's disability plan and get their monies from there, we believe that that money should be increased so that people can live in dignity. We believe that those who are able to work and to contribute to the economy should be allowed to keep the wages that they make without having them clawed back against the ODSP benefits. We believe that health care should be universal and that the health care that people with disabilities often require should be made more readily available. We believe that decent homes are the right of every single citizen of this province. We believe that people should have the dignity of real work and that real work should be afforded to them, and that groups like Common Ground, which sets up the baking of baked goods and the delivery of coffee, should be promoted and funded and enhanced in order to provide those opportunities. We believe in fair recognition of people for their jobs.

We celebrate this milestone today knowing full well that what happened last week is that Ecuador became the 30th country on the face of the planet to ratify the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. That means that that is now the international law of this planet, that there is a convention that protects and enhances the rights of people with disabilities. It is now in force.

Sadly, Canada has not ratified that convention yet. We're usually the first of countries to ratify conventions from the United Nations. But I am pleased to say that some two weeks ago in the House of Commons in Ottawa, there was unanimous approval of a motion put forward by the NDP to ask Canada to commit itself to this convention. I think it's only a matter of time until the government of Canada does so.

There is much left to be done. In this province, I am sad to say that people with disabilities, including the people who are here with Community Living, are often treated as second-class citizens. They are treated that way because the ODSP levels are so low that they are forced, throughout virtually their entire lives, to live in poverty. They are treated that way, and their wages, if they can make any, are clawed back. They are treated that way, sadly, and I hope this bill which we've been given today does something about that.

Community Living has been on the forefront of these issues. Their work is essential. Their work is wonderful. I commit my party to work with them for all Ontarians to respect the gifts that each and every person brings to the province and that each and every person in this province can contribute to all of us. Because of your work this day, the day is fast approaching when people with disabilities will have equal rights with everyone else in this province. I promise to be on the forefront of making sure that happens, pushing the government to make sure it happens as fast as possible.

In terms of the minister's bill, as you can see—I don't want to use it as a prop, but it's just been put on my desk—it is about four inches, or 10 centimetres, thick. I haven't had an opportunity to read it. But I will state for the record that we will support the bill, provided it does a number of things, and I'll be reading it very carefully to see that it does a number of things: first, that families who hire independent workers through these programs are put in the situation, and need to be protected from being put in a situation—to hire trained, supervised, disciplined workers; they need to be given that kind of experience and opportunity. Families are left vulnerable if the caregiver becomes ill or leaves, and we need to make sure there are provisions in the bill for this.

We need to make sure that a two-tiered system is not established between families who can function as effective employers and those who cannot. We need to make sure within the body of the bill that there is accountability in terms of the quality of care provided, which is of concern when wages too often, sadly, in this sector are too low. We need to make sure that an individualized system need not undermine the network of established community agencies; that it needs to create job stability, not instability for workers, and it need never reduce the quality of care. Last, but not least, we need to make sure that within the body and the four walls of this bill there is sufficient money set aside to make it actually happen so that the services, if purchased, are equivalent or better than the services that are being given now.

Having said that, I look forward over the next many nights, I'm sure, of reading this bill to making sure that it works on behalf of all of the citizens of Ontario who have disabilities.

Again, to Community Living, thank you very for coming here and sharing your experiences with us. You are always most welcome to come to this Legislature. We always need to hear your stories, and I guess you've just heard mine.

INTERNATIONAL DAY AGAINST HOMOPHOBIA

Hon. George Smitherman: It's my privilege today to rise and to speak, as a matter of unanimous consent, on the International Day Against Homophobia and to welcome a hearty cross-section of Ontario's gay and lesbian community to the galleries today in support of this. I must be specific in recognizing one distinguished guest, because my spouse is in the House and I want to acknowledge that my husband, Christopher, is here.

I rise in the House today to recognize International Day Against Homophobia, which will be commemorated on Saturday, May 17.

When it comes to respect, equity and acceptance, the world has taken its cue from Canada. Initially created by Montreal's Fondation Émergence, International Day Against Homophobia was first recognized by the National Assembly of Quebec in 2003. Since then, it has gained international momentum in jurisdictions like Belgium, France and Britain.

Once again, this day highlights the need to end homophobia on our streets, in our schools and where we seek health care. Each year when International Day Against Homophobia is held, organizers focus on one aspect of our lives where homophobia occurs. Previous years have targeted home, work, school and even organized sports. This year's campaign aims to ensure that gays and lesbians can receive health services in a caring environment without facing discrimination.

Gay people have unique health concerns, and homophobia can have devastating repercussions for its victims. Rainbow Health Ontario was recently funded by the Ministry of Health and is designed to help advocate on those issues and influence the health care delivery system to align itself to the needs of the community in a supportive and affirming way.

In fact, as one example, the suicide rate amongst young gay men and women is much higher than for their heterosexual peers. A great number of gays and lesbians live in isolation, fearful of rejection and of discrimination. Transgendered and transsexual persons are often pushed to the fringes of society, with very few supports to turn to.

That's why it's especially impressive that today we can celebrate that in the Speaker's gallery is a group of students and staff from Peel and Halton district school boards, from the gay-straight alliance. These are young people working with staff in schools to address these issues proactively, and we welcome them to the Legislature.

A visit to the first floor would show maps which confirm the vastness of the land mass of the province of Ontario, and it's easy enough for anyone to feel lost. Imagine what it must be like for a gay person struggling with one's sexual orientation in downtown Toronto. Often, much more daunting are the circumstances faced by those in rural or remote Ontario, where no roadmap to access affirming health care exists.

Ontario has taken many steps over the last five years to ensure that people of all backgrounds are treated as equals. During Pride Week of 2007, the Premier announced funding for the creation of Rainbow Health Ontario. Its mission is to help Ontario become a province where sexual and gender minority residents have equitable access to health and wellness services and can live in healthy, supportive communities. Over the coming years, as Rainbow Health Ontario spreads its wings, we hope it will lead to greater networks of supportive health care professionals and more supportive environments.

1340

At the 23rd annual conference of the Gay and Lesbian Medical Association, representatives from HealthForceOntario travelled to Montreal to recruit American gay and lesbian health care workers. We are not only in the business of providing equitable, inclusive and accessible health, but also ensuring that that care is delivered by people from all walks of life.

Despite years of education, this community often finds itself fighting the same battles. "Homosexuality is NOT a sickness!" is the theme of this year's campaign, and our health care workers are among the best messengers to spread the word.

Our province prides itself on promoting access to quality health care for all. As a gay, married man, I am proud to call Ontario home. This province has led the way with progressive laws such as the Civil Marriage Act, but there is still more we can do to improve access to health care. We will continue to work with organizations like Rainbow Health Ontario to build a road map highlighting where affirming care exists.

We commemorate this day and celebrate the diversity of the population, and we all join together in hoping that in the future, we can look forward to a day when an International Day against Homophobia is no longer required.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Responses?

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I am pleased to speak on behalf of our party. Certainly, this is a day that obviously is extremely important. I think the Minister of Health has spoken to this issue extremely well. In fact, he's in a better position than most to express the views and also the concerns and needs, and certainly we would support him. There is a need for respect; there is a need for equity. People need to be free from discrimination when it comes to health care, and obviously there needs to be equitable access to health services for all people in Ontario.

But I would say that I am somewhat concerned, because we in the opposition had asked today that there be an opportunity for us to respond to Madam Meilleur's statement and be given five minutes. We weren't allowed to do so. There was also to have been five minutes of unanimous consent on the community living statement today, and those were to be two separate opportunities for the opposition to speak to that particular issue. I guess the other request that had been made was for unanimous consent, since this is also Nursing Week, and we haven't been provided with the opportunity to do that. I would say, Mr. Speaker, that some of what is happening in the House today comes as a bit of a surprise and a disappointment.

I personally believe that all these issues that we are speaking to today are extremely important, and I am very disappointed that we did not recognize Nursing Week, as we have in past years, by unanimous consent in this House. I think it's important that we recognize our nurses. They are respected, vital professionals who provide compassionate care. On behalf of our party, since we have not had a chance to do so, as the request wasn't granted, I would simply say that we want to express our appreciation to all the hard-working nurses in the province of Ontario for their professionalism, for their dedication and for their exceptional contributions to patient care in Ontario.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's an honour and a privilege to rise and speak on this day when we remember those who, through internalized or externalized homophobia, have lost their lives, and so I honour them. I particularly honour a person named Toby Dancer, a good friend to our church in Parkdale-High Park, and our music director; in fact, a transwoman who died an untimely death. We commemorated Toby with a stained glass window. I like to think that we're the only church in the world with a stained glass window dedicated to a trans person. Then one of my congregants said, "But what about Joan of Arc?" So there are other churches that have commemorations of transpeople.

I want to also honour some amazing people who are here—and also rejoice. We've received some happy news today, which is that sex reassignment surgery is going to be relisted. There are people here who have worked long and hard for this joyous day. I want to acknowledge them and the transhealth collective: Ann Travers, Susan Gapka, Martine Stonehouse, Nicole Nussbaum—Toby Dancer I've mentioned—and of course, we have in the gallery Brent Hawkes, who we all know and love, who performed the first same-sex marriage—really, that we knew of in the world—and was my inspiration for performing the second.

I rise to rejoice at that and also to remind everyone here of how this day came to be. On May 17, 1991, the World Health Organization removed homosexuality from its list of mental illnesses. The problem is that homophobia is still real, homophobia is still everywhere, and homophobia still kills.

The Minister of Health mentioned the number of young people who die from internalized and externalized homophobia. That cannot be exaggerated too much. It is the leading cause of suicide in our students, in our schools. It is the leading cause, in many schools, of bullying. It is the leading cause of depression in many instances. This goes on and on.

All members here—I speak to all members because we do represent all of Ontario in this place—have a responsibility on this day to carry this good news/bad news story back to our communities and to do something about it, not to just talk about it, but to do something about it. That means to speak up in favour of inclusion and diversity, wherever we are. So I look to my right, I look everywhere, and I know that every member here will take this to heart and will go from this place and do something about this in their community.

I've lived in many places in Ontario, and I can tell you that not every place is as inclusive as Church and Wellesley. There are lots of places in Ontario where it's very dangerous to be an LBGTQ person—very dangerous indeed. That's the reality in which we all live, work, breathe and have our being. This day calls for action, not just talk. It calls for action. But it also, as I say, calls for celebration. I have to say to the Minister of Health, we certainly wished this day had come for SRS relisting five years ago, but, hey, George, we're happy it came—even five years late, so thank you.

I'd also ask the government. Last year, I put in a bill called Toby's Act, that asked that gender identity be in the Human Rights Code in this province. I know that Barbara Hall supports us on that. I hope that the government members do. I'd like to see that become law as well. I don't know what's holding it up. That's the next step.

One of the reasons we put that forward—certainly, the inspiration came from the transhealth collective on that—was that we wanted to see SRS relisted, but it's broader than that. We still know that transphobia and homophobia is rampant. Trans people, in particular, don't have recourse if they're denied employment or denied habitation. So we need to move on that still.

But again, a day to rejoice, a day to mourn, a day to recognize all of those who have done so much in this community. Let us, as the Minister of Health said, work toward a day when we don't have to have a day like this, because the whole world is inclusive.

VISITORS

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I would just like to welcome the students of Rippleton Public School, Mrs. Ormos's grade 5 class, and all the volunteers who here with them today. Welcome.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I too would welcome them. I remind the member that that was not a point of order. On the issue of introductions, as I made reference at the end of proceedings this morning, I would encourage you all to talk to the House leader. I enforce the standing orders of the House. I do not make those rules. I just remind all members of that and refer all those introductions that want to come afterwards to the government House leader, not to my office.

1350

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

STEVEN TRUSCOTT

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I move that, in the opinion of this House, given the unique circumstances in the case of Steven Truscott, who was unanimously acquitted of murder by the Ontario Court of Appeal, the province of Ontario should provide compensation to Mr. Truscott in recognition of the miscarriage of justice from which he has suffered for almost 50 years.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Ms. Sandals has moved private members' public business regarding compensation to Mr. Steven Truscott.

The member from Guelph.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I would like to welcome George Allain and his law students from Humberview Secondary School in Bolton. I think they're just coming into the House as we speak. George's law classes have been studying the Truscott case for several years. They hosted a conference on wrongful convictions, and they have been here at Queen's Park today talking to the members about the Truscott case.

I'd also like to welcome my daughter, Allison and my grandson William.

Interjection.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I didn't say it was a point of order.

Mr. Peter Kormos: That was perfectly legitimate.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Exactly.

In the early evening of June 9, 1959, it was a hot and humid evening on the air force base outside Clinton, Ontario. There were lots of folks out enjoying the weather. There were kids playing baseball at the schoolyard, there were kids riding their bikes up and down the county road, swimming at the local swimming hole and fishing at the Bayfield River.

Steven Truscott was out for a ride on his bike too, and met a fellow student, Lynne Harper. He gave her a ride on his bike out on the county road, past Lawson's Bush, and on up to Highway 8. He dropped Lynne off at Highway 8, then he retraced his steps back down the county road alone and was home to babysit his younger siblings by 8:30 p.m., just like he'd promised his mum.

By midnight that night, Mr. Harper had reported his daughter missing. Two days later, on the afternoon of June 11, Lynne's body was found in Lawson's Bush. She had been sexually assaulted and strangled. The police believed that Steven had turned off the county road and taken Lynne into Lawson's Bush and murdered her. They didn't believe Steven's story, that he had dropped her off at the county road, and they certainly didn't believe him when he said that when he stopped and looked back, he saw her get into a car and drive off.

Steven Truscott was taken into police custody on the evening of June 12, and he was subsequently charged with the murder of Lynne Harper. As of that point, Steven's young life was stolen from him.

The crown's case hinged on the time of death. If Lynne had died prior to 8 p.m. on June 9, Steven Truscott was almost certainly the killer. If, on the other hand, she had died after 8 p.m. on June 9, after Truscott returned to the school ground, the crown's theory collapsed; Steven could not be guilty.

At trial, Dr. Penistan, the pathologist who performed the autopsy, testified that he would put the time of Lynn's death prior to 7:45 p.m. on June 9. There was a host of other evidence about who saw who, when and where, but Dr. Penistan's testimony sealed Steven's fate. On September 30, Steven Truscott was convicted of murder and sentenced to hang. He was 14.

The Governor General in Council ordered that Truscott's death sentence be commuted to life in prison. Truscott was jailed at the Ontario Training School for Boys in Guelph, in my riding. While at the training school, Steven did not receive any meaningful education. After all, he was expected to be in jail for the rest of his life. At age 18, now an adult, he was transferred to Collins Bay Penitentiary in Kingston.

In 1966, responding to public pressure, the federal government asked the Supreme Court of Canada to review Truscott's conviction. At that time, the Supreme Court of Canada heard additional evidence relating to the time of death, but the majority still accepted Dr. Penistan's claim that death occurred prior to 7:45 p.m. on June 9. The Supreme Court of Canada upheld the conviction.

In 1967, government officials disposed of the physical evidence. There was no malice in this act. After all, the case had been to the Supreme Court of Canada, and they had no way of knowing that, decades later, DNA testing would be possible. They had no way of knowing that they were destroying evidence that may have exonerated Steven Truscott. Thankfully, the written and photographic records were retained.

Fortunately, correctional officers at Collins Bay gave Steven the opportunity to train as a millwright. Steven was a model prisoner, and in 1969, by an act of Parliament, Truscott was granted parole and released from prison. Because he was still labelled a murderer, he was forced to live under an assumed name. He moved to my riding in Guelph, he married Marlene and raised a family, all under an assumed name.

Throughout the decades, Steven Truscott always maintained his innocence. His story has always been consistent. He had given Lynne a ride up the county road and dropped her off at Highway 8. He did not take her into Lawson's Bush. He did not murder her.

In 2002, the federal justice minister Irwin Cotler did listen to Steven Truscott. He retained the Honourable Fred Kaufman to investigate and provide advice on the Truscott case. Mr. Kaufman advised that there was clearly a reasonable basis for concluding that a miscarriage of justice had likely occurred. Based on this advice, the case was referred back to the Ontario Court of Appeal, with instructions that they should hear the new evidence now available.

Again, the case hinged on the time of death. If Lynne died before 8 p.m. on June 9, Truscott was guilty. If Lynne died after 8 p.m. on June 9, Truscott was innocent. The Ontario Court of Appeal heard from several pathologists, led by the chief forensic pathologist for the province of Ontario. The chief forensic pathologist reflected on scientific developments since 1959 and concluded overall that the time of Lynne Harper's death cannot be precisely determined and can certainly not be pinpointed to be between exactly 6:45 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. on June 9.

Interestingly, Dr. Penistan himself had come to this view. Two preliminary versions of Dr. Penistan's autopsy report have since been discovered. One preliminary report was discovered in 2005 at Stratford General Hospital. It would have placed Lynne Harper's death at about 12:45 a.m., after midnight on the morning of June 10. The other preliminary report was discovered in Dr. Penistan's personal files during the Kaufman investigation and would have placed the time of death between 4:45 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. on the morning of June 10. Most significantly, Dr. Penistan prepared a review of his testimony for the 1966 Supreme Court reference and submitted it to the OPP in 1966. Dr. Penistan ultimately concluded in his 1966 report that, "All findings are compatible with death within two hours of Lynn's last meal. They are not incompatible with death at a later time (up to 12 hours or even longer)." In other words, Dr. Penistan was saying that Lynne could have been killed anytime between the early evening of June 9 and the morning of June 10, just exactly what today's scientists are telling us.

1400

However, Dr. Penistan's revised opinion was not submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada in 1966. Dr.

Penistan's revised report was not disclosed to Steven Truscott's defence team, because in 1966 the crown was not required to disclose such evidence to the defence. Had Dr. Penistan's report been submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada in 1966, it is quite probable that this miscarriage of justice would have been recognized some 40 years ago. The Ontario Court of Appeal was presented with a host of other evidence, including archival police witnesses, which supported Steven's version of events. Of course, they weren't disclosed either back in 1959 or 1966.

Last August, as you know, the Ontario Court of Appeal ruled that, given the new evidence, Mr. Truscott's conviction cannot stand and must be quashed as a miscarriage of justice. The court further ruled that Mr. Truscott should be acquitted.

There has been much comment around the fact that Mr. Truscott has not been formally found factually innocent. Well, first of all, the physical evidence was destroyed years ago. There can be no DNA testing. Secondly, it wasn't legally possible for the court of appeal to find Mr. Truscott innocent. In the words of the court, "Counsel for the appellant acknowledge that a declaration of innocence has no statutory basis in Part XXI of the Criminal Code. They accept that it would be most extraordinary for an appeal court to make a finding of factual innocence. Indeed, counsel have not pointed to any instance in which a Canadian appellate court has ever made such a declaration."

Of course, he can't be found innocent. In other words, Truscott got the best ruling that was legally possible: He was acquitted.

As many of you know, Mr. Justice Sydney Robins is providing the Attorney General with legal and technical advice on the matter of compensation for Steven Truscott. The Truscott case has always attracted major public interest. My motion provides an opportunity for members of this Legislature to also provide advice to the Attorney General, on behalf of their constituents.

Steven Truscott has proclaimed his innocence for almost 50 years. For almost 50 years, he has been incorrectly labelled as a murderer. Steven's wife, Marlene, and thousands in my riding of Guelph and across Canada have supported Steven for almost 50 years. The Ontario Court of Appeal has finally recognized that Steven's conviction was a miscarriage of justice. It is appropriate that this Legislature also recognize that a miscarriage of justice has occurred.

I ask the members to endorse my motion in support of compensation for Steven Truscott.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I will be sharing my time with our justice critic, the member from Whitby—Oshawa.

I would like to welcome the students of Humberview Secondary School in Bolton, from my riding of Dufferin—Caledon, to the Ontario Legislature. Their teacher, George Allain, brought the students here today to observe the debate on the Steven Truscott motion. I am particularly pleased that young people from my riding are actively involved in the political process. Students from Mr. Allain's law class have studied how the Legislature operates and have actively participated in the process for a number of years. I hope their exposure to parliamentary democracy will motivate them to remain involved in politics for many years to come.

As many members are aware, for over six years, successive law classes at Humberview have studied the Steven Truscott case and have lobbied to have his name cleared. At each stage of the judicial process, they've debated and discussed the evidence. Over the years, they've pushed to have the Ontario Court of Appeal expedite a hearing, and celebrated when the Ontario Court of Appeal acquitted Mr. Truscott.

As several members will recall, on December 8, 2004, students from Humberview came to the Legislature to present an Internet petition that the class had created. The students researched and wrote the petition and set up a website to distribute it. The petition called upon then-Attorney General Michael Bryant to expedite the Steven Truscott matter in the Ontario Court of Appeal. More than 11,000 signatures were collected and presented in the Legislature.

On November 25, 2005, Humberview students hosted a one-day symposium called The Wrongfully Convicted, with a focus on the Truscott case. Over 600 high school students from across Ontario attended that symposium. Workshops were led by front-line police officers, university professors and lawyers. After the workshops, which covered all aspects of the case, students, teachers and guests gathered in the auditorium to hear remarks from Steven Truscott. Mr. Allain's law class presented their research, as well, to the Progressive Conservative leader, John Tory.

In 2007, Humberview students also had an opportunity to attend some of the Court of Appeal proceedings. Their studies gave them first-hand insight into the operation of the Canadian judicial system. Last August, when Mr. Truscott was acquitted by the Ontario Court of Appeal, Attorney General Michael Bryant referred the matter of compensation to Justice Sydney Robins, a retired judge of the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Yesterday, my colleague and Progressive Conservative justice critic from Whitby—Oshawa asked Attorney General Chris Bentley about the status of the report. The Attorney General indicated that he had received Justice Robins's advice and he intended to "speak to this matter in the not-too-distant future." I believe all members of the Legislature need to know the contents of the report that has been delivered to the Attorney General. We need to have the benefit of Justice Robins's advice as part of our deliberations on today's motion. Since the government has the report, I would urge the Attorney General to release it today.

I would also like to commend Mr. Allain's class and the students of Humberview for their initiative and efforts to clear Steven Truscott's name. They have given great support to Mr. Truscott and his family.

I would like to let the Attorney General critic for the Progressive Conservative Party finish off.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate? I know you said you'd split your time, but we do go in rotation at this point.

The member from Welland.

Mr. Peter Kormos: I want to be very clear that New Democrats support this resolution. New Democrats have been outspoken about the efforts by Mr. Truscott and his lawyers to obtain redress, first, in terms of being declared innocent and, secondly, very much in terms of being compensated for the incredible, horrible, almost unthinkable injustice that was done to him. We quarrel only with one small portion of this resolution, and that is the reference to the unique circumstance in the case of Steven Truscott. Tragically, sadly, in this province and in this country, being wrongfully convicted is not as unique as we wish it was.

Most recently, of course, the case of Robert Baltovich: How many years did Mr. Baltovich have to wait before a far-from-perfect justice system finally served him? It's not the system, because when we speak about the plight of the wrongfully convicted—and I say to you, New Democrats are clear: Steven Truscott was wrongfully convicted—these are not so much flaws in the system as they are the failure of the Ministry of the Attorney General and its crowns to fulfill all of their responsibilities as officers of the court, and the failure of the police to be an independent, non-judgemental investigative body.

How many more times—you see, this case goes back to 1959; Baltovich is far more recent and, as we speak, the same injustices could be occurring. But when you have overzealous crown attorneys whose sole goal is to get a conviction at any cost—I know many crown attorneys, and the vast majority of crown attorneys are noble, hard-working, outstanding lawyers and officers of the court, who understand that their role is to ensure a fair trial, as much as it is the role of a defence counsel to do the same—police with tunnel vision, who fix on one suspect and then neglect to consider how many others? We talked about Aju Iroaga here, Mr. Klees and I did, a couple of weeks ago—once again, a case where the OPP, in the instance of the vanishing of a young university student working in the summer in northern Ontario, failed to even investigate to the extent of interviewing co-workers who were with him on the day that Aju Iroaga vanished.

1410

Surely, the only thing that's worse than the perpetrator of a horrific crime walking free is an innocent person being convicted. Look at the seriousness, the intensity of this: a 14-year-old boy sentenced to hang, and then imprisoned at a very tender age, still in his teenage years, to Collins Bay Penitentiary—a boy still—with some of the most dangerous and deranged prisoners contained in any prison in this country and on this continent.

I found it sad that the office of the Attorney General in this province did not take a clear position in front of the Court of Appeal with respect to Mr. Truscott, that he had been wrongfully convicted, but rather forced Truscott and his lawyers to continue to fight. And yes, Mrs. Elliott, for whom I have great admiration and respect, only yesterday put to the Attorney General of this province the question as to what's being recommended by Judge Robins. Here we have this resolution; the Attorney General says he has the advice of Judge Robins, but somehow the Attorney General wants to play his cards close to his chest. I believe, especially in the context of this resolution being called today, that it would have been very appropriate for the Attorney General to tell us what Judge Robins had advised, and more importantly, to tell us what he, the Attorney General, was going to do.

I say that this House today will make it very, very clear that it is the unanimous view of every one of us in this chamber that Steven Truscott be promptly and thoroughly compensated for decades of his youth stolen from him, of his identity stolen from him, because, amongst more things, he was compelled, upon his release from prison, to live life under a pseudonym. We owe it to Truscott, we owe it to his family, and we owe it to all of the wrongfully convicted.

I know Rosario Marchese from Trinity-Spadina wants to speak to this resolution as well.

I do want to thank lawyers Jim Lockyer, a brilliant, brilliant legal mind, who has taken on some of the most difficult cases in this country and served the profession as a lawyer well, but more importantly, served justice well; and Marlys Edwardh, again, one of Canada's outstanding lawyers. Her assistance in the pursuit by Truscott for fair compensation must be acknowledged.

New Democrats join clearly, unequivocally and enthusiastically in this call for immediate fair and full compensation for Steven Truscott.

Mr. Monte Kwinter: I rise in support of the motion put forward by the member for Guelph regarding compensation for Steven Truscott.

My colleague from Huron-Bruce has asked me to read into the record the following statement. The statement reads: "I want to first thank the member for York Centre for agreeing to read this statement in my absence. To begin, I read the following statement into the record of the Ontario Legislature on November 16, 2004." This is a statement by Mrs. Carol Mitchell, Huron-Bruce:

"I would like to state that the people of Clinton wish to see the final chapter of the Steven Truscott case resolved quickly.

"As you are aware, this event took place 45 years ago in Clinton, Ontario, a small town in my riding, and many people today still feel a very strong attachment to this case. Justice Minister Cotler stated that there is a reasonable basis to conclude that a miscarriage of justice likely occurred in this case.

"Closure needs to be brought to the case that has weighed heavily on the people of Clinton for over four decades. The people of Clinton and Ontario wait to see the final chapter written." End of statement.

The member from Huron-Bruce goes on to say, "As you know, this past year the Ontario Court of Appeal stated that there was indeed a miscarriage of justice in the Steven Truscott case. As the member from Huron-Bruce, I am supporting the motion put forward by the member from Guelph that implores the Ontario government to compensate Steven Truscott for the injustice that he has suffered through.

"I believe the final step in providing closure to Mr. Truscott, his family and the community of Clinton is for the government to provide due compensation to the Truscott family to atone for any damage this has caused over the past 50 years."

That was the statement from the member of Huron-Bruce.

I just wanted to add my comments. As a parent, as most of us in this Legislature are, can you imagine the tragedy of having a 14-year-old child, your son, charged with rape and murder and sentenced to hang? Can you imagine the trauma of the friends, relatives and neighbours that in their midst there was this 14-year-old who had these very severe charges laid against him and that he was sentenced to hang?

His sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. He went through a series of judicial reviews. He spent a major part of his life living under an assumed name in a community that was strange to him, having to cope with the fact that he had married, had children and couldn't tell anybody about his particular situation. Finally, the Ontario Court of Appeal, after reviewing the evidence, declared that there was a miscarriage of justice and that he should have the charges withdrawn.

It's really a situation where, in my mind, there can't be any question that there has to be some redress for what this young person went through for the bulk of his life. He is now at the stage where this is a 50-year situation. I think that we have to, as a Legislature, make sure that there is compensation. We'll never be able to compensate him for what he has gone through; we will never be able to restore what has happened in that family, to his children; but I think that, at the very least, we should be in a position to encourage us as a Legislature and as a government to do the right thing for Steven Truscott.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I too would like to welcome Mr. Allain and the students from Humberview here this afternoon. I think it's wonderful that you have spent so much time and study on this subject, and I hope you're finding your experience here today to be a good one and very educationally rewarding for you.

I'm honoured to speak on this issue today. This is one of the most important and well-known cases in Canadian legal history and one that stands out from my time in law school, as I imagine it does for Mr. Kormos, for the Attorney General and for all the other members of this Legislature who are lawyers, because the facts of this case were simply horrific. I agree with the honourable member who just spoke about how, at the age of 14, having been convicted of a crime and sentenced to death, you can't imagine the relief of having the sentence overturned. You can't even imagine what it would have been like to have spent many of your formative years in a maximum security prison. So for many reasons, this case stands out in my mind.

This was all a harsh reality for Mr. Steven Truscott. After serving his sentence to the satisfaction of the justice system at that time, Steven Truscott was released from jail at the age of 24 and placed on parole.

1420

As we've heard, he later married but was forced to live under an assumed name for many years and to try to raise a family under the closest-to-normal circumstances that could be afforded to him, considering what had happened to him in the past.

He was jailed for 10 years and proclaimed his innocence from the moment of his first accusation until this very day. In late October 2004, it was found by the federal Minister of Justice that there was "a reasonable basis to conclude that a miscarriage of justice likely occurred." The honourable minister then had the case referred to the Ontario Court of Justice. Steven Truscott was finally acquitted of the rape and murder of Lynne Harper by five judges in the Ontario Court of Appeal last year.

I'm sure that we can all agree that what Mr. Truscott had to go through was absolutely horrendous. He was the youngest Canadian on record ever to be handed the death penalty, and it wasn't until 40 years later that he was found not guilty. The circumstances here are unusual, to say the least. But today, the honourable member from Guelph is presenting to the House a private member's resolution to compensate Steven Truscott financially for the years of incarceration and social stigma that he has had to endure over the years.

I would like to cite an article in the Toronto Star written by Tracey Tyler which identifies that one of the factors often considered by governments in determining possible compensation on a case is the strength of a lawsuit or potential lawsuit that could be filed by the victim of miscarried justice. Nearly all compensation packages given by governments to a wrongly convicted person have been worked out between the government and the person's lawyer. I do commend this government for being proactive on this issue and considering Mr. Truscott's issues before any lawsuits were filed or even mentioned. I would also like to commend the member from Guelph for accessing the appropriate channels and finding out absolutely that the tabling of this motion would not interfere with any other ongoing legal issue being addressed on this matter.

But I must also remind the members of this House that the federal-provincial guidelines of course state that compensation cannot be considered unless factual innocence can be proven. We have heard from this case that, unlike several of the other ongoing cases that have been considered, that's not possible in this case. Unlike the cases of Guy Paul Morin and David Milgaard, where the victims were awarded substantial monetary compensation, they were actually able to be proven 100% innocent through the use of DNA evidence. That doesn't exist in this case because, unfortunately, the physical evidence that might have completely, absolutely exonerated Mr. Truscott was destroyed in 1967.

Last year, the then Attorney General asked Mr. Justice Robins to investigate whether compensation should be provided to Mr. Truscott. Mr. Justice Robins is eminently qualified to take on this issue, and he has been engaged in this process over the last number of months interviewing witnesses, presumably Mr. Truscott and the other parties to this whole tragic case, whom we haven't really mentioned yet—Lynne Harper's family. Presumably, there has been some thought given to interviewing members of her family. Of course, the impact of the guidelines have to also be considered.

There have been a number of matters that have been considered by Mr. Justice Robins, and I don't think that we should second-guess what his recommendations are. He has been the one who has had the benefit of collecting all of this information. We need to know what his report says. Maybe he's going to recommend compensation. It's hard to say at this point, because he does have to deal with the federal-provincial guidelines. Perhaps he'll choose to ignore them, perhaps he'll choose to make recommendations that they should be changed in these cases. But because of the fact that we, the government, asked Mr. Justice Robins to take on this task and to produce a report for our direction, in my respectful opinion, we should wait for that report before we make a decision on this. Even our Attorney General, Mr. Bentley, in response to my question yesterday, if I may quote from the Canadian Press, said, "I certainly will be very interested in what the House does.... I think it's important in my role to take the advice from Justice Robins, of course, and listen carefully to what the House says."

I would certainly like to reiterate my empathy for Mr. Truscott. There is no denying that what he went through was absolutely horrendous. But, in my respectful submission, there is something—we have tasked Mr. Justice Robins to produce a report for the direction of this House. Rather than vote on the basis of our sympathy, empathy or emotional response to this situation—in my view, it's premature to be making a decision without the full benefit of Mr. Justice Robins's advice, and I think it's premature to have a vote on that matter for that reason.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I'm happy to join my colleague from Welland and echo many of the comments that he has made in support of the resolution that we have before us, where the resolution speaks of Mr. Truscott, who has been unanimously acquitted of murder by the Ontario Court of Appeal and proclaims in the resolution that Ontario should provide compensation to Mr. Truscott in recognition of the miscarriage of justice from which he has suffered for almost 50 years.

It is unimaginable to me what the wrongfully convicted must have gone through over the years—and in this case, 50 years of a battle to clear one's name. How do you live through it? How do you deal with it? How do you ever compensate for some wrong that has been done to you? It's so much easier for us, of course, not being in that person's shoes, to be able to rationalize and make intellectual arguments. But I can't imagine how difficult it must have been for him and so many others. When do we learn and how do we learn, as crown attorneys, as police—and then those who are judges on the bench who, for so many reasons, create a view of the case or have a tunnel vision of somebody who they believe has committed the murder and they focus on convicting that individual? How, on the basis of those who have been wrongfully convicted, do we learn from the mistakes and hope never to repeat them?

I know how psychology works; most of us know how it works. We tend to create psychologically a view of a person's innocence or guilt, and once we have that view, we are fixated in that matter. And sometimes, as the evidence is presented, we transcend it because we believe that person is guilty. It's a serious, serious problem. And in this regard, I have to give thanks to lawyers like James Lockyer, who have been doing tremendous work over the years, on their own time and often free of charge, to defend people who have been wrongfully convicted. We need to congratulate and thank lawyers of that calibre for having the heart to represent people, and having seen the evidence, defend them, being able to overturn many convictions. I congratulate them for all the work they have done.

I, for one, am prepared to accept this resolution and to support it before I see the report by the former Justice Sydney Robins. I'm puzzled as to why, on the other hand, the Attorney General hasn't presented that report to us. He has it, has had it, has read it, and we're still waiting for the minister to pronounce himself on what it is that he's going to do on the basis of that report. I'm a bit critical of the Attorney General for not having announced a view on that report. But in spite of that, I believe, on the basis that Mr. Truscott has been declared a victim of a miscarriage of justice, that he deserves compensation, which is the least, in my view, that we can do and should do. So I'm prepared to support the Liberal member from Guelph and to support many other Liberal members who are going to support a resolution to push the Ontario government, through the Attorney General, to make sure that compensation is given to a man who has sought justice for 50 years to clear his name, for a murder he did not commit, and hope that we will have a unanimous resolution of all the members in this House to achieve this end.

1430

Mrs. Laura Albanese: I am very glad to rise to speak in support of the motion by the MPP from Guelph.

As a journalist, I followed the story of Steven Truscott throughout the years, and I remember the interest and the shock that Mr. Truscott's story sparked, and the compassion people feel when they still think about this case today. I remember when in October 2004, the Kaufman report led the federal Minister of Justice to find that there was a "reasonable basis to conclude that a miscarriage of justice likely occurred." After all those many years, the justice system once again was going to re-examine this case.

Finally, there was the beginning of acknowledgment that something had gone terribly wrong in the prosecution of this case. As many people, and perhaps especially as mothers would do, my thoughts immediately turned to my children. I imagined the little boy that Steven Truscott had been when he first got mixed up in the terrible tragedy for which he was later tried. What a terrible thing it was to realize that a little boy had not been protected, not been given the fair and impartial trial that we demand of our justice system. I asked myself, "What if that was my son?"

I know that many people were relieved to see the case referred to the Ontario Court of Appeal so that the process of justice could move forward once again. This case gripped our imagination. Then, of course, we know that in August 2007, this past summer, the Ontario Court of Appeal came to its conclusion. It set aside the conviction and acquitted Mr. Truscott.

I again found myself coming face to face with people who had been touched by the story of Steven Truscott. I live in and represent York South-Weston, a riding that is in the northwest part of Toronto, nowhere near the riding that my colleague the member for Guelph represents, and nowhere near where the original crime occurred. Yet, as I met and talked to people at their doors last summer, I found that some residents from York South-Weston who remembered that I had followed the story were once again putting themselves in the shoes of Steven Truscott and were commenting on the story. We wondered if such a fate would have been possible today, especially considering the recent advances in forensic sciences. But we all know that's not what happened in Steven Truscott's case.

The motion that I am supporting today put forward by the member for Guelph recognizes that the acquittal of Steven Truscott was the best legal decision possible, given the circumstances. But beyond the legal decision that applies to Steven Truscott, we as a society must go some way to reconciling the miscarriage of justice that he has suffered. Providing compensation will go some way towards ensuring that our justice system is held accountable. It would also provide some resolution to this case that has gripped us for so long. Thank you to the member for Guelph for tabling this motion.

Mr. Mike Colle: I also want to thank the member for Guelph for giving us the opportunity to be part of history here today. I think it's quite a daunting task to try and bring justice to Steven Truscott, and I commend her for doing this.

I also want to thank George Allain and the students at Humberview high school in Bolton here for also being part of history. They're not only participating in this private member's motion today, they've actually moved awareness toward getting more appreciation of the injustice done to Steven Truscott.

The member for Welland mentioned James Lockyer and his great work in this area of giving justice to those wrongfully accused. I also want to recall the great work done by Arthur Maloney, who long before many of us were here represented many convicted persons in Ontario. He fought day and night his whole career to end the death penalty. As a result of his pioneering work done at that time, Canada eventually eliminated the death penalty.

You can see what could have happened. We all know about, as the students from Humberview call them, the three Ms: David Milgaard, Guy Paul Morin and Donald Marshall Jr. They would have been put to death if the death penalty had been left in Canada.

Judges, juries, prosecutors and lawyers are all human. They all make mistakes. We know that through DNA there are all kinds of people every day being freed. There was just a gentleman in the United States who spent 28 years in a Texas prison, and through DNA he was finally proven innocent. Thankfully, the death penalty wasn't applied in this case to this 14-year-old student. There are a lot of students here today. Just imagine what it's like.

The thing I could never figure out was—sometimes we hear lawyers talk and we hear technical and forensic experts talk: How can they have convicted this 14-year-old boy based on the contents of a stomach? The whole argument, in my layperson's viewing of the case over the last number of decades, was that it all hinged on the contents of a stomach and the timing of the disintegration of certain bacteria in the stomach. That was essentially the whole case that the crown had in convicting this 14-year-old boy. Then we found out later that even this evidence about stomach contents was, at best, very uncertain. Yet this young 14-year-old spent so many dark days behind bars.

This motion gives us an opportunity to correct a wrong. By standing up here today and voting in favour of the motion, we put aside all those arguments about the contents of that poor person's stomach—the victim's—and we put a human face on this tragedy and say, "Yes, this 14-year-old student, his family and now his children will finally get some justice."

Again, I thank the member, I thank the students and I thank the advocates who have stood behind Steven Truscott through all these years. Maybe we, in our own way, as members of the Legislature, can say, "Let's right this wrong here today."

Mr. Frank Klees: It's a very important issue before the House today, but what is disappointing to me is that not only does it show that there is a failure in our justice system; it shows a lack of leadership on the part of this government.

What I would question today and ask people across this province to consider is why, if the Attorney General of this province has a report in his hands that he has read, that he is privy to, and he has not shared that information with members of this House who are today being asked to debate the very issue that was put to a justice in this province to make a recommendation to the Attorney General—why are we, as a Legislative Assembly, being asked to debate an issue about which the Attorney General already has an opinion? He is now asking us to render a decision. I think it's highly inappropriate.

I would simply ask this: If the Attorney General felt that this was an appropriate forum, why is he not here to participate in the debate? If we believe that it's the role of the Legislature to make a decision like this, then why would the Attorney General ask a justice to render his opinion?

I believe that we have a serious question about our jurisdiction here, and I'm concerned about how this government has failed to show leadership on this issue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Ms. Sandals, you have up to two minutes to respond.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'd like to thank my colleagues from York Centre, York South–Weston and Eglinton–Lawrence for their remarks, and from Dufferin–Caledon, Welland, Whitby–Oshawa, Trinity–Spadina and Newmarket–Aurora for their remarks. I would particularly like to thank the member from Huron–Bruce, who I hope members realize is the member from Clinton, for sending in her written remarks. I know that Mrs. Mitchell wanted to speak this afternoon, but she had an event that she was committed to in her riding.

1440

I think it's really, really important that the citizens of the community in which Steven currently lives, and the citizens in the community in which the original crime took place, are both saying, "Yes, there should be compensation."

I do want to take issue with the comments of the member from Whitby–Oshawa. In the first place, yes, it is true that there are federal-provincial guidelines for compensation that speak to the issue of factual innocence being proven. But it is not true that that has traditionally been what has been required. There have been numerous cases where compensation has been awarded that factual innocence was not proven, and many cases, then, where the federal-provincial guidelines have been ignored.

While I'm not a lawyer, I can certainly figure out when—excuse my language—the law is being a bit of an ass. We've got a situation here—

Mr. Peter Kormos: Never mind the lawyers.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Peter gives me permission.

We've got a situation here where the law says—or at least this guideline says—that you should prove factual innocence, and then to send the case off to a forum where it's legally impossible to prove factual innocence. Of course, there is no factual innocence. The court acquitted him. He should be compensated.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Just for members of the audience and the students here, the vote on this matter will take place about 100 minutes from now. We have two more ballot items to deal with.

LORI DUPONT ACT (DOMESTIC VIOLENCE PROTECTION), 2008

LOI LORI DUPONT DE 2008 SUR LA PROTECTION CONTRE LA VIOLENCE FAMILIALE

Mr. O'Toole moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence / Projet de loi 10, Loi, à la mémoire de Lori Dupont, visant à mieux protéger les victimes de violence familiale.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Mr. O'Toole, pursuant to standing order 97, you have up to 12 minutes for your presentation.

Mr. John O'Toole: I want to first start by recording a bit of background on this particular case. The issue of domestic violence and the statistics in Canada over the last five years show that 1.2 million Canadians were victims of domestic violence. We need to look beyond the statistics and look at individuals and their families, and how we can best protect them as legislators.

We can give vulnerable people immediate access to court orders that will safeguard their lives and the lives of their loved ones. We can give vulnerable people immediate access to court orders. As well, applications for emergency intervention orders, as described in Bill 10, would be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. That's access to justice. That's the theme of the entire legislation.

What draws my interest to this particular bill is looking even locally in my own constituency. The first instance was Jennifer Copithorn. Ten years ago, Glen and Brenda Copithorn lost their daughter Jennifer in a tragic accident outside her workplace in Bowmanville. In fact, it was across the road from my constituency office, and it reminds me each day I walk past there how we are all affected by these tragic events. Her boyfriend was charged with first-degree murder. Although this tragedy took place, as I said, years ago, it reminds us how vulnerable families can be.

Another case is Arlene May. In 1999, the court of Ontario held an inquest into the murder of Arlene May by her boyfriend, Randy Iles. Arlene May was murdered in March 1996 by her former boyfriend, who then killed himself. Arlene's murder followed months of abuse, threats and harassment, which she had reported to police numerous times. At the time of the murder-suicide, her former boyfriend had been charged with several offences against Arlene and was free on bail that prohibited him from having any contact with her.

Another sad case was Gillian Hadley. Gillian Hadley was murdered in June 2000 by her husband, Ralph Hadley, from whom she was separated. He had assaulted her and her disabled child, and had criminal charges pending against him. He had been charged with criminal harassment after stalking her following their separation. He was under a restraining order at the time of her murder, the issue here.

Lori Dupont from Amherstburg applied for a restraining order in April 2005 against Dr. Marc Daniel, an anaesthesiologist with whom she had had a relationship until it ended acrimoniously. But the man contested the order, and a court date to hear the case was set a month after her death. She was killed at her workplace, Hôtel-Dieu Grace Hospital, on November 12, 2005. She left behind her daughter, age 11, and her parents, Barb and John Dupont.

Domestic violence prevention in our community: We must pay tribute to the hard work in our communities on a day-to-day basis. Laws are important, and that's why we're discussing Bill 10 today, but prevention of domestic violence is also a matter of education, awareness, support for victims, access to justice and other support issues. It takes hard work and dedication for an entire community.

In my own community of Durham, I, Mrs. Elliott and the other members from Durham, I'm sure, have worked closely with the DRIVEN program—Durham region's intimate-relationship violence empowerment network—and Detective Tracey Marshall of the Durham Regional Police, and the work they do on an ongoing basis. DRIVEN is hosting a domestic violence disconnect workshop on June 18. I have attended and worked with the organization and have respect for the work they do.

Bethesda House, executive director Jaki MacKinnon: I've worked with her, as well as the ministry, in supporting shelters and other services they provide.

Luke's Place: executive director Carol Barkwell, and the work she does.

Women's Multicultural Resource and Counselling Centre: Esther Enyolu.

Neighbours and friends and all of the families I've mentioned play an important part of the education, outreach and support that I have mentioned.

Importantly, Ron Dancey, who is the retired director of health and social services of Durham region, is a strong advocate on social issues within Durham region at all times.

I would like, with your indulgence, to take a few minutes and acknowledge an e-mail that I received today from Barb Dupont, the mother of Lori. It says:

"Thank you so much for keeping us informed of the status of the bill and your invitation to attend the second reading. Unfortunately I have a previous commitment ... in memory of my daughter, Lori. Physically, I will not be present with you on Thursday, May 15, but I will be there emotionally and thinking about what is taking place as a result of my daughter's tragic death."

In fact, I believe she's presenting a bursary for Nursing Week this week. Her daughter being a nurse, it was appropriate for her to be there to celebrate that recognition.

I have an e-mail from Greg Monforton, the lawyer for the Dupont family: "I sincerely applaud your efforts on behalf of all those within our province impacted by the blight of domestic violence. It may very well be that Lori Dupont's tragic murder could have been prevented if she had access to the type of measures contemplated by your bill."

In fact, the bill comes right out of the recommendations of the inquest. This was one of a number of a number of recommendations that was picked up, and that's indeed the genesis of the bill itself.

Karen Bertrand, local coordinator for ONA, the Ontario Nurses' Association, local 008—Lori was a member of this particular local—took the time as well, and she says: "I received a copy of Bill 10, An Act in memory of Lori Dupont, that you have introduced as a private member's bill in the Ontario Legislature. I am writing to offer my full support of this bill and want to thank for your initiative. What a powerful way to effect positive change in Lori's memory."

That's really the most personal aspect of this, and why it's named the Lori Dupont Act. "I do believe"—she goes on to say—"that Bill 10 will make a difference and provide some protection to those who are in domestic situations that threaten their safety. It is important that the protection can be accessed any time, day or night. And I note your bill speaks to Sunday situations as well."

One of your colleagues, our colleague the member from Glengarry—Prescott—Russell, Jean-Marc, wrote—and I appreciate that as well: "Jean-Marc had to be in the riding tomorrow but had asked me to let you know" that he was in support of the bill.

I'd also like to recognize the work of my son and his good friend who actually came up with the idea when we talked about it as a family. I have three daughters, and my wife and I feel drawn into their families, and we were discussing the tragedy in my community and this whole domestic thing. Erin, my oldest boy, who is a practising lawyer, came up with the idea and looked at the history.

1450

The history is that there has already been a bill in the Legislature. It's really important that we take note of that. I believe it was Bill 117, introduced by Jim Flaherty back in September 2000. It received royal assent, but it has never been proclaimed. I've inquired with Mr. Bentley, the Attorney General, and I'm curious to this day why it has not been given assent into law.

By doing this, all of us, with our voices today, can perhaps get the Attorney General the support he needs to move forward and act on this bill, so we can all feel a part of doing the right thing. That's an empowerment we often don't share in the Legislature, which many times works more in a political manner rather than working for the rights of the people of Ontario.

Domestic violence is a crime against abused people. It deeply affects children who witness violence in their families and destabilizes the family itself. Domestic violence is a crime against the very foundation of an orderly society and strong family units.

I have previously mentioned the figure of 1.2 Canadians affected by domestic violence. This means that in real terms an estimated 653,000 women and 546,000 men encounter some form of domestic violence. Bill 10 would provide prompt intervention to protect victims of domestic violence similar, as I've said, to Bill 117, passed in 2000 but never proclaimed into law. Requests for frequent intervention orders could be made 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Designated judges or—and this is important—justices of the peace would be available to hear applications for emergency intervention orders.

Think of the cases where someone has applied for an order and has to wait for a court date. In the intervening time, as happened in Ms. Dupont's tragic circumstances—the least suspecting person of all, thinking the justice system is there for them—there's no method of bringing action against someone until that order is actually executed. Applications or sworn statements by telephone would be accepted. Non-emergency applications would be made through the family court system.

Respondents to cases where a spouse or domestic partner fears for their safety because of abuse, threats of violence against themselves or family members, or stalking—victims and their respondents have 30 days to request a hearing to change or halt the emergency intervention order. Domestic violence intervention orders are similar to the restraining order for abusive partners or ex-partners. However, under the Domestic Violence Protection Act, they could be clearer, more enforceable and more accessible, and would allow for criminal charges when breached. What the ultimate charges would be for breaching the order is very important.

In the December 2007 inquest into the death of Lori Dupont, there were 26 recommendations including initiatives to protect workers from domestic violence in the workplace. In fact, I have written to the Minister of Labour on the issue of making harassment a health and safety issue within the workplace. Much of what we've talked about is tolerance and is best dealt with by educating people. That's what I hope to hear today, as I hope the Attorney General does as well.

Some of the things an intervention order can do, as I've said, would include preventing the respondent from approaching the victim, their relatives or their family, and preventing the respondent from communicating with the same. It may require the respondent to get counseling, which I think is extremely important. It may require the respondent to vacate the applicant's residence.

There are a number of initiatives that I think are important. But most important of all, each of us has a responsibility to educate against domestic violence in whatever form. Violence in any form is an assault on society itself. We can have major disagreements in this Legislature, but we can still respect one another. That's what I think we should take out of today.

I'm in hope that the discussion today will assist the Attorney General to leverage the bill that exists, Bill 117, into law. Nothing more than doing the right thing would be the outcome.

I appreciate the opportunity to listen to other voices on this today, and I look forward to the debate. At the end of the time, I hope the minister does the right thing and moves this into law.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Ms. Andrea Horwath: It's my pleasure to rise this afternoon and speak a little bit about Bill 10, the Lori Dupont Act (Domestic Violence Protection), 2007. I think, first and foremost, it's important to acknowledge that the member has brought forward a bill for a very important reason, and that is a bill that is to protect people who are experiencing domestic violence, to find ways to provide the supports and the assistance that are needed, the pieces that we can actually get to through legislation, so that at every possible turn, there is an opportunity for a person—most often a woman; let's put the facts out there—to be able to escape a situation of family violence, domestic violence, woman abuse or spousal abuse. There are many ways that we say the words oftentimes, and the women who are active on these issues would rather we say it straight out. If it sounds ugly, that's okay, because it is ugly. Sometimes words like “domestic violence”—it doesn't sound as brutal.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: It sounds euphemistic.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: It almost sounds euphemistic, my friend from Trinity-Spadina says. So we use words like woman abuse, violence against women and those kinds of terms to actually state out front the brutality of the kinds of experiences, unfortunately, that many women have at the hands of their partners. Lori Dupont was one of those women—Lori Dupont was one of those many women, as the mover of the bill actually indicated in his remarks. The reality is that there are women today who are experiencing domestic violence as we speak, and there will be women tomorrow who are being battered by their spouses or by their significant others. It goes across every socio-economic strata. It goes through every ethno-cultural community. There's no boundary, if you will, to the women who will experience domestic violence in their lifetime. In fact, the statistics are staggering.

It's interesting: What this bill, really, is trying to do is get the government to move on a bill that has been put in the Legislature in the past. There had been a bill introduced, Bill 117, that had gone through a great deal of work here in this Legislature. It passed third reading, but the bill was never proclaimed. So it would be pretty easy, actually—my friend Peter Kormos says that he was the justice critic at the time, and he sat on the committee that reviewed that bill at the time, and he says, quite clearly, that this can be addressed pretty much immediately. All the government needs to do is proclaim Bill 117.

I don't purport to have depth of knowledge about Bill 117. I know that my friend the member for Welland has gone through that process. He assures me that there was a lot of great stuff in Bill 117. There was a lot of good work done there, and that at that time, we were supportive of Bill 117.

But the issue that has to be kept in mind is that any number of pieces of legislation that we have are only beneficial to the point that they're actually utilized and brought into a living sphere to help the women in communities across this province who are facing this kind of abuse. I have to say, there is a lot of work that needs to be done in that vein. We have huge situations—I guess I can call them situations. We have had a number of lobbies. We have the Step It Up! campaign, where the women's movement has come here and put 10 steps in front of us of what this government needs to do to start addressing domestic violence. We know some of the huge gaps in service that exist. We know that women's shelters are absolutely underfunded. We know that sexual assault centres are absolutely underfunded. If I'm not mistaken, sexual assault centres are one of the only organizations or groups that provide service in Ontario of this nature—which is an absolutely important and immediate support for victims of violence—that are required to fundraise a significant amount of their budget. They don't get a basic operational budget. They are required to, as part of the pact or relationship with the government—and I'm not saying that it's just this government; I'm sure it's an historic issue.

1500

The reality is, these services are needed. They're necessary, and as a society, we need to take care of these women and provide the opportunity for them and their children to escape violence. That opportunity includes things like full funding of sexual assault centres and transition houses. We lost 28 transition houses in Hamilton—28 units gone because the government wasn't prepared to maintain the funding. So we're losing services.

The government puts forward programs that tell families, neighbours and friends that if you're seeing a situation of domestic violence—and here's what it looks like—then you should intervene and get that person help; you should send this person to a website or give them a phone number. But the problem is, if women actually take that advice from their neighbours, friends and family members who are intervening on their behalf, guess what? Sure, they can go and lay charges. Sure, they can do all that kind of thing. But guess what? There are no services for them once it's done. They can't get into a shelter. There isn't any transitional housing. There are no supports: no employment supports, no clothing allowance, no travel supports. Alberta has all those things, but of course I would be naïve to think that Ontario would want to have anything that Alberta would have when it comes to programs for domestic violence. Shocking that we actually don't have programs as good as in a place like Alberta, but nonetheless—

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Legal aid, for example.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: We don't have legal aid supports for women who are leaving domestic violence situations, women who are trying to escape. Legal aid—who's kidding whom? We don't have enough legal aid for anybody, but in this situation particularly, the financial burden that a woman is already facing when she makes the decision to finally leave—because we know that it sometimes takes two or three times before a woman is actually able to leave an abusive situation. When they finally get to that point where they leave, lo and behold, they find out that all the things that are talked about, and indicated in all the rhetoric that these things are available to women, are not available.

One of the things that happened in Lori Dupont's horrific situation: As we know, she was a nurse and her ex-partner was a doctor, an anaesthetist, I believe, who worked in the same hospital. She had told her employer many times that she was being threatened and felt uncomfortable and was worried about that situation in the hospital. The inquest came out with a number of specific recommendations, and it wasn't new in terms of these kinds of violent situations that then translate into the workplace, because there have been others that have had the same experience in the past, where a supervisor or someone in a position of power in the workplace in these cases were sexually harassing these women, but the bottom line is the same. In a workplace environment, when we know there is harassment and violence going on, it's not good enough for the employer to just walk away from that, to close a blind eye and pretend that there is no obligation.

In fact, one of the things that I've done myself—I used to have a similar bill in Lori Dupont's memory, around sexual harassment in the workplace, and I've recently reintroduced it. It's about harassment and violence in the workplace. So it's expanded a little bit, but it's an amendment to the Occupational Health and Safety Act, which is actually one of the things that are in the jury recommendations on the Lori Dupont inquest. One of those recommendations includes the right to refuse unsafe work or that the Occupational Health and Safety Act be reviewed to determine whether there can be amendments made that would give protection of women, or protection of people but women most often, so that they can refuse to work if they think their life or well-being is threatened. It's a simple measure. Simply adding that to the reasons for work refusal: harassment and violence and bullying in the workplace.

Many other jurisdictions have already done this. In fact, in some of the Scandinavian countries, there are healing centres where workers go if they've had that experience, and they get counselling and supports.

There's another thing, putting aside Bill 29 and going back to Bill 10: The reality is that women who are leaving domestic violence situations, women who are leaving a situation where they are being abused in their home, don't have access to the kinds of counselling, their children are not getting access to the kinds of counselling, that are necessary. This violent behaviour, this abuse, does a lot of things to a woman and it does a lot of things to the children who witness it, a lot of things emotionally and psychologically. It causes a great amount of trauma and a great amount of distress, not only physically, yet the supports that are necessary to make sure that women can become whole again, that they can begin to rebuild their lives, that they can begin to go back to work, that they can begin to go back to being nurturing parents with their children after leaving that traumatic situation—those supports aren't there. The counselling doesn't exist. I shouldn't say it doesn't exist, but there isn't enough of it there to support women as they leave these situations of abuse.

This bill might have a few problems in it. There are some things that we're a little a bit concerned about. We really think that this bill deserves a hearing at a committee level. I'm really hoping the member is successful in getting this bill into a committee so that we can review it in greater detail and get some input from particularly women and women's organizations, who have been working so hard in this field for a very long time here in the province.

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: I'm pleased to join in the debate on Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence.

I want to start by expressing my sincerest condolences to the Dupont family, to the extended community and to the professional community, which have suffered as a result of what is a tragic loss.

I want to talk about the fact that I've worked in this field for many, many years. My first volunteer experience, as a very young teenager, was working in a domestic violence shelter, observing and seeing the tragedy of women fleeing abusive relationships. As a young lawyer, it was a very large part of my practice. I would have to say to you, Speaker, that I sought and obtained more restraining orders than I care to think about.

In obtaining those restraining orders to protect women and their children, I often sat at my computer drafting the documents that we would need to obtain that court protection with tears streaming down my face. My clients were telling me horrific, heart-wrenching stories, and we were taking that information and using the justice system to the extent that that system can be used to protect women and their children who seek to flee abuse.

When I came into this House, I was pleased that very early on in our first mandate, under the leadership of the Premier, I was asked to develop a comprehensive domestic violence action plan. As part of that plan, we invested $82 million in a four-year domestic violence action plan that sought to emphasize prevention and better community support for abused women and their children. Not to say that we did not do a great deal of work to improve the legal protections for women and their children, but as a lawyer who understood firsthand that only about 30%—30%, 35% or 36%—of women will seek protection from the justice system. There is so much more to do.

As part of that domestic violence action plan, we sought to improve restraining orders, to work with the justice community and the community partners to make changes to improve that system so that it could be turned to by women in circumstances such as Lori Dupont's, because Lori Dupont was in a very clearly identified high-risk group. She had recently separated and she had had what was a historically difficult relationship, an abusive relationship, with her spouse.

The work that we did was comprehensive in terms of making sure that there is a variety of initiatives put in place amending the Children's Law Reform Act to require courts to consider, for the very first time, domestic violence when making orders relating to custody and access—it's a significant improvement; reviewing the proposed standard form for restraining orders; spending $1.4 million to fund the partner assault response program and to strengthen victim support; to expand the bail safety project; to allocate funds for domestic violence within the francophone community and other identified high-risk communities; to expand the domestic violence court program to all 54 jurisdictions in Ontario; and to make sure that we had a new early victim contact program and additional funds for supervised access. In the time allotted, I'm not able to go through all of the achievements that were made to improve and protect women who are, unfortunately, victims of domestic violence. But what I do say to you is that there is always more work to do.

1510

Community groups in my community of Etobicoke-Lakeshore: MicroSkills, helping women who are fleeing abusive relationships gain those critical skills so that they have the economic independence to establish themselves on their own, look after their children, and make sure that they have a safe place to go. Women's Habitat is doing incredibly important work in that regard.

As I worked to develop the domestic violence action plan for the province, I went to those experts to talk to them. We had some 30 roundtables in a number of months to ask, "What do you think are the areas of importance that the government should take action on?" One of the things that was clearly identified to us was that there was a great deal of concern with respect to the proposed bill, the domestic violence protection bill, that it would not be workable on the ground.

So I stand today to say that there is obviously more work to do. We need to hone in on how we can best protect women, because there's no doubt in my mind that every single member of this Legislature is going to stand up and say that they want to better protect women. But we need to take guidance from those experts to make sure that whatever we put in place can truly be used to protect women and children, and that we make sure we put in laws and protections that are workable. That's my goal here today.

The previous speaker to this bill talked about a private member's bill that she had put in place. I would say to you that I too put in a bill that examined specifically protecting against violence and workplace harassment. It was Bill 131, which was to amend "the Occupational Health and Safety Act to impose duties on employers, supervisors and workers" when it came to workplace violence and harassment. I based that bill on ideas raised by the Centre for Research and Education on Violence Against Women and Children, entitled Workplace Harassment and Violence. In that bill, I provided some clear detail and a concrete set of formalized policies and procedures to be put in place in workplaces with specific regard to acts of violence in the workplace, and that we should have a process whereby the employers would understand the severity of the threats and potential violence against an individual in their workplace.

I would suggest that the place for us to go at this point in time is to have a dialogue again on how we can refresh our laws that protect women. Because we always need to continue to increase those protections and make sure that we keep our workplaces free from violence and bullying. We have made amendments with respect to the Ontario Human Rights Code, and some of the experts that I've worked with over some 20-plus years have indicated that they believe that will be an avenue of increased protection. We need to make sure that our judiciary, our crown attorneys, all of those in the criminal justice field and protection field are best able to protect women.

We all want to keep them safe in all aspects of their lives. Today is a good day for us to talk about further steps that we can take by this Legislature. I look forward to being involved as we continue to do more, as we always should, to better protect women and their children around our great province.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I rise in the House today in support of my caucus colleague from Durham on Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence. I congratulate my caucus colleague for taking this initiative, but I also want to extend my sympathies to the family of Lori Dupont, who are left to bear this burden and this horrible tragedy.

It is sad that Ms. Dupont's tragedy is not an isolated incident. There are similar cases across this province, and I am proud that my colleague from Durham is taking action on this.

In Burlington, we have a very special facility within the confines of Joseph Brant Hospital, and it's called Nina's Place. Nina's Place is a sexual assault and domestic violence crisis centre, named in memory of Nina de Villiers. Nina was the victim of a tragic assault in Burlington in 1991. Nina's Place provides specialized care, police services and agency referrals for men, women and children who have experienced sexual assault and domestic violence within the past 72 hours. This is a safe haven that protects both the rights and the needs of the victim.

It was just last week that I attended an open house at Nina's Place, and I continue to be so impressed by the endless compassion and quiet optimism demonstrated by the staff and volunteers. Nina's place staff and volunteers work tirelessly to assist victims of domestic violence cope with the tragedy they have experienced and, hopefully, to help them heal.

It is a testament to the strength and courage of a mother, Priscilla de Villiers, that victims of sexual assault and domestic violence not only have a safe haven in which to seek shelter and care, but the approach of law enforcement officials and corresponding legislation has been impacted in a positive way by this courageous mother.

We can offer victims of domestic violence much-needed peace of mind by supporting Bill 10. These victims have witnessed our justice system fail them time and time again. As legislators, we have a tremendous opportunity, but also a responsibility to prevent a tragedy from occurring by giving victims of domestic violence access to emergency intervention orders 24 hours a day. Emergency intervention orders are a help to the risk of victims. These orders will have the power to restrict someone who is threatening or harassing a former domestic partner from contacting that partner or their family.

I don't want to use too much time with statistics, but there are three that I think are really important on why Bill 10 ought to be supported. They're very disturbing: First of all, 64% of female homicide victims are killed by their current or past partners; 87% of sexual offenders are actually known to their victims; in Canada, four out of five people murdered by their spouses are women murdered by men.

As a mother and a grandmother, when I read these statistics, I am quite appalled. These numbers are much too high, and action must be taken to stop these incidents before they start. Bill 10 offers that extra layer of protection in a complex and emotionally charged situation. It's been my pleasure to speak to this bill today.

Ms. Leeanna Pendergast: I'd like to begin by complimenting my colleague from Durham, who mentioned that this is about education. As a teacher, I say, yes, it is. It's about educating our society and our community about domestic violence.

Our government is committed to finding better ways to protect women and children from domestic violence. Each year, this government invests more than $190 million in support to protect women from violence, including counselling and support services. The McGuinty government is investing $82 million in a comprehensive, four-year domestic violence action plan. It emphasizes prevention and better community support for abused women and their children, as we heard under the guidance of my colleague from Etobicoke-Lakeshore.

I'm reminded of a quote. Of course, as an English teacher, I always have to give you a quote. This one today is from George Santayana, who says that we must always remember the past so that we're not condemned to repeat it. I'll say it again. We have to always be reminded of the past so that we're not condemned to repeat it.

So let us remember the tragic story of Lori Dupont and always honour her memory. But we must never repeat it. We must always remember so we're not condemned to repeat it.

1520

This government, the McGuinty government, has a plan. We have a domestic violence action plan, supported by $82 million over four years, to protect women and their children from domestic violence.

Let me share with you some of my personal experiences in this area to illustrate our government's commitment to support for victims of domestic violence. On April 17, I had the honour of participating in an announcement with Attorney General Chris Bentley and Minister Matthews, the minister responsible for women's issues. It was an announcement of $8.2 million in new funding to ensure that women who are victims of abuse and their children get help faster and are better protected from future harm.

Two weeks ago, I had the privilege of launching, on behalf of Minister Matthews, the Neighbours, Friends and Families for York region along with Chief Armand La Barge and Superintendent Pederson. Let's be clear:

Domestic violence is not a private matter. It touches all of us and we all have a responsibility. Neighbours, Friends and Families is designed to help people recognize the warning signs and the risk factors. Again, it's about teaching people how to reach beyond the doorsteps and help people in their community.

Our government recognizes that breaking the cycle of domestic violence is complex. There are no easy answers. In Kitchener, we have a one-stop shopping model, and it exemplifies the community partners working together. The family violence project of Waterloo region is a one-stop shopping model. By entering the door, the victim can connect with a person they can trust, who will guide them through a number of services, all in a caring and supportive environment.

It's housed in the Catholic Family Counselling Centre in Kitchener under the leadership of Cathy Brothers and Andrew Wilding. Pam Mank coordinates the services. Waterloo Regional Police Service houses their domestic violence unit right in Catholic family counselling, under the leadership of Staff Sergeant Sean Tout. The crown attorney is under the same roof, Theresa Donaldson; and Mary Zilney, with women's services is, again, under the same roof.

This one-stop shopping model exemplifies several key aspects of this government's commitment to ending domestic violence, including a living model of community partnerships. Collaborative partners are committed to working together to end the cycle of domestic violence. Not only will we not repeat a past that had no plan to deal with the complex problems of domestic violence, this government is leading in finding better ways to protect women and their children from domestic violence.

Ms. Laurie Scott: I'm pleased to join the debate this afternoon on Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence. I wanted to thank the member from Durham for introducing this bill that would give victims of domestic violence access to emergency intervention orders 24 hours per day. The orders would have the power to restrict someone who's threatening or harassing a former domestic partner from contacting the partner or their family.

It could have made all the difference in the case of Lori Dupont, and thus, the name of the bill today is in memory of Lori Dupont, who was a nurse at Hôtel-Dieu Grace Hospital in Windsor. In November 2005, she was stabbed to death by her former boyfriend, who was a doctor at the hospital where they both worked.

I think that most of the members here know that I was a nurse for over 20 years, and now, as a legislator in the province, I feel strongly that it's my role and the role of everyone here in the chamber today to do what we can to protect those who can't protect themselves, whether they're nurses, home workers, spouses—anyone who can't protect themselves.

In the case of Lori Dupont, according to the Windsor Star, Ms. Dupont was accompanied by her mother, a friend and her nursing union representative. They went to the courthouse on Monday, April 11, 2005, and applied for a restraining order against Dr. Mark Daniel. The doctor subsequently opposed the action, which forced a hearing before a justice of the peace that was eventually scheduled for December 22, 2005. That was more than a month after Lori Dupont's murder.

Had Ms. Dupont been able to get proper intervention, as outlined in the member for Durham's private member's bill today, the story would have had a completely different ending.

The Windsor Star also pointed out that this tragedy was considered a workplace harassment issue because the management of the hospital had scheduled Lori Dupont and Dr. Daniel to work the same shift. Ms. Dupont's family, the Chatham-Kent Sexual Assault Crisis Centre and the Ontario Nurses' Association were very disappointed when the Ontario Ministry of Labour decided not to launch an investigation into workplace harassment and ministry spokesman Matt Blajer concluded the matter was a murder.

In December 2007, the inquest into the death of Lori Dupont made 26 recommendations, which were welcomed by the Ontario Hospital Association, and included initiatives to protect workers from domestic violence in the workplace.

I commend the member for Durham for doing his part in taking a horrible tragedy, a very unjust situation, and coming forward with something that will increase the protection of victims and provide a further line of defence for victims of cowardly violence.

Mr. Peter Shurman: I rise as well to speak in favour of this private member's bill on behalf of my colleague the member for Durham.

Like all members of this House, I wish there wasn't a need for the Domestic Violence Protection Act or the Lori Dupont act. However, domestic violence is a blight that continues to mar our community, making legislation like this sadly necessary.

The House has heard the estimate, which my colleague has brought forward, that there are approximately 1.2 million cases of abuse like this in Ontario. I find that hard to believe, frankly, because that is based on what is reported in estimates that our enforcement people bring forward. I would surmise that it's significantly larger than that.

I personally support less government and laws that protect me from you and you from me. That sort of protection was never afforded to Lori Dupont, and she paid the price. She lost her life. Lori was a devoted mother to her daughter. She was a dedicated nurse at Hôtel-Dieu Grace Hospital in Windsor. She was also a victim of domestic violence, and the bill honours her and, in her name, attempts to end that cycle. What a fond hope.

Her case revealed tragic shortcomings in our legal system as it pertains to the issue of domestic violence. These shortcomings crossed her life, but I have to point out that domestic violence didn't just cost Lori her life; it crosses all lines. It crosses the lines of religion, race, colour, family income and whether someone lives in an urban or rural environment.

Dupont was so fearful of her killer—her former boyfriend, and a doctor who was also employed at the hospital—that she asked for security escorts to her car after her night shifts at the hospital. Dupont applied for a restraining order against the doctor in April, but he contested the order and a court date to hear the case was set for December, denying her a key tool of protection. This bill addresses that flaw—the flaw that cost her life. It doesn't matter where she was. She happened to be in Windsor. It could have been Thornhill, it could have been Mississauga, it could have been downtown Toronto.

Officials from Hôtel-Dieu said they earlier considered firing the doctor—the boyfriend—after she complained that she feared for her safety and was being harassed when they ended their relationship. The hospital concluded that there wasn't sufficient evidence to take action, and that's so often the problem—the time delay. How serious is this? In Lori's case, the answer is clearly obvious.

The act would allow for designated judges or justices of the peace to be available to hear applications for emergency intervention on the basis of 24/7 access, and allow non-emergency applications to be made through the family court system. That is essential. Under this act, intervention orders will be clearer, more enforceable and more accessible to those in need, and would allow for criminal charges when breached.

Two final points: The provision for emergency intervention orders is key to this legislation and key to stopping this cycle. It allows action to be taken immediately, without prior notice to the offender. We have too often protected the perpetrator and too seldom protected the victim, whose rights need protection to begin with.

Lori had to wait for her restraining order. If emergency intervention had been available, it could have protected her.

1530

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I'm very pleased to have the opportunity to speak, for a few minutes anyway, on Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence.

I would like to commend and congratulate my friend and colleague from Durham for bringing this matter forward, to basically revive and again bring forward Bill 117 with some changes to further strengthen it. Of course, I'm proud that this bill was originally brought forward by the previous member for Whitby—Oshawa.

What comes through to me, in all of our discussions this afternoon, is how many times we have heard about this happening. How many times have we heard about this cycle repeating itself with people like May-Isles—the May-Isles tragedy was the initiation for Bill 117 in the first place—Gillian Hadley, a resident of Durham region who was murdered in her front yard by her former husband, and now, of course, Lori Dupont, who is the subject of this particular case coming forward? What haunts all of us, I think, is the what-ifs: How close they were to safety, how, if they had only had the safety of an intervention order in this case, their lives might have been saved and, in many cases, their children would have been left with a mother.

I think it's important that we take this time to pause and reflect about what we really are doing in this situation. We like to talk about it a lot, we like to have a day to talk about how domestic violence is terrible, and it is, but what are we actually doing to put our money where our mouth is?

I'd like to say, with all due respect to the member for Kitchener—Conestoga, who was talking about all of the wonderful things that the McGuinty government is doing to prevent domestic violence, if they were really serious about it, why didn't they proclaim into force Bill 117? Why have we not acted on it? Why do we just have another website to call? I totally agree with the comments made by the member for Hamilton Centre, who indicated that we need to have more resources to support women who find themselves in these situations. We need to put more money into shelters and housing for them to transition into employment and so on so that they can get away from these circumstances and be able to live in safety with their children.

I think we need to seriously take a look at this legislation. I do hope that all members on all sides support this. We need to take a step in the right direction and we need to start to move toward action for victims of these terrible crimes.

Please support Bill 10. It's important, and I think that many women in the province will be very grateful for the support they will get by having immediate access to intervention orders.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Mr. O'Toole, you have up to two minutes to respond.

Mr. John O'Toole: I would like to thank all of the members who participated here today, members for Hamilton Centre, Etobicoke—Lakeshore, Kitchener—Conestoga, Whitby—Oshawa, Thornhill, Burlington, Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock and Dufferin—Caledon. In fact, I would say to all of them that the haunting stories we've heard today are the reminder and the purpose for this bill this afternoon.

By no means is it the whole solution, but it is the right solution, and it's one of the solutions. It's one of the recommendations from the coroner's report. I would encourage all members not to think of this as a perfect solution. What I'm calling for is your support to have hearings on an important social issue and allow the Attorney General and all the stakeholders to look at this as something that's a priority. It's a social consequence for all of us in some way in our communities as elected members and leaders. And it should be a non-partisan discussion. Some did bring that part into it. But doing the right thing today is just sending this out to further hearings and further consultation, among the many less important issues that are before us, some of the current legislation that may be occupying our time. This is important. This is about people's lives. It's about giving the stakeholders the right tools and the respect to find solutions.

I would say that after this debate today I am encouraged that, even when speaking earlier with the Attorney General, they get it as well, by sending the right signal in unison here today. Not just the police but the courts are the right place to resolve some of these disputes. Counselling may be important. It isn't like there's one solution for all of these domestic issues, except we can send the message today that it's important to us that our children and families are safe in Ontario.

APOLOGY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LA PRÉSENTATION D'EXCUSES

Mr. Orazietti moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies / Projet de loi 59, Loi concernant la présentation d'excuses.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Pursuant to standing order 97, Mr. Orazietti, you have 12 minutes for your presentation.

Mr. David Orazietti: I appreciate the opportunity to be here this afternoon to speak to this bill. I'm going to read the legal jargon, and then I'm going to talk a little bit about the importance of this bill and why we need to pass this.

"The bill provides that an apology made by or on behalf of a person in relation to any civil matter does not constitute an admission of fault or liability by the person or an acknowledgment of liability in respect of a claim in relation to the matter, does not affect the insurance coverage available to the person making the apology and is not admissible in any judicial or quasi-judicial civil proceeding."

That's the legal framework of this, but I want to spend a few minutes talking about the importance of the bill and why we need to pass it.

First of all, we're talking about our civil court system in Ontario. We are not talking about criminal courts in any way.

If we're going to pass this bill and say that someone who makes an apology in relation to an issue—it does not come before the court—it can't be used against them. But it doesn't take away anyone's rights and it does not preclude anyone from seeking a remedy in the court that they feel is appropriate. I want to make sure that we're all clear on that because that's an important aspect of this piece of legislation. It was also an important aspect when it was discussed in other provinces in this country and when it was passed there as well.

I see this bill as being complementary to our court system. It gives people the opportunity to have closure, to speak frankly in relation to an issue, whether it's a health care issue or a legal issue or some other matter, without having those comments that they're making used against them in a court of law. This has been very constructive in other provinces and it has been very constructive in many US states, and I'm going to talk a little bit about that. But it does not prevent someone from seeking a remedy in the courts, whether or not an apology has been made. So it's certainly not taking anyone's rights away, and I really see this bill as being complementary to them.

I want to talk a little bit about the jurisdictions in which this type of legislation has passed.

It's relatively new in this country. In May 2006, British Columbia was the first province to pass this type of legislation, as a stand-alone piece of legislation. It was passed in Saskatchewan as an amendment to their Evidence Act in May 2007, about a year later. It was subsequently passed in Manitoba, it being the most recent province to pass this type of bill, in November 2007.

It was introduced in the Legislature in Manitoba by a fellow by the name of Jon Gerrard, who was actually a physician and saw a need for this. He said that he was hearing from many people over the years who felt aggrieved that they had failed to get a simple apology—speaking from his profession—from a physician or a nurse even though their conduct had been condemned by a professional association or even the court system. So he saw this as an individual who is a physician in Manitoba as an important way to help resolve some of the issues around—whether it's the health care sector or others—and create an opportunity for a remedy and resolve issues outside of the court system, but, again, not precluding somebody from having the opportunity to take their issue to the courts.

In the United States, there's a little longer experience with this, and there's more comprehensive legislation that has been passed, and it has been passed in a couple of different ways. Thirty-five US jurisdictions have some form of apology legislation. They've passed it in two different ways. For example, in states like Massachusetts, Texas, California, Florida, Washington, Tennessee, Hawaii, Missouri and Indiana, they've decided that they would have a comprehensive apology bill or legislation. In other states, the more populous states, they've limited it to the scope of health care alone. Let's talk about the differences just for a moment. In the states where they have comprehensive apology legislation—you can think of examples, obviously, outside of the health care field. Let's say we're at a construction site and there's a crane operator who's moving some heavy equipment around and something happens on the site and someone is seriously injured. The crane operator knocks something over and injures someone. It might be a colleague or a friend that they've worked with for 20 years. If they run over to their side, as most people would, to try to help them, to get them some medical attention and to say they're sorry, that it's their fault, they didn't mean to do it—those comments, if there are other people around, can be used against them in a court.

1540

So in many US states, they've decided that comprehensive legislation is appropriate. That's really what this bill would be about. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, apology legislation was passed in a comprehensive form. That means it's applicable to all Ontarians. Any Ontarian would be able to express remorse or regret or speak frankly on an issue without having their comments used against them in a court.

There is some evidence here with respect to experience and what this has meant. If we take a minute and ask ourselves: Is there any benefit to doing this? What are the results of doing this? Is this meaningful? We don't have a lot of experience in this country, because we're only talking about the last 18 months to two years in terms of having this in place, and in the province of Manitoba only six months or so. So we don't have a lot of experience with it, but we can anticipate what's taken place based on some of the US experiences.

I want to reference some of those US examples that we can talk about for a moment.

"In 1987, after losing two medical malpractice cases that cost a total of $1.5 million US, the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Lexington, Kentucky, a 400-bed hospital, changed its approach to medical mistakes. It adopted a policy of full disclosure and apology. The approach is credited with reducing lawsuits, settlement costs and defence costs. Seventeen years later"—after they've changed their policy—"only three cases have gone to trial and the average settlement is $16,000, as compared to the national average for veterans' affairs"—hospitals in the United States—" $98,000. In addition, cases closed in two to four months, significantly below the average of two to four years" in the US. So their experience has been positive.

According to the Missouri Medical Law Report of 2005, "Since 2002, the hospitals in the University of Michigan's Health System have been encouraging doctors to apologize for mistakes. Malpractice lawsuits and notices of intent to sue have fallen from 262 filed in 2001 to about 130 a year and their annual attorney fees have since dropped to one-third from $3 million to $1 million."

A US survey found that "in situations when moderate medical errors occurred, only 17% of patients would sue if the physician informed the patient of the error. If the physician did not inform them ... 29% of patients would sue if they later learned of the error." Thirty per cent of all plaintiffs claimed that they would not have sued if there had been an apology.

According to the American Journal of Pharmaceutical Education, they "found that 37% of patients and family members bringing suit may not have done so had there been a full explanation and an apology, factors more significant than monetary compensation."

I know there are going to be some other folks speaking to this, and some who have backgrounds in the medical field and the legal field, and I appreciate and certainly welcome their comments this afternoon.

We know that professional organizations and associations, for obvious reasons, counsel their members not to apologize and not to recognize errors that may have been made because of the liability relationships that go along with that. Their insurance may not be provided if they do that and they are in effect putting themselves in jeopardy if they do that. But that's not necessarily the right thing and it's not what the professional wants to do. They want the opportunity to be able to speak frankly—for example, if we're talking about the health care field—to the patient they're dealing with, and the patients obviously want to be able to receive those types of comments.

When this was introduced in BC, the Attorney General there made some comments around the importance of apologies being made irrespective of all the monetary settlements and the financial compensation; that this is a natural thing to do, a humanitarian response, and we shouldn't allow our legal wrangling to get in the way of that. We shouldn't be hamstringing people for something that is a natural response from what they want to be able to do in a specific instance.

The other comment I want to make is that there is widespread support for this legislation in Ontario, and I want to reference a few of those individuals very briefly.

Phil Hassen, as you know, is a former Deputy Minister of Health in the province of Ontario. This is about what patients need from a health care perspective, although it has broader implications right across all sectors in the province:

"An Apology Act is an important step forward for the people of Ontario and it is consistent with our recently released Canadian Disclosure Guidelines, which aim to increase honest and open communications among health care professionals, patients and the public." Those are comments by Phil Hassen, who is now the CEO of the Canadian Patient Safety Institute, which is based in Edmonton.

"The proposed Apology Act and guidelines are proof of a cultural shift underway in society, recognizing that offering a sincere apology or expression of regret is simply the right thing to do in often very difficult and emotional circumstances. It's a sign of caring, compassion and empathy—not blame or guilt."

This is about allowing the opportunity for individuals to both receive apologies in certain circumstances or those individuals who want to be able to make an apology without having their comments used against them.

Dr. Willet, who's the president of the Ontario Medical Association—she's back practising medicine now in our riding of Sault Ste. Marie and has just made that transition—is on record supporting this, as is Tom Closson, president of the Ontario Hospital Association; Wendy Fucile from the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario; Doris Grinspun, the RNAO; Preston Zuliani, the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario; and Greg Goulin, who's the president of the Ontario Bar Association.

The Ontario Bar Association has been very supportive of this as well. Last year, the Uniform Law Conference of Canada passed a resolution saying that they wanted this passed across the country.

I want to encourage members to support this. This is the right thing to do. This is an important piece of legislation. Not only does it help reduce our costs in our public sector but, more importantly, it allows us to put a human face on issues that are very crucial to people in this province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate? The honourable member from Whitby—Oshawa.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: If I may, with your permission, trade speaking spots with Mr. Kormos, the member from Welland.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The honourable member from Welland.

Mr. Peter Kormos: I thank Ms. Elliott for indulging me and assisting me so that I can get to a 4 o'clock commitment.

This is an interesting piece of legislation. When it was introduced, I recall expressing some significant interest in it, and I continue to have significant interest in it on behalf of New Democrats here at Queen's Park.

Let's understand that there are, in my view, two very distinct communities that have an interest in this type of legislation. One is the alternate dispute resolution community—mediation, primarily. Mediators continue to be fearful that they are not protected by the settlement privilege rule in the common law. Mediators recognize that an apology can be a very effective part of a dispute resolution process. They find themselves clamouring for apology legislation. The other context, of course, is litigators—parties who are engaged in litigation.

It's an interesting arena. I tell you: We are going to support this on second reading. We very much want this bill to go to committee, but we have some concerns. I believe that the committee would be an arena in which those concerns should be and will be best addressed. I anticipate pretty comprehensive committee hearings because this is not as straightforward as it would appear to be, notwithstanding that it is a relatively brief bit of legislation.

1550

This is modelled on the BC legislation, which is the Uniform Apology Act, which is being touted across Canada, but understand that the BC legislation is the most comprehensive apology legislation in the world. There are two very distinct parts to it. One is the apology simpliciter, as Mr. Zimmer might refer to it—he's going to be speaking to this, and he might use Latinisms because he's a lawyer. That's the bare-bones apology.

I should tell you that I want to thank Richard Sage, in legislative library research, who put together some of these scholarly works on apologies. There's a huge wealth of research, with roots in anthropology and psychology among other things, around the social and broader impact of apologies.

In view of the fact that an apology is currently admissible in a civil proceeding, some would argue that the first one, the bare apology, is not an apology at all. In a paper by Prue Vines, The Power of Apology: Mercy, Forgiveness or Corrective Justice in the Civil Liability

Arena, the argument is made that an apology does very little to indicate culpability or liability.

When your dog dies, I say to you, "I'm sorry your dog died." That doesn't mean I killed your dog or that I'm in any way responsible for your dog's death. We console each other at various times—when we're ill, when a family member is ill, when somebody dies—and say we're sorry. That's an expression of regret that's taken very much colloquially to be perceived as an apology.

Now, I put to you that if you're a pedestrian who gets mowed down by a speeding driver, it's one thing for a driver who has just mowed you down to come over to you and say, "I'm sorry." You're lying there, battered, bruised and bleeding. I, for one, would support legislation that prohibits the utilization of that bare apology from being used as evidence of anything, because it really isn't evidence of anything.

The danger is that a trier of fact, be it a judge or jury, might read things into it that simply aren't there, that you can't read into it. "I'm sorry you're lying there bloodied, battered and bleeding," is a mere human response and should not, in and of itself, be taken to acknowledge liability. The exclusion of that is a fair thing.

However, I've got to tell you that if I'm the innocent accident victim and the driver of the car comes over and says, "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to go through the red light," especially if there are no witnesses, I darned well want that to be admissible as evidence. I'm going to be seeking compensation, and I deserve compensation. I'm an innocent victim.

The problem with the former, the bare apology, that's identified in the material, in the research, in the scholarly discussions, as a regret apology, as distinguished from a regret admission apology—two very different things. What are we doing enacting legislation that protects the wrongdoer, who admits not only his or her regret, but liability? What are we doing protecting them from the impact of that admission? It indeed boggles the mind that we would even contemplate that.

Any number of jurisdictions have adopted safe harbour apology legislation, where the regret apology is excluded from evidence by virtue of being deemed inadmissible. This, as I say, is modeled on the broadest—this is a huge net and potentially a very, very dangerous one.

Now, let's go to alternative dispute resolution, and let's understand that settlement privilege applies to all discussions and admissions made in the course of efforts to settle, including an admission of liability. For instance, in the course of mediation, it might well be a very productive thing for the negligent party to admit liability, as well as apologize, to break the logjam in terms of negotiating a settlement. I'm also fearful of pseudo-apologies. As if Bill Clinton hasn't denigrated the mea culpa enough already, we've witnessed over the course of the last decade or two decades this rash of pseudo-apologies from political leaders, from celebrities—be it Mel Gibson or any number of other celebrities—who somehow think that they can absolve themselves of all responsibility for highly inappropriate conduct. Mr. Clinton, after all, did not have sexual relations with that woman. It ended up, of course, he lied, and the apology was clearly nothing more than an effort to extract himself from a very politically unappetizing—as well as the conduct itself—position.

Aaron Lazare, who's in some respects a successor, he in fact makes note—and I've read the book Mea Culpa: A Sociology of Apology and Reconciliation by Nicholas Tavuchis. But Lazare, in a far more recent book, talks very specifically about the pseudo-apology. There are fears that this type of legislation gives rise to the pseudo-apology: apologies that are merely tactical, that have, on the part of the person making the apology, no real intent to effect or demonstrate any remorse or any genuine concern, or any genuine sympathy or empathy. It's the lawyer who sits down with a client and says: "Look, here's the apology. I've written it out for you, and this is how you're going to say it," and that person reads from a text.

This type of legislation has the capacity to further denigrate the apology, which is a very important thing, a functional thing in a civil society, because, you see, the pseudo-apology is far from a real apology. It trivializes apologies. Lazare writes, "People who offer a pseudo-apology are unwilling to take the steps necessary for a genuine apology; that is, they do not acknowledge the offence adequately, or express genuine remorse, or offer appropriate reparations, including a commitment to make changes in the future."

Heck, even Fisher and Yuri recommend the apology as an effective tool, as a ruse in getting to the end goal in the course of negotiations. Don't they, Ms. Wynne? Again, this is the pseudo-apology, because if the purpose of the apology is to induce people to settle more quickly and to settle for less than what would be fair and appropriate compensation, then I say to you that that, in and of itself, is a gross injustice. This type of legislation encourages the use of a pseudo-apology to dupe innocent victims, who are inevitably the weaker party. They don't have the deep pockets. They don't have the high-priced lawyers. They're the injured victim. As long as you've got mediators who insist on this concept of detached neutrality to the point of being neutered, who refuse to perform a role that includes looking out for the weaker party and/or ensuring a just and fair settlement in the course of a negotiated settlement, people are going to be victimized. People are going to be duped.

New Democrats will vote for this on second reading. I wish I had more time now. We'll be looking forward to committee, and we'll be looking forward to what I'm sure will be a huge range of witnesses who will be wanting to come forward. But when I see organizations like the Ontario Medical Association supporting this legislation, like the Ontario Hospital Association—these people are interested in covering their butts. In fact, some of the literature talks about the economic argument, which is one that seems to prevail, and that is, we need this type of legislation to encourage settlements so that we'll be resolving more cases rather than trying them. That, in fact, is a false economy, because that can lead to gross injustices where weaker parties are left uncompensated. That's not our job to facilitate that.

1600

Mr. David Zimmer: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to share my time with my colleagues from Oak Ridges–Markham, Bramalea–Gore–Malton and Etobicoke North.

This is good legislation. This is long-overdue legislation. We ought not to be frightened by this legislation.

In fact, leading jurisdictions in North America have adopted similar legislation. In Canada, British Columbia has adopted similar legislation, as has Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and in the Yukon, similar legislation is pending. In the United States, which is, from many points of view, the home of excessive litigation and huge litigation costs, some 35 states have adopted similar legislation. Some of the leading states that we think of as being very litigious states, with huge amounts of civil litigation, personal injury litigation—the light going on—like Massachusetts, Texas, California and Florida, are the homes of some of the most, if you will, extravagant forms of litigation. Those states and those other provinces see merit in this. Ontario is merely adopting the very best legislation and modelling it after that legislation.

In addition, there's widespread support for this legislation, across the board, with the various health care providers, and I could go through a list of hospital heads and health care providers who recognize the need for this legislation.

Some suggestion has been made that the lawyers in this province acting for the insurance companies, who are the defendants in a lot of this litigation, aren't supportive of the legislation or that somehow the lawyers who represent the plaintiffs and the defendants aren't happy with this legislation. But the president of the Ontario Bar Association, which is the umbrella organization representing all lawyers, both from the plaintiffs' bar and from the defendants' bar, recognizes the need for this legislation. In fact, Greg Goulin, the president of the Ontario Bar Association, says the following: "The Ontario Bar Association (OBA) supports Apology Act legislation and has advised the Attorney General of their desire to see such legislation pass the House." That's from the president of the umbrella organization representing both plaintiffs' lawyers and defendants' lawyers.

From my own personal experience—and I did a lot of work over the years acting on behalf of plaintiffs and on behalf of defendants—I can't remember the number of times I had this conversation with the plaintiff or the defendant or indeed both parties: that they were looking for some way to get out of the litigation. Often, I would hear, "If only I could tell the other side how I really feel, if I could really apologize"; or the party being sued would say, "I want to get an apology out there because it's the right thing to do," but there were all sorts of technical barriers to doing it, and that just kept the litigation going on and on and on.

Anything to reduce the amount of litigation to ensure that we get early and fair settlements is worthwhile. This legislation is a step in that direction.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I do appreciate the opportunity to speak to Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies.

Let me say at the outset that this bill has really challenged me, because my basic training as a lawyer has conditioned me that this is not a good thing to do. As lawyers, we are trained to protect our clients, to act in their best interests and not to have them say or do anything that might jeopardize their position. So it is something that I have struggled with. On the other hand, of course, there is no question that a sincere apology can bring about a healing and closure for people in a way that no money award ever could. So I've really struggled with this and thought really carefully about it and hope that I will be making some helpful remarks in this context.

As has already been mentioned, there has been apology legislation already enacted in three Canadian provinces: British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. There are different types of apology legislation, as has been talked about, and there are different standards that apply, depending on whatever type is chosen. The Ontario legislation that's being proposed does in fact mirror the Uniform Apology Act.

The act basically indicates that an apology cannot be admissible in civil proceedings in court for the purposes of proving liability or as an admission of liability, cannot be used as a confirmation of a cause of action to extend a limitation period and cannot be regarded as an admission of liability for the purpose of voiding an insurance policy. Certainly, the whole question of insurance is really important in this context, when we look at the types of situations that an apology might apply to. I'm thinking in this case particularly of motor vehicle accidents, medical malpractice actions and the like.

So why are we even considering apology legislation? There are a number of groups that have expressed their views on the subject. A discussion paper on apology legislation that was prepared by the Ministry of the Attorney General in British Columbia stated:

"When we act in a way that results in harm to another, an apology is seen to be an appropriate ethical response. It is also recognized that an apology can have a therapeutic impact on the person injured, facilitating the healing process and the process of reconciliation and closure.

"Anecdotal evidence from those involved in dispute resolution and litigation is clear that an apology can go a long way toward resolving a dispute. In fact, mediators report that, for many plaintiffs, a sincere apology is the most valuable part of a settlement."

Indeed, there is no question that a sincere apology can be therapeutic for both parties. It's important to note that the proposed legislation has been advanced and endorsed by the mediation community.

The other major consideration in favour of apology legislation is evidence which suggests that legislated protection for apologies would encourage dispute resolution without recourse to the courts. It's been estimated that up to 30% of all plaintiffs would not have sued if they had been given a sincere apology and explanation.

So again, the discussion paper that was prepared for the British Columbia Legislature on the issue of litigation suggests this: "Evidence and experience suggests that many disputes could be resolved earlier, more effectively and less expensively if apologies were promoted within our legal system. Taking into account the research outlined above, British Columbia proposes to adopt the broader form of apology legislation. This could be accomplished by enacting legislation preventing liability arising out of an apology, by making the apology inadmissible for the purpose of proving liability and by providing that an apology does not constitute an admission of liability."

Certainly, anything that can allow parties to resolve disputes without having to go to the courts, would, on the face of it, be beneficial to both plaintiffs and defendants, and allow access to justice for all regardless of income level. But the problem is that it's not as simple as that. I'd just like to present for the consideration of the members of the House who are here for this debate some of the things that might argue against apology legislation, because it does, again, on the face of it, seem like it's a good idea and a way to go.

In this case, I would like to refer to the work that has been done by two lawyers who are in the commercial litigation group of Lang Michener, one of the pre-eminent legal firms here in Toronto. Benjamin Bathgate and Joseph C. D'Angelo wrote a paper called Better Safe than Sorry? The Role of Apologies in Litigation in March of this year. One issue that they raised, and it was also raised by my colleague, the member for Welland, was that apologies could be trivialized if we adopted this kind of legislation.

Their paper indicates, "Another concern is that apologies can become trivialized and meaningless if the defendant knows that they will not be admissible and the mere act of apologizing could either prevent a lawsuit from being commenced or reduce the amount of potential damages for which the defendant is liable.

"The answer to this concern is that (a) human nature being what it is, if the defendant truly believes he has done nothing wrong, he is unlikely to apologize; and conversely (b) if the plaintiff believes the apology is insincere, he is unlikely to accept it."

So there is a real concern here that what we will end up with are sort of boilerplate, template types of apologies that won't really have the significance that they are meant to have, and won't achieve the purpose that they are meant to achieve.

1610

The other issue I would like to raise—and this is in the context of a legal action—is what happens if you have both a civil action and a criminal action arising out of the same occurrence. Let's take, for example, the context of a motor vehicle accident where someone is badly injured, reaches over the threshold—because we have no-fault insurance here in Ontario—but is permanently and seriously injured and has the ability to sue in a court for civil damages. In that case, an apology, if rendered, would not be admissible in the civil court.

But let's say the person was also charged with dangerous driving and the matter went to criminal court. There is nothing in this act that prevents that admission of liability, being the apology in this case—assuming they said, "I'm sorry that I ran into you"—from being admissible in the criminal courts. The criminal conviction could then be entered into the subsequent civil action and therefore have the effect of both providing an admission of liability inadvertently and, not only that, voiding the contract of insurance, rendering the person who is the defendant in this case personally liable for any damages that might be rendered in favour of the plaintiff.

So there is some potential here for damage to be done inadvertently when you have those sorts of dual situations where you have both a civil action and a criminal charge arising out of the same incident.

Finally, the other point I would like to raise—and I know I don't have too much time left—is that there may be some apologies that might make people who are emotionally vulnerable or in positions of lesser power than the other party to either cave in and not sue or to accept a damages award that might be far less than what they are otherwise entitled to receive. I say this in the context—using it only as an example—of medical malpractice actions where you might have someone without significant resources who is up against a very difficult situation in terms of making a claim. If they've been given an apology, they may decide that it's not something they want to pursue: to seek damages they may—and I say "may"—otherwise be entitled to receive.

There are lots of situations that I think this legislation hasn't really addressed, though it seems like a really good idea on the face of it. I am prepared to support it in principle, because I think it does have potential. I think there are some great aspects to it but I do have some serious concerns. So with those caveats, I am prepared to support it, but I think it really is important, as the member from Welland indicated, to get this into committee and get the perspective of the many parties who have an interest in this legislation and direct knowledge of these kinds of actions and the experience that has happened in some of the other jurisdictions, in order that we can get a well-rounded sense of what this legislation is going to achieve.

I note that the Ontario Bar Association, through the president, Mr. Gregory Goulin, for whom I have the utmost respect, has indicated that the alternative dispute resolution section of the Ontario Bar Association, the ADR, has endorsed this legislation in principle. But I believe it is also important to get the views of the civil litigation section, the insurance section and the other parts of the bar that may have more experience in the courts with legislation of this type, to have them come forward and give us their perspectives. There will also be people from the health care sector. I look forward to hearing from representatives of the Ontario Hospital Association and the Ontario Medical Association, to hear their perspectives on it in a more fulsome way, so that we can consider all of the aspects of this legislation before making a final determination on it.

I would urge the government members to ask for significant hearing dates, perhaps travel on this, because I think we're going to have many interested parties who are going to come forward and make representations on this. I would urge the member from Sault Ste. Marie to consider that in the course of this debate and recommend it to the members of the government.

Ms. Helena Jaczek: I'm very pleased to rise in support of our colleague from Sault Ste. Marie's bill, Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies. When I first heard about the honourable member's proposal, I was immediately struck by it, having practised as a physician for many years and having been a member, as my physician colleagues will have been, of the Canadian Medical Protective Association. That is the organization that insures physicians from malpractice suits. I was always struck by their regular communications to their insurees, and those communications always emphasized, "If ever you are in a situation where you may have made an error, some sort of mistake, cease all communication with the patient and their family; say nothing, and come and consult us."

I'm very happy to say I never had to actually take their advice or was in that situation myself, but I always felt this was extremely counterproductive, because a physician-patient relationship is essentially one of open communication and trust. The patient essentially gives their trust to the physician to help them with their health problems, their health issues, and obviously to advocate on their behalf as necessary. So it seemed counter-intuitive, where there might be a completely innocent mistake, not to acknowledge that.

I remember a number of situations—certainly none that led to any harm done—where lab reports were put in the wrong file, where the wrong hip was identified as the fractured one, where disinfectant wasn't appropriately diluted; all sorts of errors that were done, just as people will occasionally make mistakes. They were all caught in time, and perhaps, in this day of improved technology, those sorts of errors are no doubt far fewer.

To me, that kind of straight-from-the-heart, "I'm sorry for the situation"—not an admission of guilt, but simply having that kind of human interaction—would be very useful. Therefore, I support this bill.

Mr. Kuldip Kular: Let me say at the outset that I'm supporting this bill.

I'm going to describe to you an incident from my own medical practice. A few years back, when I was on summer vacation, a fellow physician from eastern Canada was covering my medical practice as a locum physician. He saw one of my patients who used to come regularly to my medical office. He examined him and gave him some medication, and that medication gave an acute allergic reaction to that patient. The patient had to be admitted to hospital. The patient was in the hospital for two or three days, where he was treated. He recovered, but with some residual effects.

The patient sued that fellow physician, and the case went to court. During that period of two years in the courts, the physician had to travel from eastern Canada to Toronto to look after his case. At the end of the case, the judge ruled that it was not a case of malpractice, it was a case of mal-communication. The physician had not communicated properly to the patient.

I couldn't intervene because the case was before the courts. After the case was finished, I tried to intervene. I asked the patient why he sued the physician. The patient told me, "What I was looking for from the physician was an apology." The physician never apologized, and that's why he sued.

That's what Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies, does. If you feel that you sincerely apologize for any errors you have made, I think that's the best way to do it. It's the right way to do it. I support it and I urge all the members of this House, on a non-partisan basis, to support Bill 59.

1620

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri: I'm of course honoured to share time with not only the sponsor of this bill but my physician colleagues here in Parliament.

At the outset, I'd like to compliment our esteemed colleague David Oraziatti from Sault Ste. Marie for bringing not only this important legislation but also using very effectively his ability, in his capacity as a private member, to move forward legislation that not only benefits his local riding residents but also broadly across the profession, certainly in medicine and probably beyond.

As you can see from the explanatory note that Mr. Oraziatti has prepared on Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies, "An apology made by or on behalf of a person in relation to any civil matter does not constitute" admission of guilt or liability.

For me, this bill is ultimately about enhancing patient care and, as a subset of that, enhancing patient communication, because, as we have heard repeatedly through different domains, through the examples cited by my colleague from Bramalea-Gore-Malton, from some of the words that my honourable colleague physician Dr. Helena Jaczek of Oak Ridges-Markham mentioned, if a patient suffers an untoward reaction of different levels—be it mild, moderate, severe; be it irredeemable; be it one that requires hospitalization; be it on an emergency level—the thing that's missing, the thing that they crave, the thing that will hopefully remedy the situation largely, as has been shown in other jurisdictions in Canada, other jurisdictions in the United States and across the world, is if the physician and the health care team broadly have an opportunity to sit down, admit the fact—which, of course, is purged in medical school—that they are human and potentially prone and liable to particular errors; that admission, that communication, that sharing of pain and perhaps even participating in the grieving process moves that entire health care team into a new space, into a new domain where they are able to heal together, pick up the pieces and move forward.

This bill, of course, has various ramifications. I commend the NDP colleagues for finding yet another corporate conspiracy on behalf of insurance lawyers who are attempting to reduce litigation costs with a simple apology. I compliment them on finding yet another sinister motive. But from our perspective, as a matter of patient education, patient communication, this is a very important addition to the conversation on medical care in Canada.

I would once again, on behalf of the physicians of Ontario and other domains that will benefit from this legislation, salute David Oraziatti, the MPP for Sault Ste. Marie, because I think the patients of Ontario will benefit.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate? Seeing none, Mr. Oraziatti, you have up to two minutes for your response.

Mr. David Oraziatti: I want to thank members of the House this afternoon for their comments on the bill; in particular, the member from Willowdale, who, as you know, is a lawyer, and the members from Oak Ridges-Markham, Bramalea-Gore-Malton and Etobicoke North, who are all physicians in our caucus speaking from their practical experience. Also, I want to commend the NDP—the member from Welland—and the member from Whitby-Oshawa, who added her comments as well this afternoon. Thank you for your remarks this afternoon.

I also want to see this bill go to committee. I think there's a great opportunity to move forward with this. But I want to talk just for a moment about the importance of it, because I think that when we talk about pseudo-apologies and how this is complicated and we're treading on thin ground, this is going to resolve many issues in the legal community and in the medical community. This is something that Ontarians want and embrace.

When I listened to Phil Hassen, whom I have the utmost respect for, who represents the Canadian Patient Safety Institute, the public at large, the average person on the street who wants the opportunity to receive an apology or frank discussion from an individual, and, frankly, the nurses and physicians and other health professionals who want the opportunity to be able to make those comments to patients who may be adversely affected—I think we do them an injustice when we don't allow that to happen in a meaningful way or when we say, "Your comments are going to be held against you in a court of law." I don't think that's productive. I think we've seen numerous examples, both in Canada and the United States, which has a longer history with this legislation—a very, very positive experience.

We can't legislate sincerity in the Legislature; we know that. It's up to the individual who would be receiving the apology to determine whether or not it's meaningful and they believe that it's given in sincerity.

I want to thank the members today for the comments, and hopefully we can move forward.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The time provided for private members' public business has expired.

STEVEN TRUSCOTT

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): We will deal with the first ballot item, ballot item number 22, standing in the name of Mrs. Sandals.

Mrs. Sandals has moved private member's notice of motion number 28. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

LORI DUPONT ACT (DOMESTIC VIOLENCE PROTECTION), 2008

LOI LORI DUPONT DE 2008
SUR LA PROTECTION CONTRE
LA VIOLENCE FAMILIALE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): We'll now deal with ballot item number 23.

Mr. O'Toole has moved second reading of Bill 10, An Act, in memory of Lori Dupont, to better protect victims of domestic violence. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

Mr. John O'Toole: I move that this be sent to the Standing Committee on Social Policy.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it agreed that the bill be sent to the Standing Committee on Social Policy? Agreed. The bill will be referred to that committee.

APOLOGY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR
LA PRÉSENTATION D'EXCUSES

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): We'll now deal with the final ballot item, ballot item number 24.

Mr. Orazietti has moved second reading of Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

Mr. David Orazietti: I ask that the bill be sent to the Standing Committee on Social Policy.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it agreed that the bill be sent to the Standing Committee on Social Policy? Agreed.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Hon. Gerry Phillips: I seek unanimous consent for the orders for second and third reading of Bill Pr4, An Act to revive 872440 Ontario Inc., to be called concurrently, and that the questions be put without debate or amendment, and that the member from Whitby-Oshawa may move Bill Pr4 on behalf of Mr. Dunlop.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Agreed? Agreed.

Agreed to.

872440 ONTARIO INC. ACT, 2008

Mrs. Elliott, on behalf of Mr. Dunlop, moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill Pr4, An Act to revive 872440 Ontario Inc.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

872440 ONTARIO INC. ACT, 2008

Mrs. Elliott, on behalf of Mr. Dunlop, moved third reading of the following bill:

Bill Pr4, An Act to revive 872440 Ontario Inc.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Third reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Be it resolved that the bill do now pass and be entitled as in the motion.

Hon. Gerry Phillips: I move adjournment of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry?

LEGISLATIVE PAGES

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): I just want again to thank our pages, as the Speaker did during question period today. You've done a terrific job, and we wish you well in your future endeavours.

This House stands adjourned until Monday, May 26, at 9 a.m.

The House adjourned at 1629.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.
Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters
Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller
Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum
Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest	Attorney General / procureur general
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craiton, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener—Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin—Middlesex—London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough—Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches—East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London—Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming—Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland—Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds—Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton—Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto—Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga—Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton—Kent—Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West—Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest—Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth—Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe—Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener—Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craiton, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przedziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Amott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziotti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziotti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craiton,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przedziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

School transportation

Mr. John Yakabuski.....	1974
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne .....	1975

Legislative pages

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	1975
--------------------------------------	------

Visitors

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	1975
--------------------------------------	------

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Norm Miller.....	1975
----------------------	------

Home care

Mme France Gélinas.....	1975
-------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Bob Delaney .....	1976
-----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Jim Wilson.....	1976
---------------------	------

Firearms control

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	1976
------------------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. John O'Toole .....	1976
------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson.....	1977
----------------------	------

Health card renewal clinic

Mr. Tim Hudak.....	1977
--------------------	------

Firearms control

Mrs. Laura Albanese.....	1977
--------------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mrs. Julia Munro .....	1977
------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Jeff Leal .....	1978
---------------------	------

Pope John Paul II

Mr. Jim Wilson.....	1978
---------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson.....	1978
----------------------	------

Pope John Paul II

Mr. Tim Hudak.....	1978
--------------------	------

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

Alliston Hornets hockey team

Mr. Jim Wilson.....	1979
---------------------	------

Boys and Girls Clubs of Canada

Mr. Paul Miller .....	1979
-----------------------	------

Good Shepherd

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	1979
------------------------------	------

C. difficile

Ms. Laurie Scott .....	1979
------------------------	------

Leon Paroian

Mr. Bruce Crozier.....	1980
------------------------	------

Premier of Ontario

Mr. John Yakabuski.....	1980
-------------------------	------

Gems of the Lakeshore

Ms. Laurel C. Broten .....	1980
----------------------------	------

John Brooks

Mr. Mike Colle .....	1980
----------------------	------

Anti-smoking legislation

Mr. Jeff Leal .....	1981
---------------------	------

Office of the Auditor General

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	1981
--------------------------------------	------

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS / DÉPÔT DES PROJETS DE LOI

Services for Persons with Developmental

Disabilities Act, 2008, Bill 77, Mrs. Meilleur / Loi de 2008 sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, projet de loi 77, Mme Meilleur
--	--

First reading agreed to .....	1981
-------------------------------	------

Property Tax Deferral Act, 2008, Bill 78,

Mr. Shurman / Loi de 2008 sur le report des impôts fonciers, projet de loi 78, M. Shurman
--	--

First reading agreed to .....	1981
-------------------------------	------

Mr. Peter Shurman.....	1981
------------------------	------

Northern York Region Power Conservation Act,

2008, Bill 79, Mr. Tabuns / Loi de 2008 sur l'économie d'énergie dans le secteur nord de la région de York, projet de loi 79, M. Tabuns
---	--

First reading agreed to .....	1982
-------------------------------	------

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	1982
------------------------	------

Community Living Day / Journée de l'intégration communautaire

Hon. David Caplan .....	1982
-------------------------	------

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur.....	1982
------------------------------	------

Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	1983
------------------------	------

Mr. Michael Prue.....	1983
-----------------------	------

International Day Against Homophobia

Hon. George Smitherman .....	1984
------------------------------	------

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer.....	1985
----------------------------	------

Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	1985
------------------------	------

Visitors

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne.....	1986
-----------------------------	------

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS /
AFFAIRES D'INTÉRÊT PUBLIC
ÉMANANT DES DÉPUTÉS

Steven Truscott

Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	1986
Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	1988
Mr. Peter Kormos .....	1989
Mr. Monte Kwinter .....	1989
Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	1990
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	1991
Mrs. Laura Albanese .....	1991
Mr. Mike Colle .....	1992
Mr. Frank Klees .....	1992
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	1993

Lori Dupont Act (Domestic Violence Protection),
2008, Bill 10, Mr. O'Toole / Loi Lori Dupont de
2008 sur la protection contre la violence
familiale, projet de loi 10, M. O'Toole

Mr. John O'Toole .....	1993
Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	1995
Ms. Laurel C. Broten .....	1997
Mrs. Joyce Savoline .....	1998
Ms. Leeanna Pendergast .....	1998
Ms. Laurie Scott .....	1999
Mr. Peter Shurman .....	1999
Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	2000
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2000

Apology Act, 2008, Bill 59, Mr. Orazietti / Loi de
2008 sur la présentation d'excuses, projet de loi
59, M. Orazietti

Mr. David Orazietti .....	2001
Mr. Peter Kormos .....	2003

Mr. David Zimmer .....	2004
Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	2005
Ms. Helena Jaczek .....	2006
Mr. Kuldip Kular .....	2006
Mr. Shafiq Qaadri .....	2007
Mr. David Orazietti .....	2007

Steven Truscott

Agreed to .....	2008
-----------------	------

Lori Dupont Act (Domestic Violence Protection),
2008, Bill 10, Mr. O'Toole / Loi Lori Dupont de
2008 sur la protection contre la violence
familiale, projet de loi 10, M. O'Toole

Second reading agreed to .....	2008
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2008

Apology Act, 2008, Bill 59, Mr. Orazietti / Loi de
2008 sur la présentation d'excuses, projet de loi
59, M. Orazietti

Second reading agreed to .....	2008
Mr. David Orazietti .....	2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Order of business

Hon. Gerry Phillips .....	2008
Agreed to .....	2008

872440 Ontario Inc. Act, 2008, Bill Pr4,
Mr. Dunlop

Second reading agreed to .....	2008
--------------------------------	------

872440 Ontario Inc. Act, 2008, Bill Pr4,
Mr. Dunlop

Third reading agreed to .....	2008
-------------------------------	------

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Thursday 15 May 2008 / Jeudi 15 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Ontario French-language Educational

Communications Authority Act, 2008, Bill 55, Ms. Wynne / Loi de 2008 sur l'Office des télécommunications éducatives de langue française de l'Ontario, projet de loi 55, Mme Wynne

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1951
Ms. Laurie Scott .....	1953
Mme Laurel C. Broten .....	1953
Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1953
Mr. John O'Toole .....	1954
Mr. John Yakabuski .....	1955
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	1955
Mr. Ted Chudleigh .....	1955
M. Phil McNeely .....	1956
Mr. John O'Toole .....	1956
Second reading agreed to .....	1956
Hon. David Caplan .....	1956

Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act, 2008, Bill 64,

Mr. Gerretsen / Loi de 2008 sur l'interdiction des pesticides utilisés à des fins esthétiques, projet de loi 64, M. Gerretsen

Mr. John Yakabuski .....	1956
Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	1959
Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn .....	1959
Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....	1960
Mr. Paul Miller .....	1960
Mr. John Yakabuski .....	1960
Mr. Paul Miller .....	1960
Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	1961
Mrs. Maria Van Bommel .....	1963
Mr. John O'Toole .....	1963
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	1964
Mr. Bas Balkissoon .....	1964
Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	1964
Second reading debate deemed adjourned .....	1964

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....

Members' comments

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Ontario economy

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1965
Hon. Dwight Duncan .....	1965

Native land dispute

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	1966
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	1966

Automotive industry

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	1967
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	1967

Manufacturing jobs

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	1968
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	1968

Endangered species

Mr. Norm Miller .....	1969
Hon. Donna H. Cansfield .....	1969

Dialysis

Mme France Gélinas .....	1970
Hon. George Smitherman .....	1970

Highway safety

Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	1970
Hon. Rick Bartolucci .....	1970
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	1971

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	1971
Hon. George Smitherman .....	1971

Services for the developmentally disabled

Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	1972
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur .....	1972

Nurses

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	1972
Hon. George Smitherman .....	1972

Tourism

Mr. Ted Arnott .....	1973
Hon. Peter Fonseca .....	1973

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	1973
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	1973

Air quality

Mr. David Oraziatti .....	1974
Hon. John Gerretsen .....	1974

Continued on inside back cover

No. 47

N° 47

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Monday 26 May 2008

Lundi 26 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Monday 26 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lundi 26 mai 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

COSMETIC PESTICIDES BAN ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'INTERDICTION DES PESTICIDES UTILISÉS À DES FINS ESTHÉTIQUES

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 15, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 64, An Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes / Projet de loi 64, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les pesticides en vue d'interdire l'usage et la vente de pesticides pouvant être utilisés à des fins esthétiques.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. Phil McNeely: The ban of pesticides proposed under Bill 64 provides a unique opportunity for the province of Ontario to become a leader in North America in the efforts to reduce human exposure to chemical pesticides.

By now, all members of the House should be familiar with the risks associated with pesticide use in the province of Ontario. The links between pesticide use and devastating human diseases such as cancer, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and increased risk to the most vulnerable members of the community—children, expectant mothers and the elderly—are well-known. I've said this before in this House: This is important legislation that seeks to protect Ontario families from unnecessary exposure to the dangers of chemical pesticides. I would be very disappointed if my colleagues across the floor voted against this legislation.

The environment has become a pivotal issue in Ontario and around the world, and this legislation is in keeping with the growing concern with the condition of our environment. This legislation is one of the many steps forward in making the environment a central issue of concern in our province. To be clear, this bill is minimally taxing on hard-working Ontarians. Its only demand is the responsible use of chemical products and a reasonable consideration for the health and safety of our neighbours and the environment. This is easily achieved. There are plenty of effective alternatives to our dependence on chemical pesticides. Simple solutions include consulting local experts to find the best and most pest-resistant plants, shrubs and grasses to use in your yard. Elbow grease does not hurt either. People can make small changes in their cosmetic gardening to prevent weed and pest infestations. These are simple steps, such as ensuring your plants and shrubs receive adequate light and moisture and are provided with nutrient-rich soil made possible by adding compost in your plant and flower beds. Although chemical pesticides may be easy and reliable, we can no longer allow the use of these harmful and dangerous substances. If you doubt the rationale for banning pesticides, I urge you to consider who will be playing on our lawns and smelling the flowers in our gardens: our children, friends, families, our family pets and local wildlife.

The province of Ontario is not alone in its decision to ban pesticides. Some 33 Ontario municipalities, accounting for 44% of the population, have already implemented similar or stronger bans. These municipalities are supported by countless medical and health organizations, including the Canadian Public Health Association, the Canadian Cancer Society, the Ontario College of Family Physicians and the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario.

The city of Ottawa has made efforts to address pesticide use. While I was on council there, we worked diligently to reduce our city's reliance on, and eventually ban, chemical pesticides. Unfortunately, we did not pass a bylaw in 2002—one that I worked on very hard with Dr. Cushman, the medical officer of health—that would have banned cosmetic pesticide use, losing by a vote of 15 to 7. However, in 2002 we successfully implemented a policy banning use of cosmetic pesticides on city properties. I have my home on one of the city parks, and I find that it's a great place to take my grandchild out for a walk, and I can do it confidently, knowing there are no pesticides sprayed on that property. In addition, a policy was put in place to encourage residents to reduce the reliance and to provide increased understanding of the potential serious health risks associated with exposure to chemical pesticides. Efforts included regular workshops providing instruction and information on the use of organic pesticides, and these continue today in the city of Ottawa.

The issue of a bylaw to ban cosmetic pesticides rose again in 2005 in the city, after the city's medical officer of health presented a report to the health, recreation and social services committee. It recommended a bylaw prohibiting the non-essential use of pesticides. Unfortunately, once again, that bylaw failed, this time by a 10-to-

10 vote. I was very disappointed when my councillors in the east end did not support the ban. So I'm very pleased that we're going ahead with this provincial legislation. Despite the unwillingness of some city councillors to take strong action to address the ban on cosmetic pesticides, public opinion across Ottawa remains highly supportive of a pesticide ban. The city has already taken pains to remove pesticides from its properties, as has the federal government on Parliament Hill and all Ottawa-area school boards.

This legislation will take us further in the protection of our health and safety by ensuring that non-essential pesticide use is prohibited in our province. Although it is only one of many steps necessary to move towards a more sustainable Ontario, it is an important step. This bill will provide a comprehensive body of legislation building on the example set by many municipalities across this province that have taken the lead on banning pesticides.

Again, I ask my colleagues across the floor how they could vote against this legislation. I would like to describe city hall and council as I recall the situation back in 2002. The council chambers were full. The meeting, I think, went until 3 o'clock in the morning. This was a biggest issue I had been involved in as a new councillor. The doctors and nurses were lined up on one side, and the chemical companies, the pesticide companies, were lined up on the other. The chemical companies had come in from every part of Ontario to make sure Ottawa didn't get the ban on the cosmetic use of pesticides. This is only 2% of the pesticide market. The doctors presented their evidence. The pesticide pushers called on science-based decisions, and the councillors got the lobbying, often local, and they caved.

I spent three years visiting the cancer clinic at the children's hospital. I saw the number of children in those cancer clinics. I spoke with parents, saw kids cured, then met with the parents after the children went into remission. We talked a lot about the precautionary principle: If there is any doubt that these chemicals cause cancer, then that is sufficient reason to support the ban. Liberals believe evidence and opinions from doctors, and Conservatives still believe the industry. It may be as simple as that. Was the banning of smoking any different? The Marlboro man always denied the connection between smoking and cancer. I would like to tell you that my wife has kept our lawn pretty well clean of dandelions. It's back-breaking work, you might say, but not nearly as hard as one visit to the children's hospital cancer clinic.

0910

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I appreciate the comments. I'll be taking part in the debate myself in a few minutes on Bill 64. I've got a lot of points I'd like to raise about the bill, things that I've heard but I want the government to clarify. The number one thing I'm concerned about is some of the things that small business people are telling me about: problems and issues they're facing with this legislation, and wondering about some help that they'll require. On top of that, I'm concerned about the timing of the bill, the exact implementation date, those sorts of things. So I'll be taking part in the debate myself in the next few minutes. I look forward to the debate and to the committee hearings on this as well.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I support the comments made by the member for Ottawa-Orléans. There's just one issue that I've been raising on this matter—I raised it last week—and that is that if a city like Ottawa wants to strengthen the bill, increase the floor, as it were, increase the ceiling, create more stringent rules, why would cities like Ottawa, Toronto and others be prohibited from doing that? That's the question I've asked government members, including the member for Eglinton-Lawrence and others who have spoken to this bill.

While it is nice to say, "We're creating rules for all of the cities across the land," and it seems good, but if a city wants to make it tougher, wants to ban all pesticide use, why would you not permit that? It would seem to me that that would be in keeping with the argument that the member for Ottawa-Orléans was making, and I wonder whether he has a comment on that.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: It's a pleasure to join the debate this morning on banning the cosmetic use of pesticides, Bill 64. I certainly think this bill is indicative of how society has changed over the past 10, 15, 20 years. We're starting to take a second look, in very general terms, at the approach we take to certain products that have been part of our life for a great many years. If we look at some of the toxins we're beginning to find now in products that we use on an everyday basis, I don't think anybody should wonder that responsible levels of government would look at some of the products that are used on public property as well.

Certainly that's what this bill does. It provides a level of protection that I think the public strongly supports. If you take a look at some of the responses that have come in to the Environmental Bill of Rights, you'll see that there was actually overwhelming public support for the bill that is being proposed here today.

Obviously there's some opposition to the bill from members of the industry, but I think the strong support from Landscape Ontario is very important. They want to see an end to the patchwork quilt we have of regulations, where you can do a certain thing in Hamilton but you can't do it in Oakville, or you can do it in Burlington but you can't do it in London. What people in Ontario want is the same strong level of support throughout the province.

In speaking to the previous speaker's question as to why we want to have the same level of protection for all Ontarians, I think that's part of the crafting of this bill. That's what Ontarians have asked us for; that's what people engaged in the industry have asked us for. They want some certainty around the use of pesticides in this province.

I would urge all members to support this bill. It's one of the reasons that have come from the speaker from Ottawa-Orléans, ones that I think touch many of our lives. It's something we can do something about in a very substantial way by supporting this bill and moving ahead.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: It's great to be back this week after a week in our constituency offices, where we spent some time with our community leaders, our neighbours and people who have real concerns in the province of Ontario.

Just last week, we learned that we lost close to 1,400 jobs in the high-tech sector in the city of Ottawa. Of course, on the weekend, we heard the sad news that Nortel will be sending some more people on to the unemployment line.

I ask at this point in time; Why are we doing something that's not science-based but more political-science-based? We have to stop thinking in this chamber that we can just put forward pieces of legislation—in this case, a three-page piece of legislation—that really aren't going to dramatically alter the political landscape or the scientific landscape or the natural landscape of this province. They're doing it, I guess, because it is more about politics.

I would much prefer today to be debating the economy, because I'm going to tell you something: It's really hard to go home and see some of the folks who are going to be in the unemployment line, figuring out where they're going to get the money for that mortgage or for their kids' education.

As I mentioned, this is a three-page bill that will allow the government to do almost anything behind closed doors through regulations. We strongly object on this side to the growing Liberal tendency to offer up few or no specifics in legislation that is debated in this assembly, which is what they did in the last budget bill. Madam Speaker, you'll recall the slush fund—slushgate—their year-end spending spree with municipalities, with no strings attached to that money.

If this government is serious about the growing problem of reducing toxins in our environment, they should start offering up fact-based decisions on real science, not political science, and ensure that all changes are done in the full view of the Ontario public.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): The member for Ottawa-Orléans for a response.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I wish to thank the members for Simcoe North, Trinity-Spadina, Oakville and Nepean-Carleton for responding to my presentation this morning. The science-based evidence that I like to accept is that from the health organizations in this province and from the doctors that I heard speak at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario.

I am very pleased that this legislation is going forward. I can understand the reservations of the member from Trinity-Spadina. We need strong legislation in this province to protect our families and our kids, and I'm really pleased to see that we're making progress in that direction.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I'm pleased to be able to rise this morning and comment for a few moments on Bill 64, an Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes. As the member from Nepean-Carleton mentioned, it's only a three-page bill, and the short title is the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act.

It's great to be back in the House this week after constituency week, but I'm sure if you're a member of the government, you're not very happy to be back here. I didn't hear a lot of happy things about the government in the last seven days. I'm assuming they're going to want out of this House as quickly as possible, so please, please give us a break here and let us pass some of this legislation. We don't want to do one of those things like last year, where you abruptly ended the Legislature in the morning when one of the ministers was supposed to speak in estimates. That was an interesting time. We'll see. I think our schedule goes through to the end of June. Let's get this bill passed.

The one positive thing I heard last week was the private member's bill from the member from Brampton-Springdale, which is the sprinkler bill. I tell you, there's a lot of support out there from our fire services for that bill. The only thing they're saying with that particular bill is that they think the government is going to kill their own member's bill, so there'll be a lot of firemen in the House today. When you're back at caucus tomorrow, give the lady a break and let her pass her bill. She's had it here about three times, and we can eventually implement it. We'll be happy to do that. I can tell you that that is the one positive thing I heard about the government last week.

Now, the Pesticides Act. Has anyone seen the lawns outside? It's probably the most disgraceful-looking Parliament we have in Canada now. There's no more grass left; it's all weeds. When the member from Ottawa-Orléans mentioned consulting local experts, I'm wondering who the government has consulted to look after the lawns of our beautiful Parliament buildings. Right here in Toronto, the capital of Ontario, our lawns are a disgrace. Maybe people shouldn't be crawling on the lawns or walking on the lawns, but the appearance of them—I'd rather have AstroTurf than what we see out there now. It's pathetic. Go out to the east doors, have a look and you'll see how wonderful it really is.

0920

Do you know what? The whole thing around the science of this bill is something that I don't understand. I really hope that when we get to committee with this bill, those experts who are basing this on science will come forward and give us all of the data and the exact information we need as to why we should solve this. What I can't understand about it is why this would apply to properties like lawns on public property and individuals' lands; however, in farming, golf courses and forestry it does not. I'm wondering how you tie the science together. I know the minister says that golf courses will have an expert advisory panel and that they'll also have a plan to put in place, but we all know that if you allow golf courses to go the way the lawns are on the east side of the building, there'll be no golf courses in business in Ontario. They simply won't be around. People will not golf at them; they'll just be nothing but weed patches. So I worry about that. I worry about how it would be unhealthy for someone to be around their own property, and have a ban that applies to their property, but not have it apply when they go golfing.

I hope someone in the House can clarify this for me—maybe the parliamentary assistant to health or health promotion, or even the environment. I'm told that money has flowed from either health promotion or the Ministry of Health to some of the school boards so that they can take kids out to golf courses. I'm wondering why the government would be hypocritical in that manner. You're funding students to go out and learn how to golf on areas where there would be pesticides allowed, but not on their own school properties or if they come to Queen's Park, or in their own homes, where they actually live. I'm concerned about that.

Farmers are concerned about this bill. There's a lot of concern about this. They think that if the government's really serious about this, they'll apply the pesticide ban to all properties across our province, and that would include agriculture. I don't know what kind of an impact that would have. Again, I'm hoping that when we get to committee we'll see the science that it's based on, as far as what the government's concerned about. I'm hoping that they'll be able to give us a lot of data and see how it will impact agriculture, for people growing potatoes, carrots, corn etc. If there are chemicals in the ground, what kind of an impact does that have by the time it reaches the grocery store? Or are we allowing crops to come into the country with a lot more serious pesticides that have been applied to those crops in other countries, and are we just defeating the purpose? We may not be able to sit outside on our lawn and have a picnic because the pesticides may have an impact on us, but we might go to a barbecue and have a salad where a lot of the vegetables have come from other countries. Maybe the pesticides are a lot stronger or have been applied in a lot heavier doses, and that may have an impact on how it affects the food we eat. So there would be something health-related to that.

Those are the kinds of questions that I think we have to be prepared to answer in this House. Certainly, before the bill is passed, I would want to know about things like chemicals coming in from other countries on our fruits and vegetables, the impact on the golf courses, and of course why it's strictly municipal public properties and houses, and not trying to do something that would encompass the whole province, maybe on a smaller basis, as far as the amount of chemical that's applied.

The other thing that I think we have to talk about here in this House—I have a number of folks who come to me who are small business people; they are in the lawn-spraying and lawn maintenance business. They've come to my office asking me about compensation. They went into the business in good faith. They bought expensive trucks and expensive equipment to apply the fertilizers and chemicals to lawns and gardens, and now, in a lot of cases, they'll be forced right out of business. I'm wondering what the government has in mind for compensation for these small business operators.

This is a government that hates small business; we know that already. Almost every step of the way, there is a hatred shown towards small business men, with no compensation whatsoever. We see it in questions in the House. We've seen it, of course, with this bill. If the government was sincere in making this bill fair and equitable, they would make sure that all small business operators who apply chemicals and will have their businesses downsized as a result of the bill would get compensation. I'm hoping in particular, especially in those rural communities—and there are a lot of rural members in here this morning—that you would be supportive of your small business operators getting a lot of compensation for the huge investments they've put into it.

Interjections.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I'm hearing their hatred for small businesses coming out now, as they start to heckle me for saying that. But we've seen it over and over again.

Interjections.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I'm sorry if I got under someone's skin, but the reality is, this is a real problem that we have to deal with.

I heard it all last week. You talk about compensation in different areas for operators of different businesses. We've seen it with the tobacco farmers, who were basically told to go away. We see it in the apprenticeship ratios, which are unfair to small business operators. This government refuses to listen to organizations that represent those small business people, and they completely ignore their requests for fairness in a system which is fair in other parts of the country.

I listened last week, and I don't know how many people were actually in their ridings and spent a lot of time talking to business operators. Here's a government that—it's nice that they can use some of these motherhood things to deflect away from the real problems they face, as the member from Nepean—Carleton mentioned a little earlier, but we've got some real problems out there.

On the Victoria Day holiday weekend, I think tourism was probably down about 35% to 40%. Unbelievable. And our leader, John Tory—

Interjection: Where is John?

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: The member from Wellington—Halton Hills and the member from Niagara West—Glanbrook made some announcements on some ideas that might help, like getting rid of the sales tax for long weekends on hotels and restaurants etc. I know that the Minister of Tourism is a rookie and probably not very skilled in his job, but the reality is that he called it a band-aid solution. With empty hotels, empty restaurants and nobody on the highways, when someone comes out with a reasonable solution that might help them, I don't call that a band-aid solution. If it's going to help a family that comes to Toronto for the weekend and it's going to save them $100 by coming and visiting, they're going to spend that money in other areas in the city. That's all they were trying to say.

I've seen nothing from the government saying they promote tourism. Remember, tourism mostly involves small business operators all across our province. Hundreds of thousands of jobs are at stake with this, and right now people aren't hiring yet. The Victoria Day holiday weekend was so bad that a lot of businesses didn't even open up between the May 24 holiday and last weekend, during constituency week.

I consider these to be very, very serious problems that our government is ignoring. We're here in this House today talking about a pesticides ban, and apparently some are arguing whether or not it's based on science. We're not really sure about this right now, but this is what we hope the government will bring forward when they get to committee. I'm hoping it's going to be a committee that will travel into rural Ontario. We don't usually get this government wanting to travel into rural Ontario, because they're not that popular in rural Ontario.

0930

We've got another problem with the bill. I want to know what the solution is to this, and maybe the Minister of Health will be able to answer this later on, or somebody in the House who has all the expertise. I've got some letters—I don't know how many other folks in this assembly have received letters from constituents—on allergies. They're concerned about the impact of Bill 64 on people with allergies. I would like to know what the government's thoughts are on that. So instead of heckling me in their responses, maybe the next time they can tell me what impact this bill will have on people with allergies and will there be any exemptions or will it have an impact on people who do have allergies—that sort of thing. I think we need to have those kinds of questions answered.

Again—this wasn't something I heard in constituency week. Some of my small business operators are worried about the compensation. I had a few letters on the allergies, but what I was hearing about were things like tourism. I've got to tell you, I don't know what other folks in this House are hearing, but I'm not hearing a lot of popular comments around this announcement on sex changes being funded. A lot of people think a lot of other things should be prioritized ahead of that. I was at probably 25 events last week where people came up to me and were very concerned about what the government was actually doing and why that would be something that would be so special at this time.

Last week, as you know, was our constituency week, but it was also emergency management week and emergency services week across the province. It was really interesting, when the government brags about all the things they're doing and all these motherhood statements, to find that the president of the Ontario Provincial Police Association came out last week—I've got a copy of his letter to Premier McGuinty. Mr. Walsh wrote a letter to the McGuinty government asking them when they're going to start funding police the way they should. We're almost 500 officers short, but all they do is tend to blame the federal government; if anything comes up around policing, it's the federal government's fault. I'd like to put that on the record, because—

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I'd just remind the member to speak to the bill that's on the floor.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I was worried about the police on lawns, Madam Speaker.

The reality is, over and over again—even in any response we get in the House—the minister blames the federal government for policing shortages in Ontario. That's what you call completely not fulfilling the responsibility you have.

The reality is, we have a bill in front of us that is popular, as far as the Environmental Bill of Rights and people who have written in on that and who have made comments on it. But as we move forward with that bill and we go to committee, I hope we'll have a lot of opportunity for our small business people, the agricultural industry, golf course owners, doctors, cancer experts etc. to comment on this bill, so we in this House can understand the science behind it and why it is so important to put this bill through in its current form.

As I said earlier, I can't understand why there are these exemptions in all these other areas. If it's so important to your lawn and so important to public property, why are other areas exempt and why isn't there a better explanation of that? When the minister made his opening statement and addressed the bill in the House on the day it was introduced, he just said farmers would have a plan and golf courses would have a plan and he didn't want to talk to that anymore. But even golf course owners are now saying, "What's going to be the impact? Next year, is it going to apply to me? Should I shut down my golf course now?" Because of the tourism aspect, business is already down in a lot of these areas, and something like this would completely kill the golf industry if it was passed. I don't have a lot to add to that because obviously you won't let me go into other areas of discussion here that I'd like to attack the government on, and of course there are lots of those.

As I said, I want to welcome the pages here. I know we've got a couple of folks—I haven't met them here this morning yet—from my riding. I'll be talking to them in the next little while, but I really want to welcome them to Queen's Park and I want to welcome all the pages here. We're pretty good people, as a rule. You'll probably come here and wonder why all this heckling is going back and forth, like the way they've heckled me all morning as I've been trying to speak. In the end, I think they're all pretty good people representing the different communities they serve in this province.

So as I wind up on this debate, I want to thank in particular my good friend the member from— I keep thinking of him as the member from Caledonia, but it's Haldimand-Norfolk—because he has been such an outstanding member and he has brought some really good points forward here. He gave a one-hour lead-off here a few days ago, and there were a lot of really positive comments in it. But I think he, like me, will look forward to the debate and having real data provided to us, real experts, not this fluffy stuff we've seen over here that is kind of a motherhood statement. We have to base this on science; we have to base this on what kind of compensation business owners will receive as a result of the fact that this will have a negative impact on them. We want to make sure that we get it right, and also we want to make sure of what the member from Ottawa-Carleton mentioned, about the health issues. Where there are serious health issues, we have to address these, but they tie into everything. They tie into other foods coming in from other parts of the country, international products coming into Ontario, and the way we apply our agriculture legislation to have impacts on bills like this as well.

I'm going to wind up now. I'm looking forward to the debate and to comments coming forward here today. Again, I apologize for saying that the government has a hatred for small business, but do you know what? I didn't want to make it seem that harsh, but the reality is, we are seeing that on a day-to-day basis in rural Ontario. This government hates small business operators. They have a fight with farmers on all the time, and quite frankly it's very disappointing to sit in this House day after day and see a complete assault on rural Ontario by this government. We can go on and on and on, and we'll look very forward to—

Interjections.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: You mention the word “hatred” of rural Ontario and they get mad. The reality is, this government hates rural Ontario. They do everything they can possibly do to make life harder and harder for the residents of rural Ontario. Just name the bill and it will have an impact one way or another. So when we start doing our complete job here and fulfilling our full responsibility to all the citizens of Ontario, then I'll be more supportive of a piece of legislation like this.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I just wanted to say to the member from Simcoe North that I'm happy to see that morning debates have not diminished his ability to express his warm hostility towards Liberals.

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: I stand today to comment on the statements, I'm going to call them, of the member from Simcoe North. I've got to say that the comment that this government hates rural Ontario—there could not be anything that is more nonsense than that statement. I think about the previous government, how you treated rural communities. For you to stand in this House and make those comments is totally inappropriate. But what we're here today to speak about is Bill 64. I want to remind the opposition members from across the way that that is in fact what we are speaking about today.

When I think about what they did when they were in government—they brought forward nutrient management. Now, one of the things in the municipalities, in rural Ontario—that piecemeal legislation, from municipality to municipality, caused untold grief to our farmers.

How did they treat our farmers? They turned their backs. They finally, after the second term, decided that maybe they might bring forward nutrient management. For the member from Simcoe North to talk about compensation—I can tell you, when those discussions were going on, this member from Simcoe North did not stand in the House and talk about small business at that time. No, sir. When we talk about piecemeal legislation and how that affects rural Ontario, bringing forward provincial legislation that speaks to making a healthy Ontario is the direction that, when we had the conversation in October, was part of our platform and a very strong plank. Quite frankly, I think that when the member stands up and says he gets a conversation from here and there, he doesn't hear the majority of the voices that are strongly in support of this legislation and want to see more work done. I look forward to the hearings, and they should come to rural Ontario, where they will be very graciously received—the McGuinty government.

0940

Mr. Toby Barrett: I welcome the opportunity to comment on what the member for Simcoe North has explained to us. As with the zoo legislation, he has presented a very comprehensive discussion of what's going on here. It's a very complex issue, this issue of banning pesticides. It's an issue that has to be based on science, and I think the member from Simcoe North did an admirable job in explaining that. Our concern is that the premise of this legislation seems to suggest—and some of us are of a farm background—that there is something inherently wrong with these products. That is a threat to the forest industry and to the farming industry, because it undermines people's confidence in these various products. From the debate we heard this morning, the debate we have heard to date, I have a number of questions.

We hear the arguments with respect to linking certain cancers to pesticides. We do ask questions, and we do ask for scientific evidence. Which particular cancer are we talking about and which particular product was linked to that cancer? Was the cancer related to glyphosate, for example, which is banned in Toronto? This legislation, brought forward by the McGuinty Liberals, will allow the use of glyphosate, a product produced by Monsanto. It's called Roundup. I've been using it for decades. Will you allow that particular product to go forward or is that product linked to certain cancers?

Learning disabilities: What learning disabilities are we talking about? Which particular chemical are we talking about? We hear mention of birth defects. Which particular pesticide, which particular chemical product is linked to—

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Thank you. Questions and comments?

Mr. Mike Colle: It's a good opportunity to speak to Bill 64 and the comments of the member from Simcoe North. Again, I just remind our new pages and the people across Ontario that this is about banning or stopping the indiscriminate use of cosmetic pesticides, chemicals that you don't really need to use in your front lawn or in your backyard for cosmetic purposes and for appearance purposes.

It's just beyond me why the Conservative Party disagrees with the Canadian Cancer Society and doctors, nurses and medical professionals who believe it's best to err on the side of safety for our children especially, who might be susceptible to getting some kind of residue on their feet, on their hands and then put their hands in their mouth. This could cause some harmful medical consequences. That's why not only the province of Ontario but jurisdictions all over the world are doing this and municipalities all over Ontario have already done this. So it is not doing something that the public is not asking for; they're asking for a uniform set of standards so that we can better protect our children especially from the indiscriminate use of these chemicals, primarily in an urban setting when you don't really need to use chemicals. That's what this legislation does, plain and simple. For the life of me, it's amazing that the Conservative Party is fighting the same battle that has been fought with tobacco. We all remember the same people saying that tobacco doesn't kill you, that tobacco doesn't cause cancer. This is the same argument.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Response?

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I thank the members for Huron Bruce, Haldimand-Norfolk, Trinity-Spadina and Eglinton-Lawrence for their comments this morning. We, on this side of the House, don't want to stop anything that's going to have an impact on people who might get cancer, but we want to make sure it's a complete bill and that it has an impact on all the stakeholders who may be affected.

I mentioned earlier in the House that if there's something going on a lawn that would cause a child to have cancer, how are we assured that something that might be on the fruit and vegetables he eats, which might be imported from another country, might not be more powerful than that? What are we going to do about that? Plain and simple, that could have an impact as well.

I stick to what I said earlier about this government's hatred for rural Ontario. I've talked to some people lately about the source water protection committees. I understand that there will actually be farms put right out of business, because if they're within 1,500 feet of a well-head, they won't be able to farm anymore, and there will be no compensation whatsoever to those farms. They're not even talking about any form of compensation.

Maybe people want to see these who apply chemicals to lawns go out of business. But if they're going to go out of business as a result of this bill, I think there should be some kind of compensation factor; it's as plain and simple as that. These are small business operators. A lot of them have a lot of employees. They entered this business in good faith under the legislation we have today. If the government is going to change the legislation, they should compensate those people for those jobs; I don't think there's anything unfair about that. But they won't. They'll try to sweep it under the carpet. They'll try to put a motherhood statement on everything with a bunch of fancy press releases, and nothing will happen and those people will lose their jobs.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I'm happy to welcome the citizens of Ontario—at least those who are awake or semi-awake—to this political channel. I've got to tell you how difficult it is to make speeches in the morning. It won't prevent me from trying, of course, but it is tough. I don't know how many other professions get to debate so early in the morning and be alert and awake as they do that. When we had speeches in the afternoon, I used to say, "Welcome, citizens, to this parliamentary channel. It's 4 o'clock" or "it's 5 o'clock." Now I'm saying, "It's 9:45." I used to say, "Get your popcorn ready and get your beer." Now what do you say? "Get your coffee ready and listen to the debate"? Who's going to listen at 9 o'clock or 9:30 in the morning? It's hard for the speaker to speak; imagine how hard it is for the listener to listen at that time of the morning. Nobody is watching.

All this is courtesy of the Liberal government, courtesy of the House leader of the Liberal Party, probably courtesy of McGuinty, probably courtesy of some young whippersnapper in McGuinty's office deciding that this is what we should be doing. Maybe it's not even McGuinty. Maybe it's not even the former Attorney General. Maybe it's just some whippersnapper with an "I love the smell of napalm in the morning" attitude to political debate; it's very possible. But we owe this to the House leader of the Liberal Party. I hope the citizens of Ontario are enjoying these morning debates.

I want to say that I do not support the Conservative argument about "show us the real science on chemicals." If I had it my way, I would abolish the living hell out of all chemicals in our society, because I'm one who believes that chemicals are killing us. I'm one who believes that chemicals are deranging our physiology. To those who say, "Show me the science," I've got to tell you, I am frightened of chemicals like you wouldn't believe. There are thousands and thousands of chemicals in the air we breathe and the water we drink. They're in everything.

I don't want to wait for the science. I don't want to be a victim of a chemical killing, to be able to say, "Yeah, they're bad now." I'm not one of those. I take the precaution of saying, "Where you can, abolish as many chemicals as you possibly can," because I am firmly of the belief that they're hurting me, my children and everyone else's children. I don't want to wait for any real science on this matter. From a superficial knowledge—not being a scientist or anything—I can imagine these chemicals inside the body and what they're doing to us. Can't you simply imagine? Do you have to be a scientist to get a sense of what they're doing to us? That's me.

0950

I welcome this bill. It isn't the strongest bill that I have ever debated on issues of banning pesticides. It's a welcome bill. It bans many pesticides for aesthetic purposes, particularly on residential home use. That's okay, I say.

When the government says, "This is really revolutionary, the toughest bill in the world or in the country," I say, "Stop. Please, stop. Don't exaggerate yourselves so much." It isn't the toughest. Municipalities have been tougher than you have with your bill. So please, when you say how tough you are on this kind of issue, you're not, and you will not be unless we get some changes in this bill.

Many municipalities have been ahead of this government for quite some time. Markham, Vaughan, Peterborough and Ottawa already had a ban on the application of pesticides for aesthetic purposes and have fought the fight against the chemical companies in court. The government is late to the party on this one. It's hardly leadership. So when the member for Oakville says, "We're leading"—please; you're following. You're not a leader on this one and you're not introducing the toughest anti-pesticides campaign ever. You're not. Other cities have, including Toronto and London.

It's for that reason that Monsieur McGuinty made the error a couple of weeks ago when he said, "Of course cities can introduce their own measures that could be tougher than the ones we've introduced." It's easy for me to understand that McGuinty would have made that mistake. He knows, like I do, and like many other MPPs in this place who were city councillors, that cities have already banned, in some cases completely, all pesticide use for residential purposes. So was it wrong for McGuinty to have said, "Of course cities can introduce more stringent measures if they want"? He wasn't wrong; he just made a mistake. He didn't realize his minister said that they couldn't do that.

It is my view that because McGuinty made that error and looked a bit bad, the minister will make it up to him. If the Premier pronounced himself on this issue, saying, "Municipalities can introduce more stringent measures," the Premier has spoken. He's a bit higher on the food chain, if you know what I mean, and therefore has a little more power than the minister on this one. It seems to me that the caucus members are also somewhat practical. They too probably said, "Of course cities should be able to introduce measures that are stronger if they want."

I am convinced that the MPPs are going to support the Premier on this. Then, when it comes to second reading, there will be amendments, if not by the NDP, by Liberal backbenchers who will introduce an amendment that will say, "Cities can introduce measures that are stronger than the bill we are proposing." I guarantee it. I really do. People will say, "How can you guarantee that?" It's just a little bit of psychology, I think. You don't want to make your Premier look bad—and he did. And the minister looked bad, felt bad, when the Premier looked bad and felt bad after stating what he stated, and didn't mean to because he didn't know. Nobody wants to make the Premier look bad. So I guarantee 101% that an amendment will be made.

Any disagreement from any Liberal backbenchers? The rump or the other side? You see, they're smiling because they know it's coming. And I say, that's okay. I say it's okay if we allow cities that have been leaders on this issue, that have taken companies to court on this issue, that have banned, in some cases completely, all residential use of pesticides—that this is an important measure to introduce by way of an amendment that will make this bill much stronger than it is.

The bill establishes a ceiling, not a floor. So when the member from Eglinton–Lawrence, the member for Oakville and others say, "We have harmonized the rules. There's one single standard. No patchwork," it sounds good intellectually. For people who don't know much about the issue, they say, "Well, if you've got one provincial law and you harmonize it across the province, it's got to be good."

The point is that it establishes a ceiling and not a floor. The point is that if cities want to do better, they can't, and as the member from Eglinton–Lawrence says, for the life of me, I just don't understand why Liberals don't see it. The member from Eglinton–Lawrence often looks at the Tories and says, "I don't understand why they don't see it," so I look at the member from Eglinton–Lawrence and say, "I don't understand why you don't see it."

I'll repeat it for the member from Eglinton–Lawrence, because he was on this side of the House. You are establishing a ceiling, not a floor. Cities, in some cases, want to go further than you have. So I want to use your language. I can't understand why Liberals can't see that if municipalities want to introduce stronger measures to ban, in many cases completely, all pesticide use, why they can't. This is what I don't understand.

Interjection.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Right. The member from Eglinton–Lawrence, like the member from Oakville, says, "Oh, because then you get a patchwork kind of quilt." What's wrong with that? What's wrong with a city deciding, "We want to make it better. We want to make it stronger"? What's wrong with that? If you create a harmonized rule and somebody says, "That's okay, we accept that, but we want to make it better," what's wrong with that? That I find incomprehensible.

The fact of the matter is, the city of Toronto, where my friend from Eglinton–Lawrence was—Dr. David McKeown stated in a May 13 Canadian Press story that the McGuinty government's provincial ban doesn't include a common weed killer that's already prohibited in Toronto. You understand? The city of Toronto has gone further than the Liberal government. The Liberal government said, "Well, too bad. We want to harmonize it. We think we're doing well. We think we know what's best, and if cities have already done something that goes further, it's too bad, because we don't really want to create a patchwork system across Ontario."

I'm arguing that it's not sensible, that it's nonsensical. I'm arguing that you could do better than that and you don't want to. It seems to me that in spite of the fact that you say that Tories are the core protector as it relates to pesticides, you're doing the same. It seems to me that you, wittingly or unwittingly, are doing the same. Where cities have done better by eliminating more chemicals, or a complete ban, you're saying, "That's not good." It contradicts your argument. It makes your argument much weaker to defend. That's why I find the Liberal arguments on this incomprehensible. And even when the Tories stand up, in their mumblings, they don't offer anything by way of clarity on this issue.

I'm looking forward to rump Liberals, and/or other Liberals who have already spoken, to offer a reasonable argument against what I have said. I'm arguing that you are contradicting yourselves. When you attack the Tories, I say that you are attacking yourselves. When you say the Tories are defending pesticides and corporations, I say you're doing the same by creating a ceiling instead of a floor. By not permitting cities to offer tougher legislation, which they can, you are in effect protecting someone or something. Maybe you don't see it that way. It's clear to me that you don't see it. But that's what I propose to you by way of an argument against yourselves.

1000

The legislation will prescribe a list of all pesticides covered by the ban, but the Canadian Cancer Society, the one that my friend from Eglinton-Lawrence referred to, says something different. They say, "Why not prescribe a list of chemicals which can be used, instead of chemicals which cannot be?" I find that a very logical proposition. Given that you make reference to the Canadian Cancer Society, I thought I would do the same. Given that you support their arguments on the whole, I thought that if I presented yet another argument by the same society that you support, you might be tempted by the argument to say, "Hmm, that is a very good point"—and it is. If you can prescribe which chemicals cannot be used, why not prescribe chemicals which can? In my view, that would be better, because you have, by way of your legislation, no way of adding to the list except by introducing a bill in this place. You have no way of adding other chemicals that are banned except and unless by introducing another bill to ban additional chemicals. That's why I say, accept the Canadian Cancer Society's argument and do the reverse of what you have proposed: Simply prescribe the list of chemicals that can be used. I accept that as a very logical argument. If Liberals have another argument to propose to that, I would love to hear it.

Then there's the matter of golf courses. I am puzzled. Again, I find that the arguments of the Liberals have been contradictory on this one. I'm led to believe, by an article I read in the Star, that pesticide and ornamental herbicide use in residential homes represents only about 4% of pesticide use. That's not a huge number. But golf courses, which drink chemicals to the gills, where we pour an incredible amount of chemicals, by the tonne, to keep that grass so pristine—we're exempting golf courses. Why would you do that? Golf courses use pesticides on a massive scale. Compare that to residential use and there is no comparison. Those chemicals by the tonne are acceptable to you Liberals so that you can see pristine green grass on a golf course? How could you do that? How could you accept that argument as being logical? Why? Just to play golf?

Last week, I said to those of you who play golf that I'm worried about obesity, because I see a lot of golf players who are, dare I say as best as I can, obese.

Mr. Mike Colle: Tiger Woods is not.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: The famous ones are not obese, of course, because they keep nice and trim, but those who go and just have fun on the golf course, I've got to tell you, are obese. I'm concerned about obesity. Minister of Health, you too are concerned about this.

Hon. George Smitherman: Careful; I'm sensitive.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: As a Minister of Health, I said. I made no reference to anyone or anything. But I've got to tell you, when those guys are playing golf, as far as I know—I don't see many people walking. Maybe it's a good thing; I don't know. But not too many walk on a golf course. They use those little carts, and the only exercise they get is to swing the golf bat.

Mr. Mike Colle: Club, club, club.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: See, they call them clubs. "Club" is such an awful word. So they get these golf clubs—that's the only exercise they get. The only other exercise they get is bending down to pick up the ball. That's the exercise they get out of golf. That's why I said that I prefer to chase a big ball—a soccer ball—rather than a golf ball, which isn't being chased but rather carted about. You get to it by a cart and you just bend over. That's the extent of your exercise, you understand. When you go for a beer, it's 200 calories in one beer. You go for two beers, it's 400 calories. All you do is pick up the ball and swing the club. That's it. It's not much of a game, I've got to tell you.

So I'm concerned for two reasons: one, the fact that golf players are a bit overweight, and in some cases obese; and on the other hand, I'm worried about the fact that when they bend over to pick up the ball, that ball has gone through that grass for thousands of miles back and forth, and it picks up a lot of chemicals as it rolls through the grass. So they pick up the ball, they put it down, and then so many of them smoke or touch their lips. Obviously, they're ingesting a whole lot of chemicals into their system.

Why not ban pesticide use in golf? Why not—

Interjection: Ban golf.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Banning golf is another matter. I would ban it myself. But that's just for fun.

Why not ban the use of pesticides on golf courses? That's what I would do in order to protect those people playing, those kids picking up balls, and to protect ourselves from the runoff of this massive use of pesticides that runs into whatever body of water it is connected to. Why wouldn't we do that? How do you Liberals defend that policy?

So when you say that this is the toughest bill that has ever been introduced on this issue—please. Residential use of pesticides only covers 4%; golf courses probably represent the biggest part. I believe we should ban the use of pesticides on golf courses, and we should do it today. Hopefully, the Liberal members will feel a tad guilty about that as they speak to this bill. I'm looking forward to a few Liberals speaking up on this issue.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Bas Balkissoon: I just want to join in this particular debate on Bill 64, the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act.

Listening to my friend from Trinity-Spadina, I think I might be able to help him a little bit as to why we're doing what we're doing and we will not allow our municipalities to have a patchwork of a higher order of legislation. If you look at what municipalities have today, they have a ban on the use; they cannot ban the sale within their jurisdiction. This particular bill actually bans the sale.

You need to have a uniform ban across the province. Therefore, this is why the bill is taking the route that it's going. Certainly his interest to see municipalities have something extra is probably worth discussion on another day, but to have the ban in the stores so you cannot buy it is really important.

Today, as an example, in the city of Toronto, where I came from, we banned the use. But I live on Steeles Avenue, and residents in my area can go into Markham and buy it, because that municipality didn't have a ban at the time we banned it in Toronto. They can bring it back and use it. It makes it very difficult for the enforcement officers in Toronto to enforce that ban of use unless they actually see somebody using it, or a neighbour complains. Tell me, how many of you have dealt with constituents who want to complain about their neighbours? Not many of them want to.

This bill would really make the ban that was started by municipalities a lot more effective, and we're doing it because it's the right thing to do. We want to protect the children of the future. Many of us here will not be around when those children are affected by pesticides. We need to do it now, and I think we're doing the right thing.

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I just wanted to make a few quick comments to the presentation made by the member from Trinity-Spadina. First of all, I want to say that I don't totally agree with the premise that he started with, that the answer would be to just ban all pesticides. We have an organization called Health Canada, and they have approved all these pesticides because they say that there is no human health risk. Obviously some debate could be had on the issue as to whether all of them are or are not as effective as they should be or as clear as they should be. But I take more exception with the comments made earlier by the government side to suggest that the reason we're doing this is to have a uniform system across the province, when in fact up until now we've always been quite content to accept that municipalities could pass bylaws to protect, as they saw fit, the health and well-being of their citizens. A lot of municipalities in our province have done that. In some areas, they've done it stricter than what the province is proposing to do here.

1010

So if this is based on science, if it was necessary that the city of Toronto put the ban in place that they presently have, one would have to question if we don't want our children to be quite that safe; we just want them to be a little safer—why they would lower the standard for those municipalities. It would seem to me that if that was in the best interests of the city of Toronto and for their children, that they would leave it that way.

I also have a little concern: The member from the government side mentioned the fact that this bans the sale of these chemicals, and I take from the legislation that it does do that. But I wonder how that deals with the exemptions that we have on the golf courses that were mentioned by the member for Trinity-Spadina. Where are they going to purchase those chemicals? I presume that it will be from some outlet in the province of Ontario. If it's available for some, I expect—I've seen this before—it will be available to all those who wish to buy it. So I'm not sure that they're actually going to ban the sale of the chemicals.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: It's a pleasure to join the debate. From what I've heard today, and I've listened carefully to the debate, I think the member for Trinity-Spadina said he was going to support the legislation. That's what I heard. If that's not correct, perhaps he can address that when his two minutes come around. From what I've heard from the Conservative Party, they are not going to support it. If that's not true, I'd like to hear that as well.

I come from a community where golfing is a major business. Oakville is the home of the Canadian Open and has been for many years. It has been on the road for a few of the tournaments, but quite often it comes back to Glen Abbey. It's a golf course that we take some pride in. We don't consider people who are out there trying to promote their own health and trying to get exercise and socialize with their friends either for business or for pleasure—we don't consider them all obese. They are people who are out having fun, people who are out trying to do something about their own health, and it's a social activity that is very, very popular in Ontario and all over Oakville.

So from what I've heard, there is some support for the bill and there is going to be some opposition to the bill. People are asking about the science. What I'm hearing from my constituents is that they want to see more use of the precautionary principle: Do the things you can do to make your life a little better and do the things you can do to make your community a little safer. This is one of those things that we can all do. We can agree to not use pesticides on our own properties, around our own homes. It's going to make for a safer and healthier community.

You talk about the products that would be banned. What is being presented to the House is a proposed list. We've asked municipalities, the industry and lawn care operators which products should be banned and which products should not be banned. This is a suggested list. It's a starting point for a discussion. I would like to hear more about that discussion from the other parties as to what products they think should be on the list.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: I appreciate the opportunity to comment on the comments made by the member from Trinity-Spadina; first of all, his comments regarding golf. Obviously, the person's never been out. It's such an easy thing to—

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I have once.

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: He's been out once, according to the member. It's very much like being on a soccer pitch. I'm sure that on a soccer pitch—they don't use chemicals there at all, or never have? I imagine that in some sort of fashion they have, and guess what? When you're down on your knees making a save and everything else, it impacts you very much the same. No matter how it takes place, it occurs in some fashion.

The current government member who just spoke—I'd have to check to find out which riding to make sure I'm in compliance—should read Hansard, because there are a number of individuals who have stated their case very clearly.

My concern regarding this is in a couple of areas. One is the enforcement aspect. Where will the enforcement come from? How will it take place? Is it going to be incumbent on the conservation officers? Will they become participants in this sort of activity too? How will it come about: through bylaw enforcement or other aspects?

Quite frankly, in my opinion, the whiz kids in the back room have probably come forward and said, "We have to give a perception that we're dealing with the environment. How are we going to achieve that? We don't want to be talking about global warming and we don't want to talk about that darn stuff that drives me crazy, that UV rating every day where I've got to get up and make sure my kids are gooped up with UV 1,000 at some time"—right now, quite frankly, it's probably a 45 or a 60—"and the impact on our society as a whole." If this plays a role in ensuring that the future for our kids is going to be much safer and much brighter, then I'm more than willing to support it. My position is that I want to see in committee some more research and some more documentation from both sides of this issue. But as I stated before, when they opened this gambit up, I want to make sure that all participants play a part in the information in the committee process, and that includes forestry, agriculture and the golfing and recreational sector, which is very concerned with it as well.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): The member for Trinity-Spadina for a response.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I do thank all the members for their comments.

To the member for Scarborough-Rouge River, I say the following. He says, "We banned the sale of pesticides." The point is this: The extension of that argument is the following, and this is where I believe the Liberals don't seem to get it, or they do and they try to argue their own case. Guelph banned all pesticides and herbicides for ornamental use. My point is, they've gone further than you. Their bylaw is superseded by yours. The point is that if Guelph wants to ban all pesticide use, they can't. They can only follow your law, which says that only the ones you prescribe are the ones that can be banned, nothing more or less. That's the point that the Liberals don't seem to get. That's where they contradict themselves a little bit. If a city wants to ban all use, they can't.

Then there is the argument made by the member for Oakville. He accepts the precautionary principle, which I spoke to, and then advances an argument as to why that is good and doesn't realize that when he speaks about golf courses, he says, "Oh, but golfing is a major business." So he accepts the precautionary principle for the use of pesticides on lawns but he doesn't accept the precautionary principle for golf courses because he argues that it's a major business. Do you see the contradiction in your argument, member for Oakville? You don't? Clearly. You clearly don't see it. Golf courses are a major business, so chemicals are bad, but in this case it's okay because it's a business. But in every other case, we use the precautionary principle. Do you not see how you contradict yourselves in the argument for the government? That's the point that I hope the citizens who are awake were able to see.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm delighted to rise in support of Bill 64 today. Our government feels that Ontarians should feel confident that when they go outside in their neighbourhood they are working in an environment which is clean and safe as far as possible. We don't want to damage our environment. We recognize that there are some essential uses, some required uses, of pesticides, and we are going to arrange for those to continue. But for those uses which are cosmetic, we don't feel that we need to run the risk of applying pesticides. The member for Trinity-Spadina used the word "pristine." My front lawn doesn't need to be pristine for me to enjoy it. We can go out and dig out some dandelions and cut down some of the weeds and get the lawn aerated and use some alternative products, but my front lawn doesn't have to be absolutely pristine for me to enjoy it. I can enjoy my front yard and my backyard with alternative uses.

I'd like to talk a little bit, actually, about some of the Guelph connections. As members will know, I'm very proud to have the Ontario Agricultural College at the University of Guelph in my riding. Over the years, there has been a huge amount of work done on what are effective pesticides for different crops for agricultural use and what is the safe level of use, what's the lowest level that you need to apply in order to get the desired result of making sure you have a product that hasn't been damaged by insects or weeds, whichever the agent is that you're trying to control. What happens in the agricultural industry is that in order for farmers to be able to use quite large quantities of pesticides—because agriculture and forestry, industries like that, actually are the major, major users—in order to be licensed, they have to take courses in handling the chemicals safely and then they have to get a licence. When they go to buy those large quantities of pesticides, they are doing so based on the fact that they have a licence and the licence is based on the fact that they have been trained in safe handling. I think it's very important to understand that when people like Health

Canada license these products, they are licensing them for people who have been trained in how to handle the product safely.

1020

When we look at our agriculture industry, they're exempted because people in that industry know how to handle the product safely. There are certain uses for many crops where we do need the pesticide to get the sort of production thresholds for those crops that make it economically viable for the farmer to continue in business.

Another industry that is exempted is the forestry industry. That's not an area where Guelph has as much expertise, but I think we've all heard of the huge damage that can be done to forests by invaders like the spruce budworm and the gypsy moth. Again, people who are managing forests must be trained in order to get a licence and then they are licensed for safe application. There are probably some other uses like that and the regulations allow for other essential licensed uses to occur. For example, I had somebody come into my constituency office and talk about whether pesticides will be able to be used in hydro corridors. If you think of hydro corridors in northern Ontario, they go through bushes and you get a windstorm, the trees come crashing down, the hydro goes out. The accessibility of the hydro corridor is extremely important, so you need to be able to get the machinery in to fix those lines when they come crashing down. That means that you want to use herbicides to control the scrub growth along the hydro corridor so that you can get people in to fix the lines. Those sorts of uses, which are essential to getting a function that we need in our society, will be exempted from the ban.

Let's look at some other uses. I also have at the University of Guelph the Guelph Turfgrass Institute, and it does research on lawn care. When it's doing research on lawn care, it looks at how to maintain a golf course. I admit that I am not a golfer, but my brother-in-law is an avid golfer, so I do get to watch enough golf on weekends when he is watching people on whatever tournament is going on over the weekend. I do get to watch it occasionally with my brother-in-law, and what I have figured out is that if you're going to have high-quality golf, you do need pristine grass because if you go to the green, you don't want dandelions and other weeds popping up in the middle and sending the ball astray.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Yes, because then you'd get a mulligan. You'd get a mulligan then.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: Exactly. I can figure this out even though I'm not a golfer. I'm sorry that the member for Trinity-Spadina hasn't watched long enough to figure this out, but as I said, I've sort of had to watch occasionally and I have figured out that if you're going to play golf properly, you actually do need a pristine golf course. So we have exempted golf courses because they do need pesticides to maintain the golf course in playable condition. The issue isn't "Does it look pretty?", although that's a side effect; the issue is, "Is it playable?" But what we have also required in the legislation is that golf courses present a plan that will allow them to reduce their use of pesticides. So where there is an alternative product that may do just as well, where there is a change in management practice that allows that golf course to be maintained, we've asked them to put forward plans to limit the use of pesticides. But once again, the people who are doing the grounds-keeping at golf courses will have to be trained and licensed in safe pesticide handling.

What about the rest of us who just have a front lawn? How is this going to work for us? Well, we've looked at the experience in municipalities that have bans, we've looked at the experience in Quebec, which has a provincial ban, and one of the things that is very apparent is that if you only ban the use—which is what the municipalities have the power to do—and you leave those pesticides on the shelf at Canadian Tire, Home Depot, the neighbourhood nursery or wherever it is you go to get your banned products, what happens is that you end up with people with no training using the pesticides.

That's why we are implementing a retail sales ban on pesticides. What that means is that those people who are exempted and who are licensed will still be able to buy the pesticides. But for somebody like me, who doesn't have the training and doesn't have a licence, I will not be able to buy the pesticides. That makes the ban much more effective. If people like me, who need to maintain their front lawn, can't do an end-run on the ban, then you have a much more universal ban. And, quite frankly, the enforcement issues go way down, because if you can't get the chemical in the first place, then the enforcement issues aren't nearly as severe as for those people who currently have municipal bans.

What about the issue of, "But our ban is going to be the same all across the province"? Let's go back to my friends at the Guelph Turfgrass Institute, who are interested in doing research for alternative lawn care programs. What my friends at the Turfgrass Institute tell me is this: "We in the lawn care industry can live with a pesticide ban, but if we're going to do research on effective alternatives, we need to deal with consistency. We can't have major research projects for every municipality that has a different set of bans. What we need is a level playing field so that we have some consistency across Ontario and we can do good research on effective alternative means. If you're going to have us do this properly and actually come up with good alternatives"—for people like me who want their front lawn to look okay; not pristine, but okay—"you need a consistent ban which allows us to do good research and find good alternatives for the everyday household consumer."

I am very pleased to be able to support this bill. I think it takes us a long way forward in doing what we need to do around pesticide use, which is to allow essential use to continue but to provide alternatives for cosmetic non-essential use.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions or comments?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Again, our caucus looks at this bill with the idea that perhaps a pesticide ban should or should not be implemented for front lawns for people across Ontario. But what we want to point out is the dichotomy and the problem with the argument that the Liberals put forward, which is that pesticides are okay on farms, agricultural lands and a golf courses because they are being applied by professionals. Well, many of the pesticides and herbicides that are applied to front lawns and landscapes in urban municipalities are also applied by professionals. So we can't quite understand the argument put forward by the government that professional application is okay 100 yards away from a front lawn, on a farm, but it can't be applied by professionals on the front lawn of a particular housing area.

The other part is that this only applies to 4% of all pesticides and herbicides in Ontario. What we think the government should do is get the real scientific basis as to how harmful these particular substances are to the health of all Ontarians. If they are harmful to all Ontarians, then we should consider a total ban, if that's what the science says. But we don't have the science. What we would like is for this ban and this legislation to follow science, not follow political polls.

1030

Mr. Gilles Bisson: I want to thank the member for what was a riveting speech on this particular issue. I listened quite intently. There are a couple of parts to this bill that I think generally are going to get support, and we'll send it off to committee, but once it does get to committee, there are going to be people asking some pretty straight-up questions.

I think the first question people are going to be asking as they come to committee is: Why is it that this government is limiting what municipalities can do? We know, for example, that there are a number of municipalities across Ontario that have already taken a very aggressive and, some would argue, a progressive, stand on banning pesticides in their municipalities. This legislation is going to supersede that. I think there are a lot of people in municipalities who are going to be saying, "Why is the province doing that? Why are they limiting our ability and our choice to deal with pesticides within our own municipality?" People can draw their own conclusions as to why that is, but I think one of the questions that need to be answered when we get to committee is: Why is this bill structured in such a way that, at the end of the day, it limits what municipalities can do? In some cases, it takes away some of the work that's already been done by some of the municipalities.

I agree with the member that there are a lot of things that we can do naturally in order to control various types of weeds on people's lawns. A lot of the research that's been done here in Ontario is good research and it's not a bad way to go, but the question then becomes: Why is it that we're limiting pesticides in some areas and not in others?

We talked about golf courses. There are many municipal and private golf courses within municipalities across Ontario. Why is the government taking the view that they're going to limit the use of pesticides on lawns but not limit them in the same municipalities where there are golf courses? So I think there are some questions to be answered in committee, and I look forward to that time.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I was listening carefully to the member from Guelph speaking about supporting this bill. She spoke eloquently and described why we have to put a ban on the cosmetic use of pesticides on house properties, industrial parks and many different types of parks.

I come from London. London is well known as a photo city. My riding of London-Fanshawe has beautiful parks. So many kids and families go on the weekends and on many different occasions to enjoy those parks. They go to play, to barbecue, they invite their families to birthdays and sometimes weddings. Can you imagine this park being sprayed by chemicals that can affect our youth and people, and the health hazards that would cause?

I think this is a very important step that our government is taking. I think it's important for us to protect our children and our families and to allow them to go to parks and to play in their front and back yard with no hesitation or problems. It's important. As I mentioned, many people in this province enjoy their spring and summer outings. They can go to the parks and play without even thinking about hazards or problems. That's why I'm speaking in support of this bill.

I also want to congratulate my colleague the member from Guelph for stating all the elements in support of banning these cosmetic pesticides, because they're not good for the people, the environment, the kids, the families, and not good for our health. I think this is a good step, and I wish that all the members in the House come forward and support this initiative. In the end, it's our goal and aim to create a healthy environment and to protect our environment for years to come.

Mr. Norm Miller: I'm pleased to add some comments to the speech by the member from Guelph to do with Bill 64, An Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes.

This past week, of course, was constituency week, and I had the opportunity to meet with a couple of different agricultural organizations and people involved in farming over the course of the week. One of the groups I met with was the East Nipissing/Parry Sound Ontario Federation of Agriculture, and I was interested to learn that the number one issue for small farmers in Nipissing and Parry Sound is red tape. They gave me countless examples of how you may have the Ministry of Agriculture trying to assist them, but then you have four other ministries making life more difficult for them. So my question to do with this Bill 64 is, what new red tape is this government going to create for farmers? I note that farmers are excluded in terms of this bill. However, what new process are they going to require farmers to go through, beyond the training they already have, to be able to use pesticides in farming?

It was interesting. In the group I met with, there was an owner of a local small abattoir in Magnetawan, and he pointed out that the farmers would really like to see that abattoir stay in business. They've already lost one local abattoir because of the new rules and red tape that have been created by this government. They really want to see this abattoir stay in business because it means that they can ship locally, close to home, and that's something we should be promoting.

Unfortunately, I only have another 10 seconds, so I can't get into other issues. But my question is, what new rules is this government going to create for farmers with this bill? I hope you'll think carefully about it so that you don't make life more difficult for the small farmer.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): The member for Guelph for a response.

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'd like to thank the members from Carleton-Mississippi Mills, Timmins-James Bay, London-Fanshawe and Parry Sound-Muskoka for their comments.

I'd just like to review a few points, if I may. First of all, we know that pesticides are chemicals which, if handled improperly, cause risks to human health, to animal health and to the environment. So, when we get right down to it, the purpose of this bill is to minimize risk. The use of pesticides will be exclusively in the hands of people who have been trained and licensed in safe use. People who are in the agriculture industry, in the forest industry and in lawn care at golf courses will be exempted from the ban, because they have been trained. For the rest of us, who don't really need to have a pristine lawn, we will not be able to access pesticides which, if used inappropriately, can cause harm.

There has been a lot of comment here about consistency and whether we should let the cities have bans which are tougher. First of all, I would review what I heard from my local lawn care companies, which is: "We can live with the legislation that you're putting into place, provided we have consistency across municipalities so that we can do the research and come up with good alternatives. We need consistency to do that."

I would like to refer to the mayor of Guelph, because many people have pointed out that Guelph has a stricter ban. In fact, the mayor commented that our ability to ban sales makes this a whole lot tougher, and that's something the municipality can't do.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Pursuant to standing order 47(c), six and a half hours of debate on this bill having occurred, I am now required to deem this debate adjourned, unless the acting government House leader indicates otherwise.

Hon. Ted McMeekin: I wish debate to proceed at least until question period.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Ms. Laurie Scott: I'm pleased to join this debate this morning to discuss Bill 64, An Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes. I'm hoping that we're going to be allowed to have the full debate on this very important issue.

I can tell you, as an MPP now and as a health professional for over 20 years, I do agree that we need to drastically reduce the amount of toxic and oftentimes cancer-causing materials that we come into contact with every day. Of course, reducing or eliminating pesticides may well prove to be a very good option, but the government has to do its due diligence and ensure it has proper scientific data to move forward. We've heard that comment many times in the Legislature this morning. We support the concept of eliminating non-essential pesticide use to protect the health and environment of this province, but our side of the House supports a science-based approach to ensuring that our health and environment are protected.

1040

When it comes to the use of chemicals on our foods, parkland and gardens, some current facts in the province of Ontario right now with respect to pesticides: Their use is already regulated federally by the federal Pest Control Products Act, which controls the sale and use of pesticides in Canada. The Food and Drug Act allows for the setting of maximum limits for pesticide residues in foods. The Environmental Protection Act includes numerous provisions to protect the environment and human health from injury from pesticides. The Fertilizers Act requires registration of fertilizer-pesticide mixtures. And the Feeds Act prevents the contamination of livestock feeds. Here in Ontario we also have the Ontario Pesticides Act, the Municipal Act, the Weeds Act and the Crown Forest Sustainability Act.

One thing that is not in the legislation is the fact that there is not a clear delineation of the difference between non-essential use of pesticides versus cosmetic use. For example, there are serious health and environmental risks that are controlled through the use of pesticides—everything from severe allergies to insect infestations to physical injuries. We must be sure there is an ability for the use of pesticides in essential situations as opposed to cosmetic, to ensure protection in cases of health and environmental risk. As it stands, the legislation is very vague on this very important aspect. We must demand that the science behind this ban is solid and clear.

Equally important, I hope the motivation for legislation such as this is based on science, not simply on an emotional aspect of anti-pesticide argument, or basically a political argument, not a scientific argument. This is one of the key reasons why I feel this should be going to committee, so a proper, full consultation can be done. We can hear from related stakeholders. We have to build—and we owe it to the people of Ontario—a very proper balance of safety and environmental care along with a sustainable piece of legislation that makes good sense.

I've spoken about agriculture in my riding of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, and one of its most important economic drivers is agriculture. It's a huge employer. It's vital to the sustainability of so many other aspects of rural Ontario. I'm very proud to say that farmers in Ontario reduced their pesticide use by over 50% in the last 15 years, so they should be given proper credit for their leadership and for being great examples of stewards of the province through their proper and informed study and use through integrated pest management, or IPM.

If we're going to start down this slippery slope, as the Premier likes to phrase it, we have to ensure that it is done properly, fairly and based on facts. Agricultural use is exempted from the pesticide ban. While we support the use of pesticides by farmers to ensure their continued ability to grow their product, I am concerned that once again the Liberal government has brought forward a double standard of sorts.

Let me read from Scotts Canada's response to the Environmental Bill of Rights—no relation to me, just to put that on the record:

"To introduce a ban on the use of Health-Canada-approved pest control products in urban centres while permitting their use in rural settings establishes two standards of health and safety for Ontario residents. Clearly where our health and the health of our environment is concerned, a double standard is neither desirable nor acceptable."

There is also a concern in the agricultural community that this ban is a slippery slope, as noted by the Ontario Federation of Agriculture ad which they put out:

"Ontario's proposed ban on lawn and garden pesticides is moving forward, and could have a significant impact on farmers. All pesticides undergo the same rigid health and safety standards. With Health Canada's review in place and by following label directions, pesticides can be used safely in agriculture, on fairways and greens, lawns and gardens, in forestry or in public health settings. Banning pesticide use in urban settings while maintaining they are safe for use in agriculture undermines the public confidence in farming, the safety of our food supply and Health Canada's regulatory safeguards."

I'm sorry that I have to end my part in the debate this morning, because question period is about to start.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): It being 10:45, the debate stands adjourned.

Second reading debate deemed adjourned.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to take this opportunity to introduce some guests who are joining us today.

On behalf of the member from Oak Ridges–Markham; Richmond Hill councillor Greg Beros, Heather Beros, Naim and Lubna Malik and Shaista Ali, in the east members' gallery.

On behalf of the member from Kitchener–Conestoga, we would like to take this opportunity to welcome a gentleman by the name of Jeff Preston. Jeff has been raising money for muscular dystrophy for over 11 years, and he's travelling from London to Ottawa in his wheelchair to raise awareness of transportation barriers.

As well, on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition, I'd like to welcome students and teachers from a high school located in the riding of Leeds–Grenville. Grade 10 civics students from Thousand Islands Secondary School in Brockville will be in the gallery today, along with teachers James Cross, Conrad Walpot and Ashley Bell, and parent volunteer Rhonda McNish.

ORAL QUESTIONS

ACCESS TO HEALTH CARE

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I have a question for the Premier regarding his government's priorities. Last week, the Ontario Health Quality Council reported that the lives of 8,000 Ontarians could have been saved if your government gave some priority to chronic disease management in the province. The council has reported that electronic health records would have helped save those suffering from chronic diseases. Premier, why is saving the lives of 8,000 Ontarians not a priority for your government?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'm going to refer this to the Minister of Health.

Hon. George Smitherman: It was interesting to hear the honourable member quote from a report from the Ontario Health Quality Council because he and the members of his party opposed that very institution when it came forward.

We feel very strenuously that the work they do and the independence they have in making comments about the health care system in Ontario is a very important thing. It was noteworthy as well that their report commented on the fact that the number of people in Ontario who are in search of a family physician has been reduced to 400,000 as a result of our government's actions.

On the matter of chronic disease management, we've made substantial investments in enhancing the support for people with diabetes. Over the course of the next little while, as we roll out our diabetes strategy, which includes a diabetes registry—further evidence of our capacity to address the situation for 900,000 Ontarians will be very evident.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary? The member for Kitchener–Waterloo

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: It's obvious that chronic health management isn't a priority and it's obvious that e-health development isn't a priority for this government either. You wonder what might be.

We know that the health of the people around the province is being jeopardized because they don't have a family doctor. We have about 30,000 in Kitchener–Waterloo, 15,000 in Peterborough, 14,000 in Kingston and 40,000 in Hamilton. We also know that eye diseases like glaucoma, which can lead to blindness, go undetected because this government delisted eye exams from OHIP. We also know that long-term-care residents aren't getting the hours of care they need.

Why is this government making sex-change operations a priority when hundreds of thousands are without a family doctor, when eye exams are not covered and when long-term-care residents are forced to sit in their own urine and feces?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's disappointing that the honourable member, whose leader gave me private assurances of that party's commitment to the relisting of that procedure, can't back that up in the Legislature. And it's further disappointing that a party that continues to be in favour of a $3-billion cut to health care stands and asks these questions, all calling for additional expenditure.

I want to say to the honourable member, with respect to the first question that was asked regarding diabetes, that the actions our government has taken to expand health care services in the form of doctors to 650,000 Ontarians is a very strong example of making up for the lost time that was created while they sat idly by. The Ontario Health Quality Council report of last week says that 400,000 Ontarians, a reduction from prior numbers of 1.2 million or 1.4 million, are focused on getting care. Through our advances with more family health teams, we're going to deliver that care to them and reduce the challenges associated with family doctor shortages that they left behind.

1050

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: First of all, I'd like to clarify the record. Our leader did not say as the minister has indicated he said. That is an outright lie—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would ask the honourable member to withdraw that comment, please.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I withdraw that.

I would also say to the honourable member that we have a report today in the Toronto Star on Ray Griffis, a cancer patient. He wrote to your Premier to tell of his harrowing experience at a hospital here. He said he waited for hours in the emergency room, and we know that there are hundreds of thousands of people doing that throughout this province. It's shameful. Once he was admitted, he was left unattended. There was no one to help him go to the bathroom. After repeatedly soiling himself, the nurses threw some diapers at him and told him to clean himself up. I say to you, Minister: Why do you not make emergency room patients such as Mr. Griffis a priority and help them retain their health and their dignity?

Hon. George Smitherman: The first thing I want to say in response to the honourable member's assurance is that she was not part of any private conversation on the issue of the matter that the Leader of the Opposition made personal assurances to me on in a private conversation, and her ability to stand in her place is narrowed by that. But on this issue of the circumstance that the honourable member raised of the care of an individual in an emergency room at North York General Hospital, the events that are outlined in this story in the paper today are not an appropriate circumstance. We expect and depend upon the hundreds of thousands of people who work in health care to provide that care in a fashion which is appropriate, respectful and compassionate at all times. I'm as disappointed as anybody else reading that story. The people at North York General will most certainly be hearing from us as we work with Dr. Alan Hudson to make an even greater focus on the reduction of wait times in Ontario's emergency rooms.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): New question, the member for Kitchener–Waterloo.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: The government opposite has had since 2003 to deal with emergency rooms, and they still haven't unclogged them.

C. DIFFICILE

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Going to question 2, the Hamilton Spectator reports that at least 260 people infected with C. difficile have died in our hospitals since the middle of 2006. We only know about these deaths because they have been voluntarily disclosed by seven hospitals. Minister, can you tell us today how many people infected with C. difficile have died in all of the 155 hospitals since 2006 and how many hospitals are currently dealing with the C. difficile outbreak?

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to thank the honourable member for this question. The matter of C. difficile is well-known to be a problem in hospitals in the developed world. The challenges associated with it are very, very strenuous. They require all of us—visitors to the hospital, patients and those who work in the hospital—to be very attentive to our responsibilities, to practise the appropriate procedures and especially to be very, very dedicated to hand washing. It's our intention to move forward on the advice that's come from others, including Dr. Michael Baker, on issuing an edict to hospitals which will provide for regular mandatory reporting of C. difficile outbreaks.

We're working at present through the Ontario Hospital Association to create a regime which over the next many months will create substantial enhanced transparency for Ontarians about outbreaks and other matters of patient safety concern. This will be a substantial advance, building on the investments that we've made and the expectations that we have.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: It's absolutely shocking that this minister can still not answer a question that he was first asked on May 8. It makes a mockery of his January 2, 2007, statement, when he said, "It is our job as a government to learn from SARS and ... respond rapidly to health emergencies ... to protect Ontarians."

You knew that there were over 2,000 deaths from C. difficile in Quebec in 2003. You know that the Canadian Medical Association in 2004 recommended that each province develop an outbreak plan—which, by the way, Quebec and Manitoba did. You also were advised in July 2007 by Michael Baker that you should start mandatory reporting.

Minister, why didn't you follow Quebec's lead and Manitoba's lead? Why did you not listen to Dr. Baker?

Can you tell the families of those who died from this disease why you still have not taken action to introduce mandatory reporting?

Hon. George Smitherman: First off, I think it's very important to acknowledge that the events which did occur in provinces like Quebec was information that all of us were aware of, those who work in government and those who have the important responsibilities of managing hospitals on the front line. Steps have been taken by all of them to introduce and enhance procedures which have at their heart the protection of the patient, but the obligation is the obligation shared by all of us who enter those environments. That's why it's important that we acknowledge the power each of us has.

In the hospital that the honourable member mentions, there are infectious control officers who have been paid for by the government of Ontario who are operating in that environment. We've created 14 networks across the province of Ontario for infectious disease. We've founded the provincial infectious disease advisory committee. We've taken important steps. In addition, we've recently had a report from the coroner based on an inquest into circumstances in Sault Ste. Marie, which, working with Dr. Baker and others, we're going to implement across the province to enhance the transparency associated with this information—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: You start to wonder what are the priorities of this government and this minister. Many families of patients who have died are outraged. They find it absolutely unbelievable that the government failed to issue public warnings, knowing what was happening, or heeded the advice of experts to introduce mandatory reporting. They wonder how many people have needlessly died since 2005. They wonder how many are going to be walking into hospitals in the future, thinking they're going there to get well, and instead, they're going to contract C. difficile.

SARS killed 43 people. There was an inquiry. On your watch, over 260 people in just seven hospitals have already died, and these are just the ones we know of. I ask you today: Will you recognize that this is a priority, and will you undertake an independent investigation into C. difficile deaths? Will you commit to do so today?

Hon. George Smitherman: The actions with respect to C. difficile and the protection for the public in circumstances where they're in hospitals is information that's known to everyone and shared by all. The responsibility for taking action includes those who run Ontario's 154 independent hospital corporations.

But we're going to add to those steps we've already taken: the infectious disease advisory committee, the infectious disease networks in each of our local health integration networks, putting additional workers who deal with infectious disease into all hospital environments, with a very forceful regime of mandatory reporting, not only on C. difficile but on a wide variety of other challenges in the hospital environment that affect patient safety. We're working on the implementation of that, building on the advice of Dr. Baker and in partnership with the Ontario Hospital Association. We know that additional transparency is a powerful tool for patient safety, and in all these matters where there is now transparency, there was none implemented on the watch of that party when they were in government.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Mr. Howard Hampton: My question is for the Premier. More than 35,000 auto workers in Ontario have now lost their jobs. Last week, I was in Oshawa and met with some of those very workers who no longer have a job. One of them asked me to ask you this question: Why did the McGuinty government sign cheques worth close to half a billion dollars in contribution to automaker corporations without getting job guarantees for some of those workers in Oshawa who are now out of work?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'm pleased to take the question. I would commend to my colleague a column—I think it's in today's paper or during the course of the weekend—put in by Buzz Hargrove, the head the Canadian Auto Workers union, who speaks in a very complimentary fashion about the approach we have taken to compete in a highly competitive global economy to land new investment in the auto sector in particular.

One of the reasons we are doing so well is because we are number one in productivity, number one in quality and number one in the level of skills and education of our workers. We will continue to compete. We will continue to work with the CAW. We will continue to work on behalf of CAW workers and other auto workers throughout the province of Ontario. I remain very optimistic about the future of the auto sector in the province of Ontario.

1100

Mr. Howard Hampton: One of those auto workers was Bill Delaney. Mr. Delaney worked in Oshawa's auto sector for a number of years. He admits it was a good job for both him and his family, but last year Bill Delaney and 300 of his colleagues were told they no longer had a job.

Mr. Delaney not only feels let down when he sees hundreds of millions of dollars going to General Motors and he's told, "You're out the door," but he also wants to know something else: Why would the McGuinty government be opposed to bills put forward by New Democrats that would ensure that, when workers are laid off, they're able to collect their full pay for work done, they're able to collect their vacation pay and they're able to collect their severance pay? Why would the McGuinty government, which says it wants to ensure that jobs and workers are treated fairly, not vote for and support legislation that would ensure that those workers get their severance pay and their vacation pay?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'm pleased to speak to it. First of all, let me just say, with respect to what's been happening to the auto sector in North America, that the competition has been intense, the restructuring has been severe and there have been job losses throughout North America for people caught up in this due to circumstances entirely beyond their control. But we have been, in perspective, doing better than the others. Between 1999 and 2005, Michigan lost 30% of its auto jobs; that's 90,000 jobs. Ohio lost 19% of their jobs. Indiana, which also has the benefit of Asian investments from Toyota and Subaru in addition to their Big Three, lost 15% of their auto jobs. Ontario lost 5% in the same time frame. We have secured $2.5 billion through our GM Beacon project. It is true that we have lost jobs in the auto sector in Ontario, but in comparison to the rest of North America we are—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Premier. Final supplementary.

Mr. Howard Hampton: Bill Delaney isn't interested in what you may or may not know about Michigan or Ohio. What Bill Delaney wants to know is how the McGuinty government could hand out half a billion dollars to auto sector companies without getting job guarantees. He wants to know why the McGuinty government would vote against bills that would ensure workers get their severance pay, get their vacation pay and get a pay cheque for work they've already done, but he also wants to know something else: Why would the McGuinty government oppose a Buy Ontario strategy, which would ensure that 50% of the work done on transit equipment is done here in Ontario? Why would the McGuinty government be opposed to a reasonable industrial hydro rate to ensure that manufacturers can continue to operate in Ontario? Why is the McGuinty government opposed to a refundable manufacturing investment tax credit—all of which would ensure that manufacturing jobs stay in Ontario?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: The leader of the NDP tells us he's concerned about the plight of individuals who lose their jobs at this point in time, and he's concerned about the plight of the working individual, but he voted five times against our five separate increases for the minimum wage. He talks about 50% when it comes to made-in-Ontario policies. We've got an 82% policy in place. Eighty-two per cent of the money we put into our $17.5-billion infrastructure program for public transit will be invested in the Ontario economy.

As a result of our most recent budget, we're putting 190 million emergency dollars into the hands of our manufacturing sector. They'll be getting those cheques at a time when they need it. That's exactly the kind of thing they've been looking for, contrary to the policy that my friend has been embracing for some time now.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): New question.

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Premier: Yes, New Democrats will vote against minimum wages which ensure that workers work and live below the poverty line.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Howard Hampton: I want to ask the Premier about Neskantaga First Nation. Neskantaga First Nation sent a notice to your government and to a mining exploration company saying, "If you want to explore on our traditional territory, we ask that you give us notice and you come and talk to us." Company X complied with Neskantaga's request and came to the First Nation and said, "Yes, we'd like to talk to you." But another company, Temex Resources, completely ignored the First Nation, completely ignored the First Nation's request, and went ahead and staked claims and cleared land. The McGuinty government then went and recognized the claim of Temex Resources.

My question: Is this the McGuinty government's idea of a mineral exploration process that is fair to First Nations and fair to exploration companies that want to work with First Nations, to recognize the claim—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Premier?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'm not familiar with the specific circumstances raised by my colleague, but I can say that we certainly believe on this side of the House that it's time for us to work together to modernize the Mining Act. The competing interests here, which we believe we've got to find a way to reconcile, include the rights of our aboriginal communities to receive notice and to respect their right to shape their own future in terms of land management. There are also the rights of northern Ontario and rural Ontario communities, which find a lot of good, high-paying jobs in the mining sector. Finally, there's another interest to be reconciled, and that is the natural environment and our responsibility to our children to make sure we pull all this together in a way that respects their right to a sustainable, healthy environment over the long term.

I'm not familiar with the specific details of this, but I can tell you that we have seized ourselves with this responsibility. This law has been in place for over 100 years—that is, the Mining Act—and we're working hard to change it.

Mr. Howard Hampton: You've been the government for five years now. For five years you've been repeating this line, and for five years, companies that do try to work with First Nations and show respect get pushed to the back of the line. Meanwhile, your government recognizes the mining claims of companies like Temex Resources and Platinex, corporations that show no respect for First Nations. I think it's time for the talk to end and the action to begin.

My question is: Why won't the McGuinty government tell First Nations today that you will not record any mining claim unless and until there is consultation and accommodation of First Nation interests?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: We're talking about a law here, the Mining Act, that's been on the books I think since 1873. There are a lot of interests that have institutionalized themselves since it was first put in place, so it's not the kind of thing that we can instantly undo. We're working hard and well to ensure that we approach this intelligently.

I've just been handed a note here that tells me a bit more about the Temex situation, and I've been assured that the company has now said that no further staking development will occur without first discussing this with the First Nation involved, which I think is the responsible thing to do in the circumstances.

Mr. Howard Hampton: What the Premier fails to recognize is that another mining exploration which wanted to show respect for First Nations and worked with First Nations from the outset has been elbowed out of the way because the McGuinty government allowed Temex Resources, which showed no respect for First Nations, to have their mining claim recognized.

Premier, all it would take is a regulation—it doesn't take a complete reworking of the Mining Act—out of the Ministry of Mines or the Ministry of Natural Resources that would simply say that the McGuinty government is not going to record any further mining exploration claims unless and until there is a record of consultation and accommodation with First Nations. It doesn't require any more talk; it doesn't require any more speeches. On the day of national reconciliation with First Nations, I ask the Premier: Is the McGuinty government prepared to pass a regulation that says you will not record further mining claims unless there is a record of—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Premier?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'm not prepared to make that commitment, but what I can say is that we will continue to work hard and well with our aboriginal communities. I am proud of the record that we've established in less than one year in terms of putting in place our first-ever Ministry of Aboriginal Affairs. We put in place a $3-billion groundbreaking revenue-sharing agreement. Just last week, we announced our new partnership fund of some $25 million. We have committed to reviewing the Mining Act and we will continue to do that in consultation with our aboriginal communities.

1110

C. DIFFICILE

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: To the Premier: Ideally, I would have asked this question of the Minister of Health, but his earlier answers were inadequate and clearly trying to shift the blame.

Unfortunately, 200 deaths from C. difficile, nearly four times the number of people who died from SARS, have generated little action on the part of your minister, Mr. Premier. Fern Merchant's father went into hospital in December 2007 for elective knee surgery and ended up losing his life to C. difficile. Mrs. Merchant told me that she wants your minister to resign. Can you tell Mrs. Merchant why it took news reports for you to notice the problem?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Health.

Hon. George Smitherman: To the contrary: I don't think it would be appropriate for the honourable member to conclude that her local hospital wasn't aware of the challenges with C. difficile, and no Minister of Health would pretend that was the circumstance. The circumstances that have occurred with respect to C. difficile are widely known in the health care community and most particularly in the hospital community.

Aside from the honourable member's suggestion that it's about passing responsibility along, it's to acknowledge that we have a shared responsibility associated with the protection against infectious disease that occurs in the hospital environment and that starts from the spread of feces. This is why it is so important to reinforce the necessity of everyone in the hospital environment—visitors, patients and those who work there alike.

We've taken important steps. We've taken steps to have infectious disease control officers working in the very hospital that the honourable member speaks about. I'll be happy in supplementary to speak about the other initiatives we've already—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: Again to the Premier: This isn't about one facility; THIS is about many facilities across our province. The inaction of your government, and specifically of your Minister of Health, has really shattered the public trust in our health care system. It is a slap in the face, Mr. Premier, to the families who have lost loved ones to C. difficile and to those who are still struggling with the disease.

Your minister has been withholding funds specifically from Joseph Brant Memorial Hospital and also other hospitals. The coroner's report from the Sault Ste. Marie hospital, following an outbreak up there, clearly indicated that aging hospitals are at an increased risk of hosting an outbreak. That report has been in your minister's hands for over a year.

When will you finally tell these families how many people have died on your watch, and when are you going to investigate the C. difficile outbreak in Ontario?

Hon. George Smitherman: First, I want to say to the honourable member that substantial steps have been taken. There are 137 infectious disease control officials that have been implemented in Ontario hospitals, including the two in the member's community. We've initiated a hand hygiene protocol that was implemented by the WHO. We have formed provincial infectious disease advisory committees to give us advice on these matters, created 14 disease control networks and more than doubled provincial public health funding in the province of Ontario, and we're moving forward on the recommendation of Dr. Baker to implement mandatory reporting.

When the honourable member wants to talk about withholding funds from her local hospital, we know that she's on precarious ground; first, because during the eight and a half years when her party was in office, they didn't rebuild that hospital, and, more to the point, because she continues to represent a party that proposes a $3-billion cut to health care.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I think it's well acknowledged on this side of the House that the only thing the Progressive Conservative Party ever wanted to cut out of the health care system—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I say to the member that that's not a point of order and that I ruled on that issue a week and a half ago.

C. DIFFICILE

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: Ma question est également pour le ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée.

We've heard many times this morning that since 2006 over 200 Ontarians have died from C. difficile. As well, in a recent medical journal, we learned that a significant number of hospitals are reusing medical devices. How many more shocking disease outbreaks will occur before the minister realizes that Ontarians deserve their hospitals to be transparent and accountable by agreeing to Ombudsman oversight today?

Hon. George Smitherman: We do intend to move forward with substantially enhanced transparency on a wide variety of matters, leading with C. difficile, factors occurring in hospitals which pose risks to patients. We're looking forward to using the energy and the opportunity that's been provided by the work done by the coroner's inquest into circumstances in Sault Ste. Marie and implementing that. That's why we feel it's so important to take advantage of the information that is available and to work rigorously on its implementation.

On the issue of single-use devices being reused, I will, by way of supplementary, offer information to the honourable member.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: Ontarians lose confidence in our health care system when almost four times as many Ontarians have died from C. difficile as from SARS, especially when preventive steps were not taken.

The minister failed to learn from the massive outbreaks in Quebec. He failed to listen to a top adviser who urged mandatory reporting of C. difficile now. Instead of claiming to take action, why won't the minister agree to truly making hospitals transparent and accountable and agree to an NDP solution, which is an ombudsman oversight of hospitals now?

Hon. George Smitherman: In the honourable member's earlier question, she asked about the reuse of single-use medical equipment devices. I can tell the honourable member that in Ontario in 2004, we implemented much more rigorous conditions around the reuse of any of these devices. It's a widely held practice, but we've made sure that methods with respect to sterilization are there to ensure the protection of the public in all of these matters.

On the issue with respect to C. difficile, it's not appropriate for the honourable member to suggest that the government was not proactive while, at the same time, seeming not to acknowledge the responsibilities that hospitals have, and the information and resources that they have to address the circumstances related to infectious disease. We have more than doubled the funding for public health in Ontario. Public health capacity around the province of Ontario has been substantially enhanced and is there as part of the resource to assist hospitals in dealing with the challenges related to infectious disease. That's why we're moving forward with the rigorous modelling that will provide much more transparency—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

ANTI-SMOKING LEGISLATION

Mr. Phil McNeely: My question is for the Minister of Health Promotion. New regulations under the Smoke-Free Ontario Act will soon be coming into effect. The new regulations to ban power walls will build on our government's groundbreaking Smoke-Free Ontario Act, which bans smoking in schools, hospitals, offices, restaurants and most other indoor public places. Families in my riding are watching this closely, as are small business owners, health professionals and anti-smoking advocates.

Everyone agrees that these step are necessary to help reduce smoking, but there's concern about how the new rules will be enforced. Convenience stores will be required to hide retail tobacco displays after May 31. This includes cigarettes, cigars and chewing tobacco. Customers will also be prevented from handling products themselves. This is a big change for the way tobacco is bought and sold in Ontario.

Minister, convenience stores in my riding are concerned about what will happen on May 31. What education and enforcement are being taken to prepare retailers for the ban?

Hon. Margaret R. Best: I would like to thank the member from Ottawa-Orléans for his question. The member is indeed correct. On May 31, our government will implement the next step of our landmark Smoke-Free Ontario Act, which will ban the retail display of tobacco products in stores. This ban is about saving lives. It is about reducing health care costs by ensuring that our young people do not start the habit of smoking and by helping smokers to quit.

Tobacco-related illnesses cost Ontario's health care system $1.6 billion annually. That is 500,000 hospital days. We understand the challenges that convenience store owners are facing during this transition period. That is why we're working in partnership with public health unit officials and the Ontario Convenience Stores Association—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Supplementary.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Again to the Minister of Health Promotion: It's important that these new measures take hold in Ontario. Retailer education is key to that success. The health of our children and families is too important. I wish to thank the retailers in my area for participating in this. The damaging effects of tobacco use hardly need to be repeated in this House: 13,000 deaths every year in Ontario are linked to tobacco-related illness. It is the leading preventable cause of death in Ontario.

While some members of John Tory's PC Party may argue that the jury is still out on second-hand smoke, most credible voices agree that we should all take action to help smokers quit. Ontario's teenagers know the truth.

Perhaps the smoking skeptics in the opposition should have joined them at the youth Take!Action conference to learn the real story.

While the Ministry of Health Promotion and the Ministry of Small Business and Entrepreneurship have been working with the Ontario Convenience Stores Association and others to implement the new power wall ban.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Answer.
1120

Hon. Margaret R. Best: We are committed to working with our partners to accomplish our goal of saving lives.

I am pleased to report in this House today that in partnership with public health unit officials, tobacco enforcement officers have visited 99% of all known tobacco vendors across Ontario. Of these businesses, public health units report that more than 95% will be ready and in compliance with the May 31 display ban. In cases where vendors are experiencing challenges, enforcement officers are working with these businesses to help them to comply. The public health units are apprised of the concerns facing some of these vendors, and while they are in the minority, we are mindful of their concerns. I have suggested to the public health units, which are responsible for enforcing the ban, that in their enforcement they apply a—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Ms. Sylvia Jones: My question is for the Minister of Community and Social Services. Direct funding for families is referenced in Bill 77, yet I've heard from many, many families across Ontario who have been denied Passport funding. Families have come to Queen's Park today because they are tired of waiting for action from your government. If direct funding to individuals is a priority, why have 90% of the families who have applied for Passport funding been refused?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: When this government came to power five years ago, nowhere was the need for modernization greater than in developmental services. So when we came into power, we asked Ernie Parsons, who was an MPP at the time, to review the situation with the parents, to engage the parents to tell us what they want for their loved ones. At the same time, in 2005, we initiated this wonderful Passport program. Since that time, 2,100 individuals are receiving money. We invested $27 million in annualized funding, which has supported more than 2,100—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: Minister, your words do very little to comfort the families who have been waiting for action.

In Durham region, only five families receive support; 40 applications were put in. In Hamilton, 174 families applied; six were successful. In London, 262 applied; 11 were successful. And so it goes across Ontario. Without assistance, young adults over the age of 21 with developmental disabilities are sitting on their couches instead of being involved and engaged in their communities. If direct funding truly is a choice for families, why have you not made Passports a priority for your government?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: This is an excellent question. I will say to the member of the opposite party that there are 2,100 fewer people sitting on the couch—

Interruption.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd just remind our guests that you're certainly welcome to visit Queen's Park and to observe, but not participate in, the debate. Thank you very much.

Minister.

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: First of all, let me say thank you to those who are taking care of these individuals. Let me say thank you to the parents who are looking while keeping their sons and daughters at home.

I will say to you that there are 2,100 fewer people who are sitting on the couch at home than when that government was in power. They cut social services and ODSP by 21%. This person who asked the question was working for the then leader of their party, so shame on you.

This government will continue to work to help you to get money. Every time we moved forward in proposing more money, they voted—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

ENERGY CONTRACTS

Mr. Peter Tabuns: My question is to the Minister of Energy. Minister, energy marketers all over Ontario are knocking on people's doors, telling them that unless they sign long-term contracts, they're going to deal with skyrocketing energy prices, pressuring them to sign contracts and not telling them what they're going to have to pay. When are you going to use the laws that you have in place to protect people in this province?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: I appreciate the question from the member. I would say to the public that you do need to be cautious in dealing with retailers. I've said to the member before, and to the public, that we have an organization called the Ontario Energy Board, an arm's-length, quasi-judicial body that has the responsibility of making sure that retailers operate ethically, legally and morally in the best interests of the consumer. They have that responsibility.

I will say to the member that I've met recently with them and they reviewed with me their processes. So I would say to the public, be very careful when you are dealing with a retailer. Make sure you understand the facts. If you have any problems, get in touch with the Ontario Energy Board. The member will know, and in the supplementary I'll have a chance to respond more fully, that the Ontario Energy Board has some very strict rules in place for these retailers, and they must—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary?

Mr. Peter Tabuns: The simple reality is that the system is not working. Poor people, elderly people, people for whom English is not their first language are getting hammered. You have a responsibility. The buck stops with you. When are you going to hold the OEB to account and tell them that this government wants the public protected? When are you going to take responsibility?

Hon. Gerry Phillips: I do want the public protected, and the Ontario Energy Board has the responsibility for making that happen.

I would just say to all of us to remember a few things. You sign a contract, then the Ontario Energy Board insists that another body, another organization, call you. You are required to confirm to another body, another organization, that you've signed that contract, that you understood what you were signing, and the contract cannot go ahead until that other verification takes place.

We've also introduced the elimination of negative option billing, which some members of the Legislature have heard about. But they are not allowed to automatically renew a contract. I would say to the member that that has proven to be quite beneficial to consumers because, after five years or after the end of your contract, the organization has to come back to you and get you to re-sign it.

So there are in place some very good protections. I agree with the member that the Ontario Energy Board—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Mr. David Zimmer: My question is for the Minister of Education. Our government has made huge investments in publicly funded education. Our investment is critical to ensuring that Ontario prospers in the future. In these economic times, it is imperative that education dollars are focused on students. Since February there have been report after report about the spending habits of the Toronto Catholic District School Board trustees. My constituents, indeed constituents throughout Ontario, have been appalled by the actions of the Toronto Catholic school trustees. This seriously undermines public confidence in our school system. It is a distraction from our main goal of increasing student achievement.

I'm glad that our minister is taking actions to address this situation. But my question for the minister is: Why did you take the action now, and can you assure Ontarians that this situation will be cleared up quickly?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I've been very clear and our government has been clear—in fact, trustees around the province are clear that they won't tolerate anything that undermines public confidence in publicly funded education. While I have reason to believe that the vast majority of school trustees around the province exercise wise and prudent decision-making, I still have some concerns about the Toronto Catholic board's practices. I remain concerned that, after the May 7 report of Mr. Hartmann was released, there was not action taken immediately. Given the seriousness of the board's practices and my concerns, I have asked for an investigator to go into the board. Significant change is needed now. I've therefore directed that investigators go into the Toronto Catholic board and report within a week to validate or to deny the concerns that I have, and then they will recommend whether to supervise or not.

1130

Mr. David Zimmer: There were media reports over the weekend that trustees have asked for a special board meeting where they will be looking at reopening their budget and developing a strategy to address a trustee code of conduct. I see that that they want the Minister of Education to wait until after this board meeting before making her decision. At the same time, we see reports that some trustees have requested immediate supervision. We have some trustees commenting in the media about who should shoulder the blame, trustees who are writing letters to the chief of police and trustees who are continuing to submit expenses despite having received the Hartmann report on May 7.

This is clearly a board in complete disarray. Why isn't the minister moving more quickly to take over this board? Why don't you just appoint a supervisor today?

Interjections.

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: It's interesting that members opposite make light of this. I do not take this lightly. I cannot legally appoint a supervisor without a formal investigation. Under the Education Act, I am required to send an investigator into the Toronto Catholic District School Board to look at the situation and make recommendations to me.

I repeat: I don't do this lightly. I have, and this government has, a deep respect for public school trustees, for Catholic school trustees, for trustees across the province. We believe in the institution of school boards, and we want this board to get on track. The chair of the school board has done a very good job in trying to pull together this board. It hasn't worked. There is still a fractious culture at the board. And the fact is that public dollars were being used for private advantage. That can't continue. That's why the investigator is there, and we're moving as quickly as we can to get this cleaned up.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Mrs. Christine Elliott: My question is for the Minister of Community and Social Services. Bill 77, Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, purports to provide individualized funding for people with special needs to allow them to live in our communities. We've heard already this morning that there's no new money to allow those Passports and other programs to proceed.

But my question relates to how you expect these families to be able to develop these programs. Many of them are quite complex. They require specialized knowledge of these plans. The act provides that the application centres will simply provide families with information about direct funding, yet virtually all of the individualized plans to date that have been developed have required facilitation. My question is, how can you possibly expect families to develop these plans without assistance?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: That's an excellent question. That's why this new bill will make sure that all these services are in place. Right now, we don't know what the waiting list is because people have to go to different places to put their name on the waiting list, so there is a lot of anomaly in the present system. That's why we have introduced a new bill which will help parents navigate what is right now a complex process. This new process that we'll move forward with will help parents and those who have the care of these individuals with developmental disabilities to get the service they need according to their needs.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: There's absolutely no provision in the act for that kind of planning—none whatsoever. You've spoken about the need for individualized funding and the fact that these three regional centres are going to be closing. Minister, can you tell us how much money is going to be saved by these closures, first of all, and for the benefit of all the members of the Legislature too and all the families who've come to hear from you today whether you're prepared, or the government is prepared, to put all of the money that will be saved through the closure of those centres into the individualized programs for special needs people?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: Since this government came into power, we have invested more than $200 million of new money to help this sector. We know that this sector needs more money, and we continue every year to listen to those who are working with individuals who have developmental disabilities, and the parents, to help them. This new bill will answer most of the concerns of these families and individuals. This government has always invested and will continue to invest in that sector.

It's a concern of mine that this question is being asked by the party where the only thing they did was to cut ODSP by 21% and then freeze ODSP afterwards. Every time we moved forward to add money to that sector, that party voted against it. We are going to continue—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

FIRE IN HAMILTON

Ms. Andrea Horwath: My question is for the Minister of the Environment. The fire marshal's report of the toxic fire at the Biedermann packaging plant in Hamilton says that firefighters were not aware that they were being exposed to cancer-causing pesticides and that the Ministry of the Environment water-quality testing results are suspect because testing was not prompt enough. An inferno of toxic pesticides and a troubling fire marshal's report—Minister, what more does this government need to be brought to light to bring the inquiry into this fire to Hamilton today?

Hon. John Gerretsen: As I've indicated to this member on a number of occasions in the past, after the fire happened last year, the Ministry of the Environment immediately went into action, and took samples along the river bed there for the next two or three weeks. We found out after that two- or three-week period of time that the situation was back to the way it was before. We will continue to work with the city of Hamilton, we will continue to work with the fire department there and we will continue to work with the Office of the Fire Marshal to make sure that the situation is dealt with, but we, at this point in time, see absolutely no need for the kind of inquiry that this member is asking for. We feel that the situation is well in hand.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: I disagree wholeheartedly with the minister's characterization of whether or not a public inquiry into this affair is necessary. Ten months after the toxic blaze took place, my freedom-of-information request finally forced the fire marshal's report into the light of day. It confirms that firefighters did not know about pesticide contamination in the run-off that polluted the waterways, put people and pets at risk and killed thousands of fish. Hamilton is asking—and, I think justifiably so: When will there be a public inquiry, since it is very, very obvious to most of us that it is necessary?

Hon. John Gerretsen: This party is committed to bringing in a right-to-know piece of legislation as part of our toxic reduction law. We are absolutely committed to that. We will bring that forward soon. After that's been passed, in those cases, people will get a much better right to know immediately, which perhaps in this case they didn't get. We still feel that the situation was dealt with in a proper manner, and we want to make sure that this kind of situation does not occur again in the future.

RENT BANK PROGRAM

Mr. David Oraziotti: My question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. More than a week ago, the member for Hamilton Mountain raised the issue of rent bank funding. I believe all of us in this House have heard from service managers across the province who are concerned about having adequate financial resources to support families with their housing needs. From Toronto to Sault Ste. Marie, they are telling us that this valuable service that many Ontarians rely on has been struggling.

Minister, I know that you've made a commitment here in the Legislature and to service managers across Ontario, but they are not the only ones who need to know what is happening to ensure that the rent bank program continues. Most importantly, it's the families in need who want to know just how the Premier's announcement of $5 million in new funding will help them. Can you explain how this funding will help low-income tenants in my riding and across Ontario?

Hon. Jim Watson: I thank the honourable member for the question. We were very pleased when Premier McGuinty, just about two weeks ago in Ottawa, announced an increase in the rent bank from $4.8 million to $5 million, because we recognize that since the rent bank program came into effect a few years ago, it has prevented 13,200 evictions from taking place and $7.7 million in shelter costs. In Sault Ste. Marie, the honourable member's riding, they will be receiving $42,000. That's a total of $242,000 since 2004.

In conclusion, let me quote from the Ottawa Sun when the Premier made the announcement. It said, "Brent Matthews didn't know what too to do."

He was out of work, behind on his rent, with a two-year-old son and a pregnant wife and his landlord was threatening eviction.

"Matthews got out of the bind with cash from the provincial government's rent bank program, which offers families in need two months' rent every two years...."

"It was like angels came down to help us."

That's why the rent bank program is in existence and why we support it.

1140

Mr. David Oraziotti: I want to thank the minister for his work with the program. It's great to know that our government is continuing with this program. The numbers you've referenced certainly show how beneficial it is to families across the province.

Concerned community members in my riding and across Ontario have had many of their concerns addressed by the announcement that the rent bank program will be continuing. However, we need a long-term vision for the program to operate it sustainably, and it needs annualized funding. Minister, can you tell us why the program has not been annualized, as requested by case managers and advocates? We need to know whether or not we will be able to continue to fund the rent bank program on an annual basis.

Hon. Jim Watson: That's a very good question. One of the issues that I am dealing with as the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing is to live up to a commitment that we made in our election platform to develop an affordable long-term housing strategy for the province. The rent bank is going to play a key role in that particular strategy.

We want to go out and consult members of the public—housing providers, tenants, landlords, the development industry, municipalities—and ask them for their input on how we can better the rent bank. We think the rent bank program is working extremely well. As I said, it's saved millions of dollars, and it's also saved the lives of people who have not been evicted as a result of having a difficult time, perhaps after losing a job.

The rent bank program is very much a cornerstone of our affordable housing strategy. We look forward to hearing how we can improve the rent bank in the years ahead.

TOURISM

Mr. Ted Arnott: My question is for the Premier. Today in Ontario, thousands of families are losing hope in the future. Coinciding with your government's lack of leadership, the cost of living is going up, taxes are going up and jobs are going away. The leader of the Ontario PC party, John Tory, has offered a plan to help our struggling tourism sector and boost our moribund economy.

Premier, do you agree that hard-working families deserve a break this summer, and will you eliminate the retail sales tax on accommodations and attractions for the summer months?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Tourism.

Hon. Peter Fonseca: I thank the member for the question. The Premier and this government are committed to a strong, sustainable and viable tourism industry. That's why we're working in lockstep with the sector to be able to address the complex challenges that are before it, like the high dollar, the high price of oil, passport requirements and the slumping US economy.

We have measures to address it in a plan. Unfortunately, the Leader of the Opposition and the Conservative Party have decided to be simplistic about this and, on the back of a napkin, have put together what does not address the sector in terms of the challenges that are before it. That's why the member and his party voted against the budget bill, which put $92 million more into the—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mr. Ted Arnott: I can't believe that the Premier was unwilling to answer a simple question like that. Certainly, we've had overwhelming support from the tourism sector for our proposal. Removing the retail sales tax for our struggling tourism sector would go a long way to restoring confidence in our province. It would certainly do more than the kind of feel-good ad campaign that your government ran last year just before the election. Our plan would save the average family visiting Ontario more than $100. For many of our residents, it means the difference between having a holiday at all or staying at home.

Why will the government not take this meaningful but affordable step to provide relief to Ontario's economy over the summer? When will Ontario families and the Ontario tourism industry become a priority for this government?

Hon. Peter Fonseca: To address that supplementary, I want to say that our plan is working. It's unfortunate that the Leader of the Opposition is so simplistic about this.

I wish that Mr. Tory had listened to his grade 8 teacher and done his homework, because when it comes to overnight stays from US visitors, while BC has seen a 7% decline and Quebec has seen a 5.8% decline, Ontario has actually seen an increase in overnight visitors from the US.

In regard to our marketing and promotion campaign, There's No Place Like This, it has been widely acclaimed. We have taken that campaign into the US, into New York, Boston, Buffalo and Detroit—and it's having great benefit for our tourism sector.

DOCTORS' SERVICES

Mr. Gilles Bisson: My question is to the Minister of Health: Minister, you'll know that the community of Hearst is devastated by the news that they're going to be losing three of their physicians, one of them to retirement and two leaving the community. My question to you is simply this: What is your ministry prepared to do and what steps are you taking to make sure that that community and area are going to continue to be serviced by doctors?

Hon. George Smitherman: I want to thank my honourable friend for his question. In the last four and a half years, 650,000 additional Ontarians have gained access to family physicians. We want to continue that progress and not see the setbacks to that in the community of Hearst. We'll be working with and expecting Dr. Joshua Tepper, assistant deputy minister, health human resources, to lend whatever assistance is possible to the community of Hearst.

We have 1,700 more doctors practising since 2002 and we have tremendous progress on enhancing the size of our medical school and more IMG training, and we need to make sure that that aggregate effect works well for the people of Hearst who are in uncertain times. I want to lend my assurance to the honourable member that I'll work alongside him and the leadership in the community with the leadership of my ministry to do what we can to address these pressing circumstances.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Minister, all that is fine and good and will lead in the long term to some solutions. The problem that Hearst now has is that we don't have physicians in place to replace those who are going to be leaving, and the community wants to know, along with l'Hôpital Notre-Dame and the patients who are served by these doctors, what you are prepared to do when it comes to having incentives in place in order to attract physicians to take the place of those physicians who will be leaving.

Hon. George Smitherman: Most certainly associated with physician practice in northern Ontario is a range of incentives designed to attract physicians to communities exactly like Hearst. I want to make very, very clear to the honourable member that the attraction of physicians to any community is a shared responsibility. We have obligations to produce a sufficient supply and we're working very vigorously to enhance Ontario's supply. We've made good progress—650,000 more Ontarians are enjoying access to care—and we'll do all that we can to apply all the resources and pressure that we have to assist the good people of Hearst in the circumstances that they face now, which are obviously undermining confidence in their health care services. We'll work alongside the honourable member and the community.

VISITOR

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would like all members to join me in welcoming a former member from the 30th through the 36th Parliaments: Bud Wildman, representative from Algoma. Welcome, Bud.

PETITIONS

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: This petition is on behalf of my colleague from Whitby—Oshawa, who's done an awful lot of work for this. I promised her that I'd read it into the record.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas many young people with developmental special needs have no meaningful social, recreational or vocational opportunities after high school;

"Whereas many of these young people have no real options for living independently in the community;

"Whereas current supports in place are insufficient to meet the needs of these young people;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the McGuinty government allocate an appropriate level of funding to advance a transformation agenda of individualized funding for adults with developmental special needs in the province of Ontario to allow them to live with dignity and to reach their full potential as members of our communities."

I'd be remiss not to point out that the member from Dufferin—Caledon has been a very strong advocate in this chamber as well, so I join with her and the member from Whitby—Oshawa to sign this petition.

RESPONSES TO PETITIONS

Mr. Howard Hampton: A point of order, Mr. Speaker:

On March 17, I presented a petition in this House, numbered P-49, regarding Hydro One Inc. and Schmidt Flowers Ltd. We have had no response from the government to date and it is now more than 36 sessional days since the petition was tabled. Because the standing orders state that the government is required to respond within 24 sessional days, I am seeking your assistance to have the government respond to petitions within the time limit that they are supposed to respond.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): That is a point of order. I have been informed that the response was due on 28 April. I just send the message to the government House leader to speak to the appropriate minister and see that that petition is duly responded to.

1150

PROTECTION FOR MINERS

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the people of Cartier.

"Whereas the current legislation contained in the Ontario health and safety act ... does not protect the lives of miners, we request revisions to the act;

"Lyle Everett Defoe and the scoop tram he was operating fell 150 feet down an open stope (July 23, 2007). Lyle was 25 years and 15 days old when he was killed at Xstrata Kidd Creek mine site, Timmins....

"The stope where Lyle was killed was protected by a length of orange plastic snow fence and a rope with a warning sign. These barriers would not have been visible if the bucket of the scoop tram was raised. Lyle's body was recovered from behind the scoop tram."

They ask the Legislative Assembly:

"Concrete berms must be mandatory to protect all open stopes and raises;

"All miners and contractors working underground must have working communication devices and personal locators;

"All equipment involved in injuries and fatalities must be recovered and examined unless such recovery would endanger the lives of others; and

"The entire act must be reviewed and amended to better protect underground workers."

I support this petition, will affix my name to it and send it with Kelvin.

CHILD CUSTODY

Mr. Kim Craitor: I'm pleased to introduce this petition on behalf of my riding of Niagara Falls. It reads as follows:

"We, the people of Ontario, deserve and have the right to request an amendment to the Children's Law Reform Act to emphasize the importance of children's relationships with their parents and grandparents as requested in Bill 33....

"Whereas subsection 20(2.1) requires parents and others with custody of children to refrain from unreasonably placing obstacles to personal relations between the children and their grandparents; and

"Whereas subsection 24(2) contains a list of matters that a court must consider when determining the best interests of a child. The bill amends that subsection to include a specific reference to the importance of maintaining emotional ties between children and grandparents; and

"Whereas subsection 24(2.1) requires a court that is considering custody of or access to a child to give effect to the principle that a child should have as much contact with each parent and grandparent as is consistent with the best interests of the child; and

"Whereas subsection 24(2.2) requires a court that is considering custody of a child to take into consideration each applicant's willingness to facilitate as much contact between the child and each parent and grandparent as is consistent with the best interests of the child;

"We, the undersigned, hereby petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to amend the Children's Law Reform Act to emphasize the importance of children's relationships with their parents and grandparents."

I'm pleased to sign my signature in support of this and give it to page Radhika to take down to the Speaker.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jim Wilson: I want to thank St. Peter's Anglican Church in Minesing for sending this petition to me.

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I agree with this petition and I will sign it.

CAR CULTURE

Mr. Rosario Marchese: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas car culture has destroyed and alienated our communities and dominated our public space;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"We demand that not one more dollar go to promote, support or perpetuate car culture in Ontario."

I submit this on behalf of thousands of people in Ontario.

PROPERTY TAXATION

Mr. Bill Mauro: I have a petition addressed to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario which reads as follows:

"Whereas the government is formulating the basis for provincial land tax reform; and

"Whereas the residents in unincorporated areas throughout the province have access to widely varied and usually very limited services at their properties; and

"Whereas many of the affected property owners are seasonal users of their properties; and

"Whereas many of these property owners already pay property taxes in an organized municipality; and

"Whereas many of these property owners already pay a roads board tax and/or education tax;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to hold public consultations in Thunder Bay at the earliest opportunity to ensure that provincial land tax reforms are applied fairly to the assessed properties."

I agree with this petition and will affix my signature to it.

WYE MARSH WILDLIFE CENTRE

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I have another petition here from about 1,000 people on the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre, located in the township of Tay, manages approximately 3,000 acres of environmentally sensitive land which is owned by the province of Ontario; and

"Whereas over 50,000 people visit the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre each year; and

"Whereas over 20,000 students from across Ontario visit the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre each year, receiving curriculum-based environmental education not available in schools; and

"Whereas the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre receives no stable funding from any level of government;

"We, the undersigned, petition the province of Ontario to establish a reasonable and stable long-term funding formula so that the Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre can continue to operate and exist into the future."

I'm pleased to sign this and give it to Dina to send to the table.

COMMUNITY COLLEGES COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Mr. Rosario Marchese: "Whereas part-time college workers in Ontario have been waiting for 30 years for bargaining rights; and

"Whereas thousands of part-time college workers have signed OPSEU cards, and the Ontario Labour Relations Board failed to order a timely representation vote; and

"Whereas the Ontario government must immediately make good on its promise to extend bargaining rights to college part-timers;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"The McGuinty government must immediately pass legislation legalizing the rights of college part-timers to organize, and direct the colleges to immediately recognize OPSEU as the bargaining agent for part-time college workers."

I am signing this petition in support of all of it.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Charles Sousa: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East local health integration network ... board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital ... this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

"Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I'll sign this and give it to Radhika.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas many young people with developmental special needs have no meaningful social, recreational or vocational opportunities after high school; and

"Whereas many of these young people have no real options for living independently in the community; and

"Whereas current supports in place are insufficient to meet the needs of these young people;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly as follows:

"That the McGuinty government allocate an appropriate level of funding to advance the transformation agenda of individualized funding for adults with developmental special needs in the province of Ontario to allow them to live with dignity and to reach their full potential as members of our community."

I fully support this petition and will be giving it to page Dina.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly, and I'd like to thank Dr. Thomas

Short for having sent this to me. It's signed by a number of patients from his office and it reads as follows:

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I'm pleased to sign and support this petition and ask page Chris to carry it for me.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I'm pleased to sign this and present it to Dina again to give to the table.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East local health integration network (CE-LHIN) board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

"Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I will affix my signature and ask—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I'm pleased to sign that and give it to Dina once again to provide to the table.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Mike Colle: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the growing number of unlawful firearms in motor vehicles is threatening innocent citizens and our police officers;

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and being found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I fully support this petition, which comes from the members of the Glen Long bocce club in the riding of Eglinton-Lawrence. I support the petition and affix my name to it.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions has expired. This House stands recessed until 1 o'clock.

The House recessed from 1204 to 1300.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

D. AUBREY MOODIE

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: D. Aubrey Moodie was a cherished son of Carleton county who would later become the father of Nepean. As a young farmer, Aubrey brought Nepean back from near-extinction in the 1950s after annexation with Ottawa, which decreased our population from 24,000 to roughly 2,000 people.

Aubrey's hard work, vision and strong conservative principles revived our community, and Nepean flourished under his watch. By the time he ended his tenure as Nepean reeve, Aubrey had steadily grown our community from 2,000 to 6,000 people. There is little wonder why the voters elected Aubrey an unprecedented three times. He was the only reeve in Carleton county's 127-year history to serve that long.

Aubrey built a community whose fire, police, sewer and other township services were the envy of Carlton county and of Ottawa. He built the foundation for our two greatest community assets, the Queensway Carleton Hospital and Algonquin College. As one of my mentors, Bill Tupper, our former MP, pointed out when he eulogized his mentor last week, Aubrey was "one of the greatest municipal success stories of our time."

Personally, I am deeply saddened, as are all of the residents of Nepean. He was someone who, along with Dr. Tupper, provided me with a lot of advice and encouragement throughout my career. The residents of Nepean-Carleton are grateful for Aubrey's century of service to our community. He died two months short of his 100th birthday.

He lived by the example my father taught me, which was reflected upon by Dr. Tupper: "He left his community better and stronger than he found it. What more could we have asked for or expected from him?"

SENTENCING

Mr. Peter Kormos: Folks in St. Catharines are rallying at the provincial courthouse on Wednesday, May 28, starting at 11:30 a.m. through to 1:30 in the afternoon. What they're doing there is expressing their outrage, their indignation and their sadness at the fact that the killer of Stephine Beck—why, it was just a year and a few months ago that Wayne Ryczak killed Stephine Beck and left her half-naked body on a rural road. When he pleaded guilty earlier this month to manslaughter, he was sentenced to one day in jail.

You see, Stephine Beck was a sex-trade worker, a prostitute, a whore, but she was also a young woman with a family, with friends, whose life has as much value as anyone else's. The one-day sentence for manslaughter was two years less—because the defence counsel himself proposed a sentence of two years less a day for the accused. The judge reduced the defence counsel's request to one day in jail.

I have written to the Attorney General calling upon him to examine this file with a view to appealing it. I think it's imperative that the Court of Appeal be handed this scenario to determine whether or not it's a fit sentence, because, I tell you, the folks in St. Catharines sure as heck don't think so.

LIONS CLUB OF RICHMOND HILL

Mr. Reza Moridi: Several weeks ago, I had the pleasure of attending the 70th anniversary of the charter of the Lions Club of Richmond Hill. Volunteer members of this club have been serving Richmond Hill for well over 70 years. In 1963, the Lions of Richmond Hill raised a large sum of money to start the York Central Hospital.

So it's truly an honour for me to present to the House today the following Lions: Ted Mansbridge, founding charter member with over 70 years of service—Ted is 104 years young and is unable to join us today, but his daughter, Elinor Mansbridge, is here on his behalf; George Chassie, a 50-year member; Doug Graham, 45 years; Grant Marshall, 44 years; Marion Tait, six years; Jean Green, six years; Carol Anne Betts, three years; and Bertha Hurdman, six months. I also wish to acknowledge the current president, Allan Betts, who is not here today.

The province of Ontario is a better place for the efforts of volunteers such as the Lions of Richmond Hill.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Welcome to those guests.

PROTECTIVE SERVICES APPRECIATION BARBECUE

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: On Sunday, May 25, I was honoured to co-host, along with my federal counterpart, Simcoe North MP Bruce Stanton, our first annual protective services appreciation barbecue. Approximately 250 of our constituents, along with their families, who are employed or volunteer in police and fire services, as paramedics or in the military joined Bruce and me and our families for an afternoon of appreciation and fun.

At the same time, approximately 25 other ridings across Canada held similar protective services appreciation barbecues and events. I understand that Simcoe North was the only Ontario riding involved in this event this year. We in Simcoe North plan on making this an annual event, to be held on the last Sunday in May each year. We also hope to inspire other Ontario ridings to join in next year as well.

I'd also like to thank all the municipalities that allowed their emergency services vehicles to be used for display purposes at the event. In particular, I want to thank OPP Commissioner Julian Fantino, who joined us for this event. It was great that he could come up. He took three or four hours out of a very busy schedule to be with a lot of his OPP officers, his colleagues and a lot of our fire service workers, paramedics and some people from the military.

I just want to say that it's great to take part in an event like this, but I really want to thank all those people who work in emergency services, who make our lives in Ontario safer and our province a better place to live in.

POLICE OFFICERS

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: On Friday, May 16, I had the opportunity to participate in a ride, along with Hamilton police division 30. The police officers on Hamilton Mountain are true heroes. They are extremely professional and diligent, and team players.

I was able to see what a day in the life of a Hamilton police officer was really like. I rode in a car with the officers from about 7 p.m. until 5 in the morning, and I can tell you their work is never-ending. We were constantly on the go, moving from one scene to another. The whole time, the officers were calm and collected. They were efficient and, no matter the situation, they were always in control.

I'd like to personally thank Officers Hamilton and Gallant for allowing me to ride with them, and also Superintendent Ken Bond, Senior Sergeant Dominic Palmieri and, of course, our police chief, Brian Mullen, for all their hard work and dedication to keeping Hamilton safe. These men and women are keeping our streets safe. As a Hamilton Mountain resident, I feel safe and confident in the outstanding work our officers do.

SEXUAL REASSIGNMENT SURGERY

Mr. Peter Shurman: Just prior to the Legislature's break for constituency week, Health Minister George Smitherman made a surprise announcement—surprising, apparently, even to his own Liberal caucus colleagues. The announcement was that the Liberal government would begin using taxpayer money to fund sex change surgery. This is also surprising, given that this is the same Liberal government that stopped funding for eye exams, physiotherapy and chiropractic care, and the same Premier who in 2004 said that funding for sex change surgery was not a priority.

There's no doubt that for transgendered individuals this is positive. We in the PC Party understand and respect that view. However, given the economic challenges facing this province and my constituency of Thornhill, it is more than legitimate to question this Liberal government's priorities for the use of increasingly scarce health care dollars, given the range of pressures in health care. Here are just a few: With over 207,000 manufacturing jobs lost since 2004, hard-pressed families and single moms are forced to pay out of pocket for eye exams, chiropractic care and physiotherapy; long-term-care residents are sitting in their own waste for hours without care; try to get a PET scan in Ontario; approximately a million Ontarians are still without a family doctor; waiting lists for an initial consultation with an orthopaedic surgeon can be up to two years—and on and on.

The people of this province deserve an explanation of exactly how sex change surgery rose to the top of the health care priority list. Who made this decision and why?

1310

GUELPH-WELLINGTON WOMEN IN CRISIS

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'm pleased to rise today to speak about Guelph-Wellington Women in Crisis. Women in Crisis works towards ending violence against women and children by providing counselling to victims of all forms of abuse, as well as providing transitional shelter for those who have fled their homes.

Currently, all counselling services and the crisis hotline are run out of their very crowded office on Norwich Street in Guelph. Earlier this month, Executive Director Sly Castaldi and I had the pleasure of welcoming the Minister of Community and Social Services, Madeleine Meilleur, to tour the current Women in Crisis site. Minister Meilleur and I were thrilled to announce that Guelph-Wellington Women in Crisis will soon be moving to a new home. The province is giving them $802,000, which will enable them to move to a larger, more accessible building. The new building will allow the agency to serve more women, especially women with disabilities or women whose children have a disability. Not only will this new funding make the building more accessible, but a new, larger building will provide more space for staff, better group meeting and counselling rooms and a bigger warehouse area for donated furniture and supplies.

Guelph-Wellington Women in Crisis has a long record of providing exemplary service. I am pleased that this capital grant will enable Women in Crisis to expand their support services to women who are victims of domestic violence and sexual assault.

LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: Last week, the travelling leader of the PC Party made an appearance here at Queen's Park and announced his party's summer tourism strategy.

Ontarians were very confused by his words. He's the leader of a party that has repeatedly stood up in the Legislature to vote against this government's initiatives that ensure that our tourism industry remains strong. Just two weeks ago, his own caucus voted against the budget bill, which included initiatives and tax measures totalling $92 million for the tourism industry.

Our government doesn't believe in a band-aid strategy like the one proposed by the leader of the Conservative Party. We know that when the economy is facing challenges, with a high dollar and the high price of gas, it's important to invest in more tourism initiatives, such as $10 million for festivals and events, so that not only can Ontarians enjoy events across the province, they can enjoy even more events right here in their hometown.

This government knows that the people who know best about tourism are the tourism sector itself. We will take our advice from them in order to ensure long-term success of the tourism sector in Ontario. We're listening to our tourism partners. They asked for a competitive study for the industry, and we're delivering on that.

I'm very proud of the initiatives taken by this government in regard to tourism. I can't say that for the other side.

ONTARIO CHILD BENEFIT

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: I rise in the House today to speak to the Ontario child benefit. The $2.1-billion investment is going to reach 1.3 million Ontario children and 600,000 low-income families.

I know that many families in my riding of Huron-Bruce welcome the Ontario child benefit, and I'm very pleased that this government can provide assistance to those hard-working families and make things a little bit easier for them.

In July of this year, eligible parents will begin to receive the Ontario child benefit, with up to $600 per year per child this year and increasing to $1,100 per year per child when fully implemented. The great thing about this is that eligible families simply need to ensure that they have filed their taxes and registered for the Canada child tax benefit.

I'd like to emphasize a couple of things for my colleagues across the floor. In addition to receiving the Ontario child benefit, Ontario families will also receive the full national child benefit supplement.

We're going much further than just ending the clawback. We're also extending support to low-income working families. Not only that; a single parent on social assistance with two kids will be 27% better off this year since we took office and 34% better off once the OCB is fully implemented.

That is an investment in Ontario families and, in particular, it's an investment in Ontario's children—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

ANNUAL REPORT, INFORMATION AND PRIVACY COMMISSIONER

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I beg to inform the House that on May 21, 2008, the 2007 annual report of the Information and Privacy Commissioner was tabled.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'UNIVERSITÉ ALGOMA

Mr. Milloy moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and to dissolve Algoma University College / Projet de loi 80, Loi portant création de l'Université Algoma et dissolution de l'Algoma University College.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for a short statement.

Hon. John Milloy: During ministerial statements, Mr. Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY AND RESPONSES

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Hon. John Milloy: In the coming weeks, thousands of students across Ontario will celebrate one of the greatest achievements of their lives. At a ceremony in front of proud family and friends, they will receive their post-secondary degree, certificate or diploma. That special moment will cap off years of hard work and dedication. But it does not bring an end to their journey; rather, it marks an exciting new beginning.

These smart and talented graduates hold the promise of Ontario's future. They are the entrepreneurs who will build tomorrow's knowledge economy, they are the dreamers who will tackle the world's toughest problems, and they are the innovators who will turn exciting new ideas into things that have the power to change our lives.

Our government is committed to making sure that every young person in our province is able to reach their full potential so that we can harness their skills and knowledge to strengthen our province and improve the lives of all Ontario families. So today we're taking an important step forward in our efforts to help more young people pursue their dreams. We're introducing legislation that, if passed, would establish a new university in northern Ontario.

For more than 40 years, Algoma University College in Sault Ste. Marie has operated as an affiliate college of Laurentian University in Sudbury. Algoma gives students in the north a wonderful opportunity to pursue higher education and stay close to home. Students can choose from over 30 undergraduate programs in areas ranging from finance and economics to fine arts and information technology.

Algoma also has very strong ties to First Nations people in the north. More than 20% of Algoma's students are aboriginal, and the school offers a BA in Ojibway, the only one of its kind.

Algoma's high-quality programs and commitment to the community have produced great results. Over the past 10 years, Algoma's enrolment has grown by 73%.

Before going any further, I'd like to acknowledge Algoma's president, Dr. Celia Ross, and the chair of their board of governors, Bud Wildman. Both, along with a large delegation from Algoma, have joined us here today in the Legislature to mark what must be a very fulfilling moment for them. I congratulate them and all their colleagues on the outstanding work that they have done for students in the north.

I would also like to acknowledge the hard work and leadership of my colleague David Oraziotti, MPP for Sault Ste. Marie. He has been a strong advocate for both his community and this institution and deserves a tremendous amount of credit for the introduction of this legislation. In fact, he was reminding me that he was actually a member of the board of governors of Algoma and served on one of the subcommittees that were working toward independence. His association goes back many years.

1320

We want to help Algoma welcome even more students through its doors. That is why we are introducing this important legislation today. If passed, this legislation would enable Algoma to become an independent university with the ability to grant its own degrees. This means it will not only be able to attract more students, but it will also be able to attract more jobs and investment to the community. Investing in people in the north and across Ontario is one of the core pillars of our government's economic plan. After all, our people are our greatest asset, and by investing in their knowledge and skills, we can continue to attract the kinds of jobs and investment that will keep our province and our people moving forward. We know that it is only when our people are at their best that Ontario can be at its best.

That's why we are making an unprecedented investment in post-secondary education and training through our $6.2-billion Reaching Higher plan. We've been getting results. Today, 100,000 more students are attending colleges and universities compared to five years ago. About 60% of Ontarians aged 25 to 64 have completed a post-secondary certificate, diploma or university degree program. That is one of the highest rates of post-secondary education in any country in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. About 110,000 apprentices are learning a trade today, nearly 50,000 more than five years ago.

But we know that there's more to do. Our government remains committed to developing Ontario's post-secondary education system into truly the envy of the world. Accomplishing this will ensure Ontario's place in the future.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Responses.

Mr. Jim Wilson: I'm very pleased on this historic occasion to rise and congratulate Algoma University College, which will soon become Algoma University. It is an historic day. I met with Mr. Bud Wildman, alongside of whom I had the pleasure of serving in this House for about five years, beginning in 1990. He's chair of the board of governors. I also met with Dr. Celia Ross, the current president of the university, and who I know will be the future and the first president of Algoma University. I met with them a couple of weeks ago and assured them that the PC Party and John Tory would give full support to this bill. I'm happy about that.

I served on the board of governors at U of T, and one of my first elected positions was president of the student council at U of T. I think of how difficult it must be under the current arrangement—which is almost a condominium arrangement with Laurentian University, although they get along very well—for the current university to have loyal alumni. The certificate that you get to put on the wall when you graduate, even though you might have gone to Algoma for three or four years, actually says Laurentian right now. But that will change in the future. They'll be able to build up more alumni and good people like Mr. Wildman, who has been chair for about eight or nine years. He has a very good reputation and has done an excellent job. Congratulations to you, the faculty and the board of governors.

I want to say, because the minister bragged again about funding of universities, that we do have a chronic funding shortfall at universities, which I've mentioned many times. You got 311 million in new dollars from the federal government this year. If this were questions and answers, I would ask, "What did you do with it?" On that: In 1999, then-opposition leader McGuinty not only said he would bring university funding in Ontario on per capita basis to the average of Canada, but we're now dead last on per capita funding. We're 10 out of 10 behind the entire pack. Mr. McGuinty at that time not only verbally promised that; he signed a great, big pledge card. I held up here a few weeks ago the newspaper photo of him saying that he would do that during his first term in office. Well, your first term is over with.

Secondly, the Ontario council of faculty associations—I've raised this several times in the House—mentions that we're short 5,500 faculty right now. That's a real shame. There's no use bragging, as the minister does from time to time, about the high enrolments we have. We have people sitting in classrooms across the street, at Convocation Hall, with 1,100 students in a political science class. That's unacceptable.

So congratulations for bringing this forward. We'll give you our full support. It's an historic day. But all this bragging about $6.2 billion—I heard Mr. Sorbara say that when he was finance minister, and he always said it in the past tense: "We've spent $6.2 billion." You're only halfway through that program. There's no guarantee that you'll actually spend all that money. Again, you have $311 million extra this year, and the universities didn't see that.

For all those who are watching in Sault Ste. Marie, as a former Minister of Northern Development, I know this will be good for the north, and the minister mentioned that. It'll be great in terms of the aboriginal programs and the special programs that they do have, and it'll be great for education and culture right across northern Ontario, Ontario itself and Canada. Congratulations, Algoma U.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I too want to congratulate the chair of the board of governors, Bud, who is a former colleague and someone we respect a great deal, and respected a great deal, in terms of the work that he has done. I want to congratulate the president, Dr. Ross, as well, but in particular, the entire administration for all of the work that they have done in the process of transforming themselves from Algoma University College to a university of distinction—

Interjection: What about David?

Mr. Rosario Marchese: You've already congratulated your own.

I want to focus on the process and what the administration has done over the years with the faculty and with the support of the students, in terms of the outreach they have done in the community, because that is an important part of the work that they have done. This work of establishing partnerships has been evidenced as it relates to forestry, to northern medical schools and the First Nations communities.

Speaking of First Nations, this is where I want to take the time to be able to say congratulations to the administration for the work you have done with First Nations, for the work you have done in collaboration with and in consultation with First Nations. That is an example of how you, the government, should work with First Nations. This is an example of something that has happened that I wanted to praise. Part of this has to do with governance. There are First Nation programs at many universities and colleges, but this is one of the first where governance of programming relates and connects to First Nations as a people. For that, I congratulate and praise them for that particular work.

They now have the job of recruiting students from all over Ontario, Canada and beyond. That, I'm sure, will be a challenge for the university, but because of the uniqueness of the program, I am convinced that they will attract students from all over Canada.

This is not the time today to debate what the government has not done in the university sector. I will take the opportunity to do that another time, which I love to do, as you know. But the administration doesn't need to hear this today; they will at another time.

We haven't had a chance to read the bill. We will discuss it tomorrow as a caucus. But in principle, I am very supportive of the bill. We will give speedy passage to this bill this week, if the government is prepared and others are prepared. We want to look at the bill, and perhaps even a short 10 or 15 minutes to acknowledge people and to allow other members from the north to be able to speak to this bill would do it. But beyond that, we're quite happy to give speedy passage to the bill.

1330

ORDERS OF THE DAY

SERVICES FOR PERSONS WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES SERVICES AUX PERSONNES AYANT UNE DÉFICIENCE INTELLECTUELLE

Mrs. Meilleur moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 77, An Act to provide services to persons with developmental disabilities, to repeal the Developmental Services Act and to amend certain other statutes / Projet de loi 77, Loi visant à prévoir des services pour les personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, à abroger la Loi sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle et à modifier d'autres lois.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Debate?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: Please note that I will be sharing my time with my parliamentary assistant, the MPP from London—Fanshawe.

I rise in the House today in support of our government's new legislation that would improve the lives of people with developmental disabilities in Ontario. I was extremely proud to introduce this proposed legislation recently. It is the combination of a great deal of work, and I would not be here today without the unprecedented degree of co-operation we have received from our developmental services partners and their valuable input and insight. Individuals, families, agencies and government—we have all come together. Working hand in hand, we have begun the groundwork needed to transform how we deliver services and supports.

The proposed Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, 2008, is legislation for a modern system of supports and services for people with developmental disabilities. We need to update our developmental services legislation. The previous legislation was created at a time when we placed many individuals with developmental disabilities in provincially run institutions.

Nous devons actualiser notre Loi sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle. La loi actuelle a été créée à une époque où on plaçait plusieurs personnes atteintes d'une déficience intellectuelle dans les établissements gouvernementaux.

When our government came to office in 2003, we knew we had to change many things. The closure of the three remaining facilities was something that was started by the Peterson government in the 1980s. It was the McGuinty government's job to ensure that the last of the residents living there moved into the community with as little disruption as possible. It was a monumental task. We worked with our developmental services partners to hear their thoughts on how we could best accomplish this, and we worked with the staff at the facilities, not only to place the residents in community jobs where possible, but also to ease their transition to community life. I am happy to say that many families who were initially concerned about the change are often the first to tell us that it was the right thing to do.

Je suis heureuse de pouvoir dire que les familles qui étaient réfractaires de prime abord à ce changement ont été nombreuses à reconnaître d'emblée que c'était la chose à faire.

I wouldn't want to go any further without first telling you how far we have come. I recently attended an exhibit at the Royal Ontario Museum that documented life in the institutions and how people with developmental disabilities were supported there. It is important for us to remember that people believed at that time that putting a family member with a disability into an institution was the best thing for them, and that they would flourish in a secluded rural environment, away from the stress and commotion of everyday life. But what we must also remember is that sometimes the commotion of everyday life is just as healthy as the tranquility of a remote hideaway, that everyone is different and that we need to offer a client the lifestyle that best suits him or her, because we know now that each and every one of us contributes to the life and the character of our communities, and together we are stronger. Each of us, no matter our strengths or abilities, has a role to play. Each of us deserves respect and deserves to be treated according to our abilities, not our disabilities.

This past fall, I had the pleasure of hearing Lieutenant Governor David Onley speak at the Canadian Club of Toronto, where he said: "What is needed is a change of attitude to people with disabilities. What is needed is the realization that disability does not mean inability ... that living with a disability does not mean an individual cannot also enjoy a productive and satisfying career." This legislation recognizes that people with disabilities can enjoy a productive career, a fuller life, and can contribute to their community. Our job is to support them and encourage them every step of the way.

Today, we have many success stories of individuals who have moved into the community. There is a woman who had lived at the Huronia Regional Centre since she was seven years old. Now, 43 years later, she lives in a condominium in downtown Toronto with a roommate and shares in community life. There is a man who had lived at the South West Regional Centre his entire life, and he now has a part-time job in Essex. There is a man who used to live at the Rideau Regional Centre for 30 years. He's enjoying life in the community, spending time with his new housemates, going to his local coffee shop and doing his banking and grocery shopping.

I even had the pleasure of meeting a woman just last week who was deaf-blind and had lived at the Rideau Regional Centre most of her life. When she left the facility in 1999, she only knew a few hand signs and had difficulty communicating with others. Today, not only does she live with friends in her community and cook for herself, but she is fluent in American Sign Language and has a job with Canada Post. She lives independently, with support, but most importantly with dignity and a sense of purpose.

Ces expériences ne pouvaient simplement pas être vécues dans un établissement.

We are in a new era of community inclusion that embraces people with a developmental disability. Thousands of people with a developmental disability are leading remarkably full lives. They go shopping, to the theatre and to restaurants. They go out with their friends, take courses at community colleges, complete job placements and get jobs. Like other citizens, they are giving back to their community and enjoying a greater sense of belonging. We are all richer for their contributions.

We need new legislation that is in tune with the times, legislation that helps people to reach their goals and their dreams, that gives them more choice and flexibility in the supports they receive and encourages independence.

Nous avons besoin d'une nouvelle loi qui soit en harmonie avec son temps, une loi qui aide les gens à atteindre leurs buts et à réaliser leurs rêves, qui leur donne plus de choix et plus de latitude pour obtenir du soutien et qui encourage l'autonomie.

1340

Our proposed legislation takes the next big step in building on the groundwork we have begun for our long-term plan for developmental services. This proposed bill demonstrates that we are a government of action, not just words—the kind of action that's going to make a real difference in the lives of people with developmental disabilities and their families.

Our proposed legislation, if passed, would replace the existing Developmental Services Act. That act is now outdated. It speaks to a time when we supported people in institutions, not in communities. We need legislation that recognizes that people with developmental disabilities can live much more independently in their communities with the right supports. We need legislation that recognizes that people want more choice in the services and supports they receive. Our proposed legislation acknowledges those needs.

Nowhere is the need for modernization greater than in developmental services. Community agencies are the backbone of our developmental services system and they will continue to play a central role. But we heard loud and clear from people with developmental disabilities, their families and community agencies that the system of support needs to be easier to navigate. People need services and supports closer to their home. They need more choice and flexibility in the supports they receive.

We committed to address these issues. We launched a major review to make the system more fair, accessible and sustainable. We announced the closure of the province's three remaining facilities for people with developmental disabilities by the end of March 2009. We committed to developing a comprehensive plan for the future, one that would lead us through the next 25 years and beyond.

Our proposed legislation would put into motion the framework for that plan. It would reinforce our commitment to transforming the system into one that is based on citizenship, fairness, accessibility, accountability and sustainability.

Notre projet de loi renforcerait notre engagement à transformer les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle pour en faire un système basé sur la citoyenneté, l'équité, l'accessibilité, la responsabilisation et la durabilité.

It would give us a solid foundation on which to modernize our system of developmental services over the coming years.

This is a bill with families in mind. It responds directly to what families and people with developmental disabilities have told us through our province-wide consultations and builds on that advice. If passed, it will help us improve service, because people would only have to go to one place to apply for service; improve choice, because people could receive funding directly to tailor supports to their needs; and improve fairness, because everyone would use the same application and assessment package. People who need support the most would have priority.

These are things that people with developmental disabilities and their families want. But we cannot do it without putting the right legislative framework in place first. That's what this bill is all about. It is the critical next step in the evolution of services for people with developmental disabilities in this province.

C'est la prochaine étape cruciale de l'évolution des services pour les citoyens de notre province qui ont une déficience intellectuelle.

This province has come so far since 1974, when the current Developmental Services Act became law, but we have so much further to go and we are committed to the journey.

As Catherine Frazee, co-director of the Ryerson-RBC institute for disability studies, once said, "We remember that what we have built here, we have built together across great difference. We remember that there is more to build tomorrow."

With the passage of this bill, we can really move forward and begin to build an even brighter future for Ontarians with a developmental disability. I call upon members of this House to join me to pass this proposed legislation, because it will make a difference in the lives of people with disabilities, their families and our community partners, who provide such a high level of care and compassion.

If this bill is passed, we will be able to look back and say, "We took a giant step forward in building stronger, more inclusive communities for all Ontarians."

Si ce projet de loi est adopté, nous pourrions dire en rétrospective que nous avons fait un pas de géant pour rendre nos collectivités plus fortes et plus inclusives pour tous les Ontariens et toutes les Ontariennes.

That's what this is really all about: creating legislation that will give us the framework to move forward in a way that would improve the lives of thousands of people with developmental disabilities in Ontario.

I encourage all members of this House to support this important legislation.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I am honoured to rise in this House today on behalf of our government for second reading of Bill 77, the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act.

I want to pick up on something the minister said just now. As legislators, we have to view legislation in the context of when it was passed. Our previous developmental services legislation spoke to a time when we supported people with a developmental disability primarily in a provincial institution, but much has changed since then. Our previous legislation simply does not address anything about who we are today. The legislation before us aims to change that.

As a responsible government, we have to change our legislation if we ever hope to stay in step with the times and with new ways of thinking. Today, we support people with developmental disabilities in communities across Ontario. Today, we support people with developmental disabilities in homes, not institutions. These individuals have as much right to live and contribute to the fabric of our communities as everybody else. In fact, our communities are stronger when we include people of all abilities.

Aujourd'hui, nous aidons les personnes atteintes d'une déficience intellectuelle à vivre en société, dans toutes les collectivités de l'Ontario. Aujourd'hui, nous ne plaçons plus les personnes atteintes d'une déficience intellectuelle dans des établissements; nous les aidons à vivre dans des foyers.

Ces personnes ont tout autant le droit que les autres citoyens de participer et de contribuer à la vie de leur collectivité. En fait, nos collectivités sont d'autant plus fortes si elles font appel à tous leurs citoyens, quelles que soient leurs habiletés.

Our journey to where we are today in developmental services has been a gradual evolution.

1350

We have worked closely with our community partners that provide the dedicated services and forward-thinking programs for people with developmental disabilities. These partners know how important it is that people with developmental disabilities have the opportunity to live their lives to the fullest that they are able, and with the passing of our proposed legislation, we could really move forward into the 21st century and show others exactly what we are made of.

This legislation is about accountability and sustainability, certainly, but it's also about compassion for the individuals, their families and friends and for the community agencies that support them. Our proposed legislation is all about the future of developmental services, and this is what Bill 77 is all about.

Let me set the stage for you. Today we have a $1.57-billion developmental services system supporting more than 40,000 individuals. That list continues to grow. We knew we needed to make some pretty dramatic changes, and we knew that the best way to do that was to speak to the people who would be most directly affected. Families are telling us they need an easier time getting help through the system. It's just too complicated. They need services and supports closer to their homes, not in segregated communities spread disproportionately across the province. Families are telling us they need more choice and flexibility in the supports they receive. Our proposed legislation would respond to all of those needs.

Les familles nous disent qu'elles veulent obtenir plus facilement de l'aide. Le système actuel est trop compliqué. Elles ont besoin de services et de soutien près de chez elles, pas dans des collectivités isolées et mal réparties sur le territoire ontarien.

Les familles nous disent aussi qu'elles souhaitent plus de choix et de latitude pour obtenir du soutien. Notre projet de loi permettrait de répondre à tous ces besoins.

If passed, this legislation would lay the foundation for Ontario to build a new and more modern system of developmental services over the coming years, and it would make the system sustainable for future generations.

Let me talk about some of the key features of the proposed legislation. First, we want to get rid of archaic terms such as "facility" and "institution." The three remaining facilities are set to close by March 2009, and we won't need to use this kind of language for much longer. Second, we want to create application centres for access to developmental services across the province. Staff at these centres would be trained consistently across the province and have the tools they need to help families through the application and assessment process.

Setting up application centres would mean that families and individuals would only need to go to one place to apply for supports instead of having to tell their stories over and over at several individual agencies.

We also want people to have more choice and flexibility in purchasing supports that are tailored to their needs. So we want to provide funding either through community agencies or to application centres for direct funding. We want to get a better handle on service planning.

That's why we would start collecting information from individuals and application centres to improve service planning throughout the province. Without careful planning, forecasting future service needs and changes is difficult.

And because we are in a time when families and individuals have more say in where they will live and how they will live, we want to give them greater peace of mind. We can do this by introducing accountability requirements for agencies, individuals and families that receive direct funding, which would include provisions to allow us to take corrective action against agencies or application centres if there are serious issues; for example, concerns about health and safety or financial administration. Taken together, the elements of this proposed legislation will serve us well into the future. This legislation would allow this and future governments the latitude needed to build and maintain a modern system of developmental services.

We have come a long way, but there is much more to be done. We can do more; we can do better. I believe it's time for us, as provincial legislators, to come together and take our developmental services system to the next level. We have worked hard to make sure our bill will give us the legislative framework we need to support what we started in 2004, when we first announced plans to transform the developmental services system. We have worked hard as a government and as a partner with families, individuals and agencies to develop this proposed legislation.

Il est temps pour nous, les législateurs de cette province, d'unir nos forces pour faire entrer notre système de services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle dans une ère nouvelle.

Nous avons travaillé fort à ce projet de loi afin de nous doter du cadre législatif nécessaire pour poursuivre ce que nous avons entrepris en 2004, lorsque nous avons annoncé notre plan de réorganisation des services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle.

Nous avons travaillé fort en tant que gouvernement et en tant que partenaires des familles, des bénéficiaires et des organismes pour élaborer ce projet de loi.

I encourage all members of this House to support this legislation, because it is important for all of us to keep working together in order to improve this sector.

As everybody in this House knows, in my past capacity, I worked for many years as a counsellor with Community Living London. I also worked with the Ministry of Community and Social Services as a counsellor at the facility in Woodstock, before they closed it because we moved the people to the community. As the minister mentioned many times, she visited many different group homes and saw the people who had been transferred from a facility to a group home, how they functioned, how they loved it, how well-behaved they were. It's important for all of us to look at this sector very well, because people with developmental disabilities have a right to live in a place they choose, and also to be a part of the community. I know 100% that they have a lot of ability and good work to offer us, and they have a lot to offer the community at large. Also, they have the ability to contribute to our province.

Our duty and obligation as legislators in this place is that we've been given permission by the people of Ontario to look after many different issues. This issue is very important for all of us because, in the end, we have to make sure all the elements of our society are working together in order to enhance our ability and maintain our prosperity in this province.

I had a good experience with people with developmental disabilities. I noticed and felt very much that when they moved from big facilities, where they were just a number, to the community and were living in a house, had a job they went to on a daily basis and were treated with respect, their behaviour totally changed and they became very well-behaved individuals. They have the ability to offer us something we don't know. But when we gave them the chance, they treated us with respect, as a response to us treating them with respect.

1400

I think it's a very important initiative. I'm honoured and privileged to be part of a government and part of a ministry that feels passionately about this issue and brings it to our attention as a Legislature to reform it and give the ability to many people who are waiting for us to permit them to participate in our daily lives. Thank you for allowing me to speak.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: As an MPP who represented Rideau Regional Centre, I have long been concerned about many of the residents who are being forced out of the residence at Rideau Regional Centre by this government—the previous government wasn't forcing them out—after they had lived there for 40 or 50 years, often in the same residence, as they called it, with a friend for 30 or 40 years. This government is forcing these low-functioning adults into the community, separated from their long-term friends. They call this a social advance.

I agree, and my party agrees, that high-functioning adults who can succeed in society should in fact get out there. But I have two questions for the minister: Will she guarantee equal or better living standards, and will she guarantee equal or better health standards for everyone she forces out of these centres?

These centres, while the government would like to portray them as an institution, are the homes of these individuals. They have lived in them for 40 or 45 years. Their relatives and the people who care about them are very concerned with the lack of regard that this government has shown for the wishes of the parents of these individuals, for the wishes of the relatives of these individuals. Therefore, I believe that the general thrust of the legislation is right, but the way they are treating people and the parents of these people is despicable.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I would like to start by saying that the NDP strongly believes that people with developmental disabilities are part of our communities. We want them to be our friends, our neighbours and an active part of our communities. When you live, interact with and have the privilege to know somebody with a developmental disability—they have a way to make us all better, a way to tug at our roots of empathy and a way of making each and every one of us a better individual. We need them in our communities, but they also have needs that have not been well met in the past. Although the aim of the bill is to improve the lives of people with disabilities, I have serious doubts that it will actually achieve that. We will go into more detail as to how this bill could be changed to make it more relevant to the aim that we seem to be sharing: to make the lives of people with developmental disabilities better and to integrate them into our communities.

Le parti néo-démocratique est d'accord que nous voulons intégrer les personnes avec une déficience intellectuelle dans nos communautés. On veut que ces personnes-là soient nos voisins, nos amis, et qu'elles soient pleinement intégrées dans la vie des Ontariens de tous les jours.

Avoir la chance de côtoyer une personne avec une déficience intellectuelle est vraiment un privilège qui nous permet de développer notre empathie et ce qu'il y a de mieux dans notre communauté, et ces personnes-là sont très bonnes à faire ça. Ce sont des professeurs pour chacun de nous. On va appuyer l'idée du projet de loi, mais on veut certainement l'améliorer.

Mr. Bob Delaney: I am pleased to add my comments on this particular bill. In western Mississauga, where I live, we are served by both Community Living Mississauga and by Erinoak, which deal with both developmentally challenged children and adults.

It's been my pleasure to sit down not merely with the people who run both organizations but also with the many people who are served by them. What this bill reflects is an awful lot of the comments made by the people who work in the system. They say that when the systems were set up, three decades or so ago, a lot of the evolution of the supports that Ontario has offered both organizations and individuals was well intended at the time and came together piecemeal.

What the minister has introduced is a single portal of access for services and programs for people who are served and for organizations that serve them. This is not a small enterprise. It is, in aggregate, more than $1.5 billion a year, and it serves some 40,000 people. So this would be like describing the services for a medium-sized city in Ontario.

What this bill does is recognize that times have changed, that there are better ways of doing this, and that the state of the art of organizing the resources and the services that Ontario brings to the organizations that provide the services and the people who benefit from them does itself need an overhaul. That's what this bill does, and it does so extremely well. This bill takes a system of supports that has come together in bits and pieces over three and a half decades and modernizes it and brings it into the 21st century.

Mr. Norm Miller: I'm pleased to add some comments to the debate on Bill 77, the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, 2008, after the minister's speech and the speech from the member from London-Fanshawe.

I've had the opportunity of meeting with parents and families in the riding of Parry Sound-Muskoka, specifically on the issue to do with individualized funding, particularly with Debbie Vernon, who is a strong advocate for her sister, who was one of the few people in the province receiving individualized funding and living life at home with her mother. I was advocating on her behalf to try to get her more significant funding, an increase in her funding. Unfortunately, Debbie's sister is now in a long-term-care home, which is not the appropriate place for her, but unfortunately I was unsuccessful in getting an increase in individualized funding.

This government has its Passport program, but I learned from organizations like Family Alliance Ontario and the Muskoka Family Network, which Debbie is involved with, that overwhelmingly the new applicants to this program are turned down. In the Hamilton area, 174 people applied for the Passport program, which would provide individualized funding; only six people actually received the funding. The same is true in Toronto, where, of 400 applications, 33 people were actually funded. Of the $200 million in increase in budget for developmental services, only $6 million has gone to the Passport program, so we're not seeing this funding reach the families and the people who really need it.

I happen to believe that individualized funding can be a very significant benefit to these people who need the assistance, and I would like to see the government not necessarily create a bureaucracy and more red tape, but see them get the money to these families in the simplest way possible.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Response?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: I'd like to thank the members from Parry Sound-Muskoka, Mississauga-Streetsville, Nickel Belt and Carleton-Mississippi Mills.

I would like to reply specifically to the comment of the member from Carleton-Mississippi Mills. I don't know when he last put his foot into one of these institutions, but I can assure him that nobody is being forced out. Everybody has been working with someone from the institution to place this person out in the community. This member may be back 50 and 60 years ago—that's not the way to take care of these individuals. He asked me to guarantee him that they will have at least the same service or better. I can guarantee that to him.

1410

I've been visiting these institutions, the three of them. I've been visiting the group homes where these individuals are placed now. I can tell you that a lot of the parents—and I don't blame the parents, because they are encouraged by the member for Carleton-Mississippi Mills, who is trying to scare them out of the institution. I can tell you that for these individuals, there is someone working with them to place them at the best place.

We look first at the individuals—not the family, not the parents, not the politicians, but the person who is at the centre. All of the services are being wrapped around this individual. I can guarantee you that they will have the best services, as good as, and most of the time better than—

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Thank you. Further debate?

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I will be sharing my time with the member for Whitby-Oshawa, who's been an incredible advocate for individuals with disabilities.

It's a pleasure to rise today, as the Progressive Conservative critic for community and social services, to debate the second reading of Bill 77, the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act.

The developmental disabilities act needs to be updated, and it is important that the option of establishing direct funding as a choice for individuals and their families is entrenched in legislation. Families have been asking for individualized funding so that options are available to them as they continue to care for their adult children.

I was somewhat surprised that the government decided to call the legislation for second reading so quickly. In just over a week, all the interested stakeholders have had to digest and analyze legislation that completely revamps and replaces the developmental disabilities act.

I would like to thank representatives of Community Living Ontario and OASIS for taking the time to come to my riding in Dufferin-Caledon to brief me on their initial reaction to Bill 77. I also have received valuable information from Families for a Secure Future and individual families dealing with caring for their sons or daughters in the community.

I believe members of the Legislature must reach out to these experts so that we can develop laws that truly meet the needs of persons with developmental disabilities. We need to listen and give everyone a chance to provide input on how the legislation can be improved.

In the form of an example, I'd like to read just an excerpt from an e-mail that I received on Friday:

"Current situation:

"The Liberal government claims that they set out three years ago to deal with the severe inequity in the system between the haves and have not's. Nothing has happened to change this dynamic. Agencies still receive 80% of the dollars in the sector and support only 20% of the individuals in the province who have a developmental disability while families who provide support to 80% of individuals ... receive 20% of the overall budget. This funding formula is incomprehensible to families who care for their loved ones on a day-to-day basis with no support....

"Families believed that a transformed system would address this gross imbalance. It has not. In fact, the situation has only worsened." Last year, the only money the government invested was $200 million for "pay equity that essentially 'broke the bank' and left nothing for families. In the midst of talk of large-scale policy changes within the Ministry of Community and Social Services"—most notably, the transformation agenda—"the family agenda has been completely stalled. Families have been asking for individualized funding options for over two decades. They have been asking the government to expand programs like SSAH, which has proven to be a powerful tool for individuals to get the support they need to participate more fully in their communities, and this funding has been put on hold. What kind of a message does that send to families? Families have proven that they can be accountable through the SSAH program....

"Over the past two years, thousands of individuals and their families across Ontario have been put on waiting lists for SSAH and the two new initiatives: Passports and the innovative residential model. These families have been put into limbo and been asked to wait indefinitely.

"What are they to believe? Is the government serious about giving families individualized funding options or is it just empty rhetoric? Families will not stand by as promises are made and then carelessly broken." We saw that today with a number of families coming to the Legislature because they felt their voices weren't being heard in the consultation process.

"Families who choose not to access agency options must be treated fairly and given equitable alternatives. Passport, one of the new individualized funding programs that is given directly to the individual and their family, has ridiculously low ceiling caps on the funding amounts. Individuals are assessed to be at a particular level and are then given only that amount. They must give up any other forms of support that they currently have in order to partake in direct funding options and yet the amounts do not provide for enough support. In the name of fairness and equity, they are not given nearly enough funding to hire their own support workers and build a meaningful support system for their sons/daughters."

That's just one excerpt from an e-mail I received on Friday, which underlines for me the importance of the consultation part of Bill 77. I trust that after we have finished debating second reading, it will have a full and comprehensive public hearing process.

Bill 77 is not legislation that should be rushed. It is the first rewriting of the act since 1974. We need to make sure that the final law truly represents the needs of persons with developmental disabilities and their families. In view of this, the bill should go to committee for public hearings.

I would like to now touch on a few specific areas of the legislation in the hopes that ultimately the decision-makers will take the time to listen to the debate and hear some of the feedback we have been receiving both in the Progressive Conservative caucus and as members representing families.

Regulations: As with other Liberal legislation, Bill 77 seems to leave all the details to regulation and policy directives. Important elements will be decided by cabinet without the benefit of full public scrutiny.

Sections 36 and 37—two full pages—are dedicated to regulatory powers. Almost every section of the bill is subject to regulation. This means that after the bill is debated and then passes third reading, its true content will be shaped by a much smaller Liberal cabinet. Persons with developmental disabilities and their families will have to wait to see how the new act will affect them.

So what are the regulatory powers that the Liberals want?

"(b) defining 'significant limitations' for the purposes of 3(1)." That's the section that defines developmental disability and therefore determines funding eligibility, something that I am sure the vast majority of stakeholders would want to know up front before they go into regulations.

"(c) prescribing additional services": What does that mean? What is the detail there?

"(e) ... prescribing the powers and duties of application centres": We'll get into that further along in the debate.

"(f) governing funding agreements....

"(g) governing direct funding and direct funding agreements....

"(h) governing applications for services...."

"(k) governing service agencies...."

I have listed some but certainly not all of the regulatory powers so that all members of the Legislature are in tune to the fact that the application for direct funding, how the application centres operate and make decisions, the funding agreements and the types of services offered are all subject to regulation. In other words, stay tuned; details to follow. The most disturbing part of that, of course, is that regulations don't have the same public scrutiny and option for input.

Waiting lists: When the minister tabled the legislation on May 15, she said: "This is a bill with families in mind. It responds to what families and people with developmental disabilities have told us through ... consultations."

I must say that for 100 individuals to come and demonstrate at Queen's Park today, less than 10 days after this bill was tabled, is more than passing strange. If they felt they had been consulted and listened to by the minister, I don't think they would have been out there. I do question the consultation that has occurred. I hope that more commitment is made on the minister's behalf to meet with these families and listen to, quite frankly, the success stories that have come up with the Passport program as it stands, and more importantly, how they see improvements and changes to it as we move forward.

1420

The waiting lists that are unfortunately part of the life of individuals and families dealing with developmental disabilities have not ended with Bill 77. In fact, applicants will be assessed, prioritized, and then many will be placed on a waiting list or, as I heard it described today, a no-service list.

Families have been asking for direct funding support for several years. The Liberals purport to be meeting this need, yet the budget dollars do not support the demand. As a result, persons with developmental disabilities and their families are being asked to wait once again for services that they have been determined to be eligible for. The result is that so many young people who have reached the age of 21 are at home sitting on a couch instead of actively participating in their communities across the province. Parents are so distressed about this situation that, as I mentioned, they had to come to Queen's Park today to bring a reality check to this government.

There is a glaring difference between the rhetoric of the minister when she tabled the legislation and the reality of the amount of direct support for families who are caring for their adult children at home. We made reference in question period today that 90% of the applications that were put in for Passport were refused or turned down. The bill seems to set out options for direct funding, yet few are actually receiving the support. Over the past two years, thousands of individuals and their families across Ontario have been put on wait lists for special services at home and the two new initiatives: Passport and the innovative residential model.

I don't think we should bypass that application process without talking about just how cumbersome the process is. This isn't a two-page application. Families who are trying to access Passport and the innovative residential program basically have to have done their entire contract, set up their entire scenario, before they can start the application process. So a great commitment has gone into it before they've even done the application.

Passport funding: Since becoming the PC critic for the Minister of Community and Social Services, I've heard from many families who have expressed concerns about the Passport program. There are several issues which I'd like to highlight in my debate of Bill 77 today. Some families applied for the program, a complex application process, as I said, and did not receive additional support—90%, from the numbers we've been able to poll. I'm told that only $6 million was allocated for Passport in 2007.

I spoke to a family as recently as Friday who went through the process of filling out the Passport application. As they were completing the last page, they were told by a ministry staffer, "Rumour has it that there's no more money," so if your daughter, in this case, was aging out, there's nothing there. Quite frankly, it's a terrible time to be graduating from high school in Ontario, I'm afraid. Some families have decided in fact not to apply, because they must give up all other forms of support that they currently have in order to partake in this direct funding option. Some families fear that the program has been capped.

Families whose children turn 21 this year, often referred to as school leavers, have expressed concern that their children will not even be considered for the direct funding model as there are no new dollars for Passport. What an unfortunate way to begin debate on Bill 77. When you think of the people who have had the benefits of their children in the school system, they've loved that connectedness to the community, to their peers, and they are literally going from seven hours to nothing.

The Family Alliance of Ontario has conducted a survey on the number of applicants versus the number of families who actually received Passport funding. The numbers are rather alarming. As I raised in question period today, in the Hamilton area, 173 have applied for Passport and six people with developmental disabilities have been funded. In the Toronto area, over 400 have applied and 33 people were funded. In the London area, with 262 applicants, 11 people were funded. In the Durham area, with 40 applicants, 5 people were funded. And so it goes across the province. The numbers seem to be the same throughout the province.

The Liberal government has consciously decided not to allocate more for the direct funding option. In other words, they've made a choice about their priorities.

In May 2007, the Minister of Community and Social Services announced a $200-million budget increase for developmental services. Where's the money? Last year, the government's only investment was to pay equity, essentially breaking the bank, leaving nothing for families.

Direct or individualized funding is another area I'd like to talk more about. Bill 77 introduces two streams of funding for persons with developmental disabilities: direct funding to the person and indirect funding to the person through transfer payment agencies. There is, without a doubt, a role for both types of funding. I believe that the transitional sections of the bill will allow community living agencies and residential homes to continue providing the valuable service that they have been providing. What is new in Bill 77 is the direct funding option. We're not breaking new ground in Ontario by legislating direct funding; British Columbia and Alberta have the direct funding option currently. Direct, or what they call "individualized," funding is also available in Great Britain.

That said, we need to look at what direct funding is and why it is an important change. When I met with Orville Endicott, the legal counsel for Community Living Ontario, he referred me to the work of John Lord, of Kitchener-Waterloo. His research concludes that individuals with direct funding have a good quality of life and are integrated into the community. Isn't it wonderful that we have people studying and actually proving what the rest of us think makes sense? I would like to cite some of John Lord's research. His paper, Moving Toward Citizenship: A Study of Individualized Funding in Ontario, examined the direct funding model in Ontario from 2001 to 2005. He selected four regions of the province—two metropolitan areas, one rural and one mid-sized city. He found a number of things, and for any of the members who would like to learn more about it, it really is a well-researched and set-out explanation of the individualized funding and how it relates in Ontario.

John Lord concludes that daily lives for individuals receiving direct funding improved. He discovered that participants were "gaining partial entry to employment," both volunteer work and some paid employment, were "more confident" and independent, "went more places in the community," participated in recreational activities and had a large number of personal relationships, all of which families who have been advocating for individualized funding and for assistance to ensure that their sons and daughters can integrate into the community have been asking for.

Based on this, Mr. Lord believes that the province should move forward with the direct funding model, as there are very positive quality-of-life outcomes.

The need for a facilitator: Before I conclude my comments based on John Lord's research, I would like to make members aware of another one of his findings, that "planning is an integral part of the process...."

"Facilitators worked with the people being supported and their families to develop goals and a support plan based on the dreams and interests of the person."

Families interviewed by Mr. Lord's team had very positive relationships with their facilitators. They described three roles:

"First, facilitators helped individuals and families plan.... Second, facilitators assisted people to develop and expand their support networks.... Third, facilitators played an ongoing support role for implementation.... Some families called the facilitator their 'guide,' while others noted that feedback from facilitators often addressed things the family had not yet considered."

British Columbia recently implemented legislation that gives individuals and families an opportunity to choose direct funding and facilitators who are independent of the service system. So why has the Liberal government not provided for facilitation and independent planning in the legislation? I was at a meeting with the minister recently when her staff indicated the government is currently conducting a pilot on independent planning and facilitation models.

The need for facilitation is also emphasized by Families for a Secure Future. They believe that independent planning supports need to be included in Bill 77 to make the most out of direct funding options. It will help direct funding to be utilized effectively. Families want help to implement plans once they get direct funding and set individual goals for community participation. It is an essential ingredient for any direct funding model. Families for a Secure Future contend that it is not a role for the application centres. Application centres who are assigned responsibility for determining eligibility and assigning priority are not able to provide independent planning and facilitation. They also see a conflict of interest as they are responsible for funding.

1430

The other thing I'd like to highlight when we talk about facilitators in comparison to the application centres: If the rumour that I am hearing is accurate, which is that there will be eight to 10 application centres across Ontario, the distribution will be too far afield to have any kind of substantive facilitation occur. It will all be about coming in, processing the application, doing your hour interview and moving on. They will not have the same appreciation or understanding of what the family is currently going through and where the family is headed in terms of their individual needs.

Various pots of money: The Ministry of Community and Social Services has a number of pots of money to support persons with developmental disabilities, all with different parameters and rules. As well, some families receive disability support from the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care through community care access centres.

Multiple funding envelopes are frustrating for families. They need to spend their time filling out time-consuming applications for each individualized program and, I might add here, in many cases on an annual basis. So even for someone whose physical diagnosis is not going to change, we are asking them every year to fill out the same cumbersome application in detail. Both shared services at home and Passports have long and different applications, and yet much of the information is already known.

Section 3.1 of Bill 77 defines "disabilities" as "likely to be lifelong in nature," yet every few years a new, complex application is needed. If the disability is lifelong in nature, once the determination is made, should families constantly need to be assessed for eligibility? Although an individual's program may need to change, do we really need all the paperwork that goes with an annual application? After all, someone needs to review and approve all that paperwork, and therefore there is a significant administrative cost and burden to the ministry.

At this point, we do not know whether the new direct funding will continue to be offered in separate pots, with separate applications. As all this will be determined by regulation and policy directives, I would encourage the Liberal government to proactively streamline the process and make it work better for families. What families need is a coordinated approach to direct funding.

Finally, application centres: The centres will be responsible for determining eligibility, carrying out assessments and prioritizing. This is central to the new direct funding model, yet there are no details on the structure or oversight of these new centres—and I underline "new," because they're not going to operate under the community living structure at this point and they are not operating under the CCAC, as I understand it. But this comes back to how quickly we've been asked to debate and discuss Bill 77, because for every person you ask, there seems to be a different answer as to what the application centres will look like.

So the questions I have are—and it's unfortunate that we can't get some answers in the response: How many regional centre will there be? How soon will the application centres be operational? Will there be satellite centres to assist with the large geography of our province? Will there be regional waiting lists or one central list? Will the application centres be like community care access centres, or does the ministry have another governance model they are reviewing? Will existing regional offices and staff take on this role, or are we looking at a whole new hiring process for that expertise?

Page 7 of the bill refers to "classes." What kinds of classes of application centres does the government envision? It is unfortunate we don't have some of these details now, while we're debating them.

All of the above are subject to regulation or policy directive. However, as we debate this bill, I feel that the government should provide answers by outlining their plan for the introduction of application centres. If the Liberal government shares the framework, then they will receive valuable advice from policy experts in this sector. It's a little disconcerting, actually, to hold that kind of detail in their pocket, so to speak. It makes you question why they aren't being more open about how the process will spin out. Unfortunately, at this point there are too many unknowns. I believe that individuals and their families deserve more clarity from this government.

Finally, I'd like to touch on transfer payment agencies. When I met last week with OASIS, which is Ontario Agencies Supporting Individuals with Special Needs, they emphasized that they will continue to need financial support for their day-to-day and residential programs. The legislation provides that before the day the legislation comes into force, persons with developmental disabilities "shall continue to receive ... those same services until such time as the application centre for the geographic area in which the person resides conducts a reassessment...."

Although the transition clause will provide stability for the transfer payment agencies in the short term, it is not clear what impact the reassessments will have on individuals or their service providers. It is also not clear when the reassessments will occur or how often the reassessments will be done.

I understand the new assessment tool has been piloted by a group of service providers across the province. I think this is another area where there should be transparency and open dialogue about the new assessment tool, in order that it meets the needs of all persons with developmental disabilities, both those receiving direct funding and those receiving indirect funding.

I hope to have an opportunity to meet with service providers over the next few weeks or months so that we can learn more about their reaction to this legislation. I think it is incumbent on us, as legislators, to ensure substantive consultation with all stakeholders and families who have chosen to play an important role in their children's lives, and I'll speak briefly from personal experience.

When I had my first job, I had to get a car. So I went to the local credit union. Of course, you appear before a board and they ask for a co-signer, and my father co-signed. I remember very, very clearly to this day, his appearing before this group of 10 board members who said to him, "Why are you prepared to co-sign your daughter's loan?" Dad said, "Because she's my daughter, and if I don't do it, who will?"

I would hate to think that we, as a government, are standing in the way of individuals and families who want to assist and want to play a critical role in their daughters' and sons' lives because of their developmental disabilities. I would hate to think that we, as legislators, frankly can't get out of the way and enable them to participate as fully as they can in their children's lives.

In my remarks today, I have only highlighted some of the many issues that need to be debated as we consider Bill 77. As I said at the outset, I believe that the bill, which repeals an existing law and replaces it with a new one, should be considered carefully by all members of the Legislature. This bill should be sent to committee so that the members can hear from a broad range of interested parties. At committee, the ministry should provide further details on how the direct funding model will unfold, particularly related to the application centres.

I hope, and I believe, that all members should be open to the possibility of amendments to improve this bill. The legislation has not changed since 1974. In contrast, many people with developmental disabilities have moved forward and are leading enriched and meaningful lives in their communities. As we move to have our laws catch up with the experience of individual Ontarians, we must take the time to review the new Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act carefully. I look forward to further debate and discussions on Bill 77. I'd like to turn it over to my colleague from Whitby—Oshawa.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I'd like to start by thanking my colleague the member from Dufferin—Caledon, for sharing with me her time for debate today on Bill 77, the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act. This is a very important piece of legislation, and I'm very pleased to be able to participate in this debate.

1440

Let me say at the outset that there are many good aspects to Bill 77. I do commend the minister for bringing forward the concept of individualized funding and allowing families the choice of whether to continue with transfer payment agencies or whether to develop their own individual supports for their family members. In doing so, we of course recognize that everyone is different, everyone has a unique personality and unique set of needs, and that one size doesn't fit all. So I think that when we talk about people with developmental disabilities wanting to live their lives in the community, we're recognizing that fact, that everyone is different.

The concept of direct funding under Bill 77, I would concur with the minister, is long overdue and very much needed. There's no question that people living with developmental disabilities in our community—and I'm quoting the words of a family member here—"need to get off the couch and into the community," because that's the reality for many people when they finish high school.

It's been alluded to by my colleague the member from Dufferin—Caledon that once these young people graduate from high school there are no real programs out there for them in the community, that there are no meaningful life skills—day programs are very few and far between, depending on where you live. There are very few social and vocational opportunities. We've heard this time and time again. I've heard it since I became a member of this Legislature just over two years ago. I've heard this from families coming in to see me to say, "You need to have something out there for our children to do. They're sitting in our basements watching television." The reality is that that's all there is for them to do.

I've also had the good fortune to be associated as a volunteer director for a number of years with an organization in my riding of Whitby—Oshawa called the Abilities Centre. We're trying to build a multi-purpose social, recreational and performing arts facility for all people with special needs. In the process of developing the programs and the needs of this Abilities Centre, we've consulted with about a hundred different focus groups, with people with all varieties of needs. I can tell you that the needs for young adults with developmental disabilities came up as the number one priority. That's how bad it is out there. There are virtually no supports out there for these families and young people in these situations.

I think we need to look at the needs not only of the young people, the adults with developmental special needs, but also their parents. I think we have to sit and look at the situation from their viewpoint. We've heard from families that this is the greatest concern in their lives: "What's going to happen to my son or daughter when I'm no longer able to meet their needs?"

The reality is that this is coming to a crisis. As more and more families who've been there for their children year after year, who've been the volunteers in Community Living and all of the other agencies out there, always expecting that there were going to be supports and services for their children when they were no longer able to provide for them—all of a sudden, that day is coming and they're finding that the supports are not there. I can't imagine as a parent how that must feel. We need to be there for their children but also for their families, to make sure that they are reassured that there are going to be supports out there for them.

That's what we need to do with this bill. There's no question that change is needed, that families need this kind of support. But what we're seeing, apart from some empty rhetoric in this sort of bare-bones framework of Bill 77, is that the reality is that there's not adequate funding. For this to work, we need to make sure that we can put the funds into those programs to help those people get out into the community—off the couch and into the community.

There have been numerous statistics that have been quoted. In my home region of Durham last year, for example, there were 40 families who made applications for Passport funding. Only five of them were accepted. The Passport funding, of course, is the funding that allows people to get some support workers to go with their children into the community for social, recreational and work opportunities, whatever it happens to be.

The practical result that this is having is that these families by and large are very close together—they've formed a close-knit community—but when there's sort of an arbitrary picking and choosing of one family getting Passports and another family not getting Passports—you're happy for them of course, the families tell me. But it's starting to—not pit families against families, but it's creating divisions in a community that wants to remain cohesive. They simply can't understand on what basis the Passport funding is being allocated. Is it just a question of first-come, first-served, and it gets paid until there's no money left? Are they allocating on the basis of physical special needs in addition to developmental special needs? No one seems to really know.

The only thing people do know is that there is not nearly enough funding. It is, in fact, ridiculously underfunded.

We have heard from the minister and from some of the other government speakers on this subject that there was a lot of money allocated in the last year: $200 million for this sector. That's quite true, but as I understand it, most of this money was allocated for pay equity, to bring the people working in the developmental services sector up to par with some of the other workers in other sectors.

There's no question that that money is long overdue, and certainly no one would begrudge any of the wonderful people who work with people with developmental special needs. They do unbelievable service. They're incredibly kind. They're almost family members. There's no question, no one would say they shouldn't be paid more. But what happened as a result is that less than $10 million was allocated last year to fund the Passport program. We need much more than that.

The other issue is, if individualized services are going to be offered to families, how are they going to be able to deliver these services? The act—I believe it's section 12—indicates there is going to be a series of application centres set up across the province that will function as central portals for people wanting to obtain these services. When they do that, we're not sure whom they're going to be delivered by, whether it's going to be community living agencies or separate agencies, or whether there's going to be another level of bureaucracy that will be built up. I hope not, because we need the money to go into direct service.

The reality is that when families go to the application centres and make application, they are told that there is the option of direct funding, but there is no provision in the legislation—this is a good area for an amendment, in my view—no indication as to how families go about setting up these plans for their children, so that if they get an allocation of money, they're going to know which agencies or individuals they can approach to create these plans for their children and make sure they are facilitated in a way that is going to get the best value for the money.

We've heard about several of these wonderful groups that have been working with families. In most cases where specialized individual plans have been put in place, they have been facilitated by such groups as Families for a Secure Future, which is a wonderful organization. The goal for all these plans is to build circles of support around these individuals and their families so that at the time when the families are no longer able to fulfill all their children's needs, they will have other services in place, both paid and unpaid. It's like creating family circles and some paid circles around people so that they have supports to carry on in their lives and the family members know that their children are going to be cared for in the future.

It's not an easy thing to put this kind of plan in place. There are many other factors that have to come to bear, including legal and estate planning considerations. It's not simply a matter of saying, "Here's a cheque for $10,000," or whatever it's going to be. "Go out and buy those services." You have to know what services you need and where to find them, and then how to set them up. I think that's something that really hasn't been addressed, and not much time has apparently been spent dealing with that.

In speaking with some of the family members who gathered with us on the lawn after question period today, we certainly heard that there is a need for these facilitators to make sure, from the government's perspective, that value for money is being obtained. Family members have told us they believe that in most cases—not all—they would be able to deliver or put in place supports for their children at about half what it's presently costing the government to maintain their children, with whatever resources they have available for them to date.

They know what the family needs. They are listening to their own family members, who are telling them what they want. I think that's another whole piece that's missing from all of this too. What does the individual want? How do they tell facilitators, and how do they tell the government, what they want? We need to involve family members with them so they can help to share their vision for the life they want to lead in our community.

We certainly have heard how many families are struggling. We heard many really unbelievable examples of how families are coping out there, with very few supports. There was one young lady out there today with a family member who is in a wheelchair. She's also developmentally disabled. She needs more than one person to lift her out of her chair. It's very, very heavy work for her family members. When her parents need respite, they have had an arrangement with a long-term-care facility to put their daughter into the long-term-care facility for a few days. But they've recently been told that the long-term-care facility is no longer going to be able to accept their daughter for respite, so they have absolutely nothing left to turn to. That means that their daughter simply cannot get out of bed at all to do anything, and that's not right. In a society like this, we need to give those young people the supports to be able to go out and live in the community to the fullest extent possible.

1450

I would like to just close by saying how important and wonderful it is that our new Lieutenant Governor, Mr. Onley, has called on all of us to do whatever we can to promote inclusion in our societies and to start looking at people's abilities, not their disabilities. That requires a fundamental shift in the way we look at people, in the way we look at their lives. It's a paradigm shift.

It's not going to be something that's easily done. There are a lot of voices that need to be heard here, so we need to take the time to give the consideration to this bill that we need to, to make sure that it's not just going to be empty rhetoric, that it is going to deliver the programs and services that we need for these young people and their families.

Many of those voices feel that they have not been heard, so I would certainly urge the minister and the government to take the time that they need to in order to have committee hearings on this. We need to have a lot of time devoted to these committee hearings for everyone to be able to come to Queen's Park to have a say, and they need to be travelling hearings. I would submit to the government that this is really imperative because, particularly for this group of people, it's very hard for them to either get here on their own—because they can't leave their family members behind; they're directly responsible for their care—or it's very difficult to get their family members to come with them, to travel that sort of distance. Added to that is the fact that that one parent in many situations has had to leave paid employment to care for their family member, so they're financially disadvantaged. We really need to think about that in terms of allocating the time for committee hearings.

I think that if the government wants to make this bill meaningful, if they want to make this kind of change in our society, if they want to be able to give everyone in our community a chance to live a life with dignity and to meet their full potential in our society, we need to take the time that we need to spend on this bill to make sure that it's not just empty words and hollow rhetoric.

I thank you for the opportunity today to speak to Bill 77.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Michael Prue: I have comments. I listened intently to my colleagues from Dufferin-Caledon and from Whitby-Oshawa and what they had to say. What they had to say were very compassionate statements, very knowledgeable statements, talking about what needs to be done.

I'd just like to zero in on two of the things they were talking about. The first one was the range of topics that is going to be subject to regulations. It is a very huge range, as the member from Dufferin-Caledon listed out. We in opposition of course—and I think even most of the government backbenchers—have no way of knowing what those regulations are going to be and how they are going to shape the very body of the bill. When I make my speech in just a little bit, we will be asking for public hearings not only on the bill itself but on many of the aspects related to the regulations. We want the public to have input so that when the government and the minister decide what is going to be contained within the four walls of the regulations, there has been considerable public dialogue, and they're not done in a vacuum.

The second thing that was brought up—and both speakers talked about this—was the demonstration that took place outside of Queen's Park today, the hundred or so people who came to demonstrate about this bill. Although I would suggest that most people would generally be in favour of the provisions of the bill, there has been to date a woefully inadequate public consultation period. When you have 100 people demanding to be heard, when they do not feel that their views have been expressed within the body of the bill, when people seem, at this point, to be unhappy, I am simply calling upon the government, in view of the fact that that many people showed up on the first day of the debate, to ensure that there is adequate public consultation during the committee stage. I trust that members of the government are listening, and I trust that they will accommodate that.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I was listening carefully to the two members, from Dufferin–Caledon and from Whitby–Oshawa, commenting on this bill. I think it's a very important and legitimate concern and question to be sent to the government side. Of course, this bill is going to committee, and we're going to hear from a lot of people. I want to tell you that as part of the government and specifically part of this ministry that was introducing this bill, I went to many different briefings. I am very happy and honoured to be a part of this government and part of this ministry, because this issue means a lot to me.

As I mentioned many different times, I worked for the Ministry of Community and Social Services as a counsellor for people with developmental disabilities and also with Community Living London for many years. I know the difference and the impact it will have if we move the people from facilities to group homes. Why not treat them as independent people, as individuals who have the ability and capacity to deal with their own issues, with support from the agencies, group homes, government or families? It's important. I know that it's not going to be just openly handing cheques to people left and right, as the member from Whitby–Oshawa mentioned a few minutes ago; no, there's going to be responsible accountability of the people who are receiving those cheques. The government has the right to interfere and stop any activities, or stop the funding, if they see any financial, health or other risk that those people would face from any actions.

I want to assure the House and all the people listening to us that it's going to be an incredible achievement if this bill passes, in order to reform this act in a fashion that will help and support many people with disabilities across the province, and also their families, because it's important to us.

Mr. Norm Miller: I'm pleased to add some comments to the speech from the member from Dufferin–Caledon and the member from Whitby–Oshawa, both relatively new members of the PC caucus and both doing an excellent job, particularly on the developmental disabilities file.

I've seen at first hand how individualized funding—in the rare cases where it has been approved in the past—has really made a difference. As I mentioned the last time I had a chance to speak, I met with Debbie Vernon, her sister and her mother, and I saw how the individualized funding they received was able to provide for a great quality of life for Debbie's sister. It allowed her to stay at home with her mother, and they were able to hire a couple of people to assist her, and she was able to get out and participate in community activities.

Unfortunately, now her sister is in a long-term-care home, in an environment that doesn't provide the same quality of life because the government wasn't responsive to increasing funding to allow them to be able to maintain that independent lifestyle. But I have seen how individualized funding can really make a difference in the lives of those people who need it, and I believe also that it can make economic sense, where it's more reasonable in terms of the cost than the cost of providing some of the alternatives, like a long-term-care home.

This government hasn't, in the past, been particularly receptive. In fact, I made many requests for the Muskoka Family Network to meet with the past minister, and the minister would not even meet with the network, so I'm pleased to see this legislation coming forward, but I'm a little concerned that it might be creating more bureaucracy. I'd want to see the money actually get to those who need it. I look forward to this going to committee, I assume this summer, where there will be lots of opportunity for public input.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I too enjoyed the comments made by the MPP from Dufferin–Caledon and Whitby–Oshawa, certainly a well-researched position as to how they see this bill unfolding in the lives of people living with a developmental disability. I agree with part of what they said, that it certainly needs improvement in the way that it differs between the aims that the bill is trying to do versus what it's going to end up doing. I also want to lend my support to the fact that they have taken the time to listen to the people with developmental disabilities, because they and their families are the people who know best what is needed for their loved ones.

1500

Quand on pense au travail qui a été fait par les deux députées qui ont présenté leurs positions, on s'aperçoit qu'elles ont pris le temps d'écouter les gens et leurs familles qui vivent avec une personne qui a une déficience intellectuelle, et c'est un aspect important de ce que les néo-démocrates veulent voir.

Certainement on s'attend à ce que ce projet de loi aille en comité et qu'on lui donne suffisamment de temps pour prendre le temps d'écouter les gens. Elles ont mentionné qu'aujourd'hui sur la pelouse, bien qu'il ne fasse pas si beau que ça—non, en fait c'était pas si pire, la température—il y a quand même au-dessus de 100 personnes qui sont venues, qui veulent être entendues, qui veulent qu'on les écoute, qui ont quelque chose à dire par rapport à comment les services pour les personnes qui ont une déficience intellectuelle devraient être offerts en Ontario.

On est d'accord que ça fait longtemps que ça devrait être amélioré et changé. On a une opportunité; profitons-en pour faire quelque chose de bien, quelque chose qui comptera pour maintenant et dans l'avenir. On entend y participer.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Response? The member for Dufferin—Caledon.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I would like to acknowledge the comments from the members for Beaches—East York, London—Fanshawe, Parry Sound—Muskoka and Nickel Belt. If there is a thought that I could leave the members with as I wrap up my discussions on Bill 77 in this House, it is that more detail needs to be set out in the legislation so that we have the opportunity to debate it and discuss it. While the words sound positive and proactive, it's important for us in opposition and, quite frankly, families and caregivers to know that the words actually have some substantive action behind them.

One of the things that were raised with me at the demonstration this morning was the need for the minister to listen. They have been requesting a meeting. Very similar to the issue raised by the member for Parry Sound—Muskoka, they've been asking to have the minister listen to them, to hear their concerns, to hear their success stories.

I guess I've been one of the lucky ones. I have heard the lucky 10%, we'll call it, who have had access to the individualized funding or Passport. There are some good stories that need to be heard by the minister and by us as legislators, because it has been working. So let's take that pilot project, for lack of a better word, that Passport is and expand it so that more people and more families have access to it. Then we can continue to improve the lives of all of our communities by having Passport available and open to others. So more detail needs to be there, and more consultation.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mr. Michael Prue: I will be rising today to give the lead-off speech for the New Democratic Party and to welcome people in the gallery today: families with people with disabilities, community living and others who are so vitally interested in this bill and what is going to happen to this bill.

There are about 120,000 people in this province who live with disabilities. There are about 12 million Ontarians, so that's about 1% of everybody in the province of Ontario living with a disability. Those people are part of our communities. We are them and they are us. They live with us; they shop with us; they go to school with us. We need to be inclusive at all times to everyone who lives in our community. We need to be inclusive with the 120,000 Ontarians who live with those disabilities and to understand their needs and do what we can as a society to make sure that those needs are met and that those people are able to fully contribute to a rich and diverse society like Ontario's.

We need to understand that disabilities will continue throughout people's lives. We need to ensure that we look very carefully at the varying degrees of support that people need throughout their lives, that those needs change from time to time and that the abilities in fact of many people change from time to time as a result of education, training, experience and work experience, and that something that was thought impossible 20 or 30 years ago is now becoming quite the norm today. People who thought that the disabled, especially those with an intellectual disability, would be unable to work now see them holding down full-time, meaningful work. When I go into the supermarket, I see people with intellectual disabilities stocking the shelves, and doing it very well. When I go into the pet store, I see them there helping to groom cats and dogs, sweeping up and doing all kinds of meaningful work, and doing it very well. In some cases they do it without a job shadow and in some cases they need a job shadow in order to make sure it gets done.

We also know that 40% of people with developmental disabilities have multiple disabilities that may require supports in complex care, sometimes for 24 hours a day. We know that theirs are very special needs. They need society to understand those needs, to accommodate those needs, to care for those needs and, dare I say, fund those needs.

Mr. Speaker—people in the audience may wonder, but the Speaker has changed—I have had the privilege over my life of meeting many such wonderful individuals. I'd just like to highlight a couple of them and the impact they have had upon me.

The first one was a gentleman who I got reacquainted with on the day this bill was brought before the House last week. His name is Brian. Brian is one of the Three Guys. That's the name I first got to know him by, the Three Guys. They occupied an apartment in the St. Clair-O'Connor community which was run by the Mennonite group in Toronto. The families decided that they needed to make sure their sons were able to cope for themselves, as the families were getting older, and they wanted an opportunity for these three guys to experience living on their own. Now, they didn't live entirely on their own; they usually lived with one of the family members present, especially during the evenings.

Brian, who I got reacquainted with, was able to hold down a job and traveled extensively around the city by TTC. This was an opportunity for three guys to live together and experience life on their own, and their families made sure it happened. I was very pleased to see Brian all the time. He was a bit of a neighbourhood character. He always had a pipe, although he never put any tobacco in it and never lit it, but that was his sort of claim to fame. People would see him with his pipe going down the street, talking to neighbours. I was very pleased to see him here, because he had moved away. He had moved to Scarborough, but he told me that he's moving back into another place in Beaches—East York called Project Amik, and he will be moving in very soon. There was just an example of a family that saw that something could be done and set out to do it.

There's another person I want to talk about today. He's part of what was called the Dream Team. I think many people in the Legislature would have met the Dream Team. This is a team that advocates for supportive housing for people with intellectual or psychiatric disabilities. The Dream Team is often a thorn in the side of government. I know they write many letters to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing and to the Premier advocating for more social housing and better access to people who need it.

One of the people I met through this was a gentleman named Martin Levine. Martin Levine calls me up at least once a week. He is not my constituent, but I met him—

Interjection.

Mr. Michael Prue: Yes, he's the constituent of Michael Colle—excuse me, the member from Eglinton—Lawrence—and Michael Colle, I'm sure, would know him very well. I don't know whether he calls the member from Eglinton—Lawrence as often as he calls me, but Mr. Levine called me today. He wanted to talk of many things, mostly about supportive housing, and wanted to make sure that the message is out there.

1510

Mr. Levine's story was a very sad one. When he was about five or six years old, his family, recognizing that he had an intellectual disability—what Mr. Levine describes as being a “slow learner”—decided he was better off institutionalized. They put him in an institution where he lived most of his life until he was well grown up. He had many problems living in that institution. One day he was freed and was able to go out. He works sometimes, and he has ODSP. He got married, and he lives in his own apartment and enjoys life to the full.

When you see, in contrast, his institutionalization at the age of five and the way he was able to adapt once he was allowed freedom, when you can see how he has put himself into society, then you have to understand that what has happened has been a good thing. This all happened in the last 20 or so years, when society's attitude toward people with intellectual disabilities changed remarkably.

The third person I'd like to talk about is Ron Bowman, a Peterborough resident living with cerebral palsy. Again, he was put into the Huronia Regional Centre, and was treated with all kinds of drugs and barbiturates. He claims, and I believe, he was often heavily sedated during that period. Today, with the support of Community Living Peterborough, Ron lives in his own apartment. He visits his family regularly, and uses a scooter to run errands. He does his own banking and shopping. He's really integrated into the community. He shovels the snow in the building's parking lot. He lives an active life. He has freedom to make choices, and he is not at all static.

When we see these success stories, I have to say that we know we need to get as many people as possible out of institutionalized settings and fully integrate them within our community. I just wanted to leave those three stories before I began the body of my speech.

We know, Madam Speaker—for the TV audience, the Speaker has resumed—that there is a great need, and we know that the need today is not being met. We know, according to the Provincial Network on Developmental Services, that approximately 13,400 people with developmental disabilities are waiting for residential services, day supports and other supports and services, and that many families are waiting five years or more for 24-hour residential services.

We know that Ontario has not been able to accommodate them, largely due to the fact that money has not been spent in this particular area. We know that the money needs to be spent and we know it has to be spent. I'm going to deal with this in a little bit, because I'm not sure that within the body of this bill, or within what the minister or the parliamentary assistant have said, that there are going to be any financial inducements that go along with this bill, which causes me some great concern.

We know that some $325 million is going to have to be spent by this government over the course of its mandate in order to get that waiting list of 13,400 reduced to zero. I have not heard any statements from the government side on whether that is going to be done with this system or with the old system; they're both pretty much the same.

We also need to know that a single person on ODSP receives a maximum benefit of $999 a month, or approximately $12,000 a year, on which to subsist. I say “subsist” because I don't think it's much of an existence. Twelve thousand dollars a year is some $7,000 below the poverty line for a single person living in a city in Ontario. Twelve thousand dollars is not enough for a person on ODSP to fully function in the life of the people of Ontario. It simply is not enough.

I have been an advocate for a long time, and have posed questions in this House to the minister and to the minister before about people on ODSP, particularly those with developmental disabilities, getting to keep some of the money when they are able to obtain a job. It seems to me to make only common sense that if people are able to go out and get a part-time job and are able to use some of the skills and abilities that we now laud them for having, if they're able to make even minimum wage and to go out and to do things like working at PetSmart or at McDonald's or stocking shelves in a grocery store, we ought not to take that money away from them. I have been an advocate and I will continue to be an advocate that if people on ODSP—particularly those with a developmental disability, but certainly everyone—are able to get part-time, meaningful employment, they ought to be allowed to keep that money. They ought to be allowed to keep it up to and including $7,000 a year, which will take them to the poverty line, which will take them to $19,000 a year, so that having an intellectual disability is not a life sentence to live in poverty.

Applause.

Mr. Michael Prue: I don't know whether there is anything in this bill—I didn't hear the minister talk about it—but this should be part of the bill as well. It's not going to cost the government any money. Right now, they claw it back, which to me is wrong, because surely, these people have every bit as much right in our society to live at or above the poverty line as any of the rest of us. I am asking the members opposite, and I see at least one minister who applauded what I had to say, to look very carefully and seriously at setting a figure which is not what it is today. I think $100 a month is all they're allowed to keep, and after that the rest is clawed back. They should look to making that—

Hon. Ted McMeekin: It's $316.

Mr. Michael Prue: It's $316—look at making that around $650 or $700 a month, which would allow not only for the person to be able to afford bus fare, meals and things and maybe some clothes to go to work, so that they can raise themselves up and live in dignity above the poverty line. I would hope that that's one of the things that is done.

I also want to talk about something else which has disturbed me for a long time for people with disabilities. Again, I'd like to go back to Martin Levine, whom I talked about earlier. One of the reasons that he contacted me in the first place and one of the things that still bothers him is that he was, of course, put into an institution by his family at a very young age and got out when he was a grown man. You can imagine the traumatic experience that was to him. I know his family must have cared for him or thought they were doing the right thing because when his parents died, they left him an inheritance. And do you know what this government did with that inheritance? They clawed it back. Although the inheritance was only a small amount of money, because he was on ODSP, when he got the inheritance, he lost his ODSP until the money was gone.

There was a man who virtually got nothing from his family all the time that he was growing up. Finally, before his parents died, they recognized that they needed to do something for their son; they needed to leave him with a small inheritance. They were not wealthy people, so it was not millions of dollars; it was in the thousands—I believe it was under $10,000. The government clawed it back. The government said, "You're on ODSP so you can't keep it." So the government cut the ODSP off until the money was gone and then put him back on it. I think that was wrong.

I'm hoping that an ODSP bill will look at this, will look at the government's practice of clawback, will look at a person like Martin and what he suffered in his life and understand that getting something from your parents, however small it is, was important to him. It was important because that was the only benefit he ever got from them. I certainly know that if any members of the Legislature have ever been lucky enough to be left money in a will, we didn't see it clawed back from us. We didn't see it taken away, not even in taxation. It's not until it gets up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars that you are subject to any kind of tax at all. Here it is, a person on ODSP doesn't have that benefit, and a person with an intellectual disability suffers in this way.

1520

We believe that there needs to be—as well as allowing people to keep the monies that they earn if they're lucky enough to get a part-time job—a substantial increase in income support through ODSP. It has not been raised nearly enough. It was allowed to stagnate for so many years from 1995 until this government came into office.

I'm sad to say that, although the government continues to talk about increasing the rates, the rates have not even kept up with inflation: 3% one year, zero the next, 2% the third year, and I guess 2% later on this year, when it comes around time towards the end of the year again. That is not even to the level of inflation that has taken place over the last five and a half years, so that people on ODSP, people with a developmental disability, are actually worse off today than they were under the Harris years. I think this government has to recognize that as well.

When I've asked questions in the House, the minister answers: "Well, of course we're doing things for families, we're doing things for people with children." But the sad reality is that most people on ODSP, 90% of them, have no children, or no children for whom they are responsible because some of them are older adults. They have no children for whom they are responsible, so the money that goes into education, which is laudable, the money that goes into children's food programs, which is laudable, the money that goes into children's clothing and other things, which is laudable, does not affect them. So what we have done as a government is to put them and keep them in poverty.

We believe that those rates need to be increased, and need to be increased rapidly. The budget committee, as we traveled around Ontario, listened to something like 15 deputations, and the lowest that anyone asked for in those deputations was 10%. Sadly, we see 2% for half a year in the government's response. So I would ask the minister, in bringing forward this bill, to look very carefully at whether the rates are sufficient.

I'd like to talk about, again, the importance of looking after the workers in this sector. We have two sets of workers. We have the unionized workers, who primarily belong to OPSEU and CUPE, and we have those who are unorganized, who work for many of the agencies. The sad reality is that the wages are not adequate. Even in the unionized workforces the wages are less than the comparable wages in hospitals, less than comparable wages in municipalities, and less than comparable wages in other public sector areas that do pretty much the same kind of work. For those who are unfortunate and do not have a union on which to fall back, you will find that their wages are even worse. OPSEU and CUPE run in the $17, $18, $19 range per hour, and those who work for many of the institutions who are not unionized can earn as little as $10 an hour, some of them making $12 or $13 and some making more, but certainly not to the unionized level.

We need to, first of all, narrow the gap between the two. But, secondly, we need to recognize that even the unionized wage is not a strong wage for people with whom we trust our most vulnerable and precious citizens.

I'd like to talk again about the adequacy of the public hearings, because in my conversations—and I heard what the members of the Progressive Conservative Party had to say today—there are many out there who do not believe there have been adequate public consultations to date. I know that the minister held consultations, but they were not public consultations. They were for invited groups and I'm not sure how many times groups were invited. I'm definitely sure that those who did attend tell me that they do not see the statements that they made reflected within the body of this bill.

We are asking that the public consultations be broad and meaningful and that they be held across this province to ensure that the 120,000 people who live with developmental disabilities are heard, either directly from themselves—and many of them are capable of doing that—or indirectly through their families and caregivers if they are not able to do so, to make sure that we get everything right. As has been said, the last bill was brought forward and passed in this House 35 years ago, and what we pass in this House is probably going to have to last for 20 or 25 years when we're finished. We had better make sure that we get it right. That's part of the public consultation.

I'd like to go on about how the bill says that it aims to lead to a more flexible, fair and accessible system that is "sustainable in the long term"—that's an actual quote—and that it seeks to achieve this end by modernizing and transforming the system. I have some questions to ask. I looked at this bill—and not all bills have them, but many bills have a preamble. Certainly the Constitution of Canada has a preamble. Certainly the American Constitution has a preamble. In the American case—because it's probably even better known than our own—it says, "We the people ... in order to form a more perfect union," and then it goes on and on talking about that. Everything within the Constitution of the United States, and certainly everything within the Constitution of Canada, flows from that. So when you read a constitution, or when you read a bill or a piece of law, you know that it has to meet those criteria. Certainly our own Bill of Rights in Canada and our own Constitution set up individual and human rights within the body so that you know that any law or any regulation that flows from it must meet those.

I think we need to have a preamble to this bill. I believe there should be a preamble that sets out very clearly where this Legislature sees the rights of people with disabilities. It needs to be settled very clearly in law so that when the minister makes regulations or when civil servants or the courts interpret the act—as they surely will have to do starting from day one, because it's about four inches thick—they're going to be looking at it and they're going to make sure what it means. They should be able to have a preamble at the beginning which sets out exactly what this Legislature expects people with disabilities to have and exactly what this government expects to be able to deliver to people with disabilities, so that the interpretations of a very complex act can be made reasonably secure to anyone reading it, so that it cannot be misinterpreted and so it will be given the broadest, most readable and understandable interpretation possible by those who must enforce it.

I have to ask as well: Will the modernization that the minister has set out in the bill actually improve accessibility? Will it improve fairness? Will it improve sustainability? I don't know. But I know that if it has a preamble, you can rest assured that people will be able to read that and make sure that those other promises are met, because everything that flows from the preamble will have to be geared towards that end.

The bill does take positive steps. It provides for flexibility for financial supports to family members and it may promote a more individualized and responsive support. For family members capable of providing care directly, the legislation can be a step ahead, a step forward. The bill creates single-point-of-entry access centres to assess individuals and create a service profile. This makes real sense in terms of waiting list efficiencies and in terms of standardizing assessment. It proposes multi-disciplinary case management based on a single point of entry, and it's increasingly seen as a best practice in the provision of integrated care.

However, we do have some problems and we do want to seek some assurance from the minister. I hope, during the committee stage with people's interventions and discussion, that the single-point-of-access application centres, when combined with individualized budgeting, as proposed in the bill, have the potential—I'm not saying it's going to happen, but have the potential—in the future, without some very clear guidelines and perhaps without a preamble, to destabilize the current community-based supports and services. We know that they're doing a great job. We know that they don't have enough money. We know that some people have difficulty accessing them and prefer to have a family-controlled system, but we also know that they do a good job and we do not want to see them destabilized—all of those community groups that seek government funding and that have done yeoman service over the past 50 years to make sure that people with intellectual disabilities and with disabilities are treated fairly in our society. I want to make sure that they continue to exist and continue to be nurtured, and I don't want anything in this bill to eventually destabilize them.

1530

We look at what is happening in the CCACs, the community care access centres. We look at the single-point-of-access approach, which can result in the rationing of services, with some actually being cut back. We look further to see what has happened with the disastrous competitive bidding process. We have that for home care. I'm worried that we are potentially setting up the same kind of service for people with disabilities that we've set up for home care. We know what's happened in Hamilton. The minister was forced to reverse. We know what happened before that, when Elinor Caplan was called in to try to remedy the system because it didn't work. We know that it's continuing not to work, with the repeated calls from community after community to get away from this kind of competitive bidding process. I'm just afraid that that same provision may also be within the body of this bill.

I'm asking the minister to carefully look at this and to make sure that this does not occur in a bill which is intended to help. If it ends up coming down to a competitive bidding process—who can sell it for the cheapest rate—we know what happens. We know that whole communities of workers get destabilized. We know that people who have looked after families in home care have suddenly found themselves on the street and have to go back and ask for a job from the winning agencies, usually at less money. We know that when that happens many of them get frustrated and leave and that people who have come to rely on their services can no longer do so. I don't want to see that happening here. So I ask the minister to look very carefully at that.

We know, as well, the things that are happening in other areas: the low wages and the high turnover and the low-paid staff. We know that in some cases there have actually been higher costs as a result of the competitive bidding process. We understand that centralized needs assessments and waiting lists can be useful tools, but they can also become problematic if they are also providing direct funding to individuals, as I will discuss in just a little bit.

There are some serious problems with the act. They are so serious that it is unlikely that the act will actually improve accessibility, fairness and quality of service unless a number of things are done. The most important weakness in the bill is that it forces a direct funding system on people, even as we are uncertain what percentage of the affected population actually favours it or how many will benefit from it.

I do know that there are some families who want it. I see Bill and his family up there in the Speaker's gallery, who came to my office. We had quite a discussion about how well that system works for Bill and for his family. We know that. We know that the system can, in some cases, work very well and that there are those who advocate for it and often prefer it. But we also know that there are many people satisfied with the current regimen, satisfied with the care workers and the support groups that are out there and are doing, as I said before, yeoman service.

I am not sure at this stage whether the government has any statistics or records or anything other than anecdotal evidence of how many in the affected population actually favour going to a voucher or direct funding model.

There's also the problem that without increased funding to service agencies, an expansion of direct funding will reduce options and support for individuals and their families. The reason why this may happen is that people might take their loved ones out of one of the agencies and of course, then, the agency which is funded to look after those individuals will have the money dry up. It will either go to a different agency or it will go to individualized funding. You will find that many of the agencies may find themselves destabilized in the short term. Even in the long term, as people move from service to service, as needs change, as people change, you may find this happening as well.

I have three real concerns, just to get right down to them. I've got less than half my time left. I'd better hurry up.

First, the bill allows that the province can either provide funding for services through a community agency or through application centres for direct funding to an individual or family. We are concerned that this shift to direct funding to individuals will harm individuals with developmental disabilities and their families. The responsibility for securing, hiring, training, supervising and evaluating care providers will be offloaded onto families. I know there are capable families out there who can do all of that, who will be proud to do all of it and will do it brilliantly, but there are also many families who will not be capable of doing those things, will not be able to secure, hire, train, supervise and evaluate in the way that it will need to be done. We know that without adequate supports, the families will be unable to know what services and supports they need to realize the vision of a better life for family members with disabilities.

We are concerned about third party brokers who help families find appropriate services. I'm not sure exactly what the broker's role in all of this is. If the broker's role is to sit down and develop a life plan and to help the family accommodate and find the right mixture of workers and programs to help, then that may not be a bad thing. But if the broker's role is to simply say, "There's so much money available. This is what you might only get. You have options (a), (b) or (c), or maybe no options at all. We'll help you find a person to work for minimum wage to help your son or daughter. That's your option," I'm not sure the broker is going to be doing the service that we expect. So I need to hear more. I think that many people are a little wary about the role of the broker.

We're also wary about whether the broker will be an independent person or a government person, and how much money the broker will make out of this service. I don't deny people a decent living, but if they're taking money off the top that we are expecting to be spent for our people with disabilities, we need to know how much that is going to cost.

The bill outlines the responsibility of service agencies to employees to maintain certain standards of accountability and allows corrective action in the case of non-compliance. Ordinarily, we'd say that that's pretty good. However, there are no accountability mechanisms for third-party private service providers. These brokers will have an automatic cut off the top, as I suggested. What will stop them from simply funding the lowest bidder to provide services? What will stop them from doing that? I don't know. I hope that doesn't happen, but what will stop them from doing that?

Nor is there accountability for individuals receiving direct funding. Those receiving direct funding must submit receipts and reports on the care provided, but there is nothing in the bill to enforce accountability or ensure appropriate qualifications of caregivers. So it's okay for a family to turn around and say, "I gave Mary Smith $15,000 or $20,000 last year to look after my son." There is nothing in the bill that says Mary Smith had any of the qualifications necessary to do it. If the brokers are going to have a life plan, then the brokers should also be required to list those people who have the necessary qualifications, either through experience or education or a combination of both. I would like to see this included in the bill or in the regulations, something which is silent to date.

We worry too about direct funding causing or potentially causing the entire sector to become vulnerable to privatization and the lowest-common-denominator service provision. We've seen this before in the competitive bidding process in home care, and we're afraid that it may happen here. I don't know whether this is the intent, but I certainly hope not. We are very wary about a bill that does not actually speak to this issue. We hope that through the entire process, the minister and the staff can explain this to committee members and to the general public to assuage these fears.

1540

We know that wages in the developmental services sector are already 25% to 30% less than for comparable work in the health, education and municipal sectors. I've already talked about that, but I just want to reiterate it. They are having difficulty and are challenged to attract, train and retrain qualified staff.

Secondly, we are concerned that individualized budgeting will undermine agencies' abilities to plan and effectively deliver quality services and undermine the continuity of care. The agencies will be unable to rationally plan for service provision, and under this bill a needs assessment of each person with a developmental disability will be conducted and then a dollar value will be attached based on the service needs of that person. We think that may be the wrong way around, and we'd like to hear what comments, if any, the minister has on this.

The service agencies will then receive the funding that comes with that person for their service need. There is no provision, that we can see, for administrative or overhead costs. There is a potential serious erosion of infrastructure because it's not being funded. There is a piecemeal approach where there is no ability for long-term planning or growth. There is no measure similar to a minimum standard of care or mandated services. Individualized budgeting moves; agencies become vulnerable as clients move and take their funds with them. This is an unpredictability motion being set up. As people leave, go to different jurisdictions, have different needs or go to new agencies, you're going to see the agencies that have had the care, the control and the dollars that go with them lose out.

There are no economies of scale that we can see by doing this. We know that agencies, as they get larger, can sometimes do things and include more people for the same dollar amount, but we're not sure that this can happen with individualized funding, and we need to look at that.

Thirdly—and again I go back to the preamble—we need something in the bill, and I would suggest that it's the preamble, to convince us that accessibility to services will actually be improved. The bill talks about fairness, but fairness has to be a right to a decent level of care.

We need to do more than just make sure—start out assessing people and then determining what level of care they need. We need to make an assessment and determine the care and the provision of that care that will lift them to the highest level of which they are capable, so that the monies have to be spent not just to make sure they have an adequate level of care, which is sort of one-size-fits-all, but to take an individual and see that person as an individual and to determine what care provisions can be given, what training, what opportunities and what education can be given to lift them to the position that they can have the highest quality of life possible within Ontario.

That's the system that we need to make sure happens, not just saying, "You're going to get X number of dollars because of this particular disability." We have seen that in terms of budgeting for special meal allowances. We have seen people on ODSP who require a special meals allowance. Their disability, their disease or their condition has to be listed on a formulary and then they're given $20 for this particular disease or $15 for this disease or no dollars for this disease. Quite frankly, it simply doesn't work. I know that the government did it to try to save some money, but it doesn't work. What we should be looking at is what amount of money that a person with disabilities who needs a special meal allowance—how much money they need on a rational basis based on medical evidence to bring themselves to a level where they can be able to look after themselves. And we need to do the same thing here. It may not be a meal allowance, but we need to do the same thing here. What is the amount of money necessary to bring them to the appropriate level, not some kind of thing like, "You have this intellectual disability or you have this particular problem and therefore we're going to add an extra $10, $15 or $20 to the formulary that you're going to get, or your care provider is going to get, at the end of the week."

There is a serious danger that some already in the system will lose services they are receiving. We think that because everyone with a developmental disability will be assessed, including those already receiving services, and since there is a goal of equalizing services for everyone with developmental disabilities, people may lose services they've already got.

It isn't clear whether any additional dollars are available for this program—I'm going to get to the money in a minute. I know that's a function at budget time, but I don't think there was anything I saw in the budget this year that leads me to expect there are going to be many dollars available. We know that we need some $325 million just to get the 13,000 people off the waiting list, and that does not even include taking the people from the remaining three homes, if we are going to make sure that their quality of life does not deteriorate.

This is a huge amount of money, and we need to know it is actually there. We know that what may happen is that people may be forced to move out of their area and leave their loved ones and family behind in order to get services.

We're worried about the way that waiting lists are being enshrined in the legislation. There are actually provisions in there talking about a waiting list. I've never seen that before in a government bill. Maybe there are in some other bills; I don't ever remember seeing them. But this bill talks about waiting lists and what to do with waiting lists. You're actually enshrining in the four walls of this bill the fact that there will be a waiting list.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: We're reducing the waiting list.

Mr. Michael Prue: I hear the parliamentary assistant say they're going to reduce it, but the bill itself talks about waiting lists. I would envisage an Ontario where there is no waiting list, where people with developmental disabilities—people with disabilities—have an adequate opportunity for care, so that when they come forward and say, "This is the care that I require," then the care is provided.

Why should families have to wait three to five years—10 years, in some cases—to get care for loved ones? If there aren't sufficient monies for a direct payment system, why should they have to wait? This bill sets out that there are waiting lists and what to do with the waiting lists. I'm encouraged that you want to reduce them, but this is the first time I've ever seen a government bill that actually talks about a waiting list and enshrines it in legislation.

In summary, we have grave concerns that the bill will not actually deliver the support that people with developmental disabilities have a right to. It may create a system that is more flexible, but flexibility does not necessarily translate into fairness, accessibility and quality of care for all Ontarians. Indeed, some call for flexibility of health care to allow some individuals to jump the queue and buy private health care. That's also being set out there.

That would be a more flexible system, but most Ontarians and most Canadians oppose that because they see that it is not fair and that it would undermine the quality of care in the publicly funded health care system and reduce accessibility for those remaining in that system. The same would be true here. So I want us to very carefully look at the system that is being proposed, to make sure that the quality continues, that people are not allowed to jump the queue, that families have to go and get decent and trained providers and that families are given all the options.

I would just like to conclude, if I could—I've rambled on a little, but I want to be very succinct at the end about what we expect to see in this bill in order to support it. First, we support funding to close family members who provide care. Where members fall under categories defined—you can use whatever criteria you want, but I think the best one is the family medical leave act, where, if you are looking after a person who is disabled and are that person's spouse, parent, step-parent or foster parent, or you are the child, step-child or foster child, then you would have a right to family funding, so that if the family makes the conscious decision to care for the loved one at home, there should be some financial remuneration—not a wage—made available to allow families to look after loved ones at home.

What the families would perhaps not have in terms of education or expertise, in terms of looking after an individual, they would certainly make up with love and certainly, if they want to be a whole family and to make sure that the children, the adults, the sibling or the spouse are looked after in a meaningful way, it could be done through an accommodation of giving some type of family allowance to allow a person to remain at home and look after that loved one. That is done in many jurisdictions around the world and certainly should be looked at here.

1550

I would also have the proviso that if a person perhaps is alone and does not have a spouse, a parent or child, if there is a close family member, they would be entitled as well. I don't want to open it too broadly because I see it open to abuse in the long term if it's open to just literally anyone. But certainly, a spouse, a parent or a child looking after a loved one should be allowed to do so with some remuneration.

Secondly, the NDP does not support direct funding, at least not as set out in this bill. We are against parents or family members taking on the responsibility of recruiting, hiring, training, monitoring and evaluating care providers or related duties. We feel that direct funding will not, in many of the cases, work.

Third, the NDP supports an increase of $325 million over the current government's mandate to end waiting lists for developmental services. This is what the developmental services industry says is necessary and what we believe is necessary if this bill, in the fullness of fruition, is to work. The monies have to be made available to do it as well. It's no good passing a bill for which there is no more money, trying to do the same with less, just trying to do a little bit more by robbing Peter to pay Paul, having workers who are unionized and making $17 an hour and then farming out that work at minimum wage through the provisions of this bill. We are looking for the government to be committed, along with the provisions of the bill, to spending some $325 million over the current government's mandate. We've got three and a half years in which to spend it, which makes about $100 million a year we expect to see in the next three budgets. What is paramount is the development of a sustainable, long-term funding framework to ensure that all Ontarians with developmental disabilities have continuous access to the supports and services they need.

Fourthly, the NDP supports improving wages and working conditions for all workers in the developmental service sector to be able to provide the best quality of care. This will involve closing the wage gap for developmental service sector workers and other social service sector counterparts. We need to support the development of measures to ensure fairness for independent developmental service workers, many of whom are among the lowest-paid care workers in this province. Certainly their job is vital and necessary, and ought to be compensated far more than it is being today.

Fifth, the NDP is opposed to merely attaching dollar amounts to individuals with a developmental disability through the assessment and individualized planning process, which would occur at the application centre. Instead, we want to see an assessment model focused on the equity of outcomes and the benefit to the individual in terms of quality of life and community involvement. Those are the keystones. That is what is important. If we are going to assist—I'm going to say it again—we want to see an assessment model focused on the equity of outcomes, the benefit to the individual in terms of quality of life and community involvement. If you don't have those, I don't know why we're adopting a bill and changing things, because that surely should be the goal.

Finally, we want to emphasize that there have to be broad-based public hearings on this bill. The hearings should address the bill itself but should also address the regulations. I heard from one of my Conservative colleagues earlier about all of the regulations that are subject only to ministerial prerogative. This is a huge bill. It was four inches thick when it was handed to me the other day. I know that the compendium made up a good portion of that, but that's all the other bills and acts on which this bill is going to impact. We need to make absolutely sure that there is broad public consultation on all aspects of this bill. There should also be discussion on a preamble, and I've talked about that at least four or five times. I just want to say one last time how important I believe that this is to this bill. A preamble will set out a goal by which everything else is judged. It will set out this government's and future governments' commitment to the people of this province who live with intellectual and other disabilities, so that people will know that everything that is contained within the body of the act has to be interpreted so that it is consistent with that goal, so that no bureaucrat, no judge, no parliamentarian and no one else can look at the bill and say that it says something other than what it is intended to do. A preamble would be essential.

I would ask the minister—it wouldn't take government lawyers very long to cobble together five or six or 10 sentences setting out that preamble at the beginning to ensure, for all time, that when people read the bill they can go back to the preamble and give it the broadest, most comprehensive and best interpretation. If that is done, that is going to help a lot.

We need much more than the consultations from the transformation strategy generated more than two years ago. We know that those were undertaken, but we're not sure that they are sufficient. The face of developmental services has changed rapidly in the last 50 years and, certainly, even more rapidly in the last 10.

Rigorous public hearings must be had to gauge the response, the feedback, and to strengthen the legislation that we hope will be progressive and responsive for at least the next 20 years. We agree that changes must be made to address the serious gaps in the provision of developmental services in this province. We fear, however, that this legislation will not do that.

I am asking the minister to assuage my fears and those of all of the families who are here today, to assuage the fears of the unions and the people who work in the sector, and to assuage the fears of families and people with developmental services who are afraid of what may happen. If we are to march forward into that brave new world that the minister talks about, into that place where we are going to do what we are capable of doing, where everyone will have a part, where every community person will have a say, where every community person will live amongst us and be respected, we need to make sure that we all start marching to the same drummer. We need to make sure that we are all happy to take that first step and to go there.

I am asking the minister, the parliamentary assistant and the government opposite to take the time. This is a big bill. It's a bill that cries out for public debate and public comment. I am asking you to take the time to set up the hearings across this province. They can be this summer. It could even be over the fall. I'm not sure what the government timetable is, but take the time to do that, to make sure that we have it right and to make sure that people with disabilities in this province—120,000 strong—in the end, are the big winners, the only winners and the real winners.

To Brian, whom I talked about in the beginning, who is coming back to our community and is very much a part of it; to Martin Levine, who has lived his very tough life and who has some very real questions about why his ODSP was clawed back when he got a very small inheritance when his parents died; to all of the hundreds and thousands of people who subsist on $999 a month; to Bill, who was up there in the audience, who came to see me—and his family—about care and support and individualized funding: I ask that the government take the time to consider all of this. When the final decision is made, make sure it works for every one of those involved.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Jeff Leal: I've really appreciated hearing the comments from the member from Beaches—East York and other colleagues, because this bill is very personal to me.

In February 1959, my younger brother was born. After two very healthy children, my younger brother, Ted, was born with Down's syndrome. So I appreciate all the challenges—the good days and the challenging days—that families go through with a sibling who has Down's syndrome.

We've gone through a period of time—I remember that when I was six or seven, people would refer to my younger brother as mentally retarded, a term that was always very difficult for me to comprehend. Then we went through a period of time when we referred to them as individuals with developmental handicaps, and today, of course, we use "individuals with intellectual disabilities." In post-war Ontario, we actually took people with intellectual disabilities and sent them to Oak Ridges, the facility at Penetanguishene, to house them with individuals who were deemed to be criminally insane. We have moved forward over the last number of years, and I'm certainly delighted that this legislation is coming forward.

1600

Within a block of where I was raised in Peterborough, we had five families who all had either a son or a daughter with an intellectual disability. I remember around the kitchen table a discussion with my parents and my older brother about whether my younger brother, Ted, would perhaps go to Smiths Falls, D'Arcy Place in Cobourg or one of those other institutions. I always took great pride in my family's making the right decision to keep my brother in Peterborough, and went through a number of programs with community living. He experienced in those days the system of segregated education. But I'll get a chance to provide some more reflections as we work through this debate.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I've listened very carefully to the comments that were made by the member from Beaches—East York and the member from Peterborough. Although we don't agree on all of the points with respect to this bill, I do think we all agree that we need to bring some compassion and humanity to this debate, and both of those members have done just that.

I would just like to comment on a few of the points that were made by the member from Beaches—East York indicating his concerns both with respect to the ODSP funding and the issues around inheritances being lost as a result of the clawbacks and so on, and also with respect to the issue of direct funding, and how family members will be able to deal with it and be able to put life into the hopes and dreams of their family members and make sure that they have a life full of dignity, living in the community.

I would say that this just points to the fact that this is not an easy issue. There are several significant issues that have to be dealt with here, both from the structural issues, the legal and estate planning issues that have to be dealt with to put a life plan in place for their family member, and also the social and human aspects about it. How do you build those circles of support around your loved one to make sure they are going to receive the support they need in the community and be cared for when perhaps you're not there anymore? They need to have people there who love them and care for them every bit as much.

I think what we have heard from family members, though—those family members who are able to step up and be involved in the individual life plans for their family members—is that they've already had significant success with special services at home. I have no doubt that if we're able to put things in place with this bill, they would be able to put those supports in place quite readily for their family members.

Mr. Reza Moridi: It's my pleasure to rise in this House and speak about Bill 77, the developmental services legislation. As I understand it, the current act, the Developmental Services Act, is 35 years old. I think it's time for us to look into this act, overhaul it quite significantly and make it more updated to conform with the needs of Ontarians in the 21st century. I commend the minister for bringing the bill before this House.

As I heard speakers before me in this House and learned from their presentations, the current bill before us addresses three major points. One is improving the service, where it allows people to apply directly to the service and get the services they need. The bill also addresses choice. It increases choices for applicants, where applicants can receive funding which is tailored to their needs. It also addresses fairness, where the application form assessment is equal for everyone. And there's also priority for people who really need these services from the government.

Since our government took office in 2003, we have committed half a billion dollars to this service. This is a huge service. About 40,000 Ontarians every year receive services under this act, which costs the government $1.57 billion a year. I think that what we are doing in this House is laying the foundation for the provision of this very-much-needed service to Ontarians for years to come. I commend the minister again for bringing this bill to the Legislature.

M. Shafiq Qaadri: Nous nous sommes engagés à répondre à ces besoins. Nous avons élaboré un plan de réorganisation global visant à rendre le système plus équitable, plus accessible et plus durable. Nous avons annoncé la fermeture des trois derniers foyers gouvernementaux pour les personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle dès la fin de mars 2009 et nous nous sommes engagés à développer un plan d'action pour l'avenir—un plan réaliste, novateur et évolutif.

Si ce projet de loi est adopté, il nous permettra d'améliorer les services, car les personnes n'auront à s'inscrire qu'à un seul endroit pour obtenir des services, et d'offrir plus de choix, car les personnes pourraient recevoir des fonds directement et à la mesure de leurs besoins. Ce serait plus équitable car les personnes concernées utiliseraient la même trousse d'évaluation des besoins, et la priorité serait accordée aux personnes dont les besoins sont les plus grands.

I'm honoured to rise in the House today and comment on Bill 77 in reply to the member from Beaches—East York. I always appreciate his very sincere and, I would say, relatively non-partisan commentary today. I think that when it comes to the needs of the disabled, of those who are particularly special among us, we need to act with one voice in a show of unanimity for the support of Ontarians with special needs. I would encourage each of us to support Bill 77.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Response?

Mr. Michael Prue: I'd like to thank the members from Peterborough, Whitby—Oshawa, Richmond Hill and Etobicoke North for their comments today.

The member from Peterborough spoke. I'm not sure how much it related to what I had to say, but I did enjoy the comments, because again, they brought it down to family. We all have family or friends; we all know people with intellectual disabilities. They live with us, they live amongst us and they are part of us. Your statement brought that all home, and I thank you for those comments.

The member from Whitby—Oshawa talked a little bit about the clawback, and it remains one of my passions to talk about that, in terms of people earning money and being allowed to keep it. Particularly, those with intellectual disabilities should be allowed to keep at least the amount of money they earn on top of their ODSP, up to the poverty line. Having an intellectual disability should never, in our society, be tantamount to living your entire life in poverty. We need to start looking at that. We need to start looking at making that accommodation without clawing that money back.

The member from Richmond Hill, I think—I'm not sure—read from a government-prepared text. I don't really think it had anything to do with what I had to say, so I'm going to skip that. But I thank him for his comments all the same.

I thank the member from Etobicoke North for his comments as well. I attempted, in this, to be as non-partisan as possible. We need to talk about this reasonably, rationally and realistically. There are concerns that have been voiced to me and, I'm sure, to all members of this House, about some provisions of the bill that people are not comfortable with or need further explanation of. I'm hoping that the minister takes this to heart, and that there are meaningful, long-term, comprehensive public discussions at the committee stage.

1610

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri: I think, as many of my colleagues stated earlier, that it falls to each generation to upgrade pieces of legislation in order to serve Ontarians. As we've said earlier, the special Ontarians who are served by these particular pieces of legislation, programs and initiatives deserve our attention and care. I would commend the minister for bringing to bear her considerable expertise, wisdom and humanity to pieces of legislation that really have not seen full integration—bringing the light of day in terms of scrutiny and overhaul—in what seems something on the order of about 35 years. That's why I'm honoured to rise in this House on behalf of the government for our reading of Bill 77, the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act.

As legislators, we have to view the legislation in context. Our previous developmental services legislation spoke to a time when we supported people with a developmental disability primarily in provincial institutions. That, I think, deeply speaks to the heart of this legislation. Of course, as generationism unfolds, as medical, social and biological thinking evolves, a great deal has changed. Therefore, to keep in lockstep with the future, with our evolving thinking, the legislation itself must change. Clearly, our previous legislation does not address the realities of today. That's perhaps at the heart of what

Bill 77 is all about. As a responsive and responsible government, we have to change our legislation if we hope to stay in step with the times and with the new ways of thinking.

I can say, for example, that as the MPP, the member of provincial Parliament, not only for the great riding of Etobicoke North, but also as a physician in various contexts, having dealt with a number of special Ontarians, you can see the challenges that they experience, but on top of that, the care, love and humanity, day to day, that is administered to them by their families.

I think it's very apropos that the McGuinty government, as an institution, helps to bring that same level of care, humanity and trust to this particular sector. That's why we should all support this reading of Bill 77, because we support people with a developmental disability in communities, and not institutional care across Ontario.

Today we support people with developmental disabilities in homes. These individuals have as much right to live and contribute to the fabric of our communities as anyone else. In fact, if truth be told, our communities are stronger when we include all individuals, in particular those with special needs.

Aujourd'hui, nous aidons les personnes atteintes d'une déficience intellectuelle à vivre en société, dans toutes les collectivités de l'Ontario. Aujourd'hui, nous ne plaçons plus les personnes atteintes d'une déficience intellectuelle dans des établissements; nous les aidons à vivre dans les foyers.

Ces personnes ont tout autant le droit que les autres citoyens de participer et de contribuer à la vie de leur collectivité. En fait, nos collectivités sont d'autant plus fortes si elles font appel à tous leurs citoyens, quelles que soient leurs habiletés.

Our journey to where we are today in developmental services has been a gradual evolution, full of challenge, full of fury, full of intense debates on all sides. We have worked closely with our community partners who provide dedicated service and forward-thinking programs for people with a developmental disability. These partners know how important it is that people with a developmental disability have the opportunity to live their lives to the fullest that they are able.

As Premier McGuinty often shares with us in caucus meetings, part of the thread of the McGuinty vision since day one of our mandate, continuing into our many mandates to follow, is the idea of potentiating Ontarians, the idea of helping each and every one of us, in particular those of modest backgrounds, modest circumstances or with special needs, to reach their full potential in the many, many different spheres of life that we measure. It's with the passing of this particular proposed legislation, Bill 77, that we hopefully will move fully into the 21st century and show the communities that are affected, their families and of course our fellow Legislatures across Canada what it means to be accountable and sustainable.

But this piece of legislation is also about compassion for the individual, their families and friends, and for the community agencies that support them. Our proposed legislation is all about the future of developmental services. Let me set the stage. We have, as you'll know, something on the order of about $1.6 billion worth of developmental services in this system currently. This supports something in the order of about 40,000 individuals, as we've seen, many of whom we had the honour of hosting and welcoming today here at Queen's Park. Of course, that list continues to grow. We knew that we needed to make some very dramatic changes, and the best way was to consult deeply, widely and broadly. Families are telling us that they need an easier time getting help from the system and that they need assistance to negotiate some of the complexities involved. They need services and supports closer to their homes, not in segregated communities, not in institutionalized care that is spread disproportionately across the province.

Families are telling us that they need more choice, as well as flexibility, in the supports that they receive. As a physician in particular, I can tell you that needs vary according to the individual, tailored experience of each person and each family. For example, while a particular deficiency might be the same on paper, and the label may be the same and the society or group that they may belong to may be the same, each of these special Ontarians is exactly that: not only special in terms of their needs, but also special or unique and non-duplicable, and that's why we need to bring services to mind that are completely cognizant of these facts. That's why Bill 77, our proposed legislation, will hopefully respond to a number of these challenges and needs.

Les familles nous disent qu'elles veulent obtenir plus facilement de l'aide. Le système actuel est trop compliqué. Elles ont besoin de services et de soutien près de chez elles, pas dans des collectivités isolées et mal réparties sur le territoire ontarien.

Les familles nous disent aussi qu'elles souhaitent plus de choix et de latitude pour obtenir du soutien. Notre projet de loi permettrait de répondre à tous ces besoins.

If passed, this legislation, Bill 77, would lay the foundation for Ontario to build a new, more modern system of developmental services over the coming years and it would make the system sustainable for future generations, a real showcase or legacy of the McGuinty vision for Ontario.

There are a number of key features of the legislation. I'll address a number of them. First, we would—this is perhaps more cosmetic, but I think it has some deep, echoing implications on the ground—get rid of archaic terms such as “facility” and “institution.” The three remaining facilities in Ontario in fact are set to close, as you'll know, by March 2009, and therefore that language, like the thinking that went into the creation of that language, will be obsolete, as will those particular former “institutions.” Second, we want to create application centres for access to developmental services across the province. Staff at these centres would be trained consistently across the province and have the tools they need to help families through the application and assessment process. As you can imagine, dealing with the government on such personal, emotional and urgent needs can be a challenge and a daunting process at the best of times. Therefore, I would once again commend the minister for bringing expertise to this area to help facilitate these opportunities for accessing care and ongoing monitoring.

1620

For example, setting up application centres would mean that families and individuals would only need to go to one place to apply for supports, instead of having to tell their stories over and over at several individual agencies. Of course, this is part of the streamlining and integration of services, perhaps another thread that is running through the McGuinty vision from top to bottom.

We also want people to have more choice and flexibility in purchasing supports that are tailored to their specific and individualized needs. We want to provide funding through community agencies or through application centres for direct funding. We also want to get a better handle on service planning. That's why we should actually start collecting information from individuals in application centres to improve service planning throughout the province. Without careful planning, forecasting future service needs and changes is challenging and difficult. And because we're in a time when families and individuals have more say in where they will live and how they will live, we want to give them greater peace of mind. We can do this by introducing accountability requirements for agencies, individuals and families who would receive direct funding. Requirements that would include provisions to allow us to take corrective action against agencies or application centres will of course also be included, because that is the opportunity or the mechanism of accountability, how we can actually redress any other areas of concern that may arise.

For example, there are from time to time, through families and other agencies and well-wishers, concerns about health and safety or financial administration. If taken together, the elements of this proposed legislation will serve us well into the future. This legislation would allow this government and future governments the latitude needed to build and maintain a modern system of developmental services.

As has been stated repeatedly in this House, we have come a long way, but it falls to each generation to take up the torch and to move legislation forward. I think Bill 77 is incorporating the best thinking and the best practices in this area. There is an extraordinary need out there, as I mentioned earlier, registering something in the order of about $1.6 billion in program funding and something in the order of 40,000 individuals currently being served, and of course, the list—with the services, finances and resources—continues to grow. That's why I think it is time for us as provincial legislators here in the province of Ontario, showing leadership across to other Legislatures in Canada, to come together and take our developmental services system to the next level.

We've worked hard to make sure our bill would give us the legislative framework we need to support all the various initiatives and programs that we pledged in 2004 when we first announced plans to transform the developmental services system. We have worked hard as a government, under a McGuinty vision, and we have worked hard as a partner with families and agencies and individuals who work and provide care, love and humanity to these special Ontarians.

Il est temps pour nous, les législateurs de cette province, d'unir nos forces pour faire entrer notre système de services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle dans l'ère nouvelle. Nous avons travaillé fort à ce projet de loi afin de nous doter du cadre législatif nécessaire pour poursuivre ce que nous avons entrepris en 2004, lorsque nous avons annoncé notre plan de réorganisation des services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle. Nous avons travaillé fort, en tant que gouvernement et en tant que partenaires des familles, des bénéficiaires et des organismes, pour élaborer ce projet de loi.

I encourage all members of this House and the people of Ontario to support this legislation. Let's move forward and pass this bill, which will hopefully help the many special Ontarians who deserve our care, regard and humanity.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments?

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I was listening to my colleague from Etobicoke North speak, eloquently describing the essence of the bill. It was an incredible speech, and I was listening to him carefully.

It is important to keep reminding the people of this province about this issue and how we are going to tackle this issue. I think the member from Etobicoke North spoke in detail about how the government has opened the act after 35 years and is trying to modernize the act in order to serve people with intellectual disabilities. As I have mentioned many different times, this issue is dear to my heart because I work closely with people with intellectual disabilities in both settings—group homes, and also a facility.

I think it's important for us and it's important for the government to open it up and give choices to the people, to the families and to the individuals who want to choose a funding method or a service, if they wish to do so. It is important to give flexibility to the people, because they have a right to have choices, and also to give a right to the family to be close to their loved ones. As you know, in the past, they were shipped to different facilities across the province of Ontario, far away from their parents, from their loved ones. This bill will allow them to live closely and also to purchase a service the family thinks is important to the members of their family and which also can benefit them well.

It's important, and I want to commend the member from Etobicoke North for detailing the vision of this bill. I hope all the members of this House will support it, because it's important for us. I also hope this bill will go to committee, and we'll listen to many different people from across the province of Ontario, because always, when you listen to people, you enlighten yourself and create more incentive for us to keep proceeding forward.

Mrs. Amrit Mangat: It is my pleasure to rise today in support of Bill 77.

The key word in this debate is "communities." Whereas in the past most of our support went towards institutions, which in many ways isolated those with disabilities, Bill 77 will provide Ontarians with disabilities more choice and control over the support they receive, which will ultimately allow them to live independently throughout communities across all Ontario.

I would like to recognize everyone at Community Living Mississauga for all of the tremendous work they do in my riding of Mississauga-Brampton South. This is a group made up of so many dedicated people, including president Mike Pawelchuk, past president Bonnie Yagar and an army of devoted volunteers. Ms. Yagar, I should point out, was recently presented with the Gordon S. Shipp Memorial Award, recognizing her as Mississauga's Citizen of the Year.

I am proud to be a part of a government that recognizes the tremendous value that every Ontarian can make to their community. Bill 77 will allow for people with disabilities to live in and, at the same time, contribute to their communities across the province. That, we will all benefit from. I am proud to rise today to support Bill 77.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): The member for Etobicoke North for a response.

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri: I'd like to acknowledge my honourable colleague from London-Fanshawe of the class of 2003—the honourable Dr. Khalil Ramal—as well as the MPP for Mississauga-Brampton South, from the class of 2007. I think they've also lent their support and their very strong remarks on what Bill 77, regarding developmental services, is seeking to do.

Ultimately, I think we are here as part of the McGuinty government—the McGuinty vision—as I said earlier, to help all Ontarians and, in particular, special Ontarians to reach their potential, to not offer excessive obstacles and obstructions to their seeking care and programs and initiatives. As you know, when you have such a diverse group of programming—something on the order of about $1.6 billion serving some 40,000 individuals and counting, the number rising as we speak—across the province, it can become unwieldy and a challenge to navigate such a massive matrix of programming. So the minister's efforts to actually consolidate this—to allow one-stop shopping, to allow a more easy access to all the various programs, particularly for individuals who themselves may have difficulty navigating at the best of times—is something that should be commended.

As well, we talked a little bit about some of the perhaps symbolic removal of the naming of institutions and facilities in turning them into homes. I think that's also part of a larger humanity that this bill speaks to: that these are individuals who deserve our care, our love and our trust. That's why, with other members of the Legislature, I strongly support Bill 77.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Second reading debate deemed adjourned.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Madam Speaker, I understand there was agreement that the House would adjourn at 4:30, so I move adjournment of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Is it the pleasure of the members that the motion carry?

All those in favour, say "aye."

All those opposed, say "nay."

I believe the ayes have it.

Call in the members; there will be a 30-minute bell.

The division bells rang from 1632 to 1638.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Mr. Sterling has moved adjournment of the House. All those in favour, please rise and remain standing.

All those opposed, please rise and remain standing.

The Clerk of the Assembly (Ms. Deborah Deller): The ayes are 28; the nays are 0.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I declare the motion carried.

The House will now stand adjourned until tomorrow morning, Tuesday, May 27.

The House adjourned at 1638.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.

Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters

Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller

Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum

Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Haltoun Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Simcoe–Muskoka
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest	Attorney General / procureur général
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craitor, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet / ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Quellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener–Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin–Middlesex–London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough–Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches–East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London–Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming–Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland–Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds–Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton–Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto–Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga–Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton–Kent–Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West–Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest–Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth–Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe–Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener–Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉ PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craitor, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Orazietti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Orazietti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craitor,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Services for the developmentally disabled
Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2033
Responses to petitions
Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2033
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2033
Protection for miners
Mme France Gélinas .....	2034
Child custody
Mr. Kim Craitor .....	2034
Lord's Prayer
Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2034
Car culture
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2034
Property taxation
Mr. Bill Mauro .....	2034
Wye Marsh Wildlife Centre
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2035
Community colleges collective bargaining
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2035
Hospital funding
Mr. Charles Sousa .....	2035
Services for the developmentally disabled
Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2035
Hospital funding
Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2035
Lord's Prayer
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2036
Hospital funding
Mr. Joe Dickson .....	2036
Lord's Prayer
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2036
Firearms control
Mr. Mike Colle .....	2036

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

D. Aubrey Moodie
Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2037
Sentencing
Mr. Peter Kormos .....	2037
Lions Club of Richmond Hill
Mr. Reza Moridi .....	2037
Protective services appreciation barbecue
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2037
Police officers
Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2038

Sexual reassignment surgery
Mr. Peter Shurman .....	2038
Guelph-Wellington Women in Crisis
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	2038
Leader of the Opposition
Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn .....	2039
Ontario child benefit
Mrs. Carol Mitchell .....	2039
Annual report, Information and Privacy Commissioner
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2039

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS / DÉPÔT DES PROJETS DE LOI

Algoma University Act, 2008, Bill 80, Mr. Milloy / Loi de 2008 sur l'Université Algoma, projet de loi 80, M. Milloy
First reading agreed to .....	2039

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY AND RESPONSES / DÉCLARATIONS MINISTÉRIELLES ET RÉPONSES

Algoma University College
Hon. John Milloy .....	2039
Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2040
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2041

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, 2008, Bill 77, Mrs. Meilleur / Loi de 2008 sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, projet de loi 77, Mme Meilleur
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur .....	2041
Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2043
Mr. Norman W. Sterling .....	2045
Mme France Gélinas .....	2045
Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2045
Mr. Norm Miller .....	2045
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur .....	2046
Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2046
Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	2050
Mr. Michael Prue .....	2052
Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2053
Mr. Norm Miller .....	2053
Mme France Gélinas .....	2053
Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2054
Mr. Michael Prue .....	2054

Mr. Jeff Leal.....	2061
Mrs. Christine Elliott.....	2062
Mr. Reza Moridi.....	2062
M. Shafiq Qaadri.....	2062
Mr. Michael Prue .....	2062
Mr. Shafiq Qaadri .....	2063
Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2065
Mrs. Amrit Mangat .....	2065
Mr. Shafiq Qaadri .....	2065
Second reading debate deemed adjourned .....	2066

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Monday 26 May 2008 / Lundi 26 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act, 2008, Bill 64,

Mr. Gerretsen / Loi de 2008 sur l'interdiction des pesticides utilisés à des fins esthétiques, projet de loi 64, M. Gerretsen

Mr. Phil McNeely .....	2009
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2010
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2010
Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn.....	2010
Ms. Lisa MacLeod.....	2011
Mr. Phil McNeely.....	2011
Mr. Garfield Dunlop.....	2011
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2014
Mrs. Carol Mitchell .....	2014
Mr. Toby Barrett.....	2014
Mr. Mike Colle .....	2014
Mr. Garfield Dunlop.....	2015
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2015
Mr. Bas Balkissoon .....	2018
Mr. Ernie Hardeman.....	2018
Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn.....	2018
Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette .....	2018
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2019
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	2019
Mr. Norman W. Sterling.....	2020
Mr. Gilles Bisson.....	2021
Mr. Khalil Ramal.....	2021
Mr. Norm Miller .....	2021
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	2022
Ms. Laurie Scott .....	2022
Second reading debate deemed adjourned.....	2023

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	2023
--------------------------------------	------

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Access to health care

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	2023
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2023
Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2023

C. difficile

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2024
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2024

Automotive industry

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	2025
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2025

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	2026
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2026

C. difficile

Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....	2027
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2027

C. difficile

Mme France Gélinas.....	2028
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2028

Anti-smoking legislation

Mr. Phil McNeely .....	2028
Hon. Margaret R. Best.....	2028

Services for the developmentally disabled

Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2029
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur.....	2029

Energy contracts

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	2029
Hon. Gerry Phillips.....	2029

School trustees

Mr. David Zimmer.....	2030
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne.....	2030

Services for the developmentally disabled

Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	2030
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur.....	2031

Fire in Hamilton

Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	2031
Hon. John Gerretsen .....	2031

Rent bank program

Mr. David Oraziotti.....	2031
Hon. Jim Watson .....	2032

Tourism

Mr. Ted Arnott.....	2032
Hon. Peter Fonseca .....	2032

Doctors' services

Mr. Gilles Bisson.....	2033
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2033

Visitor

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2033
---------------------------------------	------

Continued on inside back cover

No. 48

N° 48

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Tuesday 27 May 2008

Mardi 27 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Tuesday 27 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Mardi 27 mai 2008

The House met at 0900.

Prayers.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

SMOKE-FREE ONTARIO AMENDMENT ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 MODIFIANT LA LOI FAVORISANT UN ONTARIO SANS FUMÉE

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 14, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act / Projet de loi 69, Loi modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée pour protéger les enfants contre le tabagisme passif dans les véhicules automobiles.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. John Yakabuski: If I could get a couple glasses of water—I wasn't expecting it this early.

It's a pleasure to join the debate on Bill 69, the Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act, this morning. You've already heard from a number of our speakers, including our critic for health promotion, Laurie Scott, who spoke for an hour on this bill. I congratulate her for being able to speak on this bill for an hour because, like so much of the legislation that is being brought forward by this government, there's not a lot to the bill. But we are required to debate legislation. It would be nice if the legislation we were debating in this House these days dealt with the single most important issue of the day, and that is the economy. But the government does not want to talk about the economy. They don't want to talk about the economy at all. In fact, this morning—Mr. Speaker, I'm going to get to the bill in a very short second here—the Premier is doing a 180 and wants to talk about John O'Toole's bill on cellphones. So today we're talking about David Orazietti's bill, the member from Sault Ste. Marie, and also Liz Witmer's, who was a big proponent, as our health critic, of bringing forth anti-smoking or prohibitive smoking legislation for cars being occupied by children under the age of 16 years.

It's not a difficult issue. Goodness gracious; we all know how damaging smoking is. We all know about the number of dangerous and toxic chemicals in a cigarette. Some people have been smoking for many years; they're addicted to it. And many of them are working to get off it. I certainly congratulate my friend the member for Durham, who in the last few months has kicked the habit himself—and he's not a young man. I won't give you his age, but—he's not getting a pension from here, but I think he's getting one from somewhere. I give him credit for kicking the habit at this stage, because he recognized that smoking wasn't doing him any good, or anybody else any good either.

Do we want smoking in cars with children under the age of 16? No, of course not. We support that legislation. We don't support many of the things that this government is doing. We don't support many of the things in many of the bills that we actually support. But this is so full of contradictions. I have no objection to the Minister of Health Promotion; she seems like a very charming lady. But she is in over her head on this one. She's going to ban smoking in cars—that's a great idea—with children under the age of 16. But you know all those dangerous chemicals I was talking about, all those dangerous chemicals in a cigarette? We've identified them all. We know they're there. So when you go into the corner store or the convenience store, or wherever, and pick up that pack of cigarettes, we know what those cigarettes contain. They contain many dangerous substances and chemicals. Some are addictive and some are simply toxic at different levels.

But do you know what? All of those cigarettes—about a third of the cigarettes consumed in this province today—that are coming illegally through First Nations reserves contain all of those chemicals, and maybe some we're not even aware of, too, because we have no control over the manufacture or distribution of those cigarettes.

So what does the Premier, and this is where I say the Minister of Health Promotion—do you know what? I think if she had her way, she'd probably be doing something about that. But we know that everything runs through the corner office on the second floor. No decisions are made in that caucus, in that cabinet, in that party, except by the king himself, King Dalton. He runs the show. And he's telling those people, he's telling the Minister of Health Promotion and he's telling all of these backbenchers over here—well, the few of them who are dutifully here for their 9 o'clock appointments: "This is what you're going to do in my Liberal Party, in my Liberal government. You're not going to say anything negative. You're not going to say that the government isn't doing something it should be doing when it comes to attacking and dealing with illegal contraband tobacco being filtered through First Nations. No, no, we don't touch that. We don't touch that in Ontario."

What's regrettable about that is that it sets two standards. It says on the one hand that law-abiding, taxpaying businesses are losing revenue because tobacco, even though it's a bad substance, currently is a legal substance. I want to clarify that. If I say it too fast it might sound like I'm saying it's an illegal substance. It's a legal substance. Those legitimate businesses are losing money hand over fist. I talk to people in my riding all the time whose cigarette sales are way down. Oh, and by the way, you used to hear the Minister of Health Promotion and the former Minister of Health Promotion, who is now the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, jumping up and saying, "The McGuinty anti-smoking strategy is working well in Ontario. We're seeing huge drops in the number of people who are smoking in this province." That's not happening at all, and they know it. What is happening is, instead of people buying those cigarettes at a legal, law-abiding business, they're buying illegal cigarettes filtered through the First Nations reserves, with no taxes attached to them. I talk to folks in my riding, and they buy them by the garbage bag. I guess that's going green: Go get a green garbage bag full of cigarettes off the reserve; maybe that is going green. Maybe that's the new McGuinty green plan. They paid a little over a dollar, around a dollar, for a pack of 20 cigarettes.

When I talk to these tobacco enforcement people, do you know what they say? "You watch out, mister. If you're buying those illegal cigarettes, we're going to get you. We're going to put the hammer down on you." But they're not going to deal with the source: "No, no, we're not going to touch that at all."

0910

I don't absolve the federal government on this one either. Enforcement of tobacco laws is both provincial and federal, and we need to do more to ensure that those illegal cigarettes are not being distributed on First Nations. We've got a problem on First Nations. If we're not offering them reasonable opportunities to better their own lives and we don't negotiate in good faith on many of the issues that are important to them, and should be important to us, the argument may be made that we're forcing them into these corners. That's a fair argument but that doesn't justify breaking the law. That doesn't justify illegal acts.

When it came to the war on drugs, or the so-called war on drugs, one of the things we always said was, "We are going to attack the source." Government said, "We want to get to the source." The RCMP and police forces said, "We want to get to the source. We want to get to the people who are selling these drugs to our young people. That's how we're going to deal with the war on drugs."

Alas, when it comes to the war on tobacco, no such policy. They don't want to talk about it. They don't want to talk about it because they don't want to deal with the real issue, which is illegal tobacco. That's the real issue.

What are we going to do if we catch somebody smoking in a car with an infant? It's the wrong thing to do, absolutely the wrong thing to do. There's no justification for it. But are we going to see if they're smoking illegal cigarettes? And if they are smoking illegal cigarettes, is part of that investigation going to be, "Okay, let's find out where those cigarettes came from, because we're going to nip this in the bud. We're going to get at the source"? No, no, nay, not so. That won't be happening—inconsistencies in this government's anti-tobacco strategy.

If you're going to play the game, if you're going to attack what we know is a substance that is harmful, then you've got to attack it from all sides. You can't pick and choose. You can't say, "We're going after the legitimate business owner because he's an easy target, but we're not going to go after First Nations reserves because we don't want to inflame the situation."

We have a lot of things that we need to do with First Nations reserves and First Nations peoples. There are a lot of injustices that we've got to make up for, but failing to enforce laws and turning a blind eye to the breaking of laws is not the right message to them and it is not the right message to everyone else here in this province or in this country.

Another one of the terrible inconsistencies—did you ever hear of Gator Ted's? Gator Ted's is a bar down in Burlington. Gator Ted's was periodically, and I think regularly, visited by a gentleman who had a medical exemption to smoke marijuana. Now, regardless of your views on marijuana, and certainly views are changing—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): I'm very sorry to interrupt the member, but take your seat, please. I'm just inquiring as to how this relates to the bill at hand, the bill that's before the House.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Can I answer that, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Absolutely.

Mr. John Yakabuski: It certainly relates to the bill at hand because this bill is about the protection of children. What I'm talking about is the protection of children from tobacco or any other substances in the air that could affect their health. I'd like a little bit of latitude on that because I think this is important. Continue?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Yes.

Mr. John Yakabuski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

So let's talk about Gator Ted's. Gator Ted's asked that this man not be allowed to smoke marijuana where he wouldn't be allowed to smoke tobacco. As you know, in Bill 40, or whatever bill it was there a couple years ago, tobacco smoking in public places was banned, including in bars and restaurants. You had to go outside to have a cigarette. Well, in Dalton McGuinty's Ontario, you can go outside and have a joint providing you've got this medical exemption.

I'm a little biased, I'm the first one to admit that, but I think these medical exemptions for marijuana started getting handed out like Smarties at a point, because once one person got one, the next person said, "Well, I need marijuana." They just started handing them out like they were coming out of Cracker Jacks. So this guy has an exemption to smoke marijuana and now he's smoking it outside of Gator Ted's. How do you think you feel, as another individual, if you can't walk into Gator Ted's without going through a cloud of marijuana smoke but you can't smoke a cigarette where this guy can smoke marijuana? Kind of strange, isn't it?

I don't expect you to answer that, Mr. Speaker. You're impartial in these debates, I understand that, but you really have to ask yourself, "What are we thinking?"

My colleague from Burlington, Joyce Savoline, brought in a private member's bill that would have compelled this government to treat the smoking of marijuana exactly the same, from the point of view of prohibitions, as smoking tobacco. So this person would have been banned from smoking marijuana where he could not have smoked tobacco. They voted it down. They don't want to deal with significant, serious issues with regards to rights and health.

So what's the easy thing to do? "Well, let's bring in a smoking-in-cars bill. Who's going to be against it? We may feel that it's a little bit soft, but nobody's going to be standing up and ranting against it." We know that if nobody smokes in cars, our children, our grandchildren are much better off than if they do smoke in cars. There's no argument there. There's not a single person in here who's going to argue that people aren't better off if they're not subjected to the fumes and the second-hand smoke of other people. We have to certainly question the judgment of a parent, or the custodian or guardian of a child, who would smoke in their car. You really have to question their judgment. There's enough information out there to conclude that that is not good for the child, so why would we be doing it?

Children, of course, have no say in the matter. They don't get to decide whether that person driving the car or an adult passenger in the car—they don't get to decide if that person smokes. So it is incumbent upon that person to make that decision. Not respecting whether we have a law or not, that decision should be a no.

The fact that we will have a law—and I will concede this—I think does give some strength to anyone who is observing someone who is smoking in a car with a child. You're not only doing something that we believe is wrong, you will now be doing something that is against the law. I think that is a good part of this legislation. They will now be doing something that John Q. Public knows is against the law. I think it gives people a little more comfort in maybe just saying, not in a confrontational way but in a polite way, "Excuse me,"—if you're at a stoplight or something, tap, tap, tap—"you're smoking in the car. That's against the law and that's bad for your children. Don't do that." Maybe not many people would do that, but I believe there will be some.

We certainly know about the dangers of second-hand smoke. Studies have shown—and I know my colleague, Laurie Scott, was talking about it in her address—that second-hand smoke is 23 times as toxic in a confined space like a car. Again, this speaks to what I'm saying. There's no argument. There's no debate about the importance and the righteousness of not smoking in a car where there are children. But this is, quite frankly, another one of the Premier's favourite ways of dealing with things. It's number two. His first is to deny. Number one, deny; number two, deflect. So this is number two; this is deflect. So if we bring in a piece of legislation that is going to tie up the Legislature and is going to put some ink on the newspaper, that's deflecting. That's what he's doing here. He's doing it again today because he doesn't want to talk about the economy.

0920

I was speaking to a gentleman last night who was telling me there are about 1,300 fishing lodges in this province. Almost all of them are for sale because they can't attract US tourists here. They're for sale or they're in trouble. Does Mr. McGuinty want to talk about that? No. Do you know what he wants to talk about today? He wants to talk about John O'Toole's private member's bill from the past about banning cellphones in cars. Just a few months ago, Premier McGuinty said, "No, we're not going down that road. Absolutely not. That's not for us. We can't control everything." But he's concluding that that's exactly what he wants to do. He wants to control everything, and what he really wants to control is what you're reading in the newspapers or what you're watching on the television. That's what he wants to control. How do you do that? You deflect away from the issues that matter and you bring these other issues out on the floor—cellphone bans.

Listen, I recognized and I supported John O'Toole on his private member's bill. That was three years ago. What's the problem? He said no way then, but do you know what? The economy was pretty good then. He didn't want to deflect anybody away from the economy with a cellphone ban. He wanted to talk about how things were going in Ontario. Well, times have changed. Things are not going so well in Ontario. All of a sudden, "Oh, no. We can't talk about the economy. We've got pressing issues here. People of Ontario, we've got pressing issues. We've got to ban cellphones and GPSs and BlackBerries and everything else. And watch out, don't be putting your makeup on anymore in the car, ladies. You're going to be in trouble." That's what the Premier wants you to think about. He doesn't want you to think about the economy. Mr. Deflecto is up to his old tricks.

Unfortunately, I'm out of time, but it's been fun.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's always a pleasure to listen to the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke.

I look forward to speaking at length on this bill, but suffice to say for now, some words from Shakespeare come to mind, from Hamlet: a lot of sound and fury, signifying—in the original—nothing, and in this particular instance, not much. So I'm looking forward to speaking about this bill.

We in the New Democratic Party will be voting for it. It's an inch where we need a mile, like so much of the Liberal government's legislation. I think my colleague here from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke said it best, that this is a deflection manoeuvre, as is much of the legislation that we've dealt with for this entire year, in fact. It hasn't been much of a year. I think we only sat a couple of weeks in the fall and we're sitting just a couple of months in the spring—so again, a government that doesn't want to work much and doesn't want to bring in anything substantive. Suffice to say, this is a way of protecting children, and insofar as it is, we in the NDP will support it.

Problems with the bill, of course, are myriad. Number one, the problem is that you're dealing with an addictive substance. We've seen over and over again that fining, particularly a $250 fine for an addict, isn't going to stop the addiction.

Number two, enforcement: I find it highly improbable that our overworked police force, our much-beleaguered police force, is going to be pulling over cars because they see somebody smoking in them, when they don't have enough police on the roads to pull over cars that are speeding, that are driving while under the influence of alcohol etc. So again, there's a serious problem of enforcement.

We know that the way to deal with someone who has an addiction issue is not through enforcement anyway. It's through education, prevention and harm reduction, which I'll talk about at some length.

It's interesting to note that Ontario does not have a drug strategy. Toronto has one, but Ontario does not have one. We in Parkdale are actually trying to develop a template, the Parkdale drug strategy, something that perhaps the provincial government might want to look at and adopt, because certainly this should be part of an overarching educational and prevention response to addiction. I look forward to speaking more to this.

Mr. John O'Toole: I couldn't resist the opportunity to get up and compliment the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke. I think he had it perfectly right. We are in support of this bill. In fact, I don't think anyone in the Legislature would agree with allowing anyone to smoke in an automobile with young children, if at all. That's the question: Does it go far enough?

My good friend the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke said that the Premier wants to talk about these sorts of harmless little issues, harmless to the extent that legislatively we all kind of agree with it. It's not controversial. Underneath all that—he's right—the economy is in absolute turmoil. It is frightening, actually, but it's like the duck sailing along on top of the water while the feet are going like mad underneath the water. That's really what's happening.

So we should listen to the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke and his overall assessment of the dangers of smoking on the one hand, and some of the legislative issues, whether it's the elimination of the Lord's Prayer—I hadn't had too many phone calls on that before the Premier introduced it. Now I'm getting all kinds of phone calls. Many people who aren't even churchgoing people ask why we are dealing with this. They've just laid off 900 at General Motors. Why aren't we dealing with substantive issues instead of these rather harmless sorts of issues, non-interventionist kinds of things?

But I think we're all on track on this bill here, that we want to make sure our environment is safe for our children. I say that with the new group of pages here. Hopefully, they're able to listen to some substantive debate on something that's really about making their lives better.

So I'm going to wait for the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke to make a concluding remark. Maybe he will mention the ban on cellphones. This could be a good start.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

I'm pleased to return to the member for Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke for two minutes in reply.

Mr. John Yakabuski: I want to thank the member from Parkdale–High Park for her comments, as well as the member for Durham. Apparently all of the Liberal members agree with what we said, so they chose not to respond. I appreciate their support for my comments. That's refreshing, and it's good to see some improvements over on that side of the House.

Let's conclude with a couple of important points. First is the importance of enforcing laws and treating tobacco equally across this province, whether it's sold in legal smoke shops or in illegal ways. Whether it's the illegal smoke shop on government land on Argyle Street in Caledonia, or filtering illegal cigarettes through First Nations reserves, we have to deal with that. That is important. That is a crucial part of an anti-tobacco strategy in the province of Ontario.

Let's also talk about why this bill is before us, the real truth. It's because this government wants to deflect. It does not want to talk about the real issues. It doesn't want to talk about its failures to deal with the economy in 2008 in the province of Ontario. Everywhere you go, you're hearing analysts say that this province is in trouble. And what does Dalton McGuinty do? He puts blinders on and says: "You know what? I've got some important stuff for you, ladies and gentlemen. I've got some real important stuff." Now that the smoking bill is winding down, "Hey, let's go with cellphones." What's next? What is he going to bring up next?

Our party put forth a very good idea with regard to economic stimulus in the province of Ontario: helping our tourism industry that is suffering under Dalton McGuinty. What do they do? They pooh-pooh the whole thing. They're not interested. They would rather put their heads in the sand like a group of ostriches and not face the real challenge here in Ontario, which is the economy. Get on with it.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: Listening to the member from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke is better than coffee in the morning.

It's a pleasure to speak to this bill. As I said in my two-minute hit, it's a lot of sound and fury, signifying not much. Certainly, we support it. How could one not support it? We're talking about the health of children and we're talking about something that's incredibly dangerous for children. In fact, one of the interesting facts that came through our research is that second-hand smoke is absorbed into car furnishings and later off-gassed, and that the stale smoke is more toxic than fresh cigarette smoke. I didn't know that, and I'm sure a lot of those watching from home didn't know that, but that's in fact the case, that second-hand smoke is extremely deadly and toxic. The smaller the lungs—in this case, of children—the more deadly and toxic it is. There's no contention there and there's no contention that someone who is addicted to the point that they can't stop smoking with their own or someone else's children in the car is an addict indeed. That's where I'd like to start.

0930

Certainly, we could start by looking at the overall health of children in the province of Ontario in 2008. I'm unhappy to say that that overall health is in a sorry state, mainly because of the poverty levels of children. We have one in six children in the province living in poverty, and 41% of those children who are living in poverty come from families who are working full-time. We know what poverty means. Poverty means you don't get fresh fruits; you don't get vegetables. Poverty means a host of risk factors to one's health. If this government were really serious about protecting the health of children, they would make some pretty simple but substantive moves: raising the minimum wage above the poverty line, building some housing, which hasn't been done in this province in at least a decade, and a host of other manoeuvres that are fairly cost-effective because they're saving money from future health costs and putting it into the present, which is truly health promotion. This is a health promotion bill. If you were serious about promoting the health of our children, we would be looking at poverty rates among children first and foremost.

Another very simple act that this government could do is to keep our pools open. That's about $12 million a year in the GTA. We're closing pools. This is a valuable community resource. It keeps children healthy because it keeps them from getting obese. Again, it keeps them fitter so that we save health costs down the road. But we know that where there's a budget for $40 billion for health care and a budget of some few hundred million for health promotion, clearly the priority of this government is not health promotion, despite what this bill pretends; it's patching people up at the other end.

To get back to this bill and the fact that somebody who would light up in a car with their child is an addict indeed, and despite the fact that tobacco is a legal drug, it is still a drug. I remember when I was in ministry, dealing with a number of people who had crack and heroin addictions, many of whom said that it was as difficult to give up smoking as it was to give up crack or heroin. That's how addictive this substance is.

I want to draw an analogy here, and that is to a woman who's pregnant and smoking. Surely a pregnant woman smoking is a danger to her child—there's no question. I don't think anybody in this House would question that fact. The question is, how do you protect the child? Is the best way of protecting the child of that mother to fine the mother $250? That's essentially what this bill is doing. It's saying that if the police—and "if" is a big "if" here. If the police, who are overworked, who are still waiting for that promised 1,000 police officers of Dalton McGuinty to trickle down to their force in their precinct and in their riding, for some reason have nothing better to do with their time than to pull somebody over because they see them smoking in a car, pull them over and know that there's a child in the backseat, do we really think a $250 fine is going to deter an addict, an addict to the level that they'd endanger their own child? Do we really think that a pregnant mother smoking would be deterred by a $250 fine?

I think we would all agree this is absurd. This is not the way you deal with addiction. In fact, in other jurisdictions where they have brought in legislation ahead of this—for example, in Nova Scotia—the focus has been way more on public awareness and education, and only with tickets and fines as a very last resort. It's a very last resort.

Here you have a government that's not interested in what the Toronto drug strategy has outlined as a drug strategy. It's four-fold; there are four legs to it: (1) prevention, (2) harm reduction, (3) treatment, and (4) enforcement. Only one quarter of that strategy is law enforcement. Three quarters of it are prevention, harm reduction and treatment.

It's the same with smoking. I don't know of a smoker who has ever quit smoking because they've been fined, but I know of a number of smokers who've quit smoking because they have been educated, because they have read an article or they've seen the effects of smoking on their own health or on others' health. They know, because they've been informed, that one out of two smokers will probably die from their addiction. One out of two: That's a pretty high death rate. Smokers stop smoking not because they're fined, not because they're arrested, but because they're educated, because, in the best of all possible circumstances, they're prevented from smoking in the very first place.

A particular aspect of anti-smoking measures that bothers me is that one of the most potent inducements for our youth to start smoking is that it's still seen as a kind of rebellion against authority. This is how the large tobacco manufacturers marketed nicotine in the first place—you know, James Dean. It was the cool thing to do. It was the thing you did when you wanted to flout authority. It made you a rebel in some way, shape or form. In fact, in their wicked ingeniousness, the large tobacco manufacturers marketed to women using feminism. You remember the Virginia Slims campaign: You can be independent, you can be just like a man, you can be liberated if you only light up.

Those same inducements are at work. They're just a little bit more subtle now—not much, just a little. Now the inducements are through major media. I watch movies, as we all do, and I see people smoking in movies, coming out of both Hollywood and Canada, more often than I do in public now. We know that the hand of the large tobacco manufacturing agents is behind those movies. They're supporting them, they're sponsoring them. That's why, when you see a movie star light up on the screen, it undoes hundreds of millions of dollars worth of campaigning by governments, because our children see that. They see it looks cool, and they see that, hey, it's still a way of rebelling against authority. Of course, kids are immortal; we've all been through that period of our lives when we don't think about death or health effects very much. So they see this as a cool thing to do because the media tells them it is a cool thing to do.

If this government was serious about actually affecting smoking rates in this province, instead of this bill, or along with this bill, what they'd be doing is something like affecting the film tax credit for films made in the province. We give a lot of money out to films. We should demand in return for that money that these films do not promote smoking. They promote smoking if there are people smoking in the film, because, quite frankly, why does one need to smoke in the movies? Is it inherent in the plot? Is it inherent in the character of the person being played? I don't think so. I think this is the tobacco giants behind the film industry. So there's something you can do, just a suggestion. That would be substantive. That would be gutsy. That would be courageous.

We don't have a courageous, gutsy government here in the government of Dalton McGuinty. We have a government that's treading water, that's making small, incremental steps—steps that can't be opposed by anybody—instead of doing the courageous gutsy work that really is needed to both keep our children healthy and to keep our province healthy.

When you talk about the environment, we're talking about a toxic environment. Our children are growing up in this city in a toxic environment. Every day that they walk to school and then come home, they're breathing in toxins. We know, by bio-mentoring studies, that most of us have breathed in toxic amounts of chemicals. They're in our bloodstreams. They're in our systems. They cause cancer. We know this. Why don't we do anything about it?

0940

Here's something we could do about it. We know, for example, that coal-fired plants are bad for the environment. This is a government that promised to close coal-fired plants in 2007—now we hear it will be 2011, perhaps. That's one thing they could do. As I said at the outset, they could affect child poverty rates, because that would give children more nutrition. In a much ballyhooed move, this government added some money to the nutrition programs in schools. Guess what that amounts to? That's $1 a week. Now, $1 a week is not going to make much difference to a poor child in terms of nutrition. That's that incremental, treading-water kind of Dalton McGuinty move. That's not courageous and that's not gutsy; that's sound and fury signifying not very much indeed, which is what this entire legislative year has been full of.

The only substantive legislation that has really come through this year is Bill 35, the slush fund bill, which was an excuse to give money to their friends. It was again ballyhooed as something that was going to be good for municipalities and infrastructure. Neither of those words existed in that bill—no. In fact, what was in that bill was a way to do an end run around the Auditor General and give money—over $600 million in surplus in the course of the fiscal year—to anybody whom this government deems worthy, as long as they're non-profit. We know, because we remember the slush fund episode of last year, that that meant $1 million to cricket clubs that asked for $150,000. Who knows what it will mean this year? That was substantive legislation. It passed with nary a comment from many, and that actually changed the way business is done in this province.

Another substantive piece of legislation this government passed that changed the way legislative business is done in this province is the standing order changes. That's why we have such an overwhelming attendance this morning. Now that we have question period at 10:45 instead of 1 o'clock, we have basically diminished the importance of question period. That was substantive.

Here we have a government that's willing to take courageous and gutsy action if it helps them—and by "them" I mean the Liberal Party of Ontario or Dalton McGuinty and his cabinet—but they're not willing to make courageous and gutsy moves if they're going to help children's health, if they're going to help the environment, if they're going to help affect the poverty rates in this province or, as my colleague from Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke said, if they're going to help the economy in this province or those 200,000 workers who have been laid off in this province in the last five years alone—no. For substantive problems that affect somebody other than Dalton McGuinty and his cabinet, we get tiny, minuscule little bills—and right here, we have a little bill.

It is a little bill that nobody could object to. I would love to meet the person who would say, "Yes, we think it's a good thing that people smoke in cars with their children"; I'd love to meet that person. Would that person please stand up? It would be fun to meet them, because there's an iconoclast. If the vast majority of people who have a brain in their heads think at all, this is a no-brainer.

This is a tiny little bill and it's going to have tiny little ramifications, really, and tiny little repercussions on the health of children in this province. If they wanted to be courageous, if they wanted to be gutsy, if they actually wanted to affect the health of children and the health of Ontarians, there's so much more they could do.

I appeal to the backbenchers now at the Liberal desks, because I know that you get your marching orders from party central, Dalton McGuinty, and I know that you all read bills, that you all have passion, that you all came here out of a desire to help your constituents and to help the people of Ontario. You have a majority government; you have an overwhelming majority government. You have the mandate from the people of Ontario to do what you want, when you want to. Why don't you take that mandate and do something courageous and gutsy with it? Why don't you do something while you have the opportunity to actually affect this province?

We're going into hard times. We're going into a potential recession. We're going into a time when the environment is going to get worse quickly. We're going into a time where we could seriously begin to fear for our grandchildren because of greenhouse gas emissions, because of some intractable problems. Poverty is getting worse; it's not getting better. The wait lists for housing are going up; they're not going down. We have 170,000 households waiting for affordable housing now. We have some big problems and they're getting worse.

But instead of dealing with the big problems we have, the little tiny bills that have little tiny ramifications and repercussions are what we're given to deal with. And it's not cheap to deal with them. We know that it costs money for this Legislature to sit. We know that millions of taxpayers' dollars, not to mention the hopes and dreams of all of those people who elected a majority government, who hoped, for once, it would do something that would change the way politics were done that would actually make a difference in the health and the lives of our children—that's what the voters hoped for, that's what they voted for, that's what they believed in.

Instead, what do they get? They get a bill like Bill 69 that says it's bad to smoke in cars with your children. Wow. That's revolutionary. That's going to change 200,000 manufacturing jobs lost, that's going to change one in six children living in poverty, that's going to change the steady erosion of the medicare system in this province. That's going to change all of that. Oh yeah, telling people that it's bad to smoke in cars with their children, that is really going to help our environment, which day by day is being degraded. That's going to help all of that.

I doubt it. I doubt that Bill 69 will make much of a difference, even to the lives of children of smokers, because we know that fines don't work against addiction. I doubt that it's going to make any difference in the lives of many people.

Is it a good thing? Of course it is. Motherhood is a good thing. Apple pie, if you're not wrestling with obesity, is a good thing too.

Mr. Paul Miller: I like cherry myself.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: My colleague here says he prefers cherry pie. So there you go.

Cherry pie, apple pie, motherhood—these are all good things. Not smoking in a car, that's a good thing too. It's all very, very good. But it's also very, very cowardly. It's also very, very small. It's also not why a majority government was elected. It's also not why people put their faith in Dalton McGuinty and his cabinet. It's also why those backbenchers—who are busy looking at their tables and won't look up because they know what I'm saying has some validity to it—were elected: to represent their constituents. They were elected to do something, to make some strong moves in an economy that demands it, in a reality that is steadily growing scarier in Ontario and more and more unhealthy. By any marker of public health you can use, this province is getting more unhealthy.

Instead of doing something about it, something substantive, something courageous, something that they were elected to do—remember all the promises of the 2003 election, not to mention the last one?—instead of doing that, we have this: A scant little bill, a tiny little bill, and as I said when I opened, a lot of sound and fury signifying extremely, very, muchly little.

It's an embarrassment to have to waste taxpayers time and money on dealing with something like this. Will we support it? Of course we will. Do we wish for more? Absolutely.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

Mr. Robert Bailey: I'd like to comment on the remarks of the member for Parkdale–High Park, on her eloquent criticism of Bill 69. We too find it lacking in a lot of issues that should be dealt with, like the economy, which at this time is at the forefront in the news and in our thoughts every day in this House. We too, on this side of the House, at the end of the day will support the bill, because it's only the right thing to do. I am—I hate to say it today—a reformed smoker myself. I used to smoke in the car, and I regret every day that I did so. I'll say, too, there were children in the car at the time, and I regret that every day. I think it is a good thing to do.

0950

Whether we'll be able to enforce those—as the member from Parkdale–High Park said, it's going to be difficult to enforce it. Are we going to have the police, who are already overworked and understaffed, policing these types of issues? I don't think that's what we should be doing. At the end of the day, I think we need to move forward. I'd like to have us, when we deal with this, then look at the economy and work at trying to turn that around and deal with those issues that affect every man and woman, every taxpayer in this province. As the member for Parkdale–High Park said, this is a little bill. We should be dealing with more substantial efforts. I look forward to continued debate.

Mr. Paul Miller: I'd like to congratulate my colleague on a fine presentation. As a parent, I support this bill. I can't imagine what it would be like to sit in a car with other passengers when they're smoking and there are children in the car. I know that many of our peers suffered this when we were young and smoking was seen as glamorous, cool and socially acceptable. Well, we're not alone in our support of this bill, as many health organizations like the Canadian Lung Association and the Canadian Cancer Society also want to see this bill passed into law.

My party, the NDP, has historically supported health promotion and the well-being and health of our children, and this legislation fits well with that position. I also know that the majority of my constituents support this legislation.

However, I'd like to reiterate my colleague's comments about the fluff bills that this government has brought forward. We have so many things wrong in this province that we're not dealing with, from job losses to pollution. I touch on pollution because here we are regulating smoking in cars, and our stacks are pouring out tonnes and tonnes of pollution every day, especially in my city, Hamilton. When I've asked for secondary pollution controls—shot down. All of our bills this session have been shot down by the Liberals. All good bills, dealing with people's severances, dealing with pollution, dealing with minimum wage—all the things that are important to the people of Ontario—have been shot down by this government.

It almost feels like a fruitless effort to be here and dealing with the small things when there are so many other things going wrong in our economy. It's frankly disheartening, and I don't know when this government is going to take a serious look at our province and do something constructive to help our province, other than dealing with the small things—trans fats and things like this. Sure, it's good, but it means nothing to the people who are losing their jobs. I think it's time we moved in the right direction.

Mr. John O'Toole: The member from Parkdale–High Park always brings a fair amount of drama and insight into these debates. It's like trying to say a lot about something that, as she said in her remarks, is not a very large, encumbering bill. It is a bill that we've all said here, openly, we would support. In a very few minutes I'll be speaking on it, and I'll try to stick to the topic for the 20 minutes, because 20 minutes—this is a bill that's half a page long. It isn't too encumbering. There is a copy of the bill. One side of the page is English and one side is French. So really, you could count the words. In fact, in 20 minutes you could read the bill 10 or 15 times. So it's not huge and it's not complicated, and we all agree.

We could get on to some more substantive issues. I see the Minister of Transportation here. We could be talking about Bill 40, which is a bill that's on the order paper. It's a bill on regulating and restricting the use of cellphones in certain conditions. Then there's the discussion that the member mentioned about the economy, and those families that are affected and the children that could be affected. This bill we're talking about is banning smoking in a car, and the impact on children who may be in the car. We agree. But how about parents who lose their job, and the impact on children not having the proper nutrition, shelter and other protections and supports that they need for full development? There are some substantive things we could be talking about and should be talking about in the time that we were elected to serve here in this Legislature.

Respectfully, I'm looking forward to speaking for 20 minutes in the next few minutes. I am in hopes that a Liberal member will stand and speak.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments? I'll return to the member for Parkdale–High Park, who has two minutes to reply.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: I want to thank the members from Sarnia–Lambton, Hamilton East–Stoney Creek and Durham for their comments as well. I notice with very great interest that our Liberal colleagues in the House today are not speaking at all. Those who are listening and watching from home should note that the Liberals have basically given over the floor to the opposition today. It's an opposition day at Queen's Park. They've decided not to speak to this bill. I guess that's how much they value it—not much. I guess that's how much they agree with us—very much. There are very few of them in the House, I must say too. There are only 10 Liberals here.

Hon. James J. Bradley: Is this the United Church minister speaking?

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: I'm being heckled now by the Minister of Transportation—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Will the member please take her seat. It's not appropriate to refer to the absence of members in this House. I would caution you on that and return to you now.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: I'm sorry; I wasn't referring to somebody who is absent but somebody who is here. But it would be nice, rather than just hearing heckles from the Liberal side, to hear some substantive debate.

Having said that, for those at home, we're speaking about the Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act, banning smoking in cars—sort of, because you have to get caught first and you have to be fined first. Then of course that doesn't really do it because if you're an addict, you're going to do it again unless you have some real health care and prevention and education that goes into the mix.

It's a very little bill. It doesn't accomplish very much. What it does is an inch where we need a mile, as usual with McGuinty Liberal bills. But will we support it? Yes, we will. We've already said we would. As I said, I can't imagine anybody in Ontario who would not support this bill. It's that contentious, that courageous, that gutsy, that challenging that really everybody supports it, and we shouldn't be wasting time on it. That's my final word.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Further debate?

Mr. John O'Toole: I appreciate the opportunity to address this issue this morning. I will not make light of the importance of the initiative. It is a health issue that affects the health of children and in that respect it's a good thing. We could probably call the vote right now—there are a couple of ministers in the House—and get this over with. Then we could get into more substantial discussions on issues that affect the day-to-day lives of people.

What is my input on this that will change the outcome? I say right from the beginning, not very much actually. I would say this, though: Everyone here has a story they could tell that relates to how this could have affected their life. I'm a parent. My wife, Peggy, and I have five children. I speak of them often in this Legislature. They're all, I would say, around 30 or older and I'm very happy that they're healthy. And that's good.

1000

I would say I did smoke. This is a self-confession here this morning, a sort of revelation. To put some truth to the story, very early on, a very close person to me—let's put it that way—was diagnosed with cancer. This was before I had children, and I quit smoking right then and there, on the spot, cold turkey. I did not smoke for over 10 years. I'm saying this on the public record. I'm almost 65, so, to be honest, it's good to put these things in context. I would have had the odd cigar maybe at the appropriate occasion of celebration of some sort, but even there, when you're addicted to a substance, it's a problem because you're only one cigarette or one drink away from returning to bad habits. You have to regulate your own behaviour. We each should take responsibility for our own behaviour; we shouldn't have to legislate it. The most important thing here is that an event that affected someone close to me affected my behaviour. That's education. If you're watching and listening—we, the people serving the public, should be educated by these events, both at a personal level and at a legislative level, if you will.

None of my children ever smoked in my view.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I don't believe we have a quorum in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): I would ask the table to ascertain if indeed there is a quorum in the House.

There is not a quorum in the House.

The Acting Speaker ordered the bells rung.

The Clerk-at-the-Table (Ms. Lisa Freedman): A quorum is present, Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): I will turn to the member for Durham, who has the floor.

Mr. John O'Toole: I'm a little bit disappointed that a quorum call was made during my remarks, because it seems that perhaps that's why people left.

I was in the midst of telling a personal story, and that story would count that, of my five children, none have ever smoked that I'm aware of, and they're all, as they say, 30 or over. We now have four grandchildren, and only by luck or by good fortune have my circumstances turned out the way they have. But there was that one event where a significant person in my life did eventually succumb and die of cancer. This was a tragedy in my life that affected my life traumatically. The bad part of this is that despite all those adverse setbacks, this discussion is about educating not just the legislative pages that are here, but each of us and the scope of people that we have contact with.

We all act as models for children, and that's not even in this bill, nor does it need to be, but children often model behaviour, whether of their parents or peers, television personalities or cartoons, or whatever. Whether it's smoking or other bad habits that we might have, we should always be aware of the behaviour. If it comes right down to it, government, when it is proven clinically and scientifically, is really required, I think, to take action.

I just happen to have in my desk here an article, "Winning the War on Cancer." It's a current issue, the May issue, I believe, of Reader's Digest, which happened to be in my desk. I don't subscribe to it. It's a very good article. It's the tragic story of Prue Boyd of Nanaimo, BC, and it talks about having this diagnosis of GIST, which is a form of cancer and it's a cancer of the stomach. It ultimately talked about a life-saving procedure, but the fact is what this individual went through in this story, and the impact on their lives and their family—the health care system generally—for something that may have been preventable. That's the second lesson we learn. If we think that cancer—we now know, according to what is being published and precipitated in this bill, that it can cause a risk to yourself and others, which could be interpreted, I suppose, in a court of law; if you knowingly expose others to a risk, you could be guilty of a crime, I suppose.

This issue is not without its people on the other side of the debate: free will; it's a legal product. It's a federal issue, to the extent that it's federally regulated by the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and other agencies that would look at it.

Is it unique to Minister Best, who brought this in? This bill was introduced on April 30, 2008, by Minister Best, the Minister of Health Promotion. Her predecessor, Minister Watson, now the Minister of Municipal Affairs, may have talked about this as well. Smoking cessation wasn't part of the plan. As I said before, it's not unique. Mr. Oraziotti, the member for Sault Ste. Marie, had introduced the bill—and I just don't have details offhand—as a private member's bill, and I think the minister did give him credit. But in fact, more importantly, former Minister of Health Elizabeth Witmer, from Kitchener-Waterloo, actually took great action and was very vocal, as were others. The member for Nepean-Mississippi Mills, Mr. Sterling, has often spoken strongly against smoking. In their role as legislators as well as individuals, this is not unique to this government. I think what is really unique here is we're piecemealing. We're nibbling off the corners here. If this is that bad in confined spaces, and there's evidence that says that, and it is injurious to the health of ourselves and others, God—pardon my language—you'd wonder why they wouldn't ban it completely or make it an illegal substance.

What's the strategy for helping people get off? I'm a reformed smoker. As I said, I don't smoke, haven't for six or seven months now, but I was off for almost 11 years, and I wasn't particularly a heavy smoker. It was just that I was finding too many reasons to smoke a cigar, and so I decided that the best thing to do would be to celebrate with some other form of personal reward or relaxation. I haven't found one yet, actually, but I think just being healthy is the reward, I suspect, that I feel satisfied by.

I'm going to say our own members, legislatively, and these things come out—I'll just go through some here. I have a February 2008 memo here from Dr. Robert Kyle, who is the medical officer of health for the region of Durham. I served on that health and social services committee for Durham region when I was a regional councillor, and I still get copies of their minutes, along with lots of other paper that I get. Dr. Kyle's always been a strong advocate for smoking cessation or against smoking, and this was his report in February. This is even before the legislation, so there were pressures from all segments of society. It says, "In October 2007, the health and social services committee requested information on smoking in vehicles where children are present. The following is a summary of current evidence regarding the health implications of exposure to second-hand smoke (SHS) in vehicles, legislation in other jurisdictions pertaining to this issue, legislative options for Durham region and areas for further exploration." So this is not unique to Ms. Best, to Minister Smitherman, to this Legislature, indeed this province, this city, Durham region or whatever.

There's the whole issue that I've just described. Other areas have done it. "Context for legislative action"; this is quite a good report on Canada and jurisdictions outside Canada. We often criticize the Americans for being backward. We're actually copying them. We're way behind on a lot of stuff here. "There are laws banning smoking in cars with children in many American states and cities, including California, Arkansas, Louisiana, Bangor (Maine), Key Port (New Jersey) and Rockland County (New York). States with legislation in progress include Georgia, Michigan, New Jersey...." This is not some profound, untested attempt to change the world. It isn't; it's done.

We could vote on it now, and it would be over with. That was the way it should be, but I'm a bit surprised that that isn't what is happening here today. I think all members, probably I can say—I am looking at it. I wrote to the Minister of Health Promotion myself some time ago. I have a copy of a letter to a constituent in May this year. Cathie Snider had written to me, and she said it's okay for me to use her name. My letter says, "Many thanks for your email in support of smoke-free cars for kids. In my view, the Bill 11 legislation introduced by MPP David Orazietti and the Bill 69, Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act from the Minister of Health Promotion enjoy strong support among all parties at Queen's Park. Now that the provincial government has introduced Bill 69, through the minister responsible for health promotion, I am confident the legislation will proceed to third and final reading."

We're saying that in writing, and we're saying that here in public, so there isn't a lot more that can be said.

1010

There is, as we've all discussed here, a lot of background.

I thank all the stakeholders—many of them were here when this bill was introduced—and certainly the Ontario Medical Association and the Heart and Stroke Foundation as well as others who have encouraged, if not forced, the minister to act.

But it could have been done—and it could be done this morning. If we were really proactive legislators, we would get on with it and get the job done and move on to—what would we move on to becomes the question. I think we'd move on to things that are more relevant.

If we just take a look, for instance, let's just casually—this is completely unrehearsed now. With your indulgence, I'm trying to say this is something we could talk about. I have a couple of bills that I personally would like to talk about which I think would have the potential, the same as this Bill 69, of saving lives. We'd all like to make that kind of contribution. I know the Minister of Transportation is always wanting to have the safest roads in the world. His leadership would be important on this issue, that's for sure, and I'd be there right beside him.

Bill 40 is a bill that I've introduced several times, and each time I get a lot of feedback from different jurisdictions. In fact, I've had the privilege of speaking to other jurisdictions. It's a good example of what this Legislature can and should do. I am in favour of supporting Bill 69. I'd ask for a reciprocal occasion here to talk about Bill 40 or Bill 73.

Bill 73 is another bill. It completely prohibits the use of the cellphone in certain jurisdictions, like at an accident scene or in a school crossing zone or in specific locations, as outlined by the minister. They're absolutely banned—hands-free, everything. They're prohibited. These are community safety zones. We know there are hazardous areas that are identified by municipal police and others.

Bill 69—I'm trying to stay on topic here—is on the no-smoking thing, and there are five minutes to talk about it. As I said, the bill only has about 400 words in it, so it's not some profound piece of legislation. Would you like me to read part of it?

Here's the preamble of the bill. This is the broad definition of what it does: "The Smoke-Free Ontario Act is amended to prohibit smoking or having lighted tobacco in a motor vehicle while a person under 16 years old is present." That's the purpose in a nutshell.

Then it goes on and it refers to sections of acts. It says, "For the legislative history of the act, see the table of consolidated public statutes"—it gives you the reference there.

"Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the province of Ontario, enacts as follows:

"1. The Smoke-Free Ontario Act is amended by adding the following section"—it adds the 16-year-olds. Part of the amendment here is:

"9.2(1) No person shall smoke tobacco or have lighted tobacco in a motor vehicle while another person who is less than 16 years old is present in the vehicle.

"Proof of age

"(2) In a prosecution under this section, a court may find evidence that the person enforcing this section honestly and reasonably believed another person to be less than 16 years old to be sufficient proof of the other person's age.

"Enforcement

"(3) Despite section 14, this section shall be enforced by police officers."

It goes on in a very detailed administrative enforcement of this section.

When you look at this and you think of the practicality of it—and even if I read the bill myself—you'd say, "Well, now we've given the police this job. It says so in that section. At night, how are they going to enforce the bill? What are the practical implications of this? It's conceivably not enforceable. That's the problem.

It probably will get challenged. Someone will say, "No, I wasn't smoking" or "The person wasn't in the car when you saw me get out of the driveway," or maybe the neighbour is just angry with you and they see you get in the car and they think the children—or you have tinted windows. It's just a frigging administrative nightmare. We're going to be spending time in the courts when we could be solving other, much more invasive legislative issues.

So I think of the administrative implications for the police. Tinted windows at night: How the heck do they enforce it? They stop the car if they think there are kids in there? I don't know. Or if they see smoke coming out the window? It could have been something else that was causing that. So administratively, it's going to be difficult to enforce.

On the other hand, cellphones may have the same problem. If you have cellphones banned—a hand-held cellphone—what if it's at night? How do they enforce that? What if there are tinted windows? How do the police enforce it? I think you have to look at the careless driving provisions in the Highway Traffic Act and say that if the person is weaving in and out of traffic, they should be charged with careless driving. That's six points and probably about $1,000. They shouldn't be doing that. They're putting themselves or others at risk, as is the case with smoking.

So the government has a role, but it's having that heavy- or light-handed—how do we implement it? How do we administer the thing? Again, this is a very small bill, but it's going to cost money. It saves lives, and I guess you have to put some value on that, for sure.

As I said, I've written to Cathie Snider, who complimented the thing, and told her we'd do that. I have the Durham region medical officer of health's report. I have quite a few pieces here from the region, as well as the Minister of Health Promotion, who responded when we wrote to her. We have the Ontario Medical Association and the Heart and Stroke Foundation—Rocco Rossi, the CEO of the Heart and Stroke Foundation, and Janice Willett, MD, president of the Ontario Medical Association—jointly, and others, and lots of emails as well.

I'm going back to the same thing now. Are there other bills that could be brought forward here in the remaining minute or so? These bills are in my legislative binder. I'm just going to mention a few.

Bill 55, the French-language act: That could pass too. It's another one that we all agree on, really. It's already done. These are just administrative changes.

Bill 56, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act and the Civil Remedies Act, 2001 to promote public safety and suppress conditions leading to crime by prohibiting driving on the highway in a motor vehicle in which there is an unlawfully possessed firearm: Mr. Colle, who's here today, would be happy to see that bill go forward.

Bill 57, from Mr. Hillier, which is An Act to establish political oversight over legislation and regulations to reduce red tape and unjustified regulatory burdens: This is a very good one.

From Mr. Yakabuski: An Act to create the Ontario Medal for Civilian Bravery. That's a bill that's going to recognize, in many cases, volunteers who commit acts of bravery. It could save lives as well.

Bill 59, An Act respecting apologies: Another bill of Mr. Oraziotti's. He's very busy. In fact, he's a young fellow, a former high school teacher. He should, arguably, be a cabinet minister. He may not be there long enough to be in cabinet, because this will probably be his last term in government.

And Bill 60, An Act to amend the Day Nurseries Act to allow more children to be cared for in rural areas, from Mr. Lalonde.

So thank you very much. I hope this bill passes this morning.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments? The member from Parkdale–High Park.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: In the absence of a Liberal government response of any kind, I'm happy to take the time.

I listened with great interest to the member from Durham. Certainly, it's a bill that we all support in the opposition. I believe that we all support it, probably across the province of Ontario, so there's no problem there.

What you've heard from the opposition—and the opposition comments to a person—is the problem of having to take up legislative time, over and over again, with bills that really don't have a great deal of substance to them, when in fact we are presented with some incredibly pressing problems in this province. We've seen layoffs, about 200,000 manufacturing jobs lost. These represent real families with real issues. We've got an economy that's teetering on the verge of recession right now. We have one in six children living in poverty. We have increasing issues with our health delivery system—witness the problems that we highlighted yesterday around C. difficile reporting and others. We have a housing backlog: a list of 170,000 households now waiting for affordable housing in the province. I could go on.

1020

These are the real issues facing Ontarians, and I haven't even touched on the environmental ones: the fact that we haven't ratified Kyoto in Ontario, and we could; the fact that we're racing towards a nuclear answer to what should be an environmental question, to the tune of $40 billion to $50 billion of taxpayers' money. These are all huge issues that should be debated, that should be given time. Instead, we're debating issues for which there really is no debate. "Yes, good, let's get on with it; let's do this—let's do far more than this." That's really what you're hearing from the opposition desks.

For those listening and watching at home who are wondering where the Liberals are this morning, they are in fact in the House; they're just not speaking. They don't feel strongly enough about this bill to want to address it. We're doing our best in upholding parliamentary tradition in the opposition benches.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

I'll return to the member from Durham.

Mr. John O'Toole: It's a very, very distressing fact that the government members won't stand in their place and declare openly—as they're paid to do, I might add.

There's one more paid political advertisement—actually, it's not political. This Saturday, May 31, in my riding, there's a celebration to support the troops. All the legions in the area will be there, as well as the Royal Ontario Regiment, the cadets and others. It starts at 10:30 in the morning. There is a series of entertainers, as well as speeches, and we are very fortunate to have a number of dignitaries and those who serve in our community. But they're all there for the same reason. They're there to make our communities stronger and our families stronger, and that's how it relates to Bill 69.

Bill 69 is a bill that—we could actually have done something about the economy and the job losses in the riding of Durham. There are five schools that could be closed in Durham; we should be talking about that—Ms. Wynne, the Minister of Education, should bring some kind of—rural school closings. These are tragedies for young children. So why are we talking incessantly? In fact, the Liberals—it's just an observation—haven't said a single word this morning on this issue. I'm disappointed, and I'm concerned that they're failing their full duty of participating in a democracy.

We're willing to do the right thing now so that we can go on to talk about the economy, go on to talk about cellphones and other public issues, but they're not saying a word. They've been silenced. I'm almost speechless. Now, that's going a bit too far, I understand that, but—

Interjection.

Mr. John O'Toole: You would like to acknowledge that my time has run out.

I'm waiting anxiously to see if one of the Liberal members stands at least to acknowledge the sincerity that I've put into my remarks this morning.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Further debate?

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I rise today in support of the comments made by my colleagues from Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke and the great riding of Durham, and also to support the comments made by the member from Parkdale–High Park.

This is a no-brainer, and we're spending hours and hours on it. The Liberals are sitting back, just listening, making no comments whatsoever, yet we're spending hours debating something that should have been included in a bill long ago.

The no-smoking act has passed. It was passed so quickly that it was not thorough, it was not complete, and it was not well thought out, or this would have been part of it. So we're here, and I'm pleased to debate this morning on behalf of the official opposition with respect to Bill 69, which is An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

I am pleased to tell you that Halton region has passed a recommendation supporting this legislation, as well as other municipalities in Halton, to show support for what is right.

I find it somewhat amusing to be speaking in support of a bill introduced by the Minister of Health Promotion, on a subject that the Premier himself deemed to be a slippery slope. He was opposed to this legislation some few short weeks ago. What he said was that this was a slippery slope and he did not feel it should move forward. However, in what I believe is true Liberal fashion, someone read the newspapers and figured out that in fact the public was in support of this type of legislation, and there was a flip-flop, so now we are all in support of banning smoking in cars while children under the age of 16 are present.

You know, it's really sad that we have to legislate behaviour like this. As a mother and a grandmother, I cringe every time I pass a car that has the window open just a crack, and you see that there are children in the backseat and the driver has put the window down a little bit just to try to get rid of a little bit of the smoke that's accumulating in the car. The image, if you think about it, is haunting, especially given what we know about the dangers of second-hand smoke. I mean, you can't be alive and not be aware of the dangers of second-hand smoke: the increased risk of cancers, for one, lung diseases, and of course heart disease.

Most parents, I believe, are trying to do their best for their children. They protect their children; they keep them as safe and healthy as possible. I find it shocking, though, that in this day and age, we have to legislate parents and drivers from smoking in cars when children are present. If an adult is in a car with somebody smoking in it, my bet is that adult would ask that person to butt out, yet a child cannot do that. They may try, but I don't think they'd have the influence.

I wonder if drivers would be able to puff away on marijuana for medicinal purposes in a car full of children. While people are being protected from regular tobacco, no one is being protected from medicinal marijuana second-hand smoke. I'm asking this government to create consistency in their legislation and close the loopholes on medicinal marijuana smoking within their Smoke-Free Ontario Act. We should have one law for everybody, not one for tobacco and one for marijuana smokers. Truly, I'm surprised that I have to continue to point this out to the McGuinty government, but so far there's been no action on it. If the Minister of Health Promotion has data that indicates second-hand smoke from marijuana is safe for children, then produce it, or include it in this legislation. Otherwise, it's my feeling that banning smoking in cars with children should include all smoke products, all tobacco products.

We have all seen infants in car seats inhaling cigarette smoke that hung in the air like a cloud. My heart breaks, and I would venture to say that this behaviour borders on child abuse. It's very, very simple to me. By doing this, not only are you intentionally creating this toxic environment for young children, you're putting them in grave danger in later life. Tragedy can strike any family at any time; that's true. What I hope we can avoid here with Bill 69 is the tragedy in the making. We have the ability to do that and we should be responsible enough to do that. I do not want a child to be told that they have lung cancer and they will endure months of agonizing treatment because their parents or other adults could not exercise self-control—and that's what this is about: self control; not smoking in a car.

With all we know about the future health implications of smoking cigarettes, it really boggles my mind that people continue to put their own loved ones at risk. When you consider the following statistic—and the minister referenced this in her statement during the introduction of Bill 69—a 2005 Health Canada study estimated that in a one-month period, 144,000 children in this province are exposed to second-hand smoke in vehicles; 144,000 exposed to second-hand smoke each month in this province in vehicles. If the Liberals across the way had been responsible enough to act on that and put an education program in place, there could have been a better chance for those 144,000 kids who are affected each month. They could breathe more safely and they could breathe easier. But, as usual, they wait until the last possible moment to make a decision or move on an issue. They wait to see what the newspapers say.

1030

As education critic, I believe we have the tools at our disposal to teach children about the hazardous effects of second-hand smoke. When your child turns to a parent, a grandparent or any adult and says, "Why are you hurting me by smoking in the car?" I defy any adult to turn a blind eye to a plea for help like that. I have no intention of adding an additional layer of responsibility to our educators. However, the opportunity does exist in the context of health class to introduce this discussion.

The Ontario Medical Association has been very clear about the dangers of second-hand smoke for children and have been calling for this government to act for over four years. My colleagues and I hope that the minister and her cabinet friends are seriously considering the advice of our medical partners and stakeholders. We know that the lung association and the Canadian Cancer Society are very firmly in support of this bill, yet with all the stakeholder support, it took four long years to bring this to the Legislature.

My colleague Laurie Scott raised several good points in her previous statements on Bill 69. Why did the Minister of Health Promotion allow her Liberal colleagues to vote against the protection of children in Caledonia from smoking illegal, illicit cigarettes? This includes the parliamentary assistant, the member from Oak Ridges–Markham. As the critic for education, quite frankly I am disgusted that this government has refused to take action on illegal smoke shacks in Caledonia. Once again, hypocrisy reigns supreme in this legislation. Soon you will not be able to smoke in your car with children, but a child could purchase illegal cigarettes just metres away from an elementary school. Soon you will not be able to smoke cigarettes in a car with children, but a child could be in a public place in the company of someone smoking medicinal marijuana.

Government should be setting an example for our young people. How are we going to restore faith in our democratic system when the government acts in such a hypocritical manner? Are they scared to act, or is it possible—and sad—that they are afraid to confront the illegal smoke shacks because they don't know how? Or maybe they just don't care. But if they are going to take the moral high ground on smoking in cars with children and force convenience store owners to hide power walls, then they should definitely follow through with their anti-smoking message and shut down illegal smoke shacks, and shut them down for good.

Imagine the hypocrisy when a child with a carton of illegal cigarettes on his bicycle rides past a car that's been pulled over by a police officer for a smoking violation. You cannot tell me that these illegal smoke shacks are not 10 times more dangerous to our children than an open wall of cigarettes in a convenience store. The illegal cigarettes cost $1 a pack, and they don't require their patrons to show any ID. Clearly, children wishing to experiment are prime pickings. The frustrating part of this issue is that the smoke shacks are illegal themselves. All this government has to do is require that these smoke shacks be shut down. It's plain and simple to me and to others I speak with. What we are talking about is essentially a common sense principle.

Another concern about this legislation is the fact that it is an amendment to the existing Smoke-Free Ontario Act. The Smoke-Free Ontario Act is only specific to tobacco smoke. We missed the boat on this one. It does not include other legal, yet dangerous, materials such as medicinal marijuana.

In March, as you are very aware, I put forward a private member's bill with the intention of protecting people, including children, from the negative effects of second-hand smoke from materials beyond just cigarette tobacco. I presented Bill 42, designed to close a loophole in the McGuinty government's own anti-smoking legislation, which, I'm going to tell you, fails to include medicinal marijuana and other controlled substances in its definition. After receiving support during private members' business—from all parties, I might add—the Liberal members then used their majority in committee to kill this bill, even after it received support from all sides during second reading. Again, the minister was silent.

So I ask today, since there is a loophole in the anti-smoking legislation that allows children to be exposed to the hazards of second-hand smoke from medicinal marijuana in public places, will that loophole also be included, and be closed, in Bill 69? Or will it be ensured that children, upon whose behalf this government is supposed to be acting and this minister is supposed to be acting, are safe when travelling in a vehicle where a person is subjecting them to the toxins that come out of the end of medicinal marijuana? It's a fair question that deserves an answer from the minister and the government.

I stated on April 17 to this House that very scary precedents are being set by this administration. I would like to take this opportunity to reinforce some of the concerns made by my colleagues with regards to Bill 69.

First of all, there is a very heavy reliance on police to enforce this act. How will this piece of legislation be enforced when the province is already far short of having enough police officers to enforce the Highway Traffic Act? Will the officers actually be forced to let an individual go without citation if they are caught smoking medicinal marijuana in the car with their children present?

Then, I ask, how much is the Ministry of Health Promotion going to spend on the public health education and awareness campaign on the dangers of second-hand smoke to children in enclosed areas? Throwing up power walls is not going to keep children from smoking, especially when they become addicted to smoking in an illegal smoke shack at $1 a pack.

Not all young people and children carry identification with them. We all know that. If a police officer feels that a person is 16 or younger, a fine can be assessed to the person in the vehicle who is smoking. It is up to the accused, then, to prove that the person was in fact 16 years or over. This has the potential to further add to the already existing backlog in our courts.

Why can't this government create thoughtful, thorough legislation from the outset? Clarity and defensibility is important in the enforcement of this and any policy. The Smoke-Free Ontario Act is only specific to tobacco smoke. So it's acceptable to smoke other substances, such as medicinal marijuana, in a vehicle with a passenger under the age of 16 and expose these kids to second-hand smoke. Is there an added cost to municipalities to track these fines for those who have not paid them?

Actions: Well, I see more inaction in the case of the Minister of Health Promotion on a number of fronts. Inaction speaks much louder than words. So it is beyond rich to accept the minister and her Liberal colleagues' statements today that she is so concerned with doing what's right for children.

The indecisiveness of the McGuinty government has resulted in Ontario falling far behind other jurisdictions in this critical legislation. Nova Scotia, the Yukon and British Columbia have already enacted similar laws that protect children from second-hand smoke in cars. It is reprehensible when the Liberal government must play catch-up on protecting our children from these known hazards.

1040

When we're discussing the safety and health of our children, as I've said earlier, it is very, very difficult to find something that would trump that. In the legislation that we have before us today, this Bill 69, we've heard a lot of talk from the other side—not today, mind you; we've heard nothing from the other side today—on why this needs to be moved forward so quickly. Yet there was no explanation as to why they felt it had to be delayed from when it was first introduced by a backbencher in the Liberal government months and years ago, despite the fact that we heard from the Ontario Medical Association, and they said sooner is better for the health of the children who are involved. The Ontario Medical Association the Lung Association and various other groups have been calling for this type of concept for years and years and years, yet it has fallen on deaf ears of this government until they decided to produce it in fanfare. Provinces such as British Columbia and Nova Scotia have already taken action. Their kids are right now safer than our kids. Not the minister nor the minister's parliamentary assistant nor the Premier should be taking credit for this. They're leading from the back on this issue. They are truly leading from the back. They read the newspapers and they come forward with ideas.

I look forward to seeing this bill as it goes to committee. At committee, I hope that we are able to flesh out the details and the items that remain unclear to me and to clarify the things I have mentioned in my remarks, such as the enforcement of this act. What are the mechanisms going to be? What are the costs going to be as we move forward, and who is going to bear those costs? Are municipalities going to have added costs as a result of provincial legislation, and who will pay for those? Will the province then forward money to municipalities? And of course the educational components—because without that awareness and the educational component, people will not know about the strength of this bill and how it's going to move forward. What's so important is that we continue to impress on young people, on their parents, on adults, the statistics that prove that smoking, and especially second-hand smoke, is a danger to health, especially to children, who are vulnerable and for the most part cannot speak for themselves. They will not speak up, and if they do, who is to say that they will be listened to, that the influence coming from a child will be borne by an adult?

When you see the statistics that are related to the harmful effects of second-hand smoke on folks, whether they are adults or children, I think, as I said earlier, that it's a no-brainer to support this legislation. I've heard many comments from the other side that our caucus is not going to support this. That is an incorrect statement. I would hope that we don't continue to hear that refrain from the government side. We understand the dangers of this and we are incredulous that this bill didn't come forward four years ago and that there has been a delay in bringing this forward. I support the bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's a pleasure to have the last word on Bill 69, at least for this morning. I just want to bring to the attention of those listening and watching at home that we have been here since 9 o'clock this morning and not one Liberal member has spoken a word. One can only wonder what they've been doing at their desks. My suggestion is perhaps designing their patios for the summer, and maybe they're making lists of what they are going to have for dinner. But they certainly haven't been doing what they are paid for, which is to defend their own legislation. We are in fact debating their bill. It's a government bill and the government has not spoken on their own bill once since 9 o'clock this morning.

Interjection: That's because they know it's a for-sure thing.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's absolutely scandalous. If you're watching at home and you wonder what your member, and they happen to be a Liberal member, is doing on your behalf as a constituent, we can say that this morning they have done absolutely nothing. We in the opposition know that this is not a momentous bill; it's a little bill, a very, very little bill. It will do very little, even if enacted. But clearly, the Liberal majority government agrees with us in the opposition this morning. They have nothing to say about it. They recognize that it's such a little bill, of so little import, that they don't even have anything to say to their own legislation. Just for the record, I want to point out to all those watching at home that this government has done nothing this morning. They've been sitting here since 9 o'clock and they have not spoken once in defence or opposition to their own piece of legislation. Shame on them.

Mr. John O'Toole: I listened intently to the member from Burlington's remarks on Bill 69 prohibiting smoking in a vehicle when a child under 16 is present. We talked about the enforcement of issues, but really, more importantly, it's clear that we support the legislation. What isn't clear to us is why the Liberals haven't said one word this morning on this bill and why they haven't moved on with the difficulties in the economy or other legislative initiatives that could be discussed in the House. It was rather discouraging that when the member from Burlington was speaking, there was that one time when I think there were as few as six or seven members in the House. It was sad. Her input and standing up for the rights of children were virtually being ignored. I, for one, want to commend her for her remarks and for the preparation that she put into making those remarks, because Bill 69, as you know, has about 400 words in it. We agree with it. Let's get on with it. Let's talk about the economy. Let's talk about the use of cellphones in automobiles. Let's talk about some real content. But it's clear that the Liberals didn't come here to work today; there's no question about that. Let's see what question period, which starts in a couple of minutes, brings about and we'll see where the fire hits the pavement this morning.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further questions and comments? The member from Burlington has two minutes to respond.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I'm pleased to stand up and express my thanks to the member from Parkdale-High Park and the member from Durham. I, too, am very disappointed that there wasn't one word from the government today on this bill.

Interjection: Shameful.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: It is shameful. They proposed the bill, they brought the bill to us, we put our notes and our thoughts together to speak on this bill in a thoughtful way, yet not one member of the government uttered a word this morning, except to heckle. I heard heckling, but I did not hear any meaningful debate on this important and critical bill on how to protect children from second-hand smoke. I think this a no-brainer, and unfortunately we had to finally deal with it in our Legislature, after four years of promoting this from the stakeholders. We finally got it in the Legislature because somebody read about it in the newspapers and figured out that the public was on the side of no smoking in cars with children under the age of 16.

I think that is bad politics in the name of good government. Either the legislation is worthy of going forward or it isn't, and I think that when this bill was proposed some years ago, the idea should have been taken up and we could have continued to be a leader in our province. Instead, we're lagging behind. Ontario is last not only in the economy, but in bringing forward good legislation such as this.

I will be supporting this legislation as we move forward. I look forward to the committee. I look forward to debating this at committee and hopefully including some amendments that strengthen this bill.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. The time for debate has ended.

Second reading debate deemed adjourned.

1050

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to take this opportunity to introduce some guests today.

On behalf of the member from Welland, in the west members' gallery: Susan Berg and Mary Balenovich.

On behalf of the member for Kitchener-Waterloo, in the west members' gallery: Ms. Paula Perroni, president of the Ontario Catholic School Trustees' Association. Also in the chamber today is a delegation of trustees from across the province.

On behalf of the member from Lanark-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington are representatives from the business community in Smiths Falls and surrounding area.

On behalf of page Christopher Grouchy, in the public gallery: Debbie Grouchy, his mother.

On behalf of page Aaron DeGagné, in the Speaker's gallery: Renée DeGagné, his aunt; Denis DeGagné, his father; Nancy DeGagné, his stepmother; Kelsey DeGagné, his sister; Corinne DeGagné, his mother; and Troy Armstrong, a friend of his mother.

On behalf of page Murray Fallis, in the west members' gallery: Bill Fallis, his uncle.

On behalf of page Brianne Chan, in the public gallery: Kitty Mak, her mother.

On behalf of page Hisham Mohammad, in the public gallery: Fahmida Mohammad, his mother.

LEGISLATIVE PAGES

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I now seek the indulgence of the House to allow the pages an opportunity for introduction. Pages, please assemble.

I'd like to ask all members to join me in welcoming this group of legislative pages serving in the first session of the 39th Parliament: From the riding of Etobicoke North, Radhika Bhargava; from the riding of Pickering-Scarborough East, Brianne Chan; from the riding of Eglinton-Lawrence, Kelvin Chukwu; from the riding of Timmins-James Bay, Alie Crump; from the great riding of Elgin-Middlesex-London, Aaron DeGagné; from the riding of Halton, Damian Ewing; from the riding of Simcoe North, Murray Fallis; from the riding of Thornhill, Dina Gang; from the riding of Northumberland-Quinte West, Christopher Grouchy; from the riding of Newmarket-Aurora, Doaa Hussein; from the riding of Lambton-Kent-Middlesex, Christopher Jefferies; from the riding of Sarnia-Lambton, Rachelle Lassaline; from the riding of Oakville, Natalie LaMarche; from the riding of Kitchener-Waterloo, Charles Lin; from the riding of Cambridge, Taylor Martin; from the riding of Ancaster-Dundas-Flamborough-Westdale, Megan McCrory; from the riding of Don Valley East, Gregory Nettleton; from the riding of Etobicoke-Lakeshore, Chris Rayment; from the riding of Welland, Ellen Tomaino; from the riding of Haldimand-Norfolk, Jocelyn Topp; and from the riding of Whitby-Oshawa, Hisham Mohammad.

Welcome to all of our pages.

Mr. Randy Hillier: On a point of order, Mr Speaker: I seek unanimous consent today that members of the Smiths Falls and surrounding area business community, as well as members of this House, be allowed to wear buttons that signify the importance of their visit here today.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? I heard a no.

ORAL QUESTIONS

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question today is to the Premier. Premier, on two separate occasions, your health minister has refused to answer a very simple question:

How many people infected with C. difficile have died in Ontario hospitals since 2006, and how many hospitals are currently dealing with an outbreak of C. difficile?

We have learned in the Hamilton Spectator today that Dr. Gardam, a top infection control expert, has said that the hundreds of deaths reported are only the "tip of the iceberg." I ask you today, Premier, the person who is accountable to all Ontarians, Ontarians who deserve answers, how many people have died, and how many hospitals are dealing with an outbreak?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I'll take the first question and defer the subsequent ones to Minister Smitherman.

Let me just say that this is a real issue for us. We all understand that hospitals are places where we can find sickness and disease. It's very important that we ensure that there is no contagion flowing from one patient to another. C. difficile is a real issue. We are moving as quickly as we can to ensure that we make the kind of information that the member is seeking public. We want to do that in a thoughtful and responsible way.

In the meantime, Minister Smitherman has put in place a number of protocols to ensure that people who find themselves working in the hospitals are in fact washing their hands and taking the other precautions that are appropriate to limit the spread of illness and disease such as C. difficile.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Well, Premier, you now have also refused to publicly disclose information, and certainly your lack of willingness to speak the truth leads to—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I ask the member to withdraw that comment, please.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I'll withdraw.

This leads to one of two conclusions: Either your government doesn't know the answer, which certainly speaks to incompetence and a total disregard for patient safety, or this is a cover-up by the government, that they don't want the public to know—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would ask the member to withdraw that comment as well, please.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I'll withdraw that comment.

Either way, what is needed today to give the public some assurance that everything is being done that needs to be done is a thorough independent investigation. Premier, I ask you today, will you commit to an independent, immediate investigation of this issue?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Health.

Hon. George Smitherman: I don't accept the premise of the honourable member's question, but the matter at hand is obviously a very, very crucial one. It really does speak to all capacities in the health care system aligning themselves appropriately to address the challenges of this serious nature. We depend primarily upon our hospitals, which have that primary obligation on the front line and are equipped to address these circumstances. I have had a chance to say in this House—and we'll be filling in more information very shortly—that we are moving towards a public reporting regime that would provide much of the information that the honourable member is asking for in her questions.

On the matter of an inquiry, because of the work of Dr. Gardam and the work of the coroner's inquest, we feel that it's much more appropriate that we use all the energy we have to work on relentless implementation of those recommendations which have already been offered to our government and to the entire health care system in Ontario.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Back to the Premier: The reality is that that inquest and the recommendations from your expert adviser occurred in 2007, and since then we've seen absolutely no changes. It was interesting, when we had SARS and the death toll reached 44, that you said, "It's critically important that at a time and age where we know that there will be more complex situations like this that confront us, we take every advantage that we can, that we reach out to all of those who have a voice and we hear of their problems and we take them seriously and we act to address those concerns." You yourself then said we need to do so "under a commission of inquiry that is independent, thorough and transparent."

I ask you today, Premier. You and your minister felt that an inquiry was important after SARS, which claimed 44 deaths. We now know that there are about 260 at least reported, we still have 130 hospitals to—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

1100

Hon. George Smitherman: I want to confirm to the honourable member, on the latter part of her question, about the necessity of public reporting. It is our intention to move forward with a regime which would very soon see all hospitals in Ontario, on the same date, consistently reporting rates of C. difficile that they may be experiencing.

But it is on the matter of an inquiry that I wish to focus. Both the chief medical officer of health and the coroner's office have suggested that an inquiry would not be necessary, would not move to protect the public in any way. The evidence of what is necessary has been informed by the work of Dr. Gardam, the work of coroner's inquests and others. Our focus will be on relentless implementation of that advice, which has already been on offer.

This is the best use of the resources at hand: a quick response in support of the people of Ontario, working in partnership with our hospitals, the Ontario Hospital Association and noted experts like Dr. Michael Baker.

SCHOOL CLOSURES

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: My question is for the Premier. It deals with rhetoric versus reality, and that's frequently a challenge for this Premier. In this case, it's his election campaign rhetoric and his commitment to keep rural schools open.

In fact, on September 18 of last year, two weeks into the campaign, the Premier said, referring to rural schools,

"We're not only committed to keeping them open—but strengthening them." We now know, only eight months after the Premier's solemn vow, that at least 50 rural schools are slated for closure.

Premier, if your election campaign promise was sincere and not just empty and cynical rhetoric, why are these rural schools closing?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Education.

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I know the member opposite is genuinely concerned about education in Ontario, although the record of that party wouldn't demonstrate that. Since we've been in office, we have put more than $465 million into funding to allow boards, particularly in rural areas, to keep those schools open.

The fact is that next year there will be 90,000 fewer students in our schools than there were in 2003. The reality is that boards need to plan their schools and make decisions about the distribution of students and the distribution of schools based on program delivery to their students. That's what the boards around the province are doing.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: The Premier's avoidance of responding to that question I think confirms that rhetoric during the election was empty and not a sincere commitment to the people of Ontario. He likes to be described as the education Premier but then won't even get up and respond to his own commitments made just eight months ago.

In the year 2000, the Premier, who was then the Leader of the Opposition, at a Liberal fundraiser described rural schools as, "the heart and soul of a community." He also called on then Premier Harris to protect rural schools, saying, "He's the guy who has virtually complete control over the education system."

Now you're the guy. You're the guy with control, Premier. You're in that chair. You can't blame anyone else. At least 50 rural schools are on the chopping block eight months after you promised to protect them. What does that say about your credibility, Premier, and the sincerity of your promise?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: Our credibility is based on the fact that we have put over $465 million into the education system to keep schools open in this province. The reality is that in a period of increasing enrolment—100,000 students—that government closed 503 schools.

We're dealing with a situation in Ontario where there are 90,000 fewer students in our schools than there were in 2003. In the face of that, we have increased funding to rural communities, we have put a supportive schools grant in place and we have increased programming to rural schools. That is our record and that is the credibility on which our record rests.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: The people in the rural communities being affected by these decisions are sick and tired of your lame excuses and blaming others—sick and tired.

I want to put another quote from the Premier on the record, again from his opposition days, which apparently makes a difference in how he views his responsibilities: "If a rural community loses a school, you're robbing the community of an important component; it's really tough to attract and hold on to young families."

The village of Delta in my riding is a prime example of the collateral damage of these school closures. Property values plummeted, the bank and the gas station closed, then restaurants. Premier, will you use the control you've admitted your office holds and impose a moratorium on rural school closures until you complete a review of the funding formula and an alternative use strategy? Will you do that, Premier?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I want to move away from the political rhetoric on this issue just for a moment that that party wants to keep us on.

The reality is, we are dealing in this province with a demographic shift. If the party opposite did its research, it would know that there are fewer children going into our schools. I go into rural schools and urban schools and there are half as many kids in kindergarten as there are in grade 8. That is the reality that we have to deal with. If we irresponsibly tied the hands of our school boards by putting a moratorium on any school closures, we would be dealing with a situation where it would be impossible for school boards to provide programming to their students.

The fact is, we have to work together with ministries across the government and municipalities to make sure that we have a sound economic unit that will support schools in all of our communities. That's what our declining enrolment work group—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Howard Hampton: A question to the Premier: Tomorrow, Chief Donny Morris and five other members of the Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug First Nation are at the Ontario Court of Appeal appealing a six-month jail sentence. Why? Because the McGuinty government failed to properly consult and accommodate them before mining exploration rights were permitted on their traditional territory.

Instead of sending the Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug First Nation members back to jail for protecting their traditional lands, will the Premier announce today that the mining rights are being withdrawn from the disputed KI traditional lands until a resolution of the issue is reached?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: Let me say at the outset that I strongly take issue with the interpretation of the facts provided by my colleague opposite. This is a matter that was before the courts. My colleague knows we opposed jail time. We moved as quickly as we could to accelerate the release of these individuals, pending the outcome of the appeal. We've also indicated that we are certainly strongly encouraging the private sector to consult with our First Nations, our aboriginal communities, before they move ahead with a claim. At the same time, we are conducting a pretty comprehensive review of the Mining Act and the claim-staking process which we've inherited. My friend knows that. I just wish that from time to time he would admit that.

Mr. Howard Hampton: Premier, I spoke this morning with the lawyer for Chief Donny Morris, who says that your government has done nothing to facilitate the release of Donny Morris and the Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug leadership. Further, Premier, you've been promising a review of the Mining Act for five years and nothing has happened.

The reality is, your Minister of Mines can temporarily withdraw the mining rights on the disputed Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug lands immediately, under section 35 of the Mining Act. No order in council is required, no review of the Mining Act is required, just a letter written by the Minister of Mines to the mining recorder. That's it. That's all it takes.

My question: Will the Premier instruct his Minister of Mines to write that letter to the mining recorder today, or does the McGuinty government want to see the KI leadership sent back to jail?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I can't let that stand. The leader of the NDP understands that this is a matter before the courts. At the end of the day, a judge, an impartial tribunal, has got to make the call on these kinds of things.

I want to make it clear again that our position was that these individuals should not be incarcerated. We did not think it warranted jail time. We did move to secure their release at the earliest possible opportunity. We're also moving as quickly as we can to conduct a pretty comprehensive review of a Mining Act that's been in place in Ontario since 1873. In the interim, we are encouraging private sector mining operators to work with our aboriginal communities, with our First Nations, and ensure that they're providing them with the proper consultation, involving them in the process.

It would be possible for Ontarians to conclude that our aboriginal communities are not interested in any kind of mining, but the overwhelming majority are interested in mining. They just want to find a way to participate in that so they can share in some of the revenues.

1110

Mr. Howard Hampton: It sometimes borders on the incredulous to listen to the McGuinty government. They blame the mining company. They blame other interests. The fact of the matter is that the McGuinty government could end this dispute today. You could have ended this dispute a year ago. All it takes is a letter from the Minister of Mines to the mining recorder, under section 35 of the Mining Act, saying, "These lands which are in dispute are hereby withdrawn from mining exploration and mining development." You know what? The McGuinty government that lectures and preaches—

Interjection.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Stop the clock. I would just remind all of our guests who are here that you're more than welcome to observe the debate, but not to participate in the debate by applause or any other form. Thank you.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The McGuinty government that lectures and preaches refuses to do that. The First Nation has made it very clear: They are not going to allow mining exploration and development on their traditional lands. Premier, you can resolve this issue today. Simply withdraw it from further mining claim, mining exploration. Will you do that?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Natural Resources.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The Minister of Natural Resources?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: Northern Development.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The Minister of Northern Development and Mines.

Hon. Michael Gravelle: As the leader of the third party knows full well, we made the commitment to review the Mining Act last year, not five years ago. It's one that we take incredibly seriously, as we take our duty to consult very seriously. Again, I would think the leader of the third party would understand that taking any unilateral action to change the Mining Act would not be supported by many people, including himself, and I would think also our First Nation partners.

We feel it's extraordinarily important to go through this review of the Mining Act in a comprehensive way, as the Premier has said, and then indeed to enter into appropriate consultations. We think that's incredibly important. There are so many great opportunities that are there. We recognize the challenges, so this review of the Mining Act is one we take very seriously, as we take our duty to consult very, very seriously. Indeed, we look forward to moving forward as quickly as we can on the Mining Act review.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mr. Howard Hampton: A further question to the Premier. Ombudsman André Marin said that the province's actions in terms of our hospitals are inexcusable, and Ontarians are losing confidence in our hospitals. Infection control experts now say that 260 Ontarians have died in hospitals from C. difficile since 2006, and this may be just the tip of the iceberg.

Ombudsman Marin for years has urged the McGuinty government to allow him to provide oversight of what's happening in our hospitals. New Democrats have urged you to do that. Premier, how many more deaths have to occur, how many more shocking disease outbreaks will have to occur, before the McGuinty government realizes that our hospitals need to be more transparent and that the proper way to do that is through the Ombudsman's office?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Health.

Hon. George Smitherman: We believe and agree that there needs to be greater transparency with respect to the things that are occurring in Ontario's hospital environments. We think that these same experts that the honourable member quotes, not the Ombudsman but experts in infectious disease, should be those who are leading efforts on Ontario's behalf.

We're going to ask Dr. Michael Baker from the University Health Network, who is one of these oft-quoted experts, to be our lead on this. As I've had a chance to say in the House several times in the last few weeks, we'll be moving forward with reporting. We'll see Ontarians gaining a multitude of additional information about the circumstances that relate to patient safety in the hospital environment. We agree that transparency can be a powerful tool for improvement in this area. These are very, very substantial challenges, and accordingly, we feel confident that enhanced transparency will be part and parcel of increasing patient safety for the people of the province of Ontario.

Mr. Howard Hampton: Premier, 260 people have died, and people say this may be the tip of the iceberg. Ombudsman Marin says the province's reaction has been inexcusably lax. To quote him: "When I see the reaction of the provincial government to this, it's almost as if it's written off as the cost of doing business." When asked by the Hamilton Spectator, he said, "This is exactly the kind of systemic issue which our office would be poised to handle if we had jurisdiction."

My question again, Premier: Instead of promising Ontarians that perhaps next year public reporting will be improved, why won't the Premier agree to giving the Ombudsman oversight of the operations of Ontario hospitals today?

Hon. George Smitherman: It seems that the honourable member didn't hear well enough. He said, "Maybe, or in the future"—no. I've very clearly said on several occasions in this Legislature that we're moving forward with public reporting. This will mean that hospitals post data on a regularized basis, available to all the public, on a wide variety of considerations, starting with C. difficile. This will be implemented by September 30—public reporting, access, transparency, for all the people in the province of Ontario.

Rather than relying on someone whose skills are outside of the medical arena, we'll be depending upon medical experts, in the form of Dr. Michael Baker, to lead these initiatives. He is a patient safety expert, and we have confidence that he's the right individual to champion these initiatives.

On the matter of C. difficile: This is a well-known threat, and the obligation is for all of those across health care, including those who run our hospitals, to take this very seriously. Only an all-hands-on-deck strategy will be successful for us—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Final supplementary.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The McGuinty government talks about "all hands on deck." The reality is this, and Ombudsman Marin points this out: Ontario is the only province in Canada whose Ombudsman does not have a mandate to oversee hospitals. Ontario is the only laggard here. While 260 people die, and many more probably died, Ontario is the only province that denies the Ombudsman to go in and look at the operations of hospitals. Despite this, Ombudsman Marin's office receives many complaints about hospitals every year, but says to those members of the public, "I'm sorry; the McGuinty government won't allow me to investigate."

A total of 228 complaints about hospitals were received in 2007 alone. After every other province in Canada has done this, what's the excuse of the McGuinty government, while 260 people have already died?

Hon. George Smitherman: The position on this matter is very clear. We've had a coroner's investigation into the circumstances in Sault Ste. Marie; we have the very evidence that the Joe Brant investigation has provided; we have recommendations from the provincial infectious disease advisory committee; and we have established leadership in the form of Dr. Baker.

Adding to that, we've dramatically enhanced transparency across a wide range of indications, which will enhance the knowledge that the public has about circumstances occurring in hospitals. We agree that this will enhance the obligation on the part of those hospitals and all who attend there—patients, visitors and staff alike—to be very attentive to the circumstances which lead to the spread of infectious disease, like C. difficile. That's why it's necessary for all of us to recognize our obligations when we're visiting hospitals and when we're present in those environments. Only taking these kinds of precautions and having everybody be engaged will provide the necessary patient safety that we all strive for. We have confidence that Dr. Baker can lead these initiatives on behalf of the—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: My question today is for the Premier. Premier, the issue of unreasonable and unfair apprenticeship ratios in the construction and manufacturing trades has been raised in this House several times over the past few months. We on this side of the House believe that the ratios are outdated and should be changed so that young men and women will have more apprenticeship opportunities and our businesses can play on a more even playing field with all of the other provinces. I have to remind you that Ontario is the only province in Canada that does not have one-to-one ratios. You said in this House that you would look into this disparity. Premier, can you report to this House today, and what will you do about the unfairness of our apprenticeship ratios?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: We have just recently received a report from a Mr. Armstrong. That report has now been placed online at the Training, Colleges and Universities website. We are consulting Ontarians. That is a myriad of recommendations put forward by Mr. Armstrong, including one to establish a new college of trades. In part, that college would assume responsibility for a regular review of ratios. We've made that report public. We're now consulting with Ontarians, and we're eager to hear from them.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: Premier, today in the west members' gallery we have two young would-be apprentices, who are joined by the owner of Orser Technical of Orillia, a business established more than 70 years ago, and Mary Ingram-Haigh, the president of the Ontario Electrical League. Ryan Briggs came to Orser as a result of the secondary school co-op program and Matt Strongman moved back home to Orillia as a third-year apprentice from Hamilton. These young men are considered excellent employees.

1120

Orser Technical currently has seven journeymen and three other apprentices. Matt and Ryan cannot continue to work for Orser. They will be terminated immediately, and they will not be terminated because of a lack of work. A ratio change would resolve this problem immediately.

Premier, what advice would you give to Matt and Ryan about pursuing a career as licensed electricians here in Ontario, or should we just send them off to Alberta?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: First of all, I want to congratulate the gentlemen involved for their perseverance, for their initiative and for their determination.

I can report, broadly speaking, that electrical apprenticeship registrations have increased by 32% since 2003. I know that we have 100,000 more apprentices studying today. I know that we've got this recent report. We know that we have an issue here, but I think the real issue is, what's the best way to deal with it?

We've made the report available. We've put it online and we're asking for Ontarians to get back to us. We expect that we'll hear from a variety of stakeholders, and once we have that information in hand, we'll be prepared and we'll be eager to move quickly.

DRIVER LICENCES

Mr. Gilles Bisson: My question is to the Premier. Premier, you'll know that in the area of Kingston, there was a tragic accident some years ago where four people lost their lives as the result of an individual who was drinking and driving. As a result of that accident, there was a lifetime ban issued on this individual so that no future driver's licence could be issued. Surprise, surprise: The police in the local area pulled over a gentleman for routine inspection and found that this person who got the ban had gotten back his driver's licence from the Ministry of Transportation.

My question to you is simply this: How can Ontarians have any confidence in the Ministry of Transportation if it can't enforce a simple driver's licence ban?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Transportation.

Hon. James J. Bradley: The question is an excellent question, as it always is from the critic.

First of all, I would like to reveal to him that the individual in question no longer holds any type of driver's licence. In 1999, when the driver was convicted and prohibited from driving for life, the conviction information submitted to the ministry contained a different date of birth than the date listed in the individual's driver's licence, so we're obviously concerned about that. Staff immediately began reviewing records and working with Kingston police to determine if this was in fact the same individual. They have finalized the review, and it was determined that more than one record indeed does exist. When the driver was convicted, the conviction information submitted to the ministry contained that different birthdate.

We have made recent changes to ensure that accurate information is received from the courts, thus ensuring that the proper conviction information can be placed against the driver's—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary?

Mr. Gilles Bisson: That makes things even worse. At the end of the day, if an individual is able to go forward and reapply for a licence, and we don't have better checks and balances in the system and allow somebody to get a licence who shouldn't, it tells us we've got a problem.

You have previous driver's licence numbers that you can go by. A person's first and last name might be a good indication, a person's address. There are all kinds of checks and balances when it comes to the data within the database that should have picked this up.

I say again, what kind of confidence should we as Ontarians have in you as the minister, in your registry and your system, if you're issuing licences to people who have been banned for life due to drunk driving? I ask the question again.

Hon. James J. Bradley: And I will repeat the answer I gave to the member's excellent question. I noted for him that we have made recent changes to ensure that accurate information is received from the courts, thus ensuring proper conviction information can be placed against the right driving record.

In this particular case, which started back in 1999, the information that was transferred was not accurate. By the changes we have made, we have significantly reduced the risk that that can happen at the present time.

As you know, in all of Canada, we have the toughest penalties for those people who are convicted of these matters, who have their licences suspended. This particular matter, as I said, was of great concern. The person doesn't have a licence at the present time. Immediately upon getting this information, that was looked after.

WATER QUALITY

Mr. Phil McNeely: My question is to the Minister of the Environment. There's a lot of concern in my community right now about a sewage spill that happened in the city of Ottawa in the summer of 2006. About 960,000 cubic metres of raw sewage and storm water was allowed to flow into the Ottawa River. This spill of almost a million cubic metres of sewage polluted the Ottawa River downstream and closed the beach at Petrie Island for almost the complete summer of 2006. When the beach's swimming area was finally opened in 2006, it was an exciting time for the community as we welcomed the summer season. Unfortunately, it was the same year as the unacceptable spill of sewage in the Ottawa River. As a long-time advocate for Petrie Island Beach, it's very important that the members of my community feel comfortable to bring their families and friends to the beach. While I understand that the actions were probably taken, I want to know from the ministry what you are doing about that spill.

Hon. John Gerretsen: Let me first of all thank this member not only for the question but for the great advocacy he's doing in his area, particularly with respect to this particular situation. I understand that the mayor of Ottawa has also requested to do a special investigation; it's ongoing right now.

When the new information came forward from Ottawa public health that linked the spill at the Keefer station to the closures at the area beach, my ministry began to review its files immediately to see what we knew about the incident. I can tell you that my ministry officials have not been able to locate any notification of the details of this particular incident to the Spills Action Centre until the city of Ottawa wrote to us in May of last year. I can tell you that at that point in time, our investigations and enforcement branch went into action and is currently conducting an investigation, and looks forward to submitting the results on this in the near future.

Mr. Phil McNeely: Summer is here, and Ottawa-area families want to be assured that their beaches are safe. They do not want another season of beach closures. People in the Ottawa area want to be assured that the $2.5-million investment made to provide a beautiful swimming area at Petrie Island will be protected. They want to know why sewage bypasses, like the one that started this spill, can happen in the first place and what's being done in Ottawa to reduce them. They want to make sure that all precautions are taken to protect their families this summer.

I speak on behalf of the community when I ask the minister, what action is being taken to stop this type of spill and defend against another season of beach closures and impaired water quality in our beautiful Ottawa River?

Hon. John Gerretsen: As the member is aware, in older communities like the city of Ottawa and some of the older parts of this province, there are often combined sewers that basically meet at both sanitary and storm water runoff through a single pipe to a sewage treatment facility. Sometimes, when there is a major storm, there is an overflow, and that happens, and obviously we'd like to see those occur as infrequently as possible. Much work has been done over the years by both the province and the local municipalities to make sure that sewage treatment plants are upgraded and that storm sewers are separated from sanitary sewers, but much more work needs to be done.

The ministry is working to accelerate the approvals for the city's other two major combined sewer overflow locations that will result in significant reductions in the occurrences of these combined sewer overloads.

POLYGAMY

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: To the Minister of Government and Consumer Services: Will you uphold the rule of law and section 15(1) of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, as it pertains to gender equality, and enforce the law and immediately strip a man, Aly Hindy, of his ability to perform marriages in Ontario and of knowingly breaking Canadian marriage laws by performing polygamist marriages illegally in Ontario?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: We have a process with respect to the registration of marriages in the province of Ontario, and we have no evidence in any form to indicate that anyone is performing polygamist marriages.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Mr. Hindy actually acknowledged in the Toronto Star on Saturday—with a circulation of, I believe, 640,000 readers on Saturday. This is about gender equality and it's about upholding the rule of law. Polygamy is inconsistent with the rule of law in Ontario and in Canada, and it is your responsibility to take decisive action. You're responsible for enforcing the law in this province.

1130

Alia Hogben of the Canadian Council of Muslim Women asks, "Why are they so wishy-washy when it comes to this law? Why aren't the officials doing something" about it? So I ask, on behalf of Alia and the women of this province: What will it take for this minister to put an end to McGuinty-endorsed polygamy in this province and the fraud that is taking place against Ontario women and the people of this province?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: Under the Criminal Code of Canada, polygamy is, as we all know, a crime. Our office of the Registrar General has no records of anyone trying to register multiple marriages. Under the Marriage Act, municipalities are responsible for issuing marriage licences and ensuring the eligibility of the individuals who request that licence. I want to repeat again for the record that we have received no requests to register multiple marriages.

POVERTY

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: My question is to the Minister of Children and Youth Services. Yesterday, the minister apologized profusely for forgetting to invite me to the poverty consultation in Sudbury, and I accept your apology. Can the minister tell us now how much notice she gave to other invitees to yesterday's meeting in Sudbury?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Again, let me publicly apologize to the member opposite for failing to invite her to the consultation. I did offer to go back to her riding and have a consultation there with her with the people she would like to have there. So again, I apologize.

We worked closely with the Social Planning Council in Sudbury to pull people together to the consultation who represented a broad perspective of voices in Sudbury and the Sudbury area, and we had a very interesting conversation in Sudbury. After the consultation I went to Better Beginnings, Better Futures, which is an extraordinary program where children in the community have access to tremendous after-school programs.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I realize the minister claims that she wants wide-ranging engagement. When I couldn't attend, I tried to contact people and say, "Bring my views forward," so I contacted the names on her invitee list. The first one was the dean of the faculty of social work, followed by the chair of the Kimberly Rogers committee, followed by the executive director of the Habitat for Humanity, and the list goes on and on, but the answers kind of surprised me. Some were promised an e-mail that never came. Others received a phone call on Friday—the consultation was Monday—and others on Saturday, for the Monday consultation. The winner is a message on voicemail on Monday morning for a Monday afternoon meeting of people with busy agendas. The last-minute invite meant that they could not attend. Minister, what am I supposed to think of all this?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: As I said earlier, we worked closely with the Sudbury Social Planning Council to get a good mix of people there. This was the seventh of 13 consultations I'm doing across the province. I can tell you that the information we're gaining is very insightful and thoughtful. I can tell you that people in the province are prepared to address poverty reduction in a way that I don't think they've ever thought about before. We're hearing a lot about a willingness to work collaboratively together, to work together to help people move forward in their lives, to get the supports they need to move from poverty into full participation in our society and in our economy. I'm very much looking forward to the remaining six consultations.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

Mr. Bob Delaney: My question is for the Minister of Government and Consumer Services. During the past few years, there has been in western Mississauga a proliferation of stores that offer payday loans. I'm concerned about the impact of these stores on our community and across Ontario. Environics and Ipsos Reid studies of the Canadian payday lending industry indicate that the borrowers' household incomes are lower than those of the general population. Payday loan borrowers are more likely to have dependent children and less likely to understand the true cost of their loan. Significantly, even studies commissioned by the industry itself reveal that approximately 25% of their clientele have household incomes near or below Stats Canada's low-income poverty line. My question is, what is this ministry doing to protect Ontario's most vulnerable from payday—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister of Government and Consumer Services.

Hon. Ted McMeekin: In answer to the member's question, he may be aware that I had the great pleasure on March 31 to introduce the Payday Loans Act, 2008. This legislation, if passed, will provide a fair and balanced approach to regulating the payday lending industry in Ontario. It will protect thousands of Ontarians who from time to time come to rely on payday loans to help them through a short-term financial squeeze.

The legislation will—and let me just recap—require lenders and brokers to be licensed, provide authority to set a ceiling on the total cost of borrowing, prohibit back-to-back and concurrent loans, and permit borrowers to cancel loan agreements without penalty within 48 hours, a two-day cooling-off period. There will also be an education component and—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary?

Mr. Bob Delaney: There are payday lenders where coffee shops used to be in western Mississauga. According to a study by Ernst and Young, first-time payday borrowers ultimately take out an average of 15 loans. This same study also stated that the industry itself claims the majority of its profits come from repeat borrowers who are unable to pay off the loan on time. Not enough Canadians between the ages of 21 and 30 consider the consequences of rising interest rates when they borrow money. Consumers aged 18 to 25 have significant purchasing power but often lack the experience needed to protect themselves against issues like money management, credit risk and identity theft.

Would the minister tell us what is being done right now to protect consumers, and especially young consumers, from payday lenders and other debt-related—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: —ministry with these consumer questions, to his credit. Every single day, our consumer protection bureau is committed to making sure Ontario's marketplace is safe for consumers. Recently, I had the good fortune during Consumer Awareness Week to launch our youth awareness campaign. That campaign will enhance the awareness of smart money management for our young people, specifically related to identity theft and protecting young people when making online purchases. It will target young consumers in secondary schools, colleges and universities, and in the workplace. Specifically, the campaign will include a young consumers' advisory group, an outreach program, education modules and an interactive youth consumer e-zone on Ontario's consumer protection—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

Mr. John O'Toole: I was going to direct this question to the Premier, but since he's not here, I'll direct it directly to the Minister of Transportation.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): You know the understanding within the chamber. We don't make reference to members' absences.

Mr. John O'Toole: I apologize. I just didn't want to surprise the Minister of Transportation, because you would know, Minister, that yesterday the Premier had sort of a change of heart, a flip-flop, or he reversed direction or whatever. He was responding to a question about technology, cellphones and other devices while driving on our highways. Now I gather he's flipped it over to you and charged you with doing some groundwork and research. I want to give you the opportunity to outline who the stakeholders are that you're going to deal with. I want to put it on the record clearly that we're here to help you. This side here, we're here to help you to make the roads safer. Will you do the right thing? And who are you going to consult with?

1140

Hon. James J. Bradley: I would like to thank the member very much for the question. I'm always happy to hear that members of the opposition are here to help members of the government out. It's really nice to hear that. I welcome suggestions from all the citizens of Ontario on matters of this kind.

What the Premier has asked me to do—and I have been doing some consultation on this—is to look at what other jurisdictions have done and what is working. One of the initiatives we've looked at is the banning of the cellphone itself. That is one initiative. But as the member would know, there are many other distractions that present themselves to drivers who are in a vehicle. So the Premier has asked that I look widely at all of the potential distractions that are there and try to find a situation where we can bring about any changes that would—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. Supplementary.

Mr. John O'Toole: Minister, doing the right thing is something that we look forward to happening over there. Right now, if I look at the legislation, even this morning and the past week or so, most of the legislation's been copied from other private members' initiatives. The smoking ban in the car was Mrs. Witmer's and Mr. Oraziotti's bill. As a matter of fact, the speed limiter bill was one that Laurie Scott had brought forward. There's been a lot of not focusing on the real issues in the economy and copying private members' bills that are, really, the right thing to do.

Under this bill—you know I've done the work. I want to make sure that you consult with the Canadian Vehicle Manufacturers' Association, the police associations, the research that has been done on this, and the inquests that have been done. As you said, other jurisdictions have already done it.

When is this going to start? When is our first meeting so that we can get on with this, instead of more delays and adjourning of the House for the summer too early?

Hon. James J. Bradley: What's interesting is that when they bring their bills forward as private members, there seems to be some support for them. As soon as they become government bills, the opposition party, the Conservative Party, have about four different positions on them. They want to give credit to the person who brought the bill forward, and then they want to still denounce the bill when the government brings it forward.

The members should talk to John Tory, because I'm informed that he said this morning—this is what John Tory said this morning, that laws aren't necessary, just more public education. He asked us to slow down. My friend Mr. O'Toole is asking that we speed up the process; his leader, John Tory, wants to slow the process down. Perhaps he could give up his seat to Mr. Tory and he could present the position of the party at that time.

AUTISM TREATMENT

Mr. Peter Kormos: I have a question to the Minister of Children and Youth Services. Young Riley Methot, three and a half years old, lives down in Port Colborne with his folks. When he was two, he was diagnosed with autism, and 25 hours a week of IBI treatment was prescribed at the time. A year and a half later, this boy has not received one hour of IBI treatment. How is that fair to Riley Methot and other kids like him?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: Let me start by saying that I don't think any of us, unless we have a child with autism ourselves, understand what it is like to have a child with autism. I have spent quite a bit of time, actually, talking to families with autism in their families, and I understand, as best I can, the challenges they face.

Having said that, I think it's very important that we all recognize how far we have come in a relatively short period of time. Ten years ago, the budget for autism in this province was half a million dollars; today, it's over $150 million. So from half a million to $151 million certainly speaks to the commitment that this government has to increasing services for children with autism.

Mr. Peter Kormos: That doesn't mean a heck of a lot to Riley and his parents. His parents are being told that he has yet another year and a half on that waiting list. By then, he'll be five. He may well be in junior K or full-day kindergarten, where there is no IBI.

This minister should know that IBI treatment is more effective the earlier the kid is exposed to it. This kid is still non-verbal. What kind of chance does Riley Methot have in Dalton McGuinty's Ontario?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: I certainly acknowledge that there's a lot more work to do. I don't think anybody would argue that we've done all we have to do to help children with autism.

Let's look at the progress we've made. We ended the previous government's age-six cut-off because we don't think that because a child celebrates a birthday they no longer benefit from IBI therapy. Since we were elected in 2003, we have more than tripled funding for children with autism. We've gone from about 500 kids receiving IBI to more than 1,400. We've also introduced help for families—respite, summer camp—so that families with children with autism get a little bit of a break.

I think it's important to ask the question, though: How many kids received IBI when you were in government? Zero.

GRIDLOCK

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: My question is for the Minister of Transportation. The increasing amount of traffic is causing ever-increasing gridlock in my community of Hamilton and throughout the province. As the population of the province grows, so too does the number of vehicles on our roads.

These congestion delays cost my constituents and all Ontarians time and money. Individuals are spending more time in transit than ever before. This is time that they could be spending with their families, time that they could be using to work, and for those who drive, this is time spent burning extra fuel.

Can the minister please tell this House what he is doing to increase road infrastructure to help ease the congestion on our roads?

Hon. James J. Bradley: That's an excellent question, and I have some statistics on this that will be helpful.

This government is working hard to ease congestion and create a seamless and more convenient transportation network. That is why, since 2003, we have committed more than $155 million to the city of Hamilton for highway infrastructure, with an additional $137 million for municipal roads and bridges.

Benefiting from this was Highway 403 from King Street to Wilson Street, where recent completed improvements included resurfacing, operational and lighting improvements. Current construction is under way to improve the drive on Highway 6 between Highway 403 and Highway 5. I understand a new interchange and passing lane are being created. This project will finish this year. We have high-occupancy vehicle lanes for Trafalgar Road in Oakville and Guelph Line in Burlington that are coming online, allowing commuters to get home faster.

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: Gridlock is an issue that is also closely related to public transit. It works to ease congestion and is the better choice environmentally, as the fewer cars there are on the roads, the fewer greenhouse gas emissions are created.

I'm hoping that the Minister of Transportation can tell this House and the residents of Hamilton Mountain and Ontario what measures he's taking to reduce the number of cars on the roads and to increase the transportation services available to my constituents.

Hon. James J. Bradley: As the member knows, public transit is a high priority of the McGuinty government. Significant investments have been made in transportation. That being said, there's always a lot more work to be done, which is why our government continues to work with its municipal partners on funding public transit initiatives.

Since 2003, we have invested over $90 million in the city of Hamilton, including almost $40 million in provincial gas tax funding. The city of Hamilton has used this funding to improve its transit in a variety of ways: building a new bus terminal at Mohawk College and acquiring a GPS-automated vehicle location and control system. The spring budget saw almost $30 million committed to Hamilton, including funding for the James Street North GO station. Once completed, not only will this station allow for better GO service in Hamilton, it will also be the gateway for GO service to Niagara.

We will continue to work with our municipalities for better public transit. I thank the member for raising such an important question in this Legislature.

1150

SCHOOL CLOSURES

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: To the Minister of Education: Will the minister commit today to immediately release the report on the list of Ontario's schools up for review for possible closure?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I don't have that list. The fact is that school boards make those determinations board by board, community by community. As I said in an answer to a previous question, it would be irresponsible for any government to tie the hands of locally elected school trustees to make those decisions based on the programming that's required for their students in their communities. We actually had a moratorium in place for two years on school closures, and the fact was that at the end of that moratorium, school boards were asking us for pupil accommodation review guidelines, which we have put in place, because they need to be able to make the decisions that are consistent with the need for program delivery in their own communities.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: Our information is that the minister does have the list. The parents deserve to know where they're going to send their kids in September. This is the end of May. The trustees in the gallery and their school boards need to plan for the fall, and the public deserves to have this information now. Minister, what are you trying to hide and why are you keeping this report under wraps?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: If I understand the question of the member opposite—I'm not sure what her understanding of how education works in Ontario is, but here's the way it works. If a school board is going to put a school under review for closure or consolidation, that is a local process. If the parents in a community want information about those processes, they need to talk with their trustees. The trustees in the gallery have access to that information on the ground. It would be inane for the Minister of Education, on the 22nd floor of the Mowat Block, to be trying to micromanage the school accommodation reviews in the province of Ontario, across this vast province. It would make no sense whatsoever.

I say to the member opposite, if the member opposite is really concerned about the communities in this province, then talk to the parents about connecting with their trustees and having those local discussions. The pupil accommodation review guidelines provide for consultation in every community.

NORTHERN ONTARIO DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Howard Hampton: A question to the Minister of Northern Development and Mines. With much fanfare, the McGuinty government has been promoting its public consultations on the growth plan for the north. My question for the minister is this: Does the minister believe it is appropriate that a community that has lost over 600 direct manufacturing jobs since 2002, that has had $42 million in wages and salaries taken out of the local economy, and that has seen median family income decline by more than 6.5% will not have any public consultation under the McGuinty government's northern growth plan?

Hon. Michael Gravelle: We're very excited about the development of the growth plan for northern Ontario. This is going to be an economic and strategic long-term vision for the north. I'm co-chairing with my colleague David Caplan, the Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal.

Indeed, what I think you're talking about is the process that we're going through now. We're very excited to be in the action phase, and we are moving around the north and having regional consultations. The actual public consultation—the full public consultation process—will be taking place in the fall. The regional forums that are happening now are happening in 16 communities across the north. We haven't determined all the locations yet, so I'm not sure what community you're referring to, but we are involving all northerners in this process. We have got our website in place, placestogrow.ca. We're very excited. I would think that the leader of the third party would be very supportive of this economic development vision for the north, and I'm disappointed that you're not.

Mr. Howard Hampton: We've checked your websites. I had my staff contact your ministerial staff.

We're talking here about the city of Kenora, a city that's lost its paper mill, that has one sawmill completely shut down and gone and another sawmill where everyone is laid off. The OSB mill has close to 100 people laid off. Altogether, 600 good manufacturing jobs have disappeared—$42 million in wages and salaries taken out of the economy in the sixth-largest city in northern Ontario.

I'm simply asking, are you going to hold a public consultation on your growth plan in a city like Kenora that has been so hard-hit under the McGuinty government?

Hon. Michael Gravelle: Again, we are very excited about this action plan phase of the growth plan. These are regional forums, regional focus groups. Indeed, we have not determined all the locations that are taking part. Certainly, Kenora is not the only community that wants to host this particular session. What I can tell you is that when the full public consultation portion takes place, we will again be including as many northern communities as possible.

We're very excited about this. As you know, we're holding them in Dryden, we're holding them in Sioux Lookout. Kenora members will be very pleased to host the Northern Ontario Heritage Fund. So we're still trying to determine what locations they will be at, but Kenora will be very much an important part of the public consultation—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for question period has ended.

PETITIONS

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jim Wilson: I want to thank the congregation of the Alliston Pentecostal Church for sending this petition to me.

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I agree with this petition and I have signed it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Michael Prue: I have a petition that reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I will affix my signature thereto.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Reza Moridi: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the growing number of unlawful firearms in motor vehicles is threatening innocent citizens and our police officers;

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and being found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I support this petition and I sign it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our spiritual and parliamentary tradition since it was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I affix my name in full support.

1200

PROTECTION FOR MINERS

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the people of Schreiber:

"Whereas current legislation contained in the Ontario Health and Safety Act and regulations for mines and mining plants does not adequately protect the lives of miners, we request revisions to the act;

"Lyle Everett Defoe," a resident of Wanapitei in my riding, "and the scoop tram he was operating fell 150 feet down an open stope (July 23, 2007). Lyle was 25 years and 15 days old when he was killed at Xstrata Kidd Creek mine site, Timmins....

"The stope where Lyle was killed was protected by a length of orange plastic snow fence and a rope with a warning sign. These barriers would not have been visible if the bucket of the scoop tram was raised. Lyle's body was recovered from behind the scoop tram."

They ask the Legislative Assembly that:

"Concrete berms must be mandatory to protect all open stopes and raises;

"All miners and contractors working underground must have working communication devices and personal locators;

"All equipment involved in injuries and fatalities must be recovered and examined unless such recovery would endanger the lives of others;

"The entire act must be reviewed and amended to better protect underground workers."

I support this petition and will affix my name to it and send it with page Jocelyn.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: This petition has to do with guns in vehicles and it goes in tandem with Bill 56. It reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas innocent people are being victimized by the growing number of unlawful firearms in our communities; and

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licence of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

Since I agree, I'm delighted to put my signature on this document.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bill Murdoch: I have a petition sent to me from Lynn Silverton near Flesherton:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Grey Bruce Health Services' Markdale hospital is the only health care facility between Owen Sound and Orangeville on the Highway 10 corridor;

"Whereas the community of Markdale has been promised a new state-of-the-art hospital in Markdale;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care announce as soon as possible its intended construction date for the new Markdale hospital and ensure that the care needs of the patients and families of our community are met in a timely manner."

I have signed this.

LONG-TERM CARE

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the people of London:

"Whereas understaffing in Ontario's nursing homes is a serious problem resulting in inadequate care for residents and unsafe conditions for staff;

"Whereas after the Harris government removed the regulations providing minimum care levels in 1995, hours of care dropped below the previous 2.25 hour/day minimum;

"Whereas the recent improvements in hours of care are not adequate, vary widely and are not held to accountable standards;

"Whereas there is currently nothing in legislation to protect residents and staff from renewed cuts to care levels by future governments; and

"Whereas care needs have measurably increased with aging and the movement of people with more complex health needs from hospitals into long-term-care homes;" they ask the assembly to

"Immediately enact and fund an average care standard of 3.5 hours per resident per day in the regulations under the new Long-Term Care Homes Act."

I support this petition, will affix my name to it, and send it with page Damian.

EMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Mr. Lou Rinaldi: I have a petition here addressed to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the federal government's employment insurance surplus now stands at $54 billion; and

"Whereas over 75% of Ontario's unemployed are not eligible for employment insurance because of Ottawa's unfair eligibility rules; and

"Whereas an Ontario worker has to work more weeks to qualify and receives fewer weeks of benefits than other Canadian unemployed workers; and

"Whereas the average Ontario unemployed worker gets $4,000 less in EI benefits than unemployed workers in other provinces and thus ... are not qualifying for many retraining programs;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to press the federal government to reform the employment insurance program and to end this discrimination and unfairness towards Ontario's unemployed workers."

I agree and I will sign this petition and get Alie to send it to the desk.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Tim Hudak: I'm pleased to present a petition signed by many residents of the Fonthill and Ridgeville area about preserving the tradition of the Lord's Prayer in the Ontario Legislature. It reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Dalton McGuinty is proposing that the Ontario Legislature remove the tradition of reciting the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe;

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

In support, I affix my signature.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network ... board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas it is important to ensure that the new birthing unit at Centenary hospital, a $20-million expansion that will see 16 new labour, delivery, recovery and postpartum ... birthing rooms and an additional 21 postpartum rooms added by October 2008, will not cause any decline in the pediatric services currently provided at the Ajax-Pickering hospital; and

"Whereas, with the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, it is important to continue to have a complete maternity unit at the Ajax hospital; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for the Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario ... funding; and

"Whereas the parents of Ajax and Pickering deserve the right to have their children born in their own community, where they have chosen to live and work;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service; and

"That our Ajax-Pickering hospital now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain its full maternity unit."

I will affix my signature and pass it to Aaron.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Bill Murdoch: I have another petition that's been sent to me by Percy and Betty Warrilow of Owen Sound. It's to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I have signed my name.

HOME CARE

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the people from the Marmora area, and it goes:

"Whereas the Ontario government has continued the practice of competitive bidding for home care services; and

"Whereas the competitive bidding process has increased the privatization of Ontario's health care delivery, in direct violation of the Commitment to the Future of Medicare Act, 2004; and

"Whereas competitive bidding for home care services has decreased both the continuity and quality of care available to home care clients; and

"Whereas home care workers do not enjoy the same employment rights, such as successor rights, as all other Ontario workers have, which deprives them of termination rights, seniority rights and the right to move with their work when their employer agency loses a contract; ...."

They ask the government:

"(1) to immediately stop the competitive bidding for home care services so home care clients can receive the continuity and quality of care they deserve; and

"(2) to extend successor rights under the Labour Relations Act to home care workers to ensure the home care sector is able to retain a workforce that is responsive to clients' needs."

I fully support this petition, will sign it and send it with page Christopher.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas innocent people are being victimized by the growing number of unlawful firearms in our communities; and

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I would affix my signature and give it to page Taylor.

HEALTH CARD RENEWAL CLINIC

Mr. Tim Hudak: I'm reading another petition about bringing health card renewal services closer to Glanbrook residents that reads as follows:

"Whereas seniors, the disabled, families with young children and other Mount Hope and Binbrook residents are forced to drive to downtown Hamilton to renew their Ontario health cards; and

"Whereas the province of Ontario mandates that health cards be renewed on a regular basis and that an Ontario health card must be presented to receive OHIP health services; and

"Whereas the Dalton McGuinty government has increased taxes and fees on local residents but has not improved services;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"To work with the Ontario Ministry of Health to bring a mobile health card renewal clinic to the Mount Hope ... area...."

I support it with my signature.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions has ended. This House stands recessed until 3 p.m.

The House recessed from 1212 to 1500.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

RURAL ONTARIO

Mr. Randy Hillier: Today a delegation of business leaders from Smiths Falls came to Queen's Park to be heard. Contempt for rural Ontario by the McGuinty government was on full display for them today. While the business education tax harms and injures our local businesses, this government has chosen to bleed small businesses for six more years. It is the job of this government not to pick winners and losers but to represent all of Ontario.

I asked for unanimous consent today, only to be shouted down by the minister responsible for rural affairs. I find her actions disgusting, but she is consistent in her assault on rural Ontario. The inaction on the BET is not only another example of this government's ignorance on autopilot but also a chance for the minister to show her true colours.

The business education tax is crippling eastern Ontario, and people who have taken a day off to be heard must be heard despite attempts to silence their voice.

Smiths Falls and rural Ontario win when we lose the BET.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Mr. Rosario Marchese: On behalf of the New Democratic Party, I would like to welcome the Ontario Catholic School Trustees' Association to the Legislature. We very much would like to acknowledge the long history of service and dedication that Catholic trustees have provided for our province.

In spite of recent news stories about the problems being experienced in one school board, it is important to recognize the work of the OCSTA to ensure a quality education for all of the students it represents. OCSTA has also called for special education benchmarks, fair funding and for a regular, ongoing review of the funding formula to meet the needs of our students.

For years they have been dealing with a funding formula which has not provided enough money to do what they have been asked to do, and many Catholic boards have not been afraid to point that out.

OCSTA has always believed that education is about more than marks and test scores, and we solidly endorse that view. Thank you to all of them for the work they have done and will continue to do on behalf of parents and students throughout the province.

JACK CAPITANIO

Mr. Monte Kwinter: I rise to eulogize Giacomo—known as Jack—Capitanio, a friend, a colleague and an idealist who dedicated his life to equality and social justice.

After landing in Canada in the late 1940s, he realized that the working conditions of Italians in the construction industry were inhuman and deplorable, and fatal accidents were an almost daily occurrence. Immediately, he got involved in organizing the labour movement to improve the life of these hard-working people. He was involved in the first large labour demonstration at the CNE in the 1950s, where 25,000 Italian and other construction workers drew the public's attention to this state of affairs.

Jack joined the Liberal Party because he believed in the philosophy of the Liberal Party and the vision of Prime Minister Pearson, and later Prime Minister Trudeau. At election time, Jack was always on the front line to help Liberal members of Parliament and members of the Ontario Legislature. He was also active at the municipal level and campaigned for mayoral candidates and councillors. He was there to put up signs, knock on doors, study political strategy and stimulate young people to get involved in politics.

Jack obtained his real estate agent licence in the 1980s, and with a partner started a successful marble business, which was formally opened by then-Premier David Peterson.

Jack was a giant and a very generous person, helping people of every nationality. He will be missed by his friends and relatives and by Liberal politicians at every level of government in the GTA.

Jack was an integral part of my 1985 campaign and bus-stopped with me in each of my next five election campaigns. He was a true friend and supporter and will be sorely missed.

Jack leaves behind his wife, Italia, and his son, Ross. May he rest in peace.

KIDS' FISHING DAY

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette: I'd like to extend my sincere gratitude and appreciation to all the groups and volunteers who worked so hard for our eighth annual Kids' Fishing Day at Heber Down Conservation Area this past Saturday. What a wonderful, rewarding day it was for both children and adults alike, with a large crowd of well over 2,000 who came out to enjoy the sunshine and the outdoors.

Children were able to take part, at no charge, I might add, in a day filled with many events, including conservation and wetland displays, lure making, face painting, learning to cast, and fish identification.

Ducks Unlimited; Central Lake Ontario Conservation Authority; Kids, Cops and Canadian Tire; Muskies Canada; the Ministry of Natural Resources, Aurora district; Ontario Sporting Dog Association; Ontario Deer Hound Association; Oshawa Community Health Centre; South Oshawa Teen Council; Durham Regional Police; Pickering Rod and Gun Club; the Dream Centre; Valu-Mart Lindsay; Hawgtown Bassmasters; Eastview Boys and Girls Club; Simcoe Hall Settlement House; South Central Ontario Big Game Association; Emm's Sports; Quinte Elk Restoration; the Westmount Kiwanis Club and Ron Aldred; Dan McWilliams; Jim, Steve and Kelly's minor bantam hockey team, all contributed time and effort to the success of the event.

I would like to extend a special thanks to John Tory and John O'Toole, who took the time to attend the event and meet with the young anglers and volunteers, and also to the Toronto Sportsmen's Show, who year after year show their dedication to kids and fishing days.

Mostly, I'd like to thank all the parents and kids who participated. It was a great opportunity for children who usually don't have the chance to learn about fishing and nature and have fun discovering the great outdoors at the same time.

Hundreds of rainbow trout were caught by the young anglers. But here's a little secret: There are many more trout to be caught.

INTERNATIONAL PLOWING MATCH

Mr. David Ramsay: I'm very proud to stand in the House today and bring to the attention of all members that the riding of Timiskaming-Cochrane is going to be hosting the International Plowing Match in 2009.

I would like to also, at the same time, congratulate my colleague Carol Mitchell from the riding of Huron-Bruce, who will be hosting this year's plowing match in September in Bruce county. I wish her and everyone involved in their committee all the best and thank them for the co-operation they've had with our local committee in Timiskaming.

The planning for the International Plowing Match in 2009 is well under way. I'd like to thank our committee, including our chairman Carman Kidd; treasurer Bob Norris; coordinator Darlene Bowen; and Norm Koch, the 2009 IPM director, for their very hard work.

It's interesting to note that some 53 subcommittees have been established, including everything from food services to parking.

I'm also pleased to say that the McGuinty government is committed to making this massive event a success in northern Ontario. By the way, this is the very first time this event is going to be held in northern Ontario. In the 2008 provincial budget, our government provided a total of $1.7 million to support the IPM in 2009.

It's expected that the International Plowing Match will attract more than 80,000 visitors and bring in approximately $20 million to the local economy.

This event will be a truly unique northern experience, as organizers will be showcasing life in the north, including displays on forestry and mining.

Again, I'd like to thank the organizers and wish everybody well and a good trip to Timiskaming in 2009.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I rise in the House today to recognize Catholic Trustee Day in the province of Ontario. We are fortunate to have several trustees who have been with us in the members' gallery today.

In Canada alone, Catholic schools educate close to one million students.

It is the trustees who connect our communities with the schools, the educators, the students and their families. They are the keepers of the flame, so to speak, in our education system and are committed to instilling the key values of the Catholic faith in their students.

Catholic education views life as an integration of body, mind and spirit. Catholic education fosters the search for knowledge as a lifelong spiritual and academic quest.

Ontario has been greatly enriched by the hard work of Catholic teachers, administrators and Catholic trustees, who articulate and defend the values of Ontario's Catholic education system.

Thank you to the Catholic trustees throughout the province who have contributed and will continue to contribute to the lives and education of our young people, who are the leaders of tomorrow.

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Mr. David Oraziotti: I rise in the House to celebrate the historic legislation, introduced by our government yesterday, proposing to grant Algoma University College, in my riding of Sault Ste. Marie, a charter making it an independent university.

As a former board of governors' member at AUC, and having advocated for independence for nearly a decade, this is indeed great news for our community. I want to thank Premier McGuinty and Minister John Milloy for their tremendous support in moving forward with this legislation.

This initiative would improve the economic, cultural and social landscape of our community by enhancing the post-secondary education available to local students and further attracting national and international students. With independence, the school is projected to more than double its size to approximately 3,000 students, increasing the range of programs at the school, and they will certainly benefit our community.

1510

Here's what Dr. Celia Ross, president of Algoma University College, had to say: "Algoma University College is delighted. The introduction of the charter legislation and the passing of first reading in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario today is a giant step towards launching of the new Algoma University. Algoma U students are future leaders," in their communities and they will help "transform their communities. We will be the university for students who want innovative, community-based, hands-on programs in technology, science, business and liberal arts."

I'm encouraged by the positive support shown toward this initiative from all sides of the House and look forward to seeing this bill move quickly through the legislative process so that Algoma University College is able to become an independent university.

CYSTIC FIBROSIS

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri: I'm pleased to rise today in the House to recognize May as Cystic Fibrosis Awareness Month. Cystic fibrosis is the most common fatal inherited disease affecting young people in Canada. Early diagnosis and early treatment have contributed, of course, to improved survival and to improving the lives of people who suffer from this condition.

In April 2008, I'm pleased to note, Ontario became the second province to implement newborn screening for cystic fibrosis. I'm proud to be part of a government that launched the most comprehensive newborn screening program in Canada to date. The program, based at the Children's Hospital of Eastern Ontario, has increased the number of rare genetic conditions screened from two to 28, including disorders such as cystic fibrosis and sickle cell disease.

Canadians marked Cystic Fibrosis Awareness Month with the Great Strides Walk on Sunday, May 25 in seven locations across Ontario, including Chatham-Kent, Cornwall, the GTA, Hamilton, Huron-Oxford-Perth, Kitchener-Waterloo and London.

Please join me in congratulating the members and leaders of the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and in extending to them the very best wishes of all members of this assembly and the people of Ontario for a highly successful Cystic Fibrosis Awareness Month.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Mr. Jim Brownell: Education is a priority for this government and we are fortunate in Ontario to have excellent publicly funded education systems. The Ontario Catholic School Trustees' Association is a voice for publicly funded Catholic education in Ontario, representing the interests of 34 English Catholic school boards. I am pleased to welcome representatives from the OCSTA who are here at the Legislature today, including Paula Peroni, president; Nancy Kirby, vice-president; and John Stunt, executive director.

For over 160 years Catholic school boards have been operating in this province, and today, Catholic schools educate over 600,000 young people from kindergarten to grade 12—one third of Ontario's students.

Catholic schools are working hard on a number of our government's education initiatives and are meeting them with great success. They have shown great gains in improving test results, having improved literacy scores for high-risk students, and are creating new and innovative programs to keep students in school longer.

OCSTA has been meeting with many MPPs here today at Queen's Park to bring us up to date on some of the very positive things that are happening in Ontario's Catholic schools. As a graduate of a Catholic school—St. George's Catholic school in Long Sault—I am pleased to welcome them here to the Legislature. I'm also asking the Legislature to join them at a reception this evening from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in rooms 228 and 230 at the main legislative building.

REPORTS BY COMMITTEES

STANDING COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I beg to inform the House that today the Clerk received the report on intended appointments, dated May 27, 2008, of the Standing Committee on Government Agencies. Pursuant to standing order 107(f)(9), the report is deemed to be adopted by the House.

Report deemed adopted.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

JUSTICE FOR JARED ACT (CHILD AND FAMILY SERVICES STATUTE LAW AMENDMENT), 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LA JUSTICE POUR JARED (MODIFICATION DE LOIS EN CE QUI CONCERNE LES SERVICES À L'ENFANCE ET À LA FAMILLE)

Ms. Horwath moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 81, An Act to amend the Child and Family Services Act and the Coroners Act with respect to inquests into children's deaths / Projet de loi 81, Loi modifiant la Loi sur les services à l'enfance et à la famille et la Loi sur les coroners à l'égard des enquêtes sur les décès d'enfants.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for a short statement.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: The short form of the bill is called the Justice For Jared Act (Child And Family Services Statute Law Amendment), 2008. The bill amends the Child and Family Services Act and the Coroners Act to require a person or a children's aid society that obtains information that a child has died on or after January 1, 2006, to report the information to a coroner if the child was the subject of an access order made or varied by a court on application by a society and, as a result of the actions of a parent or family member who had custody or charge of the child at the time, the child died. In these circumstances, the coroner is required to hold an inquest into the death.

MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

Hon. Michael Bryant: I seek unanimous consent to put forward a motion without notice regarding private members' public business.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I move that, notwithstanding standing order 97(g), the requirement for notice be waived with respect to ballot item 33.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY AND RESPONSES

ACCESSIBILITY FOR THE DISABLED ACCESSIBILITÉ POUR LES PERSONNES HANDICAPÉES

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: I would like to introduce today the interpreter Kaye in the east gallery, and Anne sera l'interprète dans la galerie ouest.

Yesterday marked the beginning of National Access Awareness Week in Canada. Across the country, Canadians will be participating in events to raise awareness about the barriers that exist for people with disabilities and the need for greater accessibility. Here in Ontario, disability affects many of us.

Aujourd'hui, on compte presque 1,5 million de personnes en Ontario vivant avec une forme de handicap. Ce chiffre représente plus de 15 % de notre population, et ce chiffre augmente progressivement avec le vieillissement de la population. Cette situation se traduit par une plus grande demande pour des services et des systèmes accessibles et la nécessité de modifier certains aspects de notre environnement.

Our government has a plan to make this change happen. Almost three years ago, we passed the Accessibility for Ontarians with Disabilities Act. The act lays a foundation for Ontario to build an accessible society by 2025. Our government will make the province inclusive to people with disabilities through mandatory accessibility standards for the most important areas of our lives, like transportation, employment and communication.

I am pleased to say that we are well on our way. Earlier this year, our first province-wide standard for accessible customer service became law.

D'autres normes d'accessibilité sont en élaboration. Ces normes d'accessibilité permettront aux personnes qui ont un handicap d'avoir les mêmes possibilités que les autres citoyens; c'est-à-dire pouvoir participer pleinement à la vie sociale, économique et culturelle de leur communauté.

Je crois sincèrement que si nous, le gouvernement, souhaitons que nos partenaires de l'industrie privée améliorent l'accessibilité à leurs établissements pour les personnes handicapées, nous devons donner l'exemple.

We cannot afford not to make Ontario accessible to everyone. Each year in Canada, people with disabilities have a spending power of approximately $25 billion. That's a market that no business can afford to overlook.

1520

People with disabilities also represent an untapped resource of talent, but every day in Ontario, their skills are being wasted through inaccessibility. A couple of stairs or an outdated hiring policy can prevent the most qualified person from getting the job that's a perfect match for their skills.

Opening doors to people of all abilities is not only the right thing to do, it's the smart thing to do. Making Ontario accessible to everyone will help make our economy stronger and our workforce more diverse, and that's good for everyone.

Hier, j'ai eu l'occasion de visiter une succursale bancaire accessible, ici à Toronto. La Banque Royale du Canada a saisi l'essence de ce que le gouvernement tente d'accomplir afin de rendre la province accessible. Dans cette succursale, les clients qui ont un handicap pouvaient facilement se déplacer et avoir accès aux services. Ceci est un exemple des progrès qui sont faits en Ontario pour rendre la province accessible.

We've accomplished a lot in the three years since the act was passed, but there is more work to do. Accessibility is much more than wheelchair ramps and automatic door openers. Everyone needs to gain a greater understanding about disabilities if we want to tackle the social barriers that exist for people with disabilities. We all have a role to play in breaking down barriers. That's what National Access Awareness Week is all about: challenging public attitudes and perceptions about disabilities and working together to make our province a more inclusive place for people with disabilities to live, work and play.

J'encourage tous les membres de l'Assemblée à participer aux événements de la Semaine nationale pour l'intégration des personnes handicapées. Demain, Queen's Park sera l'hôte de l'Exposition sur l'accessibilité. Vous pourrez en apprendre plus sur l'accessibilité pour les personnes handicapées et comment cela se traduit pour notre province.

J'encourage aussi les membres de l'Assemblée à participer aux célébrations dans leur propre communauté et rencontrer les individus et les organismes qui travaillent dans le but de rendre leur collectivité plus accessible.

Everyone here knows the importance of inclusion and equality for Ontarians with disabilities. Accessibility is a process that we all need to engage in if we want to be successful. By working together, I know we can reach our goal of an Ontario where all citizens have the opportunity to fully participate. Let's all be part of Ontario's accessibility solution.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Responses?

ACCESSIBILITY FOR THE DISABLED

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I'm delighted to speak today on behalf of the Progressive Conservative caucus to acknowledge National Access Awareness Week.

I believe that it is important to help raise awareness about the barriers that people with disabilities face every day. It is crucial that society understand the significance of promoting access for persons with disabilities. The news release regarding National Access Awareness Week issued by the Ministry of Community and Social Services yesterday encourages breaking down barriers that people with disabilities face.

Included in the news release was a link on the ministry's website discussing "Understanding Barriers to Accessibility," where a definition of barriers is provided: "A barrier is anything that prevents a person with a disability from fully participating in all aspects of society because of his or her disability." It goes on to describe physical barriers as "objects added to the environment, such as doors, windows, elevators, furniture, bathroom hardware etc."

The McGuinty government loves to talk about ideas and plans on how to address accessibility issues and how to make society more accessible for persons with disabilities. However, the hypocrisy in their intent can be seen when a school—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd just like to ask the honourable member to withdraw that comment.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I will withdraw.

However, their intent can be seen when a public school in my riding continues to have barriers in two of those categories. The first category: Despite being renovated less than two years ago, the school was unable to install a handicapped-accessible door. Several parents, and even the school's teachers and administrators, have repeatedly requested that this issue be addressed, but their requests were ignored by the McGuinty Liberals. Second, a graduating student faced the possibility of not graduating with her classmates when the lift that allows her to accept her graduating certificate has been broken for many years and she can't get to the stage. This lift was repaired but only after my statement in the Legislature last month that called on the government to address the issue. And, to their credit, it was the Upper Grand District School Board health and safety board that repaired the lift to allow a grade 8 student in Highland Heights elementary school to graduate with her peers this month.

There are examples all over this province that echo the problems faced by the school in my riding.

Interjection.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I afforded you the courtesy of listening to your statement.

One example is the underground pathway that goes from Queen's Park subway station to the various legislative buildings here at Queen's Park. The initial door from the TTC has a very nice wheelchair accessible sign. It even has a wheelchair accessible button that opens the door. However, you only have to walk 30 seconds down the hall before you realize that you will have to climb 42 stairs to reach the next section of the pathway and another 20 if you want to reach the main legislative building. If the entire pathway isn't wheelchair accessible, the wheelchair accessible sign has no business being at the front door. It's misleading.

Late last year, the 2007 accessibility plan for Caledon Community Services was completed. In an article that appeared in the Caledon Enterprise last November, William Goursky, chair of the joint Peel-Caledon accessibility advisory committee announced that Peel region is making significant progress to becoming barrier-free. Some of the objectives include anchoring accessibility checks into the region's planning process, identifying and coordinating accessibility projects, and ensuring accountability through the monitoring and reporting of progress on accessibility initiatives. On the other hand, however, we have to remember that municipalities are calling on the government for fair provincial funding mechanisms to assist municipalities and other provincially funded public sector organizations to comply with the regulations under the Ontarians with Disabilities Act.

I've only mentioned a couple of concrete examples in which government needs to practise what it preaches regarding accessibility. I hope this week, as we mark National Access Awareness Week, that the McGuinty government will sincerely adhere to all four objectives of National Access Awareness Week: first, to assess the accessibility of services and facilities; second, to set measurable goals; third, to make practical improvements, not just talk; and, finally, and most importantly, celebrate achievements when they occur.

ACCESSIBILITY FOR THE DISABLED

Mr. Michael Prue: It is a privilege and honour to stand here on this statement and on the 20th anniversary of this event. I remember 20 years ago—as I think most people in this House would, but certainly not all—Rick Hansen and his Man in Motion tour that set the whole thing going. I remember watching in absolute awe as this Canadian icon went from place to place around with the world with his wheelchair to prove that anything was possible if you had a will and a way to do it. It was because of Rick Hansen and that Man in Motion tour that we first developed an awareness week to promote access, which we're doing now for the 20th time, but more importantly, I think real action started to be taken by all levels of government to make communities accessible for people's various abilities and not for their inabilities.

First of all, I want to start by commending this government, not only for the bill some three years ago—I'm going to get to it more later, and it's not all going to be good—but for taking some very real action around a number of fronts.

1530

One of those that I was most proud of this year was to see, as the minister said in her statement—and I'd just like to re-read that—"Accessibility is a process that we all need to engage in if we want to be successful. And, by working together, I know we can reach our goal of an Ontario where all citizens have the opportunity to fully participate." Oftentimes, this House can be quite an adversarial place. Oftentimes, I have to tell you, opposition doesn't listen to government, nor does government listen to opposition. But there was one real exception that

I think should be talked about today, and that is where my colleague from Nickel Belt brought forward an idea of having personal care areas in the rest areas on highways that are being redeveloped this summer, some 100 of them. The minister and the ministry have agreed, and they will be done. So here is an opportunity that the government has taken, with an idea that I think my colleague first put forward, to actually do something. It will be a great help to people travelling across this province on the superhighways, since the personal care areas will accommodate people with disabilities.

Breaking down barriers to access in all areas—transportation, housing, employment, recreation, education and communications—has a profound impact on improving the quality of life of individuals and their ability to contribute to their communities. New Democrats have long campaigned and advocated for equity and equality for all people, especially in Ontario, because we know everyone has unique abilities and the potential to enrich this province and themselves when given a fair shot at it. In this province, we need to see concrete and meaningful changes that make real and sustained improvements in the lives of those with accessibility needs.

I was heartened as well, again, with what the minister had to say here today, when she said, "Accessibility is much more than wheelchair ramps and automatic door-openers. Everyone needs to gain a greater understanding about accessibility, if we want to tackle the social barriers that exist for people with disabilities. And we all have a role to play in breaking down those barriers."

It is with that that I ask the minister to think beyond the wheelchair ramps and the accessible doors and to start thinking about people who live in poverty. It is trite to state that people who have a disability are many times more likely to live in poverty than those who do not.

We have welcomed these government announcements, but we want to ask a few simple questions. Why must people with disabilities wait another 17 years for the full implementation of the Ontarians with Disabilities Act? Cannot that be speeded up? The government press release mentions a number of barriers that limit the participation of people with disabilities—physical barriers, communication barriers and the like. It is interesting, though, that they chose not to mention by name one other fundamental barrier, the barrier of not having enough money to live a dignified life—the barrier of poverty. Right now, a single person who is disabled and who lives on ODSP funding in this province has to survive on $999 a month. If he or she is lucky enough to have a part-time job, after a very small amount—some $300, I believe—that money is clawed back by the government.

Mr. Speaker, I won't be too much longer. I can see you're getting anxious.

Who in this province could live on that, when a bachelor apartment costs $738 a month?

There is so much more to say, but poverty as well is an issue. We believe that there is hope, and because we have hope—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

PROVINCIAL ANIMAL WELFARE ACT, 2008

LOI ONTARIENNE DE 2008 SUR LE BIEN-ÊTRE DES ANIMAUX

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 12, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 50, An Act to amend the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act / Projet de loi 50, Loi modifiant la Loi sur la Société de protection des animaux de l'Ontario.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I'm pleased to rise today to speak Bill 150, An Act to amend the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act. I think this is a very important bill. There have been many speaking to it, and I just wanted to take a few moments to speak to the importance of having a bill. Of course, no one in our society should accept cruelty to animals. Anything we can do that to stop that from happening—and we see it from time to time. In fact, in my time being involved with the animal world, I've seen a lot of times where they are very, very much mistreated. I don't think that is acceptable in our society.

Having said that, although I support the intention of the bill, I'm not sure that I can totally support the contents of the bill. Along with a lot of the stakeholders, I have some concerns that the bill doesn't totally deliver, that the description of the bill, the compendium that comes with it, is what the intention of the government is. What they hope to accomplish with this bill is not necessarily, in my mind, what we're going to see. It relates a lot to my responsibility on behalf of the John Tory caucus to be critic for the Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

This bill of course relates to all animals. We've seen a number of private members' bills that were before this House, that got second reading and went to committee, but as we know, it's very seldom that the content of a private member's bill gets called back by the government for third and final reading. We had a number of those bills that related to the animals in what we call roadside zoos, where there seemed to be a greater need for animal protection than what we had. If that was the intent of the bill, it would seem to me that this would have been a good time for the government to take one of those bills in the previous sitting of the Legislature and pass it into law rather than go through the process of bringing forward a whole new bill.

When the new bill came forward, I went through it to look at what was different from what was in those private members' bills. I think it was the member for Willowdale who had one that we got a lot of e-mails on in our constituency office, asking for our support to get that bill passed, because it dealt with those zoo animals. But as we look at Bill 50, it goes well beyond that. Again, I'm not suggesting that it should not go beyond it, because obviously agricultural animals need protection too. There are cases, and we've seen some just recently in my area, where no one is quite sure why they happened, but they do happen and we have a lot of animals that are not cared for in the way they should be. Then we need legislation and a process to look after those animals. I think that's what this bill does.

But the other thing I do want to talk about is that as I was looking through the bill—the minister said in the introduction of the bill that after much consultation—and I'm going to assume that the consultation was to take what was already there as private members' bills and see what the people who would be involved would have to say about it and then improve upon that and then introduce this Bill 50, which would meet the general needs of that. But when I started checking with and corresponding with the stakeholders who would be involved, we ran into some difficulties. In fact, there seemed to be very little consultation that had taken place with the people one would think would be the major stakeholders. One that comes to mind, and again it's not the agriculture and food portfolio, but I was somewhat taken aback—I'm sure every member of this Legislature has in the last week or two been continually receiving e-mails from members of the Toronto Humane Society who are demanding—I'm not sure “demanding”—encouraging the government and the members of the opposition to work diligently to get section 6 of the bill—and I have here the letter from the Toronto Humane Society. It is just a letter; it's not really a prop. With your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to read some of it; I think it's rather interesting.

1540

It starts off:

“Dear Friends of Animals

“The Premier is to be congratulated for having promised animal welfare reform, and by all rights you and I ought to be able to support all of Bill 50 which was introduced in the Legislature by Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services Rick Bartolucci on April 3, 2008.”

And this is where it goes off the rails. It says:

“But there is a serious flaw in Bill 50. Section 6 requires the Legislature to strip away the name of any humane society that doesn't want to be a member of the Ontario SPCA or the name of any humane society that the Ontario SPCA itself doesn't want or has expelled.

“If The Toronto Humane Society has its name taken away, it will lose its identity of 121 years. Animals will suffer because those needing our services won't know where to turn. Our income will plummet, depending as it does on name recognition. Severe cuts in services to animals and staff layoffs will be inevitable.

“And for our beloved Toronto Humane Society, the sting of section 6 of Bill 50 is not academic, but real.”

Mr. Speaker, I'm sure you've had the opportunity to hear a lot of speakers on Bill 50, and almost every speaker has related to section 6 and spoken of the challenges. Then when it came to the questions and comments, the government put forward the proposition that in fact this wouldn't happen, that this isn't what this bill does. But the Toronto Humane Society is convinced that it is "not academic, but real." They believe that if this bill is passed in the present form, it would have that impact on their society.

I would just point out that I hope as this bill goes forward to consultation—which I understand the government is looking at, to make sure that it goes to province-wide consultation—section 6 will be looked at. I think it behoves the government to look at that in the vein that if the humane society has that concern and if that concern is real, then we should look at the other side of the same picture, see what the benefit is of putting section 6 in the bill, and see if it would weaken the bill to protect animals if that section was removed. I would like to suggest that that may not be a very good trade-off. It may very well be that for the best interests of all animals in the province and all people who take care of our animals, the removal of that section would likely make this a better piece of legislation.

The second group I would just like to touch on is on the agriculture side, the Ontario Farm Animal Council. They too sent a letter, only they sent this letter to Minister Bartolucci. It says:

"The Ontario Farm Animal Council (OFAC) has recently been made aware of Bill 50 introduced by the Ontario government on April 3. This bill contains wide-sweeping changes to legislation governing the keeping and treatment of animals in Ontario.

"OFAC has long been on record as supporting the need to update legislation dealing with animal cruelty. To this end, OFAC supports the overall intent of Bill 50."

Again, it starts similar to the humane society's position on the bill: that the bill is long overdue, that we review the animal cruelty legislation. But we must do it by taking our time and making sure that we do it right. After 100 years of having the same legislation, it would seem prudent not to rush this through and then make mistakes as we're going through it.

In the last letter, the third paragraph started with "But"; in this one it starts with "However":

"However, this legislation goes far beyond issues of cruelty. In working closely with the Ontario SPCA on farm animal care issues over the past 20 years, OFAC has identified and supported needed improvements in both governing legislation as well as the operations of the agency itself. We're especially supportive of plans to increase budget allocations for training to OSPCA inspectors."

Again, that's one of the things we've been hearing a lot of. In the opinion of the Ontario Farm Animal Council, the training for the inspectors who are presently doing the inspections is not sufficient to deal with farm animals. I think the real concern, before I go on, is that we all assume that while the minister can put regulations in place that will define how things are going to be done and who should do them, it's very important that the people who are doing the instructing, the people who set those rules in place, understand the situation that they're dealing with.

I would just use an example: A number of years ago in this place, they had the opportunity to be on that side of the House, and I can remember as well as I can remember the issues of today that there was a question about the operation of the agriculture field offices. The Acting Premier of the day asked the Minister of Agriculture a question about how that was going to affect the farmers in southwestern Ontario, towards the Windsor area. She seemed quite concerned about the approach that was being taken with the realignment of the offices, and I remember that the question was: "What is a farmer with a 500-pound hog supposed to do—put him in the trunk of the car and take him to the nearest ag office?"—which would then be quite a ways from home. Of course, the intent was to show that the system would not work very well. But the result of that, as we listened to that with the ears of the hog producers in Ontario, was that we realized, first of all, that the hogs are not 500 pounds, and secondly, when there is one that is ill, you do not rush it into town to the hospital; you bring the veterinarian out to the farm.

The reason I bring that to your attention is that I think it's so important that the people who make the regulations are knowledgeable about the issue they're making them for. I just want to go on with one more paragraph of this letter:

"Our concern is that Bill 50, which is now in second reading, is a set of very extensive and legally complex amendments that appear to be moving very quickly through the legislative process. These amendments would fundamentally change the powers and authority of the OSPCA as well as the legal obligations and requirements of all animal owners and handlers in Ontario." That's the point that I was trying to make: that it is a very extensive bill that has far-reaching ramifications as it deals with agriculture.

I also had some comments here from the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. Of course, it's so important that they didn't have time to review it. This is not their official position, because the timing of the introduction of the bill and the need for them to make comments to it were not—there was not sufficient time. But they did feel it important enough that, as part of second reading debate, some of their issues be put on the record.

The first problem they have with the bill is that the definitions do not necessarily define clearly the issues that we're talking about. The word "distress": An animal that's in distress is to be looked after under this act. But that's a pretty broad statement. When an animal's in distress, who determines that the animal is in distress? Obviously, that relates to the right to entry for our inspectors and so forth, but who determines—not being able to see the animal from the road—that we should enter the property to protect the animals?

The other thing that I think is so important is the issue of proper care and how we define "proper care." I was reading about some of the issues of proper care, and it has to do with having sufficient space in which to house the animals, that there's enough room for them to move around, that animals are properly fed. I think those types of things are—what shall we say?—common sense. We have to have adequate housing and care, but how do you define that?

There was also somewhere, in some of the documentation, something about that the animal must have opportunities for exercise. Again, that makes a lot of sense. I think that everyone in this Legislature would agree that good health includes being able to move around and get good exercise. But there's a lot of agriculture that does it differently. We have what they call "caged layers" in the chicken industry. They are confined to smaller areas for all kinds of purposes, for the way the eggs are produced, to keep the eggs clean—not to suggest that the chickens are not comfortable, but it's a different way of life and it's a way that has become more modernized and also more intensified with the production of eggs. But can we really deal with that under the same bill and the same regulations?

1550

Again there is the issue—I spoke about it once before in comments to someone else's speech—of animals being taught to fight. I know that the intent of the bill is to make sure we don't have animals being taught to fight each other and then do it as a sport. I would be the first to agree that that's an inappropriate activity, and the act should cover that. But at the same time, the way it's written now, would a dog that is protecting cattle from wildlife in the field, having been taught to protect the animals and fight, then be illegal under the act? I think things like that need clarification.

The other issue that I think is rather important is entrance without warrant. I think the farming community is very concerned as to how much power and how much right, and what is actually necessary for the inspector to make that judgment call and, without having to prove to anyone, and getting a warrant, that they can enter the premises because they believe it reasonable. I guess we're really concerned about what would be considered reasonable.

The other thing that's very concerning to the agriculture community is the issue of biosecurity on the farms. Having people coming in and out is a rather touchy situation, particularly if they have been on other farms before that. In fact, we can carry disease and such things from one to the other. Obviously that would be very disastrous in a lot of cases.

I do believe there are a lot of concerns from our agricultural community as to how far this goes. We say that the normal farming practices will exempt that animal, but we have the identification of normal farming practices after the action of the inspector, as opposed to before the action of the inspector. I don't know how, exactly, that is intended to work and bring that back together so we have the protection of agriculture for normal farming practices that we require without losing the right for those animals to be protected from inhumane or inappropriate actions.

My time is fast drawing to a close, and I notice I've lost the interest of most of the audience, so I would just—

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: Don't take it personally.

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: The member from Huron-Bruce is still listening. She was thinking I was going to say something negative, and obviously I wasn't. We hope we can get full public hearings on this so that all the people who've not yet been heard in fact will be heard when the time comes and they can put their position forward much more adequately than I can here in my short time that I have to speak to this bill today.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Arnott): Questions and comments?

Ms. Helena Jaczek: I'm happy to rise in support of Bill 50, An Act to amend the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act. I think it's particularly commendable that these are the first comprehensive amendments since the act was introduced way back in 1919, a really significant step that our government is taking. I was very pleased that Rick Bartolucci, the Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services, actually came up to my riding—we have the headquarters of the OSPCA in my riding of Oak Ridges-Markham—and made the statement that our government will not tolerate the abuse of animals, including those kept in roadside zoos, and that, if passed, this legislation will offer the strongest animal protection in Canada. His allusion to roadside zoos is that this bill does build on the private member's bill of our esteemed colleague from Willowdale.

Further, the chief executive officer of the OSPCA, Kate MacDonald, has made the following statement: "We are pleased that the government has recognized the need to modernize and toughen animal welfare laws and create stiffer penalties for those convicted." So we have endorsement from a very credible source. In fact, if anyone is looking for a pet, I would commend them to come up to the OSPCA in my riding. A number of animals are looking for good homes; not only cats and dogs, but I believe there is a resident pig awaiting adoption as well.

In conclusion, I'm very strongly in support of this particular bill.

Mr. Norm Miller: I'm pleased to add some comments to the speech of the member for Oxford on Bill 50, An Act to amend the Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act.

As the member for Oxford pointed out, this bill has grown out of a private member's bill that was put forward last year that dealt specifically with roadside zoos. Certainly I was supportive of that private member's bill. We've had some cases in Parry Sound-Muskoka where a new bill would help to improve conditions. As also noted by the member, the bill has been expanded and has some aspects that certainly need public input, including section 6, which makes it so only affiliates of the OSPCA can use "humane" in their name, and of course that's a huge concern for the Toronto Humane Society. It's been around a long time, so we have concerns with that.

As well, the member for Oxford is a real strong voice for rural Ontario, and he has raised a number of agricultural issues, concerns about some of the vague wording about animals in distress or what is proper care. On constituency week last week, I had the opportunity to meet with the local East Nipissing-Parry Sound Ontario Federation of Agriculture members. Their biggest concern, their number one concern, was rules and regulations brought forward by the government making it difficult for them to stay on their small farms. It's good to see the member for Oxford speaking up and raising the concerns of the agriculture industry. The last thing we need is more rules that will make life still more difficult for farmers in Ontario, more difficult for them to stay on their farms and do the good work they do there. So thank you to the member for Oxford for raising those concerns in his speech today.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): I thank the member for Wellington-Halton Hills and for our next questions and comments call upon the member for Parkdale-High Park.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: Just a couple of minutes to say that I've yet to hear somebody from the government side speak about the question that we keep asking on the opposition benches, which is, remove section 6. I have received over 100 e-mails from my constituents and I want to acknowledge that Mr. Trow, the president of the Toronto Humane Society, is here. Our constituents, certainly in the GTA, are really upset. We are attacking an institution that's been part of the Toronto landscape for over 120 years. The Toronto Humane Society is absolutely not a necessary part of this bill in any way, shape or form, and yet the government simply refuses to speak to this issue. They refuse to admit that this is absolutely turf warfare on their part. They are taking the part of the OSPCA here, and against not only the Toronto Humane Society but over 230 animal welfare organizations in the province of Ontario.

The simple question is: Why is this section in this bill? Why is it in the bill? And we don't get a straight answer. It certainly has nothing to do with roadside zoos, it has nothing to do with protecting exotic animals or any other animals for that matter, except the ones with two legs who perhaps contribute to the Liberal Party before election time.

1600

But if it's not that—this is a challenge to those across the aisle—then tell us why it is there. We've yet to hear why it is there. There's no place for it. We're hearing from our constituents, and I'm sure you are hearing from your constituents. So please let us have an answer from the government: Why section 6? We call for removal of section 6 before this bill even gets to committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): I thank the member for Parkdale-High Park and now invite the member for Peterborough for further questions and comments.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I certainly heard very carefully the remarks of my colleague from the riding of Oxford. He has some background in this area. He is a former provincial Minister of Agriculture and is familiar with some of these issues.

I'd just like to take the time to compliment the general manager of the Peterborough Humane Society, Mr. Brad Algar. I've had the opportunity to work with Brad not only now in my role as the MPP for the riding of Peterborough, but certainly during my time as a Peterborough city councillor. I remember he was very complimentary about the member for Eglinton-Lawrence, who first brought to this House, a number of years ago, the whole issue of puppy mills in the province of Ontario and what a despicable situation there was. These puppies were being born in these mills in conditions that were just totally ugly and repugnant, something all parties in Ontario would certainly want to make sure there was legislation in place to remove. My colleague the member for Willowdale worked to make sure that we clean up how animals are housed and cared for in our zoos.

I know in Peterborough we have one of the great public zoos, Riverview Park and Zoo, which is free to all the citizens in Peterborough under the directorship of Mr. Sisson, who does a wonderful job. In fact, I'm hoping to get the opportunity to be there tomorrow. They have the annual launch of their water park playground, where all the citizens, particularly children, love to go and explore the water ground play park—an opportunity to see exotic animals and domestic animals that are cared for in such a wonderful fashion. So, collectively, we have the zoo in Peterborough and we have the Peterborough Humane Society, which has such an outstanding reputation.

I see all parties coming together on Bill 50, the protection of animals in the province of Ontario, and I look forward—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): I thank the member from Peterborough and now offer the floor to the member from Oxford for his final two-minute summary.

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I want to thank all the members for their kind words to the presentation.

I just wanted to point out to the member for Oak Ridges-Markham, to the comment that the minister said this was going to be the strongest animal protection in all of Canada, that I would support that 100%, providing it doesn't make it also the toughest legislation for agriculture to continue in this province. That is, I think, our real concern. That's why I think it's so important that we have full-scale public hearings around the province, so all the agriculture folks can put their position forward, and those people from the humane society that the member for Parkdale-High Park was speaking about regarding removing section 6.

As the member will know, I spoke to that section too. I'm just hoping that the government members have at this point decided—they don't have the authority to stand up and say that they will withdraw it, but I'm sure they are all sitting over there with every intention, when it goes to committee, to put forward a motion, after thorough discussion with the minister, saying, "Why don't we just remove section 6? There is absolutely nothing that would benefit from leaving it there. Why leave it there, because it's causing a lot of commotion? For the betterment of us all, why don't we just take that out?"

I'm hopeful that the members—and I can see a smile over there. I think that's exactly what the plan is. They're going to change that at committee between second and third reading. If they don't, I guess then they would explain to us all why they won't, because it really doesn't make any sense.

I do want to again thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me the time to speak to this, and thank all the members for their kind comments to my presentation. I do hope that we get thorough public hearings on it so we can flesh out all the problems that are here as they relate to the negative impact it may or may not have on our agricultural community.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): I thank the member from Oxford, and I now invite the chamber for further debate. Is there any further debate? Seeing none, Mr. Bartolucci has moved second reading of Bill

50. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? The motion has carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): Shall the bill be ordered to committee?

Mr. Dave Levac: I would ask that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice Policy for committee hearings.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): So ordered.

Orders of the day.

Hon. Monique M. Smith: I move adjournment of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Shafiq Qaadri): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

This House stands adjourned until 9 a.m. of the clock tomorrow.

The House adjourned at 1606.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.

Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters

Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller

Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum

Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest	Attorney General / procureur general
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglington–Lawrence
Craiton, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet / ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener—Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin—Middlesex—London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough—Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches—East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London—Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming—Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland—Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds—Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton—Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto—Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga—Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton—Kent—Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West—Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest—Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth—Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe—Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener—Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craiton, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Président: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziatti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziatti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craiton,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qaadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qaadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Protection for miners

Mme France G  linas.....2092

Firearms control

Mr. Tony Ruprecht.....2093

Hospital funding

Mr. Bill Murdoch.....2093

Long-term care

Mme France G  linas.....2093

Employment insurance

Mr. Lou Rinaldi.....2093

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Tim Hudak.....2094

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson.....2094

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Bill Murdoch.....2094

Home care

Mme France G  linas.....2094

Firearms control

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis.....2094

Health card renewal clinic

Mr. Tim Hudak.....2095

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / D  CLARATIONS DES D  PUT  S

Rural Ontario

Mr. Randy Hillier.....2095

Catholic school trustees

Mr. Rosario Marchese.....2095

Jack Capitanio

Mr. Monte Kwinter.....2095

Kids' Fishing Day

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette.....2096

International Plowing Match

Mr. David Ramsay.....2096

Catholic school trustees

Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....2096

Algoma University College

Mr. David Oraziatti.....2097

Cystic fibrosis

Mr. Shafiq Qaadri.....2097

Catholic school trustees

Mr. Jim Brownell.....2097

REPORTS BY COMMITTEES / RAPPORTS DES COMIT  S

Standing Committee on Government Agencies

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....2097

Report deemed adopted.....2098

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS / D  P  T DES PROJETS DE LOI

Justice for Jared Act (Child and Family Services Statute Law Amendment), 2008, Bill 81,

Ms. Horwath / Loi de 2008 sur la justice pour Jared (modification de lois en ce qui concerne les services    l'enfance et    la famille), projet de loi
81, Mme Horwath

First reading agreed to.....2098

Ms. Andrea Horwath.....2098

MOTIONS

Private members' public business

Hon. Michael Bryant.....2098

Agreed to.....2098

STATEMENTS BY THE MINISTRY AND RESPONSES / D  CLARATIONS MINIST  RIELLES ET R  PONSES

Accessibility for the disabled / Accessibilit   pour les personnes handicap  es

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur.....2098

Accessibility for the disabled

Ms. Sylvia Jones.....2099

Accessibility for the disabled

Mr. Michael Prue.....2100

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Provincial Animal Welfare Act, 2008, Bill 50, Mr. Bartolucci / Loi ontarienne de 2008 sur le bien-  tre des animaux, projet de loi 50, M. Bartolucci

Mr. Ernie Hardeman.....2101

Ms. Helena Jaczek.....2103

Mr. Norm Miller.....2103

Ms. Cheri DiNovo.....2104

Mr. Jeff Leal.....2104

Mr. Ernie Hardeman.....2104

Second reading agreed to.....2105

Mr. Dave Levac.....2105

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Tuesday 27 May 2008 / Mardi 27 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act, 2008, Bill 69, Ms. Best / Loi de 2008 modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée, projet de loi 69, Mme Best

Mr. John Yakabuski.....	2067
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2069
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2070
Mr. John Yakabuski.....	2070
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2070
Mr. Robert Bailey .....	2073
Mr. Paul Miller .....	2073
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2074
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2074
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2074
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2077
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2078
Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....	2078
Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2081
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2081
Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....	2081
Second reading debate deemed adjourned.....	2081

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	2081
Legislative pages
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	2082

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2082
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2082
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2082

School closures

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	2083
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne .....	2083

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	2084
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2084
Hon. Michael Gravelle .....	2085

Infectious disease control

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	2085
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2085

Apprenticeship training

Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2086
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2086

Driver licences

Mr. Gilles Bisson .....	2086
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	2086

Water quality

Mr. Phil McNeely .....	2087
Hon. John Gerretsen .....	2087

Polygamy

Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2088
Hon. Ted McMeekin.....	2088

Poverty

Mme France Gélinas .....	2088
Hon. Deborah Matthews .....	2088

Consumer protection

Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2088
Hon. Ted McMeekin.....	2089

Highway safety

Mr. John O'Toole .....	2089
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	2089

Autism treatment

Mr. Peter Kormos .....	2090
Hon. Deborah Matthews .....	2090

Gridlock

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2090
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	2090

School closures

Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....	2091
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne.....	2091

Northern Ontario development

Mr. Howard Hampton.....	2091
Hon. Michael Gravelle.....	2091

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2092
----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Michael Prue .....	2092
------------------------	------

Firearms control

Mr. Reza Moridi .....	2092
-----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Jerry J. Ouellette .....	2092
------------------------------	------

Continued on inside back cover

No. 49

N° 49

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Wednesday 28 May 2008

Mercredi 28 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Wednesday 28 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Mercredi 28 mai 2008

The House met at 0900.

Prayers.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Hon. David Caplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I believe we have unanimous consent to put forward a motion regarding division of time for debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 80.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. David Caplan: Thank you, Speaker. I move that the time available to 10:45 a.m. this morning be divided equally among the recognized parties for the debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and to dissolve Algoma University College, following which the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the motion for second reading of Bill 80 without further debate or amendment.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'UNIVERSITÉ ALGOMA

Mr. Milloy moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and to dissolve Algoma University College / Projet de loi 80, Loi portant création de l'Université Algoma et dissolution de l'Algoma University College.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Debate? Mr. Milloy.

Hon. John Milloy: It's a pleasure to be addressing Bill 80, to be opening up the debate on this today. At the outset I want to say that I'll be sharing my time this morning with my parliamentary assistant, the member from Richmond Hill, and also my colleague from Algoma-Manitoulin will be speaking on the issue.

As a relatively new minister here in this government, it's a great pleasure that this is actually the first piece of legislation that I'm bringing forward, a piece of legislation which deals with the important issue of post-secondary education in our province. I've been very honoured and privileged to be associated with a government which has made post-secondary education and training one of the centrepieces of its time in office.

As members are aware, several years ago, as a result of important work that was undertaken through the Reaching Higher study, we introduced the $6.2-billion plan for higher education in the province. That has been supplemented with a series of investments, most recently in the March budget, a $1.5-billion skills to jobs action plan.

The thrust of all this has been a recognition that in the province of Ontario, for us to succeed, for us to prosper, for us to compete with the giants of Brazil, India and China, we need to invest in our people; we need to invest in the education and skills of our people. I've been very proud of the results of the plan. Right now we have 100,000 more students involved in post-secondary education in Ontario than there were when we took office. Some 60% of 25- to 64-year-olds have completed a post-secondary education certificate, diploma or university degree program in Ontario, making it one of the highest rates in the OECD.

The thrust, the goal, of our policy when it comes to post-secondary education, has of course been excellence. We want to make sure that Ontario maintains one of the best systems in the world, and we've seen increasing investments in the operating funds of our colleges and universities as well as the infrastructure. It's been about accessibility. We've had the privilege of seeing about $1.5 billion invested in student assistance over the past several years. We've seen increases in OSAP, increases in special funds aimed at first-generation students, aboriginal students, disabled students and francophone students, who are not always as well represented in our post-secondary education cohort.

We've also tried to have a system which is responsive and flexible, which takes a look at what the needs are in our province, what the needs are in particular regions of the province and respond to them. This third point, in fact, is what we're talking about this morning: We're talking about the transformation of Algoma University College, which right now is an affiliate of Laurentian University, into an independent university. If this legislation passes, it sets out the groundwork for this new university and would establish such an institution in Sault Ste. Marie.

Just to give a little bit of background of the history of this wonderful institution to those in the Legislature and those who might be watching us, it opened its doors in 1964 and has been serving the residents of Sault Ste. Marie ever since. As it's an affiliate of Laurentian University, students are able to go to Algoma and receive a degree from Laurentian University. Over the years it has developed a tradition of excellence. Enrolment at the moment is around 1,000 students. It has developed into a first-class institution where students can choose from over 30 undergraduate programs in areas ranging from finance and economics to fine arts and information technology.

I think it's important to note that Algoma University College provides an important centre in the north for those students who wish to access post-secondary education. Several months ago, the Premier had the honour of announcing an initiative that had been brought forward by our government in terms of distance education. It was additional supports for students from rural and northern areas who have to travel long distances to attend post-secondary education, either by commuting or by traveling there. The one interesting note that I discovered, in helping to prepare that announcement and that program, is the fact that distance can be an impediment for students. Especially in areas like northern Ontario, students don't necessarily want to travel long distances to receive their post-secondary education, and studies have shown that it is an obstacle. So by having an institution like Algoma University College, as it presently is, or, if this bill passes, an independent university, it would provide the ability for these students to access post-secondary education closer to home.

Another interesting aspect of the current institution is its close links with the local aboriginal community and with First Nations education in general. More than 20% of Algoma University College's students are First Nations. It's the only institution I'm aware of that offers a bachelor of arts in the Ojibway language, and it has created close links with the aboriginal communities in the area. Algoma's students, faculty and staff I think recognize the uniqueness of this institution, the fact that it serves such an important role in northern Ontario and the fact that it has a special relationship with the First Nations community and for many years has been working to see it take the next step, to become independent. I think the government recognized this a year ago; the Premier made an announcement, as well as my predecessor, Christopher Bentley, who is now the Attorney General, that we wanted to take this next step, that we wanted to take Algoma University College and turn it into an independent institution.

0910

What will this do? What will this mean? First of all, as an independent university, we're going to be creating more opportunities for students, particularly in the north. As I mentioned, distance can often create a great barrier to students who want to pursue post-secondary education. Although Algoma University will be open to students from across the province—indeed, from throughout the world—it's going to have a special role in terms of attracting students from northern Ontario and making sure that they have a first-class undergraduate education.

The other thing is its relationship with First Nations. By establishing an independent university, Algoma will be able to offer excellence in education to First Nations communities in that area and throughout northern Ontario. I've been very proud of the work that our government has done in terms of the First Nations file. It's been one of engagement, it's been one of partnership, and most of all it's been one of creating opportunities. I want to single out, of course, the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs for his leadership in this regard, leadership that has come from the Premier. Part of creating opportunities is creating ways for people to receive the education and the upgrading of skills that they need. Algoma already serves that purpose, and as an independent university we're going to be strengthening and enhancing its role in allowing First Nations individuals to pursue their education there. If you talk to anyone in the First Nations community, if you talk to the many people, thoughtful people, who have looked at many of the profound challenges facing First Nations people, at the core of the solutions to overcoming these challenges, to overcoming these obstacles, has been the whole issue of education. The creation of an independent university, with one of these being its special mission, will, I think, add a great deal to this government's agenda when it comes to creating opportunity and will strengthen the First Nations communities in northern Ontario, particularly in the Sault Ste. Marie area.

The other spin-off of this, of course, is for the community of Sault Ste. Marie itself. The creation of an independent university will do much to attract more jobs and opportunities to the north. I had the pleasure of speaking at a press conference—which I want to talk about in a minute—a day or two ago, when we introduced the legislation, and certainly we made clear our government's commitment to make sure that Algoma will have, if this legislation is passed, the resources that it needs to operate as an effective, independent university—again, with these special missions about education in the north and First Nations, and making sure that it has the resources. That, in turn, is going to further strengthen the community of Sault Ste. Marie and is going to create an institution which I know everyone's going to be very, very proud to call their own, there.

I want to conclude today by thanking the many, many people who were involved in getting to this point, and hopefully it's going to result in the passage of this legislation. I have to thank the faculty, staff and administration of Algoma University College, the chair of the board, Bud Wildman, and the president, Celia Ross. I also want to acknowledge the support of the local MPPs. I had a chance the other day, when introducing this legislation, to speak about the important role that has been played by David Oraziotti, the MPP for Sault Ste. Marie, who is a strong advocate for his community and a strong advocate for this institution. I understand that the member actually sat on the board of governors before entering politics and was involved in some of the early discussions about giving independence.

I also want to acknowledge my colleague the member from Algoma-Manitoulin—the area just outside of Sault Ste. Marie—who's been another strong advocate for this institution and for this area. I know that he welcomes and has been a voice calling for this independence, because he knows the benefit that it's going to bring to his community and to the north.

I also want to talk about the northern caucus in general and the support that they've brought forward throughout this process of reaching this decision point. They've recognized some of the unique challenges in the north and that the presence of a fourth university through the establishment of Algoma University is going to be of great benefit for people in the north. It's going to continue to bring jobs and prosperity to it and it's going to allow young people who want to stay in the north to pursue their education and to establish roots there.

Finally, I want to talk just for a second about the people of Sault Ste. Marie. As I mentioned, following the introduction of the bill the other day in ministers' statements, I had the privilege of participating in a press conference down in the press gallery, where I was linked by video to Algoma University College. They had taken over one of the large classroom areas there. They had about 200 people there: the mayor, civic leaders and members of the press were there. As well, we had a huge delegation here in the gallery. Together, we made a presentation about the new legislation, what it would mean if it was passed, and offered some advice and some comments that came forward. I think what struck me was how close-knit this community is, how much this community believes in this institution and wants to see it proceed to the next step and become an independent university.

If you'll permit me, I'd like to quote the local newspaper, the Sault Star—what they had to say the next day. They said, "The bill's introduction drew smiles and repeated applause as a full lecture theatre at AUC watched on large video screens while the event took place in the Legislature in Toronto." I think it's a credit to the people of Sault Ste. Marie that literally hundreds would come out to watch on a video screen the introduction of a bill. I think it signifies and symbolizes the importance of this piece of legislation for a very important part of this province, which in turn is going to benefit the north, which in turn is going to benefit the province in general.

We need to have the most dynamic and the most excellent, first-rate post-secondary education system in the world if we're going to continue to compete. I'm proud of what we've done thus far, and I think the passage of this bill is going to add to the excellence in post-secondary education which exists in this province.

Mr. Reza Moridi: It's a great pleasure for me to rise in this House in support of our Honourable Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities and to speak on Bill 80. Today we are considering legislation that would, if passed, make a significant difference to the development of one of Ontario's great communities, Sault Ste. Marie.

The Soo, as most of us know it, has long been an important economic cornerstone of the north. Since long before European exploration and settlement, the local Ojibway knew the area as Baawitigong, meaning a great place to fish. I hear that it still is, by the way. But since the first European settlement in 1668, it has been much more than that.

The earliest French explorers used the St. Marys River as a gateway to the west. It remains a key gateway between eastern and western Canada for grain, iron and many more products using the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway. Economically, Sault Ste. Marie has long been known for its steel mill and for forestry across the region.

As a government, we know we must take steps to ensure the stability of our communities like the Soo, the future competitiveness of our economy and the prosperity of our people. In today's world, a factory can be built anywhere in the world. Distance and borders are no longer obstacles to companies investing wherever in the world they choose. What draws new investment in today's economy is the availability of skills, dynamism and the productivity of communities. What keeps Ontario businesses competitive in the world is the ability to turn ideas into products and services that the world needs. We can foster these conditions by encouraging and helping our people to reach their full potential. In a world where learning and skills are what make us competitive, that means investing in education. Sault Ste. Marie's people have the potential to keep their great city vibrant and strong and to help bring its economy forward and growing into the new millennium.

Our government is proposing to grant Algoma University College independent university status. This will be a major milestone in the long history of this historic community and will help establish a new course for the people and economy of this important region.

0920

Algoma University College, of course, has a long history in Sault Ste. Marie. First established in 1964, Algoma has been providing high-quality education for over four decades. It has been doing this as an affiliate college of Laurentian University in Sudbury.

This legislation would open the door to new paths for the new, independent university, which would become the fourth independent university in northern Ontario. It would give the college the independence to expand programming in the future in ways that would best suit the Sault Ste. Marie region. It would allow Algoma to expand its outreach, recruiting more students and offering greater opportunities to students across the north.

For current students, our legislation would ensure that they are able to complete their current course of studies without interruption. For future students, it means more opportunities for post-secondary education in the north. This is also very important for aboriginal students, particularly for the Anishnawbe, or Ojibway, people across Ontario and the American Midwest, and for all aboriginal students across the north as well.

Algoma has long recognized the important education needs of aboriginal people in the north and has worked hard with community organizations, leaders and students to help improve their access to post-secondary education. Their focus has been on empowerment, working with this important community to help them take control of their future by developing post-secondary programming and services that meet their needs and address cultural considerations. They also offer some unique programs in Ojibway history, culture and language, not available anywhere else in the world. Algoma offers the only BA degree in the Ojibway language, a program of vital importance to the Ojibway people on both sides of the border.

The benefits of an independent Algoma University would cast a ripple effect, beyond its students, across northern Ontario. Sault Ste. Marie has been a strong part of the north's economy for a very long time. But like other Ontario communities, if Sault Ste. Marie is to continue to grow as a community, it must be able to grow its economy and keep up with the rapidly changing demands of globalization.

Having a strong, independent Algoma University would provide an important resource for Sault Ste. Marie. It would help ensure a well-trained workforce with the skills needed to keep local industry competitive and help attract new investment. It would be able to work closely with local businesses and government leaders on shared goals for economic development. It would provide a strong sense of local civic pride, contributing to the dynamism and ingenuity of a community with a strong sense of history, pride in its achievements and confidence in its future. It would help produce some of the new community and business leaders who will keep Sault Ste. Marie and Ontario strong for years to come.

Our government knows how important post-secondary education is to Ontario's future. Ontario remains one of the key driving forces in North America for new ideas, new innovations and new products and services. Oil may be fuelling our vehicles, but it is Ontario's ideas that are helping build the International Space Station, sending BlackBerry messages around the globe in an instant and creating the most productive automobile plants year after year. It is that ingenuity that will guarantee our future.

Last year our economic growth outpaced expectations, despite some significant challenges. In our recent budget, our government outlined an ambitious plan to keep Ontario strong and growing and to ensure a bright future for Ontarians. One of the key priorities that we identified was the continued reinvestment in Ontario's post-secondary institutions. We recognize the important role our universities, colleges and training partners play in helping to ensure that every Ontarian is able to reach their goals. We are committed to ensuring a strong and dynamic post-secondary system for all Ontario students, regardless of where they live or what their socioeconomic background is.

Our students are our future. They are the innovators who will turn exciting new ideas into things that have the power to change our lives. They are our future business executives and company leaders. Some of them will be sitting in this Legislature some day and building on the foundation that we provide for them today.

For Sault Ste. Marie, an independent Algoma University would bring a cornerstone for that community's foundation. Algoma's high-quality programs and commitment to the community have produced great results. Since 1997, Algoma's enrolment has grown by over 42%. That represents many more local students getting their education locally, making them more likely to remain in the community post graduation. This is important in the north, where many young people go to university or college in the south and do not return. It represents more aboriginal students getting a post-secondary education for personal growth and helping their communities grow and prosper.

We believe it is now time for the next stage of Algoma's development: full university status. It is the next logical step in the long history for the development of Sault Ste. Marie. It will be an important part of ensuring that our government's $6.2-billion Reaching Higher plan is able to reach all of Ontario. After all, our people are our greatest asset. Our government remains committed to developing Ontario's post-secondary education system into truly the envy of the world. Accomplishing this will ensure Ontario's place in the future. Creating a new Algoma University is just one step in our government's plan.

Mr. Jim Wilson: I'll be sharing my time with my colleague the member for Durham.

As the Progressive Conservative critic for Training, Colleges and Universities, I'm pleased to say a few words on behalf of John Tory and our caucus on what is an important step forward for education in northern Ontario and a very exciting time for Algoma University, Sault Ste. Marie and the communities along Highway 17, from Wawa to Blind River and beyond.

What we're debating here today is something that I know the president, Celia Ross, the chair of the board of governors, Mr. Bud Wildman, and all of the faculty, the students, the board, the administration and the community at large have been working on long and hard for many, many years.

The power to confer degrees, after a long affiliation with Laurentian University in Sudbury, recognizes Algoma University College's more than 40 years of exceptional higher education, fiscal management and academic excellence. These degree-granting powers aren't just thrown around. In fact, it happens quite rarely. During my 18 years in the House, the last degree-granting institution we saw established was the University of Ontario Institute of Technology, which Mr. O'Toole, my colleague, will be speaking about shortly; I recall Ryerson University in the early 1990s; and of course in 1992, Nipissing University was established, and that was the first time in 20 years that a university had been established in this province. So this is a rare and historic occasion.

0930

In this day and age, to have a university in your city—and Sault Ste. Marie is the third-largest city in northern Ontario—is a real accomplishment. It's an extremely beneficial component to the economic and cultural welfare of the community. As I said in my remarks yesterday when the bill was introduced, I served on the board of governors at the University of Toronto, and one of my first elected positions was as a member of the student council there. This makes me think of how difficult it must be for Algoma University College right now, under the current arrangement with Laurentian University, to have loyal alumni and to attract loyal alumni, because even if you spend your entire three or four years getting that degree at Algoma University College, the diploma you actually get for the wall says "Laurentian University."

I was under the same arrangement when I went to the University of St. Michael's College. My degree says "University of Toronto," which I'm quite proud of—as I served on the student council there and on its board of governors—but when I write a cheque every year, I'm split between, "Do I send it to St. Michael's College or to the University of Toronto?"

This way, it will be clear that graduates who spent their three or four years—and soon, graduate studies—at what will soon be called Algoma U can be loyal to the one institution, even though the 40-year arrangement with Laurentian University, as I understood when I met with Bud Wildman and Celia Ross a couple weeks ago, has worked very, very well. Laurentian University has certainly given its blessing to this new step forward for Algoma University College to become its own full-fledged university today.

I mentioned already that Algoma University College has operated for more than 40 years. I think it's important that some of the history of the college be put on record at this time, because we're now taking the next step forward in the next chapter for Algoma University College and we should all know where it began. I want to quote briefly from this historical outline that is on the college's website:

"The desire to establish an undergraduate liberal arts college in Sault Ste. Marie originated as a broad citizens' movement in the 1950s. In October 1964, the Algoma College Association was incorporated by letters patent of the province of Ontario. One year later, Algoma College was established as a non-sectarian institution affiliated with Laurentian University.

"In September 1967, Algoma College opened its doors to its first students. Its program for full-time students was limited to the first year of the B.A. and B.Sc. degrees. In part-time studies, the college was permitted to offer the full B.A. program. In the early years, part-time enrolment expanded rapidly to over 1,000 students by 1969-70.

"The strong community support that led to the founding of the college continued during the early years of its development. The citizens of Sault Ste Marie, through their municipal government, provided major assistance to the college in the form of capital and operating funds. In addition, local industries, businesses, service clubs and individuals established a scholarship program for students attending the college.

"The year 1971 marked a significant turning point in the college's history in respect to both program and facilities. In recognition of the rapid maturation of the college, the department of university affairs authorized the expansion of full-time in arts to the full three years. The second year was added in September 1971 and third year in 1972. In addition, in September 1971, the college was relocated to its own campus. The college acquired by lease Shingwauk Hall and the Shingwauk site, including 53 acres of land fronting on the St. Marys River. Extensive renovations were completed to Shingwauk Hall, and temporary buildings were constructed to provide a science laboratory, music conservatory, language laboratory, office and classroom facilities.

"In 1973, construction of a library wing was completed. In 1975, with the assistance of a grant from the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, the college purchased Shingwauk Hall and 37 acres of land surrounding the buildings. In 1989, the Arthur A. Wishart Library was opened and other renovations completed. In 1992, the George Leach Centre was opened for athletics and recreation. A student residence was completed and occupied in September 1995 with a new addition available in September 2001. With the completion of this construction, Algoma's facilities are as modern as any in the province."

It goes on to say, "The university is sensitive to the educational needs of the community, and responds to those needs. Algoma University College serves the community in a wide variety of fields apart from its role in delivering university courses. The Arthur A. Wishart Library is accessible to public use. The George Leach Centre is available for community use as an athletics and recreation centre. Other facilities are frequently used for meetings and presentations by community organizations. Many students, faculty and staff lend their knowledge and actively support many community organizations, from government and research to cultural and social agencies.

"From the beginning, Algoma University College has seen itself as an innovative institution, specializing in undergraduate education. To this end, the college intends to remain a relatively small institution where students and faculty can study and learn in a personal environment. Courses are offered both day and evening."

That's the end of what was on the website in terms of the history of the college, but then there's also this. It's written as an introduction for students who may want to attend the college. It's written by Arthur Perlini, who is the academic dean and associate professor of psychology at Algoma University College, soon of course to be called Algoma U or Algoma University.

"Our history harkens back to the 1830s, when a visionary leader sought to establish a place of learning in a community created some 200 years earlier, in the 1630s. The history and tradition of our origins is one in which we maintain a steadfast commitment: to educate men and women to find truth in thought, in engagement, in dialogue. And to do so in a community of scholars, teachers and students.

"You are undoubtedly facing one of the most exciting times of your life, where intellectual exploration and adventure is paramount. While your purpose for doing so will earn you advantage, we are intent on inspiring you to develop leadership and responsibility to the generations that follow you. What we offer you is a depth, breadth and engagement of learning that invites you to the process of learning; we do this in an intimate, innovative and energetic climate. This is our mission. Your promise is unfolding and one that we invite you to share with us so that we may help create the leaders of tomorrow.

"It takes both will and opportunity to succeed; learning is the means by which success is achieved. We hold dear the trust you place in us in this process, as it is you who will shape the world of tomorrow, and beyond."

That's the end of the quote from the dean—rather inspiring words. It certainly typifies what Dr. Ross and Bud Wildman explained to me when I met with them recently, when they spoke of the personal and intimate learning environment. With just 1,300 students and an average class size of 25, it's a very valuable offer they have in terms of more direct and personal interaction with your professors and peers.

When I went to the University of Toronto, my international relations class, poli 208, had 1,100 students in it. We had to have the class, with Professor Janice Stein, at Convocation Hall. That continues today. So when I hear the government bragging about all the money they put into universities, they sure haven't brought down class sizes. According to the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations, we need to hire 5,500 full-time professors right now just to keep up with the increased student enrolment that we've seen under this government—but we also saw it under the previous Mike Harris government.

I just want to conclude by saying that some of the programs the college currently offers, with 30 degree options, range from computer science to fine arts, business administration, community and economic and social development. I know once this legislation is adopted, this list will grow even larger.

I want to conclude by saying to the board, staff, administration, alumni and to the local municipal council and Mayor John Rowswell, who I know well from my days as the Minister of Northern Development and Mines, you have the support of John Tory and the Progressive Conservative caucus. We're prepared to allow speedy passage of this bill because we agree with it, and we agree with you and know that this is good news for northern Ontario and for Sault Ste. Marie. We commend everyone who has been involved at the local level for their persistence and strong resolve to see this initiative become reality. Congratulations.

0940

Mr. John O'Toole: It's a pleasure to join this morning with my colleague and the critic for the ministry, Mr. Wilson. I appreciate his remarks. My remarks will be very much the same. I think all of us are willing to celebrate good-news events and certainly, for Algoma U, this is a good-news event. In fact, it reminds me of the time, going back some years ago, when, in a similar situation, the community I represent—at that time, part of my riding of Durham included Oshawa. In fact, it included the part of Oshawa where Durham College was. Durham College, like Algoma, was the main educational institution in Oshawa, but it did have partnerships with Trent University, because I had taken courses there, as well as, I believe, some with York University. So there were a couple of universities that offered courses at the college over the years. Your degree, as my colleague Mr. Wilson said, would be from the university that had the charter. The loyalties and those things sometimes get lost, and the history and the romance, if you will, of that experience of going to college or university is often affiliated with your alumnus, with where you actually went physically, but your degree will say something quite different.

I think it's important to look at Bill 80's explanatory notes in the brief time that we have here. It says, "The bill dissolves Algoma University College (hereinafter referred to as the 'college') and re-establishes the institution as a university to be known as Algoma University." So it is transformative.

In the case of Durham College, it remains an independent institution, and there is the University of Ontario Institute of Technology, which is a fully recognized, degree-granting university, but they share a campus and they share many resources. They did try something quite innovative at that time. My colleague from Simcoe—Grey tells me that the experience, back when they had the double cohort—you may recall the elimination of the fifth year of high school, then called grade 13. That was eliminated, I guess, in around 1999 or 2000, or somewhere in there. That created a dilemma where students who were in their transitional period, in grade 12—it took about five years to sort of ramp up the content of the curriculum, so that there were really two years graduating at once: those in grade 13, the last group, and those finishing their high school with grade 12.

The double cohort was in all the media and all the press, and lots of criticism rendered toward Mike Harris, but those were transformative times. They actually expanded the capacity and the number of seats and grants to the universities, and at that time, created the new University of Ontario Institute of Technology. I go on to say that because I think we created 20,000 new spaces in universities. That was a huge change. That dilemma of the double cohort virtually disappeared; it never really materialized. Why I say that is that the great outrage was that they expected that everyone would go automatically from grade 12.

How relevant is this is? This is just the ongoing part of the pursuit of higher education. We know that we are all in a knowledge-based economy. Not just for Sault Ste. Marie, but for the students and those who will attend, it's more convenient if that is located in their community. About half the cost of university—having had five children, my wife and I had three in university for three or four years. Some of them went beyond and took more than the four-year course. The point being that the living accommodations, if you're living away from home, cost as much as the university itself. So that part of it is good.

More and more young people are attending post-secondary today, and many of them choose—because of pressures, I suppose, or prestige—a university. Many of those students—I can tell you that almost all of our five children—all of them have a degree, but almost all of them went either to a postgraduate degree or to a college degree to sort of get some real-life skills and experience.

It means so much in Durham's case that that university, UOIT, which is a bit of an awkward name in a way—they wanted to call it DUC, like Duke University. They wanted to call it Durham University Centre. That was the original name that the community wanted and it probably would have been more comfortably pronounceable, as opposed to UOIT. Algoma University—AU—is an extremely comfortable name. It brings so much to a community beyond the institutional names, for the students, the community and the academic infrastructure. Even the saleability of the community in a marketing sense is improved. There is no negative aspect that I can see. It attracts another level of society—I don't want to be snobbish about this—and everyone in the community benefits.

I'm going to try to relate my experience in watching the growth of a new university. I had a very small, insignificant role, unlike perhaps David Oraziatti. It seems he had a very important role. I wouldn't want to criticize that; I think you should be very proud of that. The university has grown. In fact, I know one person who is very heavily involved. I think he's on the academic side, in the sports program. They have a rowing team, quite a good rowing team. They have an Olympic-level coach for the rowing team. For young people, the rowing opportunity beyond academics is invaluable.

There is another wonderful partnership that was just agreed to by the Oshawa Durham Symphony Orchestra. You may not have heard of it. I was at the symphony a few weeks ago. The University of Ontario Institute of Technology and its president, Ron Bordessa, were on the stage with another gentleman who is the president of the board of the symphony. They formed a partnership, and the symphony is now going to have its home at the university and, as such, is going to be building an appropriate facility on the campus over time.

Those partnerships may not have a direct relationship to Algoma, but I see Sault Ste. Marie as a similar kind of place. It's an area I've been to many times. I will speak a little bit about that. It's those kinds of partnerships that make the community richer for everyone: those who enjoy classical music, those who enjoy the research aspect, the connectivity with intelligent discussions, debates and dialogue. It's enriching. They will have visiting lecturers, and all sorts of themes will go through the community, talking about economic opportunities, educational opportunities etc. A university does bring a lot to a community.

Again, I did talk about the fact that the perspective here should always be, most importantly, the students and the opportunities for them and their future, and that's been brought out in this discussion on Bill 80. The programs that will be offered there, as well as addressing the needs of First Nations—in my notes here it says that Algoma University College was established in 1964 and has been affiliated with Laurentian University in Sudbury. Today, Algoma U offers undergraduate degrees, including bachelor of arts, bachelor of science, computer science, business administration, fine arts, law and justice, community economics and social development, and biology, among others. It's also the North American home of the renowned University of Abertay Dundee master's degree in computer game technologies, an M.Sc. (CGT) degree. So there it is, a university in Sault Ste. Marie offering high technology.

0950

This brings me to a whole other level of discussion. I have, as I said, five children, and I'll just give you one example of how global universities and education really are. My youngest daughter has a degree from Windsor, a Bachelor of Commerce, I believe, and is pursuing her master's degree in—I think it's Edinburgh. Anyway, it's in the British Isles. She lives in the Isle of Man. It's not an executive M.B.A.; she has been working on her M.B.A. for three years. She was in London, because her sister is a high school teacher in London, England, and took courses at the London University.

My daughter Rochelle's fiancée is a securities lawyer. David Oraziatti may even know him because he's from Sault Ste. Marie. He's a very smart young guy too. He actually has an M.B.A. law degree from Dalhousie. I'm not sure—I believe he got his undergraduate degree in the Soo; it may be from Laurentian. And he played pretty competitive hockey. His name is Jason Trainor. I say that to David because, as I mentioned, they live in the Isle of Man now and he practises law for a firm—because it's a tax haven location. This is how important education is. He's actually pursuing further studies online at a virtual university through the law firm that he works for out of London, England. Many courses today, especially MBA-type courses, specialized courses, are almost like virtual sites online.

I personally took M.B.A.-level courses when I was at General Motors. The program was out of Northwestern University. We went there once but most of the courses were online.

The beauty of a destination location is that the physical university plant is probably more important for the community than one could really imagine. As I said, one of the courses they're quite famous for is computer gaming technology, this M.Sc. in CGT, gaming technology. I can imagine that those courses in gaming technology probably could be offered online. Why would you need a physical location? I'm sure some of the things now in gaming technology and gaming generally—I'm not a big fan of these things, casinos and things, but it's all tied to what's being talked about here. The basis for that kind of course material is the use of computers, as well as mathematics. Most of those things are probability things, about how much money the government will make. That's the problem with it.

I would say that people pursuing these courses could be doing it online. They could be paying tuition to Algoma. The community could be benefiting from somebody living in Arizona—or as I said before, with my children, in other places—doing it online and learning how to become more proficient in some advanced skill.

I think it is wonderful. I've covered a broad range. First of all, the most important thing is for the community, whether they're First Nations or just young people who live in Algoma and don't have all the money in the world to go to the University of Toronto or Queen's University or the University of Western Ontario or the University of Waterloo.

I became very engaged in the importance of post-secondary education, because I did most of my degree work on a part-time basis. I did go full-time, but I did most of the degree work part-time at about three universities. I was hired by GM, and I had one year of university. It's quite interesting—more of a personal story here, Jim—how valuable this is. The lesson here is that Algoma now is a destination for people who may not otherwise have gone to Sault Ste. Marie for some specific course. That person can become a benefactor, eventually, to that community and to that institution.

I took courses at Sir George Williams University because I was transferred to Sainte-Thérèse, Québec, with General Motors, and it was the only university in Canada that offered night-time courses in an undergraduate program. I was there when they had the big computer revolt. I was taking computer science. They just about destroyed the university. They threw all the computers out the window—it was right downtown in Montreal. Some people may recall that. It was a huge event in 1968 or 1969, somewhere in there. So it goes back a bit of time. That university eventually was transformed. It's not Sir George Williams now; it's Concordia.

I took some courses at McGill, which began to offer courses in a business program at night—evening programs. My wife was going to McGill at the time. So we were living in a student residence. I took about eight courses from McGill. So I had all these different courses, but they were all from different universities.

Then I worked a bit of time in other locations, but I was transferred back to Ontario and ended up at Atkinson College, part of York University, which was the first to offer night-time courses, and I went to York. I think I took three or four courses there. Then the University of Toronto offered courses. I knew people who were going there who worked for the Ministry of Education—a good friend of mine still to this day, Mavis Carleton. We drove together. Eventually I found out that to get a degree you had to have 10 courses from the university. I had eight or nine courses from three or four universities. I had something like 30 credits, but I didn't have a degree per se, so I had to finish 10 courses at the University of Toronto, and that's where my degree is from. I had 36 credits or something, but you only need 20 for an undergraduate degree. It's quite a thing. But I still feel, as I've just described, over those 20 or so years, an affiliation for each of those universities. I'm sure that the students in the future who will attend Algoma will have great stories and history to tell.

How important is that whole thing of the alumnus? I can tell you, I get letters from them all, I think, because as I said before, I had taken other courses, but my wife is an alumnus as well. In the news this morning is an example of what it means to be an alumnus of a school. This was an article in the Globe and Mail this morning. It says, "Developer Gives U of T a $14-Million Gift." It's quite a remarkable story. It says:

"Mr. Daniels, 81, returned the favour yesterday, with a $14-million gift to his former faculty. The donation includes $5 million for scholarships, with preference going to budding architects who, like Mr. Daniels, are the first in their family to go to university." So it transformed his life. In fact, it must have been an amazing family, because he says in this article that he had difficulty meeting his tuition and other expenses and the university gave him a hand so he could complete his studies. So it's a great investment the university made in him, both in knowledge as well as opportunity, and it certainly paid a handsome dividend. He goes on to say as well in the article:

"Mr. Daniels, who graduated in 1950, spent his first year in architecture at a makeshift campus in a munitions plant in Ajax, Ontario"—in fact, that's quite a famous story. The University of Toronto architecture program was offered in Ajax, which is in Durham region. It's such an interesting story. This is one story that was in the clippings today—it's not something I'm making up—about how important universities are, and their history, and the people as well as the facilities themselves. It says:

"Mr. Daniels said he decided to make the gift now while he is able to enjoy it and because he saw the need. His nephew"—this is Mr. Daniels's nephew, and this is interesting too—"former U of T law school dean, Ron Daniels—"

Interjection.

Mr. John O'Toole: That's right. Ron Daniels is a profoundly respected gentleman himself, a nephew of Mr. Daniels, and was instrumental in initiating the gift to the university. It's transformative, and I think that's the best thing we can say about this today.

1000

Some of the current presidents of the universities—Paul Davenport, I think, from the University of Western Ontario, the head of COU, the Council of Ontario Universities—I don't think, are ever really happy when there's a new university; these are my concluding remarks, and probably the only critical thing I'll say. It's another mouth at the table, another plate at the table. Unless more money is put into the post-secondary process, they'll all be a little bit poorer in terms of operating revenue.

If you look at how important this whole process of funding a knowledge-based—and, more importantly, a technically based—economy is, there's a very famous report from about 1998, called the Smith report. Smith was president of Queen's University and wrote a report on the funding of universities. It's a report you should have a look at, because even today, when we've had the Bob Rae study, issued about a year and a half or two years ago, saying they were going to give $6 billion, the university students were here two months ago complaining that there's not enough money and tuitions are too high—higher in Ontario than in any other province. So there is a lot of work to be done here. It's wonderful news, but if this is really a serious commitment to post-secondary education and opportunities for our youth—in fact, an opportunity for our economy and a really important investment—then I want to see the money.

As part of this debate, I challenge the minister, as well as the Minister of Finance, to show me the money. At the end of the day, all the sentimental comments that are being made are just that if there's no money to make this a success. I say to you myself that UOIT, a very innovative university, a strong university with a great academic team as well as lots of pressures in the community and opportunities as well, with General Motors, Ontario Power Generation and the first nuclear program, does need money. They need money for facilities and expansion, and to replace technology that's being outdated. So there is work to be done here.

This is good news. We would be supportive of it. Mr. Wilson, our critic, and myself are here to say that John Tory and our team are in support of this. We are in support of a knowledge-based economy for the right reasons: It's opportunities for young people and indeed for Ontario's future.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I'm also very happy to rise in the House this morning to talk about Bill 80, the Algoma University Act. This bill is about the possibility of a promising new post-secondary education opportunity in this province. I am, of course, talking about the process of establishing Algoma University College, currently an affiliate of the respected Laurentian University, as a university on its own, Algoma University—it sounds good, doesn't it?—a university of distinction here in Ontario, and across Canada and the globe.

To begin, I want to particularly commend the hard work of Bud Wildman, the chair of Algoma University College, and their dean, Mrs. Celia Ross, for their efforts in moving forward this long-standing aspiration of a stand-alone Algoma University as a beneficial addition to the educational landscape of the north.

I also want to highlight the co-operation of Mrs. Judith Woodsworth, presently the president of Laurentian University, and everybody at Laurentian University for their assistance during the transition. I know that Mr. Robert Bourgeois, who will become the interim president of Laurentian University on August 1, will continue the good work to make sure that the transition on the ground happens smoothly.

Il me fait plaisir de participer au débat du projet de loi 80. Ce projet de loi ouvre la porte envers la création d'un établissement d'enseignement postsecondaire dans notre province. Je parle, bien entendu, du collège universitaire d'Algoma. Le collège universitaire d'Algoma est présentement un des collèges affiliés de l'Université Laurentienne. Avec ce projet de loi, on en fait une université indépendante, l'Université Algoma. Il me semble que ça sonne bien. Ce sera ici en Ontario et pour tout le Canada.

Je veux commencer par souligner et remercier M. Bud Wildman, qui est le président de l'Université Algoma, et la doyenne, M<sup>me</sup> Celia Ross. Grâce à leurs efforts et leur vision, ce projet important s'est matérialisé. L'Université Algoma sera une université indépendante, une addition importante pour le nord de l'Ontario et tous les gens qui y résident, ainsi que pour l'Ontario, le Canada et le monde.

Si—vraiment, je devrais dire « quand »—ce projet de loi sera mis en œuvre, Algoma sera la quatrième université indépendante dans le nord de l'Ontario. Le nord a besoin des ces institutions. Les institutions d'enseignement sont tellement importantes pour tout le monde, mais spécifiquement pour les gens du nord.

J'aimerais partager avec vous quelques exemples dans mon comté de Nickel Belt. Parce que nous avons l'Université Laurentienne à Sudbury, les gens et les agences de mon comté en ont bénéficié beaucoup. J'aimerais vous donner l'exemple de D<sup>re</sup> Marie-Luce Garceau, qui est professeure au département de travail social de l'Université Laurentienne. D<sup>re</sup> Garceau était sur le conseil d'administration du Centre de santé communautaire de Sudbury, où je travaillais. Elle a décidé de se joindre à notre comité de développement de la qualité continue.

Grâce à ses efforts et à ses connaissances, elle a révisé notre questionnaire de satisfaction de la clientèle. Ceci nous a permis d'aller chercher des commentaires de notre clientèle qu'on n'aurait jamais pu obtenir si on n'avait pas fait les révisions qu'elles nous a suggérées, et parce que la clientèle a été capable de dire spécifiquement comment on pouvait mieux répondre à leurs besoins, nous avons fait des changements significatifs à la façon dont on offre les services de soins primaires.

Parce que nous avons une université et parce que nous avons eu son expertise, les changements concrets ont eu lieu sur le terrain, et qui ont mené à des meilleurs soins pour les gens de Sudbury. Ça aussi va arriver à Algoma lorsque l'université sera pleinement en fonction.

J'aimerais également mentionner les efforts de M<sup>me</sup> Anita Pelletier. D<sup>re</sup> Pelletier travaille au département de nursing de l'Université Laurentienne. Elle aussi a participé à démontrer comment l'enseignement du nursing aux gens qui sont dans ce programme met l'accent sur la promotion de la santé et la prévention de la maladie, pas seulement sur le traitement. Elle a aidé la communauté à mieux comprendre le rôle de l'infirmière, un rôle qui est beaucoup plus vaste que de soigner les malades. Ce ne sont pas des gardes-malades, comme je dis souvent à mes collègues; ce sont des infirmières qui ont des connaissances en promotion de la santé, en développement communautaire, en prévention de maladies, et ça, parce que nous avons une école de nursing à Sudbury, c'est un message qu'ils ont été capables de véhiculer.

Les jeunes du nord qui choisissent d'étudier à Laurentienne ont beaucoup plus tendance à demeurer dans le nord. Je ne connais pas les statistiques par cœur, mais elles parlent vraiment fort. Parce que nous avons l'Université Laurentienne, il y a eu des collaborations qui se sont faites avec le programme de nursing du Collège Boréale, ainsi que celui du Collège Cambrian, ce qui veut dire que les infirmiers et infirmières qui ont fait leurs cours au collège peuvent faire la transition vers l'université de façon beaucoup plus facile. Ça rend l'accès à l'enseignement du nursing beaucoup plus accessible à tous les gens du nord, et ça rend également le recrutement des infirmières plus facile.

1010

L'autre programme qui rend le recrutement plus facile, c'est le programme de sage-femme. Parce que nous avons un programme d'enseignement, le cours de sage-femme, dans le nord de l'Ontario à l'Université Laurentienne, ça nous a permis, entre autres, à Sudbury, d'ouvrir deux cliniques de sage-femme.

Et, bien entendu, un modèle qui est unique en son genre en Ontario, c'est le modèle de la clinique d'infirmières praticiennes. Ça, c'est directement lié au fait que, parce que nous avons une maison d'enseignement, l'Université Laurentienne, qui enseigne le cours d'infirmière praticienne aux gens du nord, nous avons des infirmières praticiennes dans le nord de l'Ontario et nous avons la seule et unique clinique d'infirmières praticiennes.

Ce sont des bénéfices concrets pour les gens de Nickel Belt, de mon comté, parce que nous avons une université.

Maintenant, les gens d'Algoma, de Sault-Sainte-Marie, Wawa, Dubreuilville, White River—tout le monde dans Algoma pourra bénéficier des mêmes avantages à cause de la création de l'Université Algoma.

If—and really I should say “when”—the bill is called, Algoma will become the fourth independent university in the north. Educational institutions in the north are so important, not only to the people living in northern Ontario, but for all of Ontario.

I know from experience in my own riding that because we have the Laurentian University campus located in Sudbury, it has changed the city. I'd like to give you an example with Dr. Marie-Luce Garceau. She was a member of the board of directors of the community health centre where I worked. Dr. Garceau sat on our continuous quality improvement committee and reviewed the satisfaction questionnaire we had for clients. Because of her work in changing the questionnaires, we were able to get some feedback from our clients that we had never been able to get before. Because of their feedback, we made some very specific changes to the way we offered services to the people of Nickel Belt, Sudbury and the surrounding areas where we offered services. Because of this, the services improved, the quality of services improved, and the satisfaction, from the clients' perspective, with those services improved.

The link was so direct because Dr. Garceau happens to work for the school of social work, and because we have a school of social work in Sudbury, we have professors who get involved in their community and we were able to directly impact the quality of care of the people receiving care in Sudbury. Many, many researchers affiliated with Laurentian University do research that is very pertinent to the people living in the north, and living specifically in Sudbury. In the mining industry, there are all sorts of students, professors and teachers that do research.

I'd also like to give another example from a field I know better, which is health care, of Anita Pelletier, who is a professor in the school of nursing at Laurentian University. Madame Pelletier was able to educate the public as a whole as to the role of nurses. Nurses are not only there to treat people once they are sick. Through their training, they learn about health promotion, community development, and disease prevention. Through the work of Mrs. Anita Pelletier and the talks that she's given throughout her community, people better understand the roles of nurses in the health care system and how they are important in keeping people well. I credit this to the fact that we have a faculty of nursing in the north at Laurentian University.

There are three other examples that I'd like to talk about.

There's a partnership that exists between Laurentian University and Collège Boréal, as well as Cambrian College. This partnership allows nurses who have trained at the college level to do a smooth transition toward university. This has helped a lot of nurses get bachelor of nursing degrees, as well as making sure that we had a good workforce of nurses for the people of the north.

Another one is the school of midwives. We have a school of midwives in the north. In Sudbury alone, we have two independent clinics that offer midwifery services to the people of the north; here again, directly linked to the fact that we have a teaching institution in the north for those professionals.

Of course, I have to talk about nurse practitioners. Sudbury is the only community in all of Ontario that has a nurse practitioner-led clinic—the only one. Here again, the link is direct. Because we have a school of nursing in Sudbury, because those professionals are able to stay in the north to take their training, we were able to have the first and only—so far—nurse practitioner-led clinic. But I know there will be more because it is such a great idea and it's making such a big difference in access to primary care for the people of Sudbury and surrounding area.

All of those benefits will also be available to the people of Algoma. The fact that they will have a stand-alone university in their own community will change forever the lives of the people of Algoma.

I'd also like to talk a bit about what happened in Sudbury when Collège Boréal was first introduced. Collège Boréal celebrated its 10th anniversary. It is a French college based out of Sudbury with campuses all over. It has changed the face of Sudbury. You hear French being spoken way more downtown. It is an active participant in all of the social fabric of our community and has really helped francophone students become educated. The number of francophone students going on to post-secondary education has increased greatly because they have access to a French college in Sudbury and through their campuses. I am sure the same thing will happen in Algoma because as Algoma University grows and prospers, there will be more people from Algoma, from northern Ontario and from all of Ontario who will choose to pursue post-secondary education. They are great opportunities for the north.

Schools in the north are not necessarily the same as other schools in the province. Very often, they provide unique programming and learning opportunities not found elsewhere, often in a very personal and community-focused way, in settings that are, to be honest, breathtaking.

I had the opportunity to study at Laurentian University. Because it was in my community, I was able to keep working as a physiotherapist and attend MBA courses at night at Laurentian University and to graduate. Those opportunities will also be offered to the people of Algoma, who will be able to take training on-site or off-campus and through continuing and online education.

In the case of Algoma, it seems that it is in keeping with this approach. Members of the administration and faculty, with the support of students at Algoma, have been approaching this as an opportunity to highlight and incorporate the community into the educational institution, looking at this as an opportunity for enrichment for both students who will be attending, hopefully, from all geographic areas, and those who live in the immediate vicinity.

They have worked hard to establish partnerships in local subject areas, the first one being in forestry. God knows that the forestry sector is having a hard enough time right now. A little bit of help from the university is certainly welcome. They've also established a partnership with the Northern Ontario School of Medicine. Particularly, they've established a very strong partnership with the First Nations.

It has been a heartening process in bringing answers to questions about how to respect First Nations' interests and to work side by side, with consultation, on how to make the proposed university work. Consultation with the First Nations is a theme that we hear lots about in this House—consultation as to mining exploration—and it's not always done well. In the case of Algoma, they put in the time, effort and energy to make sure that the consultation was well done. It has been an approach that has resulted in a healthy dialogue and a plan that sees First Nations and non-First Nations programs exist alongside each other with no barriers on campus—quite an achievement. Most of all, it respects First Nations governance, which is so important. This is particularly unique to Algoma relative to other First Nations programming. I realize there is First Nations programming that is available in a number of post-secondary institutions in Ontario but Algoma is the only one that has developed the governance piece which is so crucial to success. With its partner, Shingwauk Education Trust, Algoma has signed a sacred covenant and has agreed to a statement of common understanding in fulfilling the vision of Chief Shingwauk in the creation of a post-secondary education program called Shingwauk Kinomaage Gamig. Together, they are developing an educational environment of international merit. This mutual understanding manifests itself in the key application that the approved courses at Shingwauk Kinomaage Gamig will be delivered by renowned and respected Anishnaabe educators.

1020

This is an important achievement, one that has been questioned by some—there may have been tension, and others didn't like this possibility. Regardless, the outcome has been positive. But, here again, it has required a lot of respect, a lot of consultation and a lot of hard work. Further details are naturally still being worked out, but worked out together, so that the entire community can benefit and grow. What a plus for the people of Sault Ste. Marie and Algoma. This is an example that this government will do well to look at when it comes to matters in relation to education, and specifically in matters of First Nations. Consultation and respect for their rights and governance as a nation are crucial to any success. Algoma was able to do it. They serve as a model for others to follow.

For a small school, Algoma is looking to grow, hoping to expand its 1,200-student campus. This requires independence and the legitimacy that is being sought. The hope for Algoma is that they can begin spreading the message of their institution and recruiting students over the summer—an essential part of success as they embark on the university path. It is a campus that is known to be a friendly, welcoming and personal place, and the intention is for it to stay a small, high-quality teaching institution, one that is open to students from the north, of course, but also to students from across Ontario, Canada and internationally as well, because of the high-quality education and specialized programs they have been able to put in place.

In drawing support, Algoma has looked to provincial, federal and private community partnerships that provide high-quality, specialized learning opportunities and unique programming. In order to achieve success in the most complete and promising way, Algoma University will require a great deal more financial assistance than it has been receiving. I think some of my colleagues have already alluded to this today. We call on this government to ensure that this is received and that there is adequate investment in what certainly promises to be a boon for the north, for education as a whole and for the entire province.

Algoma is an example of an institution which is negotiating its growing place in the community, having a dialogue on the process and opening its doors far and wide, wanting to continue to be a welcoming community.

As New Democrats, we want the best opportunities and education for our future generations, but we also acknowledge the reality in this province, where the cost of education is becoming increasingly prohibitive. There is huge student debt, which compromises the future success of our graduates, and cash-strapped institutions that struggle to cover costs and maintain the high quality we expect from every school in Ontario.

Ontario is at the bottom, dead last in per capita spending for education in Canada. These detrimental trends must be reversed. In this province, we have to realize that the phrase "education is a right"—it's not a privilege; it is a right—commit to it and make it a reality.

We hope, as Algoma goes through the challenging yet rewarding process of developing, that there will be mindfulness of accessibility to higher education and that it can be a strong voice for advocacy. In doing so, we will support this bill and wish success for the future Algoma University.

Les néo-démocrates vont continuer d'encourager le développement des opportunités éducationnelles dans notre province, comme la création de l'Université Algoma, pour tous ceux qui pourront en bénéficier. Nous allons continuer de revendiquer l'accès à l'éducation postsecondaire pour tous les Ontariens et Ontariennes. Félicitations à l'Université Algoma. Je veux vous assurer que vous avez l'appui du parti néo-démocrate.

New Democrats look forward to the prospect of future opportunities for educational enrichment in this province for institutions like Algoma and most of all for the benefit of the great minds of the future, learning and flourishing here in Ontario. We will continue to fight for high-quality post-secondary education accessible to all Ontarians.

Congratulations to Algoma University. I can guarantee that you have the support of the New Democrats. Merci. Thank you. Meegwetch.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate.

Mr. Michael A. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I usually enjoy having a seatmate here beside me, but this morning he's otherwise occupied.

I come to speak to this from a very proud legacy. This is a proud day for the district of Algoma, a proud day for northern Ontario and particularly a proud day for Sault Ste. Marie. I represent the constituency, as most of you know, of Algoma-Manitoulin; 86,000 square kilometres and four districts are involved. Confederation College in Thunder Bay: I have many students from the Thunder Bay district of my constituency who go there. Many people go to Sault College who might be from the Algoma district. Many people go to Canadore in North Bay or Cambrian in Sudbury.

Many northern students in the college system go to northern colleges that are in my particular constituency. I'm proud that I have close association with Laurentian University, and with Algoma. I want to say how important and significant it is today to be able to stand here and know that the government is fulfilling a long-standing promise to Algoma which was made—it's not that long-standing—last June by the Premier, who has shown an amazing commitment to northern issues, to northern people and particularly to the Algoma region. Over a period of time, he and the then Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities, Mr. Bentley, and my very good colleague from Sault Ste. Marie, David Oraziotti, who has worked on this file very, very hard for years—he was a member of the board of governors before coming to this place. He has worked very hard on this file, and I think in many ways the credit here is to David Oraziotti for making sure that this bill is before the Legislature today.

I want to thank my colleagues in the other two parties who have supported this legislation and I know are helping us get this done over the next two days. I think it's important when we recognize that in this place we can all come together on issues to make sure that certain things happen.

I want to also recognize my friend the member from Vaughan, Mr. Sorbara. When he was the Minister of Colleges and Universities way back in the Peterson government of 1985 to 1987, he made significant progress working with Algoma University College to make sure that this institution was on a sound financial footing and that it moved forward so this day would eventually come. I know that Mr. Sorbara is thought of very highly in the Soo by those people who worked with him back in those days and then as the Minister of Finance, as he was in the last government. So I wanted to thank Mr. Sorbara for that.

1030

I want to say that many people have mentioned it, including my friend from Richmond Hill today, who talked about the knowledge economy and how important it is for all of Ontario, but especially northern Ontario, to be participating in making sure that the brightest minds have the equipment and the opportunity to reach their potential in terms of making an economy work for us. I think in northern Ontario that is particularly significant today. I want to commend those folks at Algoma University College—soon to be Algoma University—for all the hard work that they've done to make sure this has happened.

Many people won't know, but Sault Ste. Marie is unique. It is a northern city. It is the heart and the centre of Algoma district. My constituency completely surrounds it. But it is also a border community. Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan is just on the other side of the St. Mary's River. One of the things that both Sault College and Algoma University College have done over many years is build bridges to the American institutions on the other side of the St. Mary's River. They've worked with Sault College to make sure that we got great synergy out of the educational system in Sault Ste. Marie, and that has benefited us all. I think the creativity extends to the fact that they have a partnership now with a Scottish university, Abertay, in which they're providing a master's program today. This is an institution that has matured and has shown its ability to move forward.

In many ways today is a proud day for my family, for the Brown family. I was thinking about this when I was coming over to speak. As many of you know, I have four daughters. Number three daughter, Michelle, went to Laurentian University. She studied there. But my fourth daughter, Paula, who is in my good friend from London—Fanshawe's riding, studied at Sault College and then went to Algoma University College. I remember the day that Paula graduated. I stood there, as any proud father would; my wife and I stood with Dr. Judith Woodsworth, who is presently the president of Laurentian University, who actually granted the degree. I stood with Bud Wildman, the chair of the board of Algoma University College, and I stood with Dr. Celia Ross, whom I've known very well and worked with for quite a long time. We stood and we got our pictures taken together, outside. In doing so, Dr. Woodsworth spoke of how Laurentian University was so proud to have worked with—she knew this day was coming. The relationship between the mother university, if you would have it that way, and Algoma was to the point of being matured, and she was supportive of having Algoma University College become an independent facility. I thought, "You know, that's pretty amazing: four daughters—two have gone off to university in southern Ontario, two at northern universities." But more amazing is that one of my daughters had the good sense to marry a fellow from Scarborough. Do you know where he went to school? He went to school at Lakehead. He went to school to become a teacher at Lakehead. I think, more than anything, we, as northerners, have to understand that when we do things that are as good as or better than others, we will attract people, not just from southern Ontario but from around the world. For Anthony, who went from Scarborough to Lakehead University, to another northern Ontario university, I am so pleased.

In many ways, my family kind of represents what we wanted to do with our post-secondary education. Our children have pretty much gone across the province to school; some have gone outside of the province. One has a degree from an Australian university. But it is what we need to engender in a world that is more competitive. It is truly a global village. It is truly a place where children or young people need to understand that we can compete, and will compete, on the basis of knowledge in Ontario.

That is how we're going to compete, and we have to make sure that the institutions are available for them to do that through all of this province, including northern Ontario. That's 90% of the land mass with only a small percentage of the people, but we are a critical part of this province. We supply much of the wealth. We certainly supply a great deal of the expertise and knowledge. Today, when we pass this bill—actually tomorrow—

Mr. Mike Colle: If.

Mr. Michael A. Brown: Yes, correct. If the Legislature passes this bill tomorrow, then we will have done something of significance not only to the entire province but to northern Ontario, to Sault Ste. Marie and particularly to all those young people—the reason that most of us are here today.

I look at our pages out here. I know we have a few from northern Ontario, at least a couple, I think. They will have the opportunity, many of them, to go to school in northern Ontario if they so choose. More importantly, maybe they will meet in their community students from around the world who will choose to come to our universities to be educated. I think it is hugely important that we can do that.

Today I would just thank all members for endorsing and working hard to make sure that this particular piece of legislation comes to fruition in the near future—hopefully tomorrow—and that we can move on to the increased partnerships, the great potential of an Algoma University that truly reflects northern Ontario, our First Nations communities and the people of all Ontario in a way that I know we'll all be very proud of.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate? Does any other member wish to speak?

Mr. Milloy has moved second reading of Bill 80. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Shall the bill be ordered for third reading? Agreed.

Hon. David Caplan: Speaker, I seek consent for the House to recess until 10:45.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): The deputy House leader has asked that we recess until 10:45. Agreed? Agreed.

The House recessed from 1038 to 1045.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to welcome some guests to the chamber today.

On behalf of the member from Hamilton Centre: in the west public gallery, Julie Craven and John Craven, the mother and grandfather of Jared, the subject of the member's Bill 81.

In the west members' gallery: on behalf of the member from Mississauga South, Lily Ainsley.

On behalf of the member from Welland: in the west members' gallery, Jason Gwartz, a former page from 2005 from St. Catharines. And Gabrielle Grant, whom I've just met, is going to be a page in the House of Commons this fall.

On behalf of the member from Hamilton East–Stoney Creek: Mr. Joe Krmpotich, the recording secretary of United Steelworkers Local 2251.

On behalf of the member from Oak Ridges–Markham: in the west members' gallery, Shaista Ali, Raafia Ali and Imtiyaz Patel.

On behalf of the member from Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock: in the west members' gallery, Beverly Roy, her constituency assistant; and Jiliana Davies, a co-op student who is working for the member and attending high school in Lindsay.

On behalf of page Alie Crump, in the east members' gallery: Erin Burke, her cousin; Linda Burke, her grandmother; and Anne Wilson, her aunt.

On behalf of page Damian Ewing: Michelle Ewing, his mother; Berry Hadley, his grandfather; and Beverley Hadley, his grandmother. They are in the west members' gallery.

To all of our guests today, welcome to Queen's Park.

ORAL QUESTIONS

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question today is to the Minister of Health. Yesterday, you repeatedly told this House and the press that you had no idea as to how many deaths had been caused by C. difficile in Ontario. That is difficult to believe, since the January 2007 coroner's report into those deaths in Sault Ste. Marie said that it was the responsibility of the infection control practitioner in each hospital to track the cases and their outcomes. So, Minister, if the hospitals have the numbers, why will you not release them? Why are you failing to protect the public?

Hon. George Smitherman: I want to thank the honourable member for her question about reporting information related to C. difficile and, indeed, to a wider range of patient safety indicators in the province of Ontario. I've been very privileged this morning to make evident to all the people of Ontario by way of a press release that it's our government's intention to move forward with a very substantial initiative with respect to the reporting of these patient safety indicators, starting with C. difficile. The information that the honourable member mentions will, as of September 30 this year, be available to all the people of Ontario by way of consistent reporting to a single website. This initiative on the government's behalf will be led by the physician-in-chief of the University Health Network, a noted expert in the area of patient safety, Dr. Michael Baker.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: It's evident that the minister is in full damage control. But I ask the minister: Do you really expect the public to believe that you don't know the number of people who have died in hospitals from C. difficile? This government knows how many eggs are laid each year in Ontario. They know how many bear sightings there are each year. The press was able to get the figures from at least seven hospitals. If you take a look and you extrapolate, it means maybe there was a total of 5,000 or more. Minister, were there 5,000 deaths? Were there 6,000? How many people have died and what are you covering up?

1050

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I have ruled on that phrase in the past and I just ask the member to withdraw that comment, please.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Mr. Speaker, I would then say, "what are you keeping secret?"

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Please withdraw the comment that you had initially made.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Would you prefer "keep it under wraps"?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I just ask that you not challenge the Chair. I just ask that you withdraw the comment that you made.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I withdraw the comment.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

Hon. George Smitherman: There has been no mechanism to date established in the province of Ontario which brings to one place all of the information with respect to this wide variety of patient safety indicators. That's why the initiative to dramatically enhance the transparency associated with the operations of our hospitals is an important step forward.

The honourable member will know from her time as Minister of Health that Ontario now has 157 unique hospital corporations, each of which will have an enhanced obligation to make this information public in a consistent way, which would be made available in one spot, on the same day, beginning on September 30 with C. difficile, and over the course of the following 12 months or so a dramatic expansion to eight patient safety indicators, which will give all of us a much better one-stop shopping glance at the patient safety indicators that are occurring with Ontario's hospitals. This initiative will see us in a prominent spot in the land in terms of this enhanced transparency.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: We have indicated—and we certainly have widespread public support. I continue to get emails from families whose loved ones have died from this preventable disease, C. difficile. They are saying an immediate public inquiry is needed. You say you don't need one; you have all the information. Then I ask you again, how many deaths have there been, how could they have been prevented, and how many are we going to be able to prevent in the future as a result of an inquiry? So I say to you today, are you prepared to embark and order a full public inquiry in order that more people are not going to die between now and September 30 and later?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's the honourable member's use of the word "immediate" in association with the words "public inquiry" where things break down. From all of our experience around here, we know that those are costly and that they take a lot of time. Instead, because the coroner has investigated quite recently into the circumstances related to C. difficile in Sault Ste. Marie and because of the advice that's available from doctors like Baker and Gardam, we feel very confident that the best interests of patients is served—not by asking lawyers to work for a period of time in review of this or that, but instead to have medical professionals deployed proactively to be providing information. We know transparency can be a powerful aid to patient safety in the circumstances. We agree that there are lessons that need to be learned and applied, but we feel very confident that the advice that is available to us allows us to act with undue haste, with a view towards patient safety. That's why the approach is informed that way.

NATIVE LAND DISPUTE

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: My question's to the Premier. It deals with the city of Brantford, a community his Liberal government has left high and dry. Recently, Brantford city council passed two bylaws, one to prohibit protests at three specific development sites and another to stop HDI's extortion demands for development fees. Premier, do you and your colleagues support the steps that Brantford's municipal leaders have been forced to take as a result of your government's lack of support?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: I want to say—in the supplementary I'll refer to my colleague the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs—at the outset that I know that the community of Brantford has been working hard on this, that they have brought a great deal of patience and goodwill to the table. They're building on a foundation of goodwill that's been in place for over 100 years in that community. We want to continue to work with the community and the First Nations community involved to ensure that we maintain this peaceful co-existence, grounded in a progressive, positive relationship.

I know things have not been easy there. We've heard time and time again from my colleague Dave Levac on this score, who has presented us with some of the concerns. He's played an instrumental role in terms of keeping the temperature down, bringing the parties together and trying to resolve those standing issues in a peaceful manner. I know that it's challenging and I know that the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs will be able to speak to some of the details connected with this.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: I think that response will be cold comfort to the community, because as the Premier well knows, policing and property rights are strictly provincial matters. They have nothing to do with the federal government, which they frequently lob this off to.

Brantford has asked the Premier for help with increasing policing costs, lost tax revenues and to see the law enforced. They see investors who brought jobs and prosperity to Brantford being chased away by your refusal to protect property rights and to enforce the rule of law evenly. Calls for assistance are ignored and your government continues to throw up its hands and say that you can't do anything. The mayor says, "We realize we're very much on our own in this. We're not getting the help we need."

Premier, it's your inaction, your lack of leadership that's forced Brantford to take these measures. No one disputes that there's a role for the feds on this issue, but there is for your government as well. Why don't you roll up your sleeves and get the job done, or are you just not up to it?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I've certainly spoken to the mayor and council and developers in that region on several occasions. The province is absolutely dedicated to rolling up their sleeves and finding every avenue of assistance to that fantastic part of Ontario.

I have to just say what my colleague the member for Brant said. As he said, efforts that are made to increase the tensions are not positive and anything that decreases the tensions is positive. We try and work with council, with the community and with the leadership of the member for Brant, Mr. Levac. We will continue to do that.

Mr. Robert W. Runciman: The reality is, Brantford has been forced to bring in these bylaws because this Liberal government has washed its hands of any responsibility for property rights, development fees, policing and the administration of justice. These are not federal matters; they're strictly provincial responsibilities.

Brantford's lawyers describe the situation as a critical problem that threatens the life of their city, yet you and your government sit by. Your silent MPP for that riding sits by. You sit on your hands and force the city to seek a court injunction to enforce those bylaws. You're forcing them to go it alone in dealing with lawlessness. I ask the minister, and through him to the Premier, when is the Premier going to stop the excuses and start doing his job by fulfilling his constitutional responsibilities to the people of Ontario?

Hon. Michael Bryant: I have to take issue—and I know that he cannot possibly believe it for a second—with his statement with respect to the efforts of the member for Brant. I cannot imagine any member of provincial Parliament who could have done more for his community and continues to do more for his community than the member for Brant, Mr. David Levac. The member has brought the community, Haudenosaunee Six Nations and developers into the same room. He is dedicated to providing solutions. He works every single day on this, not only to build bridges but to get solutions for his community, and it's thanks to him that we've had—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Howard Hampton: I have a question to the Premier. The McGuinty government's failure to properly consult and accommodate First Nations has brought the National Aboriginal Day of Action to Ontario early. Members and leaders of First Nations from across Ontario, indeed from across Canada, have gathered and continue to gather on the front lawn of this building to protest the jailing of First Nation leaders, forced to protect their traditional lands from a McGuinty government that has failed to properly consult and accommodate First Nations before recognizing mining claims.

I want to ask the Premier this: Has the Premier gone out onto the lawn here at Queen's Park, met with First Nation leaders and apologized for the McGuinty government's failure to properly consult and accommodate First Nations before recognizing mining claims?

1100

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: Let me just take the opportunity first of all to say that we look forward to all Canadians becoming better informed on issues that are of concern to our First Nations on the National Day of Action to be held across the country tomorrow. I think we can perhaps take some lessons from what is happening on the front lawn of this magnificent institution. There have been members of First Nations communities who have been out there for a couple of days now. They are making their presence felt in a peaceful and unobtrusive manner, in a respectful way. The security around here has responded in kind. That is exactly the kind of thing that we'd like to see happen throughout the country and, of course, here in Ontario during the National Day of Action itself: a peaceful, respectful dialogue, something we've been working hard to institutionalize as a government.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The Premier talks about a peaceful, respectful dialogue. I note that the Premier has not gone out to speak with aboriginal leaders, just as the Premier and his government have failed to properly consult and accommodate First Nation leaders, even as some of these First Nation leaders have been forced to spend over two months in jail. Why? Because they decided to protect their traditional lands after the McGuinty government failed to do that.

Premier, all of this could have been avoided. Sending a 58-year-old great-grandmother to jail could have been avoided if you, as Premier, had simply used section 35 of the Mining Act to say, "We are setting these traditional lands aside until we can find a resolution to the dispute." Instead, you allowed these people to be put in jail. Why did Dalton McGuinty not utilize section 35 of the Mining Act and avoid—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Premier?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.

Hon. Michael Bryant: Just off the top, the member may be aware, or may not, that the appeal that's taking place today in fact recently recessed because Platinox basically consented to the appeal. The Ontario Attorney General was already taking the position before the court that it ought to be appealed, and obviously, defence counsel is arguing for an appeal. So in fact, this is an instance where it does appear that an appeal will be entered. The individuals, Chief Morris and council—I met with Chief Morris and Councillor Sam McKay yesterday—are out; never should have been in. That was the position that the Attorney General took before the court at first instance, that's the position that the attorney took on appeal, and it appears that that's exactly what is going to happen.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The point is that there was no need to send a 58-year-old great-grandmother to jail. There as no need to send the chief of Ardoch Algonquin First Nation to jail. There was no need for Chief Donny Morris, who simply seeks to protect the traditional lands of his First Nation, to be sent to jail. The Premier could have used section 35 of the Mining Act a year ago, six months ago, three months ago. The Premier could have acted. He could have said that it is not proper to send First Nation leaders to jail merely because they're trying to stand up for their constitutional and legal rights.

I think the Premier has to answer to that 58-year-old great-grandmother and all those people who simply acted to protect their constitutional rights. Why did the Premier fail to use section 35 of the Mining Act to withdraw the disputed lands so that innocent people wouldn't have to go to jail?

Hon. Michael Bryant: I agree. The individuals ought not to have gone to jail and that's why we opposed their incarceration at first instance. That's why the attorney took the position today that an appeal ought to be entered. That's why the attorney brought a motion to expedite the appeal. Ontario did that. We're in agreement. The jailing ought never to have happened, and it is fortunate that now it is over for chief and council. The member is absolutely right: They never should have gone to jail. They are now out. Unfortunately, they were in, but they are now out. The appeal is before the court, but it appears that it will be allowed.

So I say again, this government takes the position that we will continue to work with and support the First Nation of KI on a government-to-government basis—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

LOCAL HEALTH INTEGRATION NETWORKS

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: Ma question est pour le ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée. Last week, the Change Foundation, a think tank funded by the Ontario Hospital Association, invited health care leaders from across the country to a symposium to talk about the rights and wrongs of health care regionalization. Though it was a closed-door meeting, Carol Goar from the Toronto Star was able to report key findings, one of which is to bring all physicians under the LHINs. Can the minister tell us if he plans to go in that direction?

Hon. George Smitherman: Firstly, I wasn't part of the closed-door session, but I heard that 40 individuals came together and had a nice chat.

I think that piece of advice, as one example, is a problematic piece of advice. Firstly, the Ontario Medical Association prefers very clearly to continue to have their negotiations with respect to matters of compensation with the government of Ontario. We have abided with their wishes on that point.

But on the matter of the engagement of local health care professionals in decisions around how health care is organized, I don't think that's about doctors alone. What the LHIN legislation does do is create a mechanism where a variety of health care providers will come together with LHINs and work as part of the team helping to plot health care delivery models. I think that's a very, very effective approach, and I think it is far superior to that which was on offer from these unnamed experts.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: For many Ontarians, their family physician is their primary care provider, the only one. Other primary care providers, such as community health centres, are already under the LHINs. With the renewal of the OMA agreement currently underway, will the minister signal to the OMA that it is the government's position for all primary care providers, including physicians, to be integrated under the LHINs?

Hon. George Smitherman: If the question is a matter of integration, then I think if the honourable member was to review the legislation that brought local health integration networks to life, she would see that there is a mechanism there that engages physicians by the LHINs, alongside other health care professionals. This is a more appropriate way to think about a health care system—to have all of those, not just a special conversation with doctors, but to have a mechanism where doctors, nurses and allied health professionals are all part and parcel of that conversation.

The member knows very well from her time as a leader in the community health centre model that we believe in an interdisciplinary approach and we believe in integration. Accordingly, the mechanisms that we created at the LHIN level, where all those health care professionals will be engaged in a conversation—the same conversation—is a far better approach to this model. LHINs can integrate services and can plan for health care services even in instances where they haven't been responsible for negotiating contracts. We think the model that we've adopted is superior to the one that is on offer by the honourable member.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: The Change Foundation experts have pointed out the importance of including physicians in the LHINs. Having physicians operating under a small-business, fee-for-service model hinders the implementation of an interdisciplinary team, which we know provides the best primary health care, as the minister just concurred. The recent report from the Ontario Health Quality Council makes it clear that we need to focus on health promotion and disease prevention, bringing primary care, including physician services, under the LHINs. Not just engaging them in planning, but actually having them under the responsibility of the LHIN, is a crucial step for Ontarians to reap the benefits of health care regionalization.

I ask again: With the talks between the OMA and the government currently underway, will the minister send a strong signal to the OMA that an effective system of primary care means the inclusion of all physicians under the LHINs, not just consultation and not just engagement?

Hon. George Smitherman: The first thing I want to say to the honourable member is that we're extraordinarily proud of the work that our physicians do. We have 1,700 more doctors practising today in the province of Ontario than even a few years ago. Through the expansions that we've made in the size of our medical schools, including the Northern Ontario School of Medicine, and with the investments that we've made in expanding the access for international medical graduates, we have great prospects for graduating and licensing more and more doctors in Ontario.

1110

They're already integrated and they're already working at the community level. In the South East LHIN, working with the LHIN, they've led initiatives around care connection models. In the Champlain LHIN, physicians from communities like Hawkesbury have been engaged with the Champlain LHIN in helping to plot health care strategy.

We have a mechanism that brings them to the fore in terms of integration, but we continue to believe that the relationship and the investment in doctors is an important responsibility at the central levels of the government of Ontario. We'll continue to have those negotiations between the government and the medical association and make sure doctors are integrated—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is to the Premier. Premier, it's quite shocking to hear your Minister of Health say a public inquiry would be too costly. It is also an insult to the families of those who have died, and they deserve an answer. I ask you: What is the cost of 260 lives—or maybe 5,000? In 2003, you believed that the loss of 44 lives was worth the cost of a public inquiry into SARS. Will you today support a public inquiry into C. difficile?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Health.

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member knows from her time as a Minister of Health that C. difficile has been an ongoing challenge, along with other so-called superbugs, in the hospital environment. This is why it's necessary to take advantage of the information that we have at hand today, to apply that today. The best thing, it seems to me, that we can do to honour those who have passed is to take advantage of the information that we have immediately.

The honourable member, in her first question today, used the words “immediate public inquiry,” and we all know that those matters take a lot of time. We have the benefit of a coroner’s inquest that’s very current. We’re going to work to implement that information under the leadership of Dr. Michael Baker. We think there’s information at hand that can be put to work today with this enhanced transparency and reporting that will benefit patients today, whereas the proposal that the honourable member makes is about downstream. We have opportunities today to make a difference, and that’s what we’re doing.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: The reality is, this minister hasn’t made a difference. He has sat on information, he has taken no action and now he’s in full damage control. There’s no reason why the actions that are being undertaken and proposed couldn’t happen simultaneously with an inquiry; none whatsoever. Some 260 deaths already—maybe 5,000; we don’t know because he won’t tell us. But I would say to you today, you deserve to provide an answer. In 2003, you demanded a public inquiry. Your seatmate demanded a public inquiry into the 44 deaths. Your leader introduced an opposition day motion saying, “Let’s have an inquiry on how best to prevent and respond to such an outbreak in the future.” The reality is, the extent of C. difficile has never been what it is today. Are you going to give us the inquiry that the families deserve?

Hon. George Smitherman: First off, I want to say to the honourable member that the valuable information gained from the inquiry into SARS is information that’s being implemented in the province’s health care system today. The honourable member needs to be reminded that public health funding has doubled since 2003, in response to the circumstances related to SARS. SARS was an event that was managed to an end. At the conclusion of its end point, it was substantially investigated, and that work is being put to the benefit of patients every single day.

In the case of C. difficile, it’s well known, it’s been broadcast across all of the western world and hospitals are grappling with it every single day. We have the opportunity today to put in place a regime of public reporting which will today strengthen the circumstances for Ontario’s patients. I choose, with the information that’s available, to act today on behalf of those patients. There are lessons to be learned. We have current evidence around what we can do to make improvements, and we’re moving forward on that basis.

SCHOOL CLOSURES

Mr. Rosario Marchese: My question is to the Minister of Education. This question is about the 50 schools, including the five in Oshawa, that were announced yesterday that are about to close and the 300 more schools across the province that are on the chopping block. And before the minister gives me the reasons why, I’ll make it easier for her. We all know that there are 90,000 fewer students in Ontario schools since 2002.

Here’s what the minister doesn’t know: Parents don’t like their children’s schools closing, and, by the way, it doesn’t make it any better when Liberals close them. When are you going to do what you were elected to do—keep more schools open—instead of hiding behind declining enrolment as an excuse to let the devastation go on?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I appreciate the question. It’s interesting to me that—and I misspoke yesterday. I said yesterday that when the Conservatives were in office, 100,000 more students were in the system. Actually, it was when the NDP were in office that there were 100,000 more students, and there were still hundreds of schools across the province that closed when enrolment was increasing. Okay?

We’re in a situation now where we have declining enrolment, and the member opposite says that we are hiding behind declining enrolment. In fact, the reality is that when there are fewer students in schools in the province—and that has happened across this province since 2003; 90,000 fewer students—boards struggle to deliver the programs that those students need. Boards need the ability to make decisions based on program delivery for their students. That’s what they’re doing.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I think it’s also important for you to remind the public that you cut the declining enrolment grant by $60 million last year. Why is it that People for Education is looking for ways to keep schools alive and the minister is giving you reasons why they must close?

Here are some good reasons to keep schools open: because you can remake schools into thriving hubs for parenting centres or libraries or health clinics; because other jurisdictions like Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Quebec are coming up with ways to keep schools open, not closed; and more importantly, because parents in places like Oshawa expected you to keep their schools open and their children will not forgive you for closing them.

Minister, do you feel like going back to excuses and delays or will you tell me what you will do today, not in 2010, to keep more Ontario schools open?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: I just want to point out to the member opposite that since we’ve been in office, we have put $465 million to buffer school boards against declining enrolment, $465 million to allow boards to continue to pay the residual costs, because we know that as enrolment declines, the boards still have residual costs.

The fact is that even under the NDP, when there were 100,000 more students, there were 150 schools that had to close because boards made decisions based on program delivery to students. It would be irresponsible of us to tie the hands of boards.

What we are doing is putting in place a declining enrolment work group. I was at the People for Education event on the weekend. We talked about their report that has come out. I am absolutely supportive of the work that People for Education does. We know that our declining enrolment work group is going to need to look at issues like how we have collaboration among boards, how we have collaboration—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: I've got a question today for the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. It's regarding C. difficile as well. I've heard from some of my constituents in Oakville regarding the recent media reports about C. difficile in Oakville and the outbreak at Joseph Brant hospital. They're very concerned, as I am, about reports that C. difficile may be prevalent in hospitals across the province.

You've already said that there's no need for a public inquiry because there have already been investigations into outbreaks at Joseph Brant hospital and the Sault Area Hospital. My constituents would like to know exactly what the minister is doing to track infection control rates in our hospitals across the province.

Hon. George Smitherman: As I had a chance to say in part earlier in question period, we're moving forward with public reporting which will substantially enhance the awareness that the people of Ontario have about patient safety indications in their hospital environments.

Starting on September 30, public reporting on C. difficile, by December 31, 2008, will add to that MRSA and VRE—also known infectious elements in our hospital environments—as well as the second reporting of the hospital standardized mortality rate that came out a few months ago.

By April 30 of next year, rates of ventilator-assisted pneumonia, central line infections, surgical line infections and hand hygiene compliance amongst health care workers will be added to this model of public reporting. This transparency will dramatically enhance accountability and the power that the people of Ontario have over their organizations, based on the information that will be publicly reported.

1120

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: I know there are a lot of people who have been calling for the mandatory reporting of C. difficile as well as a number of other indicators, so it's a very important step in improving patient safety in Ontario. That information will obviously be helpful to our hospitals and the patients in those hospitals.

I also know it's important to be able to measure those infection rates so we can identify the hospitals that may be experiencing particular challenges and assist those particular hospitals to reduce their rates.

My supplementary is, I'd like to know how the minister is going to reduce the spread of infectious diseases in our hospitals and make sure that our patients are even more safe in Ontario hospitals.

Hon. George Smitherman: Obviously, a substantial obligation rests with the more than 100,000 people who work in hospital environments. Over the course of the last several years, we've added substantially to the capacities that they have. We've brought 137 infectious control practitioners into hospital environments. We've initiated the Just Clean Your Hands program, formed the provincial infectious disease advisory committee, created 14 infection control networks and, as I mentioned before, we've more than doubled our public health funding.

We think that the progress that we make will also be augmented by the leadership of Dr. Michael Baker. He's the physician-in-chief and noted patient safety expert from the University Health Network. We're going to make him the executive lead for patient safety. He'll be helping to promote these efforts all across the hospital environment and alongside the public reporting. We feel confident that the patients in Ontario will gain a powerful new ally in making our health care environment safer.

POLYGAMY

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: To the minister responsible for women's issues: Can she inform this House where she stands on Toronto's dirty little secret, the illegal polygamous marriages that are taking place right under her nose at the expense of gender equality in Ontario?

Hon. Deborah Matthews: To the Minister of Government and Consumer Services.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Under section 37(e), I don't think that this qualifies as a responsible referral—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): It's not a point of order. The minister has the ability to refer.

Hon. Ted McMeekin: Polygamy is a serious crime in Ontario. It's not something that's tolerated. As you know, the best advice I can give the honourable member opposite is that if she has any evidence that someone is engaging in multiple marriages, she should report it, because our Registrar General and our official reporting mechanisms have no evidence that that's happening.

As you know, marriage is a contract. A contract requires a licence. Once a marriage occurs, it has to be registered. There are no multiple marriages being registered in the province of Ontario.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Back to the minister responsible for women's issues. I don't buy for one minute that the government doesn't read the Toronto Star or listen to AM640, where imams have openly admitted to officiating polygamous marriages in Ontario.

To the minister of women's issues: If you agree that women in this province are equal citizens under the law, why are you allowing polygamy to occur under your watch? Have you brought your concerns to the Minister of Government Services, to the Attorney General and to the Human Rights Commission to uphold the rule of law and gender equality in Ontario? If so, will you table the documents? If not, why have you done nothing?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: We've already answered that question.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Ms. Andrea Horwath: My question is for the Premier. Why is his government putting the interests of a child murderer ahead of the interests of the child he killed by refusing to order a coroner's stand-alone inquest for Jared Osidacz, the 8-year-old boy who was killed by his father? We want an inquest and we want to know why the Premier won't order one that isn't attached to the inquest of his murderous father and that will automatically grant standing to his family.

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services.

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: Thank you very much for the question. I know that Jared's mother and grandfather are in the gallery this morning. I want to reassure them that there isn't a member on either side of this House who doesn't want the family to have the answers they've longed for. The chief coroner of the province of Ontario have decided that they can receive their answers with one coroner's inquest. I look forward, we look forward, everyone looks forward to that mother and grandfather receiving answers to the questions they've had in their hearts for such a long time.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: All the sympathy in the world is not going to satisfy this family until they get a stand-alone inquest into that child's death. The government can do something about this, and they should do something about this. The minister can use his powers under section 22 of the Coroners Act, or he can embrace the bill that I introduced yesterday, Bill 81, which guarantees a stand-alone inquest into Jared's murder and into the death of any child killed by a parent where child welfare authorities are involved. Which is it going to be? Or will the McGuinty government just continue to deny justice for Jared?

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: I'm going to, hopefully, answer the question from the member opposite, but I'm not going to engage in political rhetoric. I am going to firmly reassure that mother and grandfather that once they're granted standing, they will be able to hire the lawyer of their choice. The government will help with the funding for the hiring of that lawyer. That lawyer will be able to ask the questions the family has. That lawyer will have the latitude to represent that family's interests 100% of the way. I don't think that's glossing over. I don't think that's clouding the issue. I think we're addressing the issue so that this mother and grandfather get the answers they want.

HUMAN RIGHTS

Mr. Khalil Ramal: My question is to the Attorney General. Ontario is one of the most diverse and multicultural centres in the world. Ontario should be proud of our collective heritage and the example we continue to set for many places around the world and, indeed, in Canada. However, I know that communities across Ontario, like mine, must also deal with the negative effects of hate crimes, racial intolerance and discrimination. I also know that my constituents are keen to know that this government is taking a strong stand against these acts of intolerance which demean our dignity and the dignity of individuals in our society. Attorney General, can you tell me what you're doing to eliminate those issues and deal with them in order to continue peace and tranquility in our communities across the province of Ontario?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: Our government's approach—I know the member from London—Fanshawe's approach and I expect the approach of all members of the House—is that we build a society based on respect and understanding. We reject hate. We reject hate crimes. We reject them in whatever form they take. Whether it's Islamophobia, anti-Semitism or any other, we reject intolerance.

One of the ways we have historically done that is through our human rights system. Our government is moving to support the human rights system through the human rights transformation, which will ensure the timely resolution of complaints, beneficial to all, ensure proactive work through the new Human Rights Commission, timely resolution through the newly enhanced and supported Human Rights Tribunal with a legal support centre that will ensure people get access to legal advice when they might not otherwise be able to afford it. I'm looking forward to that transformation on June 30.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I know my constituents are reassured to hear that this government has no tolerance for hate crimes, racial intolerance and discrimination. I know that since taking office in 2003 the McGuinty government has moved forward in a number of different areas to combat hate crimes, promote equality, and deal with many different issues and different people who raise hate crimes in our communities. Minister, can you tell this House—because our communities, especially mine of London—Fanshawe, want to know—what different initiatives you've taken since taking office in order to deal with this issue?

1130

Hon. Christopher Bentley: There is a lot of work going on, not only in our ministry, but in many. I'd like to highlight two. Through the Ministry of the Attorney General, we have a $1.3-billion investment in community-building projects, which get at the root causes of hate crimes and intolerance. There are 23 projects all across the province. The choice of the projects was fed by the advice of a working group that was established by my predecessor, Minister Bryant, to bring very good ground-level advice on what types of projects would be extremely good in dealing with those root causes of hate.

Another project that was launched recently by my colleague the Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services and jointly funded by our two ministries was a $1.4-million investment in programs, the Ontario victim safety project and the safer and vital communities grant program, which again supports community-building projects so we can build that safer, respectful, more understanding society in the future.

SCHOOL CLOSURES

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: My question is to the Minister of Education. I would like to start by sharing a quote with the minister today: "I don't have that list. The fact is that school boards make those determinations board by board, community by community."

The true fact is, Minister, that five minutes after question period yesterday, this report miraculously appeared. So either the members opposite have divine intervention on their side, or they were simply not making that list public. The question—

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: They lied.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member from Nepean—Carleton will withdraw the comment.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Withdrawn.

Interjections.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member from—

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: I withdraw.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: My question to the minister: Now that you have found this list, what are you going to do to make sure that this list doesn't grow any longer?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: What we have is a media scam. There is no official list of schools that are up for review for closure. It is a media scam that is used for issues management. The fact is—and I made this point yesterday—if the member opposite understood how education worked in the province, she would understand that, board by board, decisions are made on school closures, school reviews. That's how the information is disseminated, board by board.

Also, if the member opposite really had the interests of parents and communities at heart, what she would be doing is facilitating the dialogue between her constituents and the boards so they would understand the processes that each board is undergoing.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: That was yesterday's answer and it doesn't cut it today. Minister, you announced $550 million to prevent rural school closures one minute and then you stand in this House and pass it off as a board responsibility. Every time we ask you when the money is coming to save our schools, you say it's a board responsibility.

They don't have that money that you promised. The parents of the students who are going to be spending hours on a school bus every day are not going to forget that you and your government wooed them with that promise of saving their rural schools and then abandoned them when it came time to take action. Minister, when are you going to keep your promise and deliver on the funding necessary to keep your secret—and not-so-secret now—list from expanding?

Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne: We made a commitment in our recent budget for $315 million more in education and another $750 million in capital spending over the next four years. The money that the member opposite is talking about, part of the $3.1 billion that we committed to spend in this term of government—that money has begun to already flow to our boards. Boards are making their decisions on their capital plans based on those resources that are going into the system.

It is irresponsible for the member opposite to suggest to parents and to communities in this province that the commitment to funding schools is not being kept by this government. We are absolutely committed. We have started flowing that money—as I say, $315 million in our recent budget. It is the role of boards to make the decisions around their capital plans and their reviews of schools on a board-by-board basis. That's why we have school boards.

PENSION PLANS

Mr. Paul Miller: My question is to the finance minister. Many Ontarians are worried about their pensions and whether they will be able to enjoy a financially secure retirement. They're worried because Ontario's pension protection legislation is badly out of date and full of holes. In fact, the coverage provided by the Ontario pension guarantee fund hasn't been updated since 1980 and now covers only a small part of the typical monthly pension benefit.

Minister, will you act immediately to significantly increase the monthly pension benefit protected by the pension guarantee fund? Yes or no?

Hon. Dwight Duncan: The member forgets that the NDP government failed to fund the pension benefit guarantee fund. The first time that chicken came home to roost was with Stelco, and what government helped Stelco with its pension? The McGuinty government helped Stelco with its pension.

I would say to the honourable member that pension legislation is extremely important to the future of this province. That's why we've asked Mr. Harry Arthurs to review the legislation. We're consulting with unions and management and we are working towards a fall presentation of his recommendations that will aid and assist us as we move forward in protecting the pension and benefits of all of our working people in this province. I would invite the honourable member, when that comes out, to participate in what will no doubt be a very rigorous discussion about the best way forward for Ontario in the future.

Mr. Paul Miller: I'd like to thank the minister for his comments; however, we've had three meetings with Mr. Arthurs already, and there are some interesting things coming ahead. In fact, the mention of Stelco—that was an interesting comment by the minister. Actually, it was under the Conservatives in 1996 that Stelco's pension responsibilities started having problems, unfortunately.

Minister, the people of Ontario expect their government to be at the table, fighting for them, not making excuses by passing the buck and breaking promises. They are watching your government very closely on the security of their pensions. My Bill 17, which was ignored again, like Bill 6, raised the monthly pension benefit guarantee to $2,700 from the current $1,000.

Will you send a clear signal, Minister, that you're going to take action to protect pensions? Will you support this legislation when it comes to this place for debate?

Hon. Dwight Duncan: What I can say is that this government is committed to protecting the pensions of Ontarians. We have demonstrated it time and time again. There are many difficult issues that demand a very thorough—and, yes, the member is absolutely right. There are going to be some challenges moving forward as we respond to Mr. Arthurs' report.

That being said, unlike previous governments, we will move forward. We are doing so in what I would call a prudent and balanced fashion to look at the complexities of this legislation, recognizing that our constituents expect us to have legislation that protects their investment and the investments of their employers to ensure that they have a very healthy pension benefit into their retirement.

ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD

Mr. David Zimmer: My question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. Minister, my constituents in Willowdale feel that the Ontario Municipal Board is not working. They've heard talk about reform of the OMB, but the reality is that gridlock is getting worse, new condo owners can't get their kids into the schools next door, and they see unobstructed condo and commercial development left, right and centre.

And the situation is only getting worse. Recently, city councillors in North York voted in favour of providing a formal warning to condo purchasers in the Yonge and Sheppard Avenue area, where the rapidly increasing development has turned traffic into a nightmare.

Minister, what have you done to reform the Ontario Municipal Board?

Hon. Jim Watson: I thank the honourable member from Willowdale for his advocacy on behalf of his constituents. Let me just give a couple of examples of some of the issues that our government has dealt with, with respect to reforming the OMB.

1140

First of all, we've established the citizen liaison office to guide citizens through the OMB process, which at times can be difficult.

Second, the list of matters of provincial interest has now expanded to include the promotion of development that is designed to be sustainable, to support public transit and be oriented to pedestrians.

Third, all approval authorities that make decisions relating to planning matters, including the OMB, must have regard to decisions made by municipal councils and approval authorities relating to the same planning matters.

Finally, this government doubled the timelines that municipalities have to render a decision before a case can be referred to the OMB.

It's the most comprehensive reform of the OMB in 110 years to bring back balance to the OMB. We're proud of it. Yes, we have more work to do, and we're open to suggestions.

Mr. David Zimmer: I'm pleased to hear about these reforms. I know that municipalities have struggled in the past with the timelines they've had in which to make a decision before a case was referred to the OMB. However, municipalities want more than a more efficient and accessible OMB. They want the ability to make their own decisions. None of these reforms have addressed the fact that municipal planning decisions are still subject to an appeal to the OMB.

Local communities like Willowdale and others need to have a role. Elected members of council from Willowdale and across other GTA ridings deserve a larger say in the matters that go before the OMB. Will the minister reassure my constituents in Willowdale, who are concerned about overdevelopment and who must go to the OMB to resolve these concerns, that the OMB will take their concerns under serious advisement?

Hon. Jim Watson: One of the things the McGuinty government has brought to the table, when it comes to dealing with municipalities, is that we do treat them with the degree of respect they deserve. They're a responsible, accountable order of government.

One of the things we try to do when we make any changes to the OMB or to an organization that is going to affect the municipal sector—we have signed an MOU with AMO and now we have an MOU with the city of Toronto that requires us, as a government, to ensure that we consult those municipalities before any changes come into effect.

One of the things we did, under the OMB reforms, was that we allowed municipalities to establish local appeal bodies, or LABs. If a municipality chooses to establish a LAB, they'll be able to hear and come to decisions on over 54% of the cases now being sent to the OMB. This is run by the community, in the community and for the community.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: My question is for the Minister of Community and Social Services. There are approximately 100 remaining residents at Rideau Regional Centre in Smiths Falls. Almost all of these severely disabled people will be occupying long-term-care beds in the city of Ottawa. Is it true that you are evicting these residents from their homes of, in many cases, 40 years and labelling them homeless in order for them to jump the long queue of hundreds of people waiting for long-term care in the city of Ottawa?

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: It's very unfortunate that comments like this come from the member of the Tory party. It's very unfortunate. Yes, we are closing these institutions. When that government was in power, they also supported closures.

These people are treated with respect, and the decisions are taken with the individual at the centre, not with the MPP who used to represent that sector and did not want to close an institution because it would take away jobs in his riding—not because of that. It's about the people. We have people in the centre working with staff, who are helping them place these individuals in the right place, closer to the family. The family is involved and the service—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: You are declaring them homeless, and you are putting them to the top of the list by doing that.

On Monday, during debate on your bill, you said that former residents of Rideau Regional were guaranteed as good or better treatment than they received at Rideau Regional. Madam Minister, you're putting many of these former residents in long-term care because they are severely disabled and that's the only place to go. At the present time, at Rideau Regional, there are three staff taking care of 12 residents. In the long-term-care facilities, there are three staff for every 32 residents. That's a decrease of 60% staffing to take care of these vulnerable, severely disabled adults. Madam Minister, how can you guarantee equal caring for these individuals with 60%—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister of Community and Social Services.

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: First of all, let me say that it's incorrect to say that these individuals are placed in long-term care. It is incorrect. These individuals are placed close to their families in—

Hon. Jim Watson: In the community.

Hon. Madeleine Meilleur: —in the community, yes, in a group home. It's unfortunate because this member, even though he supported it when they were in power, has tried to scare the families and say that we are not looking after their interests. The person is at the centre, and we have these people working with them. Two weeks ago, I had a meeting with these officials who are helping to move these people into the community. They were telling me that that's the best job they ever had because they see these individuals before and they see them after—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you.

CLIMATE CHANGE

Mr. Peter Tabuns: A question to the Premier: Premier, in March you appointed Hugh MacLeod to be head of your Climate Change Secretariat. He was going to be reporting to you every five weeks. It has been 10 weeks. Has he reported, and will you table his report?

Hon. Dalton McGuinty: To the Minister of the Environment.

Hon. John Gerretsen: I know that the secretariat is set up, which I think is a great idea, and I'm sure the member will agree with that. The secretariat is there to coordinate all the various activities that the government is involved in. As he well knows, there are at least seven or eight ministries that are directly involved in the climate change program. There have been meetings on an ongoing basis with the secretariat. He's getting up and running, and we look forward to his report in the near future.

Mr. Peter Tabuns: In the newspaper articles, unless you were misquoted, unless your government was misquoted, the secretariat reports directly to you, Premier. Has he reported to you and will you make his report public?

Hon. John Gerretsen: There is an ongoing relationship between the Climate Change Secretariat, which is housed right within the Premier's office, on an ongoing basis. Yes, there are discussions going on, in the same way that there are discussions going on with each and every ministry, from environment to energy to transportation to natural resources to agriculture and food. He reports on the activities that we collectively do as a government to deal with the climate change situation here in Ontario, which I'm sure he would agree is extremely important for not only this government but also the federal government to start dealing with on an ongoing basis.

VISITOR

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd like to take this opportunity to welcome, in the east members' gallery, the honourable Ed Lumley, former mayor of the city of Cornwall and former minister in the Trudeau cabinet. Mr. Lumley, welcome to Queen's Park today.

PETITIONS

ALMA COLLEGE

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I have a petition here presented to me by a number of people from the great riding of Elgin–Middlesex–London, and I want to present it. It's concerning Alma College.

“To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

“Whereas historic Alma College, designed in the High Victorian Gothic style, chartered by an act of Ontario passed March 2, 1877, opened in October 1881, located in the city of St. Thomas, county of Elgin, province of Ontario, has fallen into a dire state of disrepair; and

“Whereas Alma College continues to be threatened with demolition by its current owners despite the efforts of many concerned citizens, alumni and various officials; and

"Whereas an historical plaque commemorating Alma College was unveiled at the college on Thursday, October 28, 1976, by the Ontario Heritage Trust, an agency within the Ministry of Culture and Recreation; and

"Whereas the city of St. Thomas designated Alma College under part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act (bylaw 167-94), in 1994; and

"Whereas recent amendments (2005) to the Ontario Heritage Act allow the Minister of Culture to designate property as being provincially significant;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"The Minister of Culture immediately designate Alma College as a building of provincial significance and, in the event of a demolition order being issued for Alma, to immediately intervene by issue of a stop order, and to further identify provincial partnerships and possible funding to protect the existing buildings from further deterioration while financial resources are generated to restore the property to its former glory."

I thank you very much for the honour of presenting this petition.

1150

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: This petition is a repetition from yesterday, actually, because we're getting many more signatures supporting Bill 56. The petition reads as follows:

"Whereas innocent people are being victimized by the growing number of unlawful firearms in our communities; and

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I agree with this petition and I'm delighted to sign this document.

ALMA COLLEGE

Mr. Robert Bailey: I have a petition from residents of Elgin-Middlesex-London.

"Whereas historic Alma College, designed in the High Victorian Gothic style, chartered by an act of Ontario passed March 2, 1877, opened in October 1881, located in the city of St. Thomas, county of Elgin, province of Ontario, has fallen into a dire state of disrepair; and

"Whereas Alma College continues to be threatened with demolition by its current owners despite the efforts of many concerned citizens, alumni and various officials; and

"Whereas a historical plaque commemorating Alma College was unveiled at the college on Thursday, October 28, 1976, by the Ontario Heritage Trust, an agency within the Ministry of Culture and Recreation; and

"Whereas the city of St. Thomas designated Alma College under part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act (bylaw 167-94), in 1994; and

"Whereas recent amendments (2005) to the Ontario Heritage Act allow the Minister of Culture to designate property as being provincially significant;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"The Minister of Culture immediately designate Alma College as a building of provincial significance and, in the event of a demolition order being issued for Alma, to immediately intervene by issue of a stop order, and to further identify provincial partnerships and possible funding to protect the existing buildings from further deterioration while financial resources are generated to restore the property to its former glory."

I agree with this petition and I affix my signature to it.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly sent to me by Dr. Tom Short. I also want to thank Nancy Zero of Terragar Boulevard in Mississauga for being among the signatories. It reads as follows:

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I am pleased to sign and support this petition and to ask page Christopher to carry it for me.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. John O'Toole: I am pleased to read a petition on behalf of the residents of the riding of Durham, presented to me at the Clarington Older Adult Association recent meeting. It reads as follows:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its" rightful "place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition: It is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I am pleased to present that to one of the new pages, Natalie, and to support it.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network (CE-LHIN) board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

"Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I will affix my signature to that and pass it to Charles.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jim Wilson: I want to thank the residents and staff of Blue Mountain Manor in Stayner for sending this petition to me.

"Petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I agree with this petition, and I have signed it.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Mrs. Laura Albanese: I have a petition from the residents of York South-Weston.

"Whereas the legacy of Pope John Paul II reflects his lifelong commitment to international understanding, peace and the defence of equality and human rights;

"Whereas his legacy has an all-embracing meaning that is particularly relevant to Canada's multi-faith and multicultural traditions;

"Whereas, as one of the great spiritual leaders of contemporary times, Pope John Paul II visited Ontario during his pontificate of more than 25 years and, on his visits, was enthusiastically greeted by Ontario's diverse religious and cultural communities;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Parliament of Ontario to grant speedy passage into law of the private member's bill," Bill 25, "entitled An Act to proclaim Pope John Paul II Day."

I agree with this petition and affix my signature to it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Ms. Laurie Scott: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

These petitions were delivered to me by June Devolin, from Haliburton, the mother of our MP, and I'm gladly going to pass them over to Murray, our page.

1200

PROTECTION FOR MINERS

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I have a petition from the people of Sudbury, Mattawa, Elliot Lake, Little Current and Barrie.

"Whereas the current legislation contained in the Ontario health and safety act and regulation for mines and mining plans do not protect the lives of miners, we request revisions to the act;

"Lyle Everett Defoe," a resident of Wahnapiatae, in my riding, "and the scoop tram he was operating fell 150 feet down an open stope (July 23, 2007). Lyle was 25 years and 15 days old when he was killed at Xstrata Kidd Creek mine site, Timmins....

"The stope where Lyle was killed was protected by a length of orange plastic snow fence and a rope with a warning sign. These barriers would not have been visible if the bucket of the scoop tram was raised. Lyle's body was recovered from behind the scoop tram."

They ask the Legislature that:

"Concrete berms must be mandatory to protect all open stopes and raises;

"All miners and contractors working underground must have working communication devices and personal locators;

"All equipment involved in injuries and fatalities must be recovered and examined unless such recovery would endanger the lives of others; and

"The entire act must be reviewed and amended to better protect underground workers."

I support this petition and will affix my name to it and send it with page Jocelyn.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the growing number of unlawful firearms in motor vehicles is threatening innocent citizens and our police officers;

"Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and being found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities."

I affix my signature and send it over with page Charles.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Mrs. Christine Elliott: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas many young people with developmental special needs have no meaningful social, recreational or vocational opportunities after high school; and

"Whereas many of these young people have no real options for living independently in the community; and

"Whereas current supports in place are insufficient to meet the needs of these young people;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly as follows:

"That the McGuinty government allocate an appropriate level of funding to advance the transformation agenda of individualized funding for adults with developmental special needs in the province of Ontario to allow them to live with dignity and to reach their full potential as members of our communities."

I'm pleased to affix my signature in support of this petition.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: A petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas it is important to ensure that the new birthing unit at Centenary hospital, a $20-million expansion that will see 16 new labour, delivery, recovery and postpartum (LDRP) birthing rooms and an additional 21 postpartum rooms added by October 2008, will not cause any decline in the pediatric services currently provided at the Ajax-Pickering hospital; and

"Whereas, with the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, it is important ... to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding; and

"Whereas the parents of Ajax and Pickering deserve the right to have their children born in their own community, where they have chosen to live and work;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service; and

"That our Ajax-Pickering hospital now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain its full maternity unit."

I affix my signature to this, and I will pass it to Alie.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions has expired.

The House stands recessed until 3 p.m.

The House recessed from 1205 to 1500.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

HABITAT FOR HUMANITY

Mr. Ted Arnott: Two weeks ago, I had the opportunity to attend the Ontario Prayer Breakfast, along with John Tory and a number of our PC caucus members. At that breakfast, we heard from the founder of Habitat for Humanity, Millard Fuller, who gave his inspirational message of hope. Habitat for Humanity International has built more than 250,000 homes around the world, providing affordable, decent and safe housing to more than one million people in more than 3,000 communities.

Georgetown, in Wellington-Halton Hills, is one of those communities where Habitat is hard at work, and for three hard-working local families, new Habitat homes will soon mean a considerable improvement to their quality of life.

It was a privilege for me to join Habitat for Humanity Halton at the groundbreaking ceremony on May 9, when officials and volunteers, including the three families themselves, along with the mayor and councillors of the town of Halton Hills, gathered to mark the beginning of the new homes' construction. Habitat for Humanity Halton aims to raise more than $200,000 cash and at least $65,000 in materials for each home. They are well on their way to achieving that goal.

A few years ago, when I participated in a Habitat build in St. Jacobs, I witnessed first-hand the power of Millard Fuller's words, and his famous quote: "For a community to be whole and healthy, it must be based on people's love and concern for each other." That's why I'm so pleased to see Habitat working to make Halton Hills a more healthy and whole community, even more so than it is today.

WEST HIGHLAND BAPTIST CHURCH VICTORY GARDEN

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I'm delighted to tell the House about my recent visit to the community gardens at West Highland Baptist Church in my riding of Hamilton Mountain. Last year the church developed a pilot project to help the community by creating a victory garden. In its first year of operation, the victory garden grew 1,300 pounds of produce, which was distributed to local food banks. This project was well received, and this year the church has a goal of producing 5,000 pounds of fresh produce.

During my visit last Thursday, I had the privilege of meeting Mr. Bill Wilcox, the man with the vision for the victory garden. I joined him and many other volunteers who helped make this marvellous project possible. These volunteers oversee every step of the operation from start to finish. In some cases, entire families volunteer their time at the garden, helping with the planting, watering and harvesting, and even hand-delivering the crops to the food bank.

Projects like this are an excellent example of how a few dedicated people can make a huge difference. It fills me with pride to see members of my community donating their time to help those in need on Hamilton Mountain, and I hope their example will lead to the development of similar projects in other ridings.

POTATO FARMERS

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: Last summer, Ontario potato growers experienced the longest drought since records have been kept. Streams and ponds dried up. The potato crop was devastated. The drought affected approximately 30,000 acres of potatoes, and those farmers lost an average of more than $2,000 an acre.

For these farmers, it was a natural disaster. They didn't cause it, they didn't control it, and they shouldn't have to suffer for it. But when they turned to their government for help asking for ad hoc payment to help them keep farming, they got a lot of talk but no action.

Ontario's potato farmers need help. Existing programs aren't enough to help them cover these huge losses. They have been struggling to keep up with their mortgages and to find money to plant this year's crop. The companies that depend on quality Ontario potatoes are also at risk. The potato board began discussions with the Ministry of Agriculture and AgriCorp in August, nine long months ago, but so far there has been no support for the potato farmers.

Dave MacKenzie and the potato board have done the right things. They're working with their local MPP Jim Wilson. They tried to work with the ministry. They put forward fair proposals. They sent letters to the minister and the Premier, asking for help. The McGuinty government has done absolutely nothing.

These farmers have been more patient. They have been struggling to make ends meet while they waited for the government, but now the situation is urgent. It is spring, planting time, and Ontario's potato farmers need help, otherwise they're going to become the latest people that the McGuinty government has forced out of farming.

WINONA PUBLIC SCHOOL

Mr. Paul Miller: Overcrowding, mould, poor heating, poor cooling, leaks in the roof, crumbling floors and ceiling tiles, injuries, dangerous parking, sidewalks, paths, seas of portables, too few washrooms—this is the sad reality of Winona Public School, an elementary school in my riding.

The students, parents and community members of Winona need a new public school now. Because of powerful community activism and the efforts of the school's parent council, the Hamilton-Wentworth District School Board has committed in its 2008 capital plan to build a new Winona Public School. This, however, is subject to the approval of the Ministry of Education.

In June, the Hamilton-Wentworth District School Board will submit a business case to the ministry calling for a new public school in the Winona area to alleviate the current accommodation and facility pressures. In keeping with the promise to uphold the Ontario safe schools strategy, I expect that the Minister of Education will personally ensure that the approval and funding are granted expeditiously to address this urgent need so that the construction of the Winona Public School can commence immediately.

I look forward to the delivery of good news to the Winona community in my riding and encourage that this decision be made before the school year ends.

CITY OF CORNWALL

Mr. Jim Brownell: Last year, Ottawa Citizen reporter Kelly Egan wrote an article about the city of Cornwall, located in my riding of Stormont-Dundas-South Glengarry, where he referred to Cornwall as "unkillable" and "a cool place" and said that there is something "so Canadian" about the city.

He is right. The story of Cornwall, and my entire riding, is steeped in the history of our country. Indeed, Ontario's first Premier, John Sandfield Macdonald, was born in my riding at St. Raphael's, practised law in Cornwall, and is buried just north of the city at St. Andrew's West.

As Ontario becomes an increasingly multicultural place, this is reflected in the rich ethnic diversity to be found in my riding.

As our economy shifts from traditional manufacturing to a new era of development, Cornwall is once again at the forefront. Just recently, Verdant Power, a company specializing in the creation of renewable energy from the current of a river, announced that they would develop a power project on the St. Lawrence River at Cornwall. This and other companies are capitalizing on our affordable property rates, access to major markets, bilingual workforce and the "can do" spirit of the community.

Cornwall and area is emerging as the best place to establish industries that focus on new and emerging technologies, and I am proud to continue working with local leaders, those leaders we have in the gallery here today, and businesses as we continue our local economic renaissance.

ELECTRICITY TRANSMISSION

Mr. Toby Barrett: CBC reports that a coalition of native groups is proposing to own a 49% share in new electricity transmission lines from Sudbury to Barrie. It has been suggested that share ownership would lessen the possibility of vandalism.

We saw vandals damage the power towers in Caledonia two years ago. The Niagara-to-Caledonia power lines have been sitting unfinished for the past two years.

Is this government now going to hand over shares of public assets to prevent vandalism? Is this bowing to extortion?

The Premier said this morning, "I can say I like the notion of finding more ways to put more of these central revenues into the hands of our aboriginal communities, and if there's some possibilities there, we'll look at them."

We see what happened in Brantford because the people of Brantford refused to do business with the HDI extortionists, but this government has refused to protect the people in Brantford from these extortionists, those in HDI asking for money to make the protests go away.

I have questions, Speaker. Are the public, our electricity ratepayers, going to have a say in whether their transmission assets are going to be handed over? Will people in Ontario, electricity users, want to be part of any potential for extortion?

HOSPICE NORTHUMBERLAND LAKESHORE

Mr. Lou Rinaldi: It's with great pleasure that I rise today to speak about Hospice Northumberland Lakeshore.

I had the pleasure last Saturday to host seven mayors and councillors from my riding and their assistants at the ninth annual Hospice Cup Challenge. This annual challenge features a race of sorts, with the winner taking home the Hospice Cup. This year, I was blindfolded while attempting a three-legged race with my EA. We didn't win the race. The hospice was the big winner at the end of the night. We raised almost $12,000 that night, which totals almost $70,000 over the past eight years in pledges raised by the local mayors and MPPs.

1510

Please join me in thanking the mayors and their assistants, and especially the volunteers of Hospice Northumberland Lakeshore. These tireless volunteers give their time, efforts and talents to make our communities such a wonderful place to live. Bonnie Walker and Nancy Crapper have been the heart behind the fundraising efforts, and they're officially retiring from their many years of volunteering with the hospice. Please join me in thanking them for their years of dedication and in wishing them well in their retirement.

WOMEN'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL

Mr. David Zimmer: I want to talk about a very important event this month being organized by the Women's College Hospital Foundation here in Toronto. On Thursday, May 29, former British Prime Minister Tony Blair will speak at a gala event to benefit Women's College Hospital Foundation. This is part of the foundation's speaking series, which has fundraised more than $4 million to support research and care at Women's College Hospital. The evening will be a great opportunity to hear Mr. Blair speak about his political life and his ongoing work as the Middle East envoy for the UN, the European Union, the United States and Russia. Up to 1,500 people are expected to attend and support this very important work of the hospital.

Women's College Hospital is the only hospital in Ontario with a primary focus on women's health. The fundraiser will enable the hospital to continue its leading-edge research and explore new and better ways to provide health care to women and their families throughout every phase of their life.

I urge all members of the House, as well as their constituents, to learn more about this evening with Tony Blair and do, please, support Women's College Hospital.

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY

Mr. Michael A. Brown: This morning, this assembly gave second reading to Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and to dissolve Algoma University College. This bill, when passed, will make Algoma University a free-standing, independent, degree-granting institution. This is a significant and important step for post-secondary education in the north, in Algoma and obviously in Sault Ste. Marie.

Since its inception in 1964, Algoma University has evolved into a proud multidisciplinary institution which is known for its innovation and its partnerships. Its creativity in programming, the excellence of its professors and teaching staff, the support staff, the administration and particularly the vision of its president, Dr. Celia Ross, have helped make this day a reality.

I want to acknowledge the Premier for his commitment to Algoma, Minister Milloy for moving quickly with this bill, the support of the community of Sault Ste. Marie and its mayor, John Rowswell, the support of Algoma District municipalities, and particularly the strong championing of this project by my colleague the MPP for Sault Ste. Marie, David Oraziotti. I want to thank all members of this House on all sides for expediting the progress of this bill. Congratulations to the chair, Bud Wildman, and to the board of governors.

Bill 80 is an important milestone on a journey to an even more prosperous future for northern Ontario students and the northern economy. We look forward to great things.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I beg to inform the House that, pursuant to standing order 97(c), changes have been made to the order of precedence on the ballot list for private members' public business, such that Mr. Kwinter assumes ballot item number 68 and Mr. Ramal assumes ballot item number 32, and Mr. Flynn assumes ballot item number 31 and Mr. Brownell assumes ballot item number 76.

ALMA COLLEGE

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I need to seek the indulgence of the House for a moment. I recognize that I'm probably out of order and I can't rule myself out of order, but I lost a really good friend today, and it was a heritage building. Alma College was a historic school in my community that towered over the city. I could see it from my backyard and from my office every day. Tragically, it burned to the ground at noon this afternoon. I trust that if it was arson, they will find the culprits.

For me, Alma was a special place. First, it was incorporated by this very chamber in its beginning, and it stood as a monument for a long time. I worked at that college 20 years ago when I was a university student. It was a special thing to have a girls' school and being the only guy that could walk through the front gates of that school and not be arrested. I say this because there have been community citizens for over 20 years who have actively tried to find a new use for the building. And in over 20 years, we've had various governments.

I needed to make the statement for myself and to say thank you to the people over the years who worked so hard to preserve this building. I just ask that we remember that. I hope it's a lesson to all of us that our heritage is precious and that we need to collectively do what we can to ensure that we preserve our heritage for future generations. Once these buildings are gone, they're gone. You can't ever bring them back.

If nothing else, I hope that this fire today at Alma College—that all the work everyone has done over the years hasn't been in vain, that we can learn collectively that it's incumbent on all of us to make sure that we stand up and preserve our heritage and find ways of developing new and unique partnerships to make sure that these symbols will remain for generations to come. I thank the members for allowing me this opportunity.

Mr. Toby Barrett: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: My wife was one of those girls who graduated from Alma, and I thank you for your sense of history and for making that statement.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): It's not a point of order, but I will accept it as a point of order today. It was interesting speaking to the member from Parry Sound—Muskoka. Norm Miller's sister attended Alma College as well, and Norm very well remembers visiting the school and acting as a date for his sister for a graduation ceremony.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

HANDGUN MANUFACTURERS' AND IMPORTERS' LIABILITY ACT, 2008 LOI DE 2008 SUR LA RESPONSABILITÉ DES FABRICANTS ET DES IMPORTATEURS D'ARMES DE POING

Mr. Flynn moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 82, An Act to make manufacturers and importers liable for harm caused by the unlawful use of handguns / Projet de loi 82, Loi imputant aux fabricants et aux importateurs la responsabilité de toute atteinte causée par l'utilisation illégale d'armes de poing.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Member for a short statement.

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: With the news today in the media of another fatal shooting in Toronto, I'd like to explain that this bill provides that when a person is injured or killed as a result of the actual or threatened unlawful use of a handgun, the person or the personal representative and his or her dependents are entitled to bring an action against the handgun manufacturer or importer. The crown in right of Ontario is also entitled to bring an action against the manufacturer or the importer of handguns to recover the cost of health care benefits caused or contributed to by the actual or threatened unlawful use of handguns.

SKIN CANCER PREVENTION ACT, 2008 LOI DE 2008 SUR LA PRÉVENTION DU CANCER DE LA PEAU

Mr. Ramal moved first reading of the following bill:

Bill 83, An Act to help prevent skin cancer / Projet de loi 83, Loi aidant à prévenir le cancer de la peau.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Member for a short statement.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: This bill provides for a prohibition on selling or supplying tanning services or ultraviolet light treatment services to a person under the age of 19. The prohibition does not apply to ultraviolet treatments prescribed by authorized medical professionals for conditions prescribed by the regulations.

1520

MOTIONS

COMMITTEE SITTINGS

Hon. John Wilkinson: I seek unanimous consent to move a motion without notice with respect to the Standing Committee on the Legislative Assembly and the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. John Wilkinson: I move that the Standing Committee on the Legislative Assembly be authorized to attend the annual meeting of the National Conference of State Legislatures and that the Standing Committee on Public Accounts be authorized to attend the 29th annual conference of the Canadian Council of Public Accounts Committees.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

SMOKE-FREE ONTARIO AMENDMENT ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 MODIFIANT LA LOI FAVORISANT UN ONTARIO SANS FUMÉE

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 27, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act / Projet de loi 69, Loi modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée pour protéger les enfants contre le tabagisme passif dans les véhicules automobiles.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I will be sharing my time with the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing.

I'm very pleased to be able to speak today in support of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles. What we're doing here is amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act. This bill, if passed, will ban smoking in a motor vehicle when children who are under the age of 16 are in the car. Specifically, any person who is caught smoking in a car with a young child in it could receive a ticket of $250. The police will have this on the list of offences that they will be responsible for enforcing—and just to emphasize that the legislation applies to children under the age of 16.

We're doing this because the medical science is very clear: Second-hand smoke is dangerous to everyone, but particularly to children. We know that children who breathe second-hand smoke are more likely to suffer health problems such as sudden infant death syndrome and asthma as young people, and later in life they're more likely to suffer from cancer and cardiac disease. So this is a very important health initiative from the point of view of the child.

We also know that second-hand smoke levels in motor vehicles can be up to 27 times worse than in a smoker's home. Some people have said, "Why are you particularly zeroing in on smoking in cars with kids?" That's why. It's because the level of the intensity of the smoke they are breathing and therefore the number of harmful, poisonous agents that young child is breathing in is much more intense in a car than in a home or some other venue where a child might be and where there are adult smokers there.

We also know that in this climate that we have, while in the summer you might drive around with the windows open if you're smoking in the car, in a Canadian winter, if it's 20 or 30 below out, you keep the windows closed, and that means that the concentration of smoke in that vehicle is very high.

In fact, we know there is a lot of public support for this. The Canadian Cancer Society has been doing some work on this and found in a poll done in January that 82% of Ontario citizens support a ban on smoking in vehicles with children. I think the public understands the health risks involved here and that we need to act on this, and I hope act on it quickly.

When we first came to power in 2003, smoking was permitted in many places. Obviously with the Smoke-Free Ontario Act—and I'm sure my colleague the minister will want to speak about this—we've cut down on the number of places in which smoking is allowed. During that time period, tobacco consumption in Ontario has fallen by 31.8%. That's really important; we're having an impact.

One of the things that we've been doing is targeting some of our programs at young people, people in the high school and university age group. The programs that we've introduced to deal with smoking in that age group include peer leadership programs for teens aged 14 to 17 that engage youth in tobacco control activities within their local communities.

Interestingly enough, this group in my community of Guelph has actually branched out beyond tobacco smoke to express a concern about chewing tobacco, so the group of young people in my area is now focusing on trying to educate their peers about the dangers of chewing tobacco and how that can also have a negative impact on a young person's health.

Of course, a lot of people are aware of stupid.ca, which was developed for youth by youth and has been very successful in making young people aware of the dangers of tobacco in a way that really grabs them.

Our plan is working. The Centre for Addiction and Mental Health did a survey in 2007 and found that 72% of students in grades 7 to 12 reported never smoking a cigarette in their lifetime. That's wonderful news, and that, in fact, is a 15% increase in the kids who don't smoke since 2003.

However, if we go back to this bill and we're looking at kids, particularly little kids in cars, they can't control that atmosphere. They are subject to the atmosphere that the adult who's smoking in the car is creating for them. I want to emphasize that for kids who are in a car where an adult is smoking, that atmosphere is 27 times as bad as if you simply had an adult smoking at home.

We're going to ban that. I'm very much in support of this legislation, and I will now turn that over to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, if I may.

Hon. Jim Watson: I thank the honourable member for Guelph for sharing some of her time with me. I'm very proud to stand in support of this particular piece of legislation, Bill 69, which is the first amendment to the Smoke-Free Ontario Act, which as the former Minister of Health Promotion I had the responsibility for implementing a little over two years ago.

We implemented it on May 31, which is World No Tobacco Day, because we're particularly proud of the legislation that bans smoking in all public workplaces in the province of Ontario. When we came to office under the leadership of Premier McGuinty, we were very clear in our campaign platform that we would bring in a uniform Smoke-Free Ontario Act, because what was happening? Once again, municipalities were ahead of the curve. Cities all across the province were passing their own municipal bylaws, and what was happening was that you were creating a patchwork approach to this particular important public health issue.

The Premier put it in the platform really for a number of reasons, but one of them was a woman in my hometown of Ottawa named Heather Crowe. Some of you may remember Heather Crowe. She was a wonderful woman who worked in the hospitality industry for over 20 years, didn't smoke a day in her life, yet several years ago contracted lung cancer as a result of exposure to second-hand smoke. She was working in restaurants and eateries and serving people, supporting her daughter as a single mother, trying to make a decent living, and unfortunately, as a result of being in these smoky, blue-haze restaurants, contracted lung cancer. Sadly, about a month before the Smoke-Free Ontario Act came into effect, she passed away.

Many of us on both sides of this House had the pleasure over the last year or so to distribute Heather Crowe Awards, which were the government of Ontario's recognition of Heather, for the work that she did to ensure that this particular piece of legislation saw the light of day. We awarded them to individuals who did wonderful work in their own communities to promote a smoke-free environment, whether it was lobbying municipal councillors or working with the Canadian Cancer Society, the Lung Association or the Heart and Stroke Foundation. I'm very proud of having known Heather. I knew the restaurant she worked at before she passed away, the Newport Restaurant owned by a great community activist, Moe Atallah, in the city of Ottawa.

1530

This particular piece of legislation is the natural extension to the Smoke-Free Ontario Act because, as my colleague from Guelph indicated, second-hand smoke levels in motor vehicles can be up to 27 times worse than in a smoker's home. Some of you may have heard one of the radio commercials that I believe has been put on by the Heart and Stroke Foundation or the Canadian Cancer Society. It has a mother asking a young child, "What are you doing?" The young child asked for a light. It was trying to get across the image of the real lunacy of a child of seven or eight years old smoking. Yet in a car, perhaps in a child seat, if they're of a certain age, they're actually inhaling all of that second-hand smoke. We don't think that's right. The child can't speak out for themselves, can't defend themselves.

We know that it's the right thing to do. We would hope that this particular piece of legislation would receive unanimous support from the Legislature because when the Smoke-Free Ontario Act came into effect, the New Democrats supported it, our party supported it, but sadly, half the Conservative Party either was absent for the vote or did not support it—actually voted actively against it. My hope is that we're able to get unanimity on this particular piece of legislation because we know that this will save lives and prevent illness.

Some people say governments are hypocritical because they accept all of this tobacco tax revenue, but let's look at the facts just for a moment. The fact of the matter is that smoking not only kills over 13,000 Ontarians every year but also costs the health care system $1.7 billion. The last figures I saw showed the tobacco tax brought in just a little over $1 billion in taxes, so it's costing us a lot more to treat people who are ill or dying of second-hand smoke and direct tobacco than it is to get the tobacco tax, so we're no farther ahead.

In conclusion, I want to thank the member from Sault Ste. Marie, our colleague David Oraziotti, because he listened to his community. He listened to stakeholders, to health care workers, to nurses and to doctors, and he brought this idea forward originally, as a private member's bill. I commend my successor, the Honourable Margaret Best, the Minister of Health Promotion, for bringing it forward as a government piece of legislation, and the Premier for his support.

I also want to commend my colleague the member from Ottawa-Orléans because on May 31 of this year the next phase of implementation of the Smoke-Free Ontario Act comes into effect. It's known as the McNeely amendment, which he amended in the legislative committee process; it bans the power walls from all of the different retail operations. We understand that the retail operators have some difficulty with it because they get a lot of money from the tobacco companies. We also understand that it is a much more important public health issue to ensure that when a child goes into a convenience store looking to buy a chocolate bar or a package of gum, they are not inundated with this huge wall of tobacco. Also, those individuals who are trying to quit, because it's difficult to quit smoking, are not tempted when they see this massive wall. The tobacco industry knows full well that that's the prime location for advertising, and we want to make sure that that particular aspect of advertising is eliminated. I commend the member from Ottawa-Orléans for bringing that forward. In just a few days, on Saturday of this week, that particular aspect of the legislation comes into effect.

I'm very proud of the work we've done to create a smoke-free Ontario. I think Bill 69 is in response to a number of municipalities, including Peterborough, Ottawa, Kenora, Terrace Bay, Toronto, Tecumseh and the region of York, all passing resolutions in support of us. I would hope that the honourable members opposite support this because this is the right thing to do from a public health point of view, and it's the right thing to do to protect the health and well-being of children in our province.

C'est mon plaisir de dire un grand merci à la ministre de la Promotion de la santé pour ce projet de loi. Je pense que c'est bon non seulement pour les enfants mais pour les adultes dans une voiture.

It's not only good for the children; it's also good for the adults and it's good for public health in this province. I urge all members to support Bill 69, because it will save lives.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Mr. John O'Toole: This question on Bill 69 raises in my mind—it's a no-brainer, as some speakers have said. We could get on to more serious things. So with that liberty, I'm going to read an obituary here that is relevant to this. I'll explain it later. I'll read it word for word:

Tom Edvard Krogh: "Born in Peterborough, Ontario, 1936, passed away April 29, 2008. Professor Emeritus, Dept. of Geology, University of Toronto; retired curator and founding director of the Geochronology Laboratory of the Royal Ontario Museum. Much loved and greatly missed by his wife Kathy Myers and sister Joan Armstrong Bennett. Fondly remembered by his children and their spouses: Erik and Jane, Kari and Dave, Sara and Mark and Jason and Jenn as well as grandchildren Jeremy, Rebecca, Ezra and Alyssa Hong Gee. Tom approached life with a scientific mind, sharing his insights into geology, cooking, organic gardening, energy efficiency and more. Every experience was seen as an opportunity for learning. Always down to earth, Tom was as comfortable in a straw hat on his tractor as he was examining minerals under a microscope. But Tom was perhaps most at home on an outcrop of the Canadian Shield. A graduate of Queen's University M.Sc. and Massachusetts Institute of Technology Ph.D., Tom especially enjoyed his many years of research at the Carnegie Institution of Washington, DC. His work"—this is important—"revolutionized techniques of radiometric uranium-lead rock ... of the history of the Earth's crust.

Tom was the recipient of numerous awards in recognition of" the science of his profession.

He was a person I knew as a young person, who was always looking at rocks. That's a more important theme than talking about Bill 69.

Mr. Michael Prue: I don't know what the last comment had to do with the speeches made by the member for Guelph and for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. I would like to comment on what they actually had to say.

It seems to me that, although we 100% approve of this bill and we are going to vote for this bill and send it to committee, the Liberals are indeed protesting too much. They are trying to take credit for an action which is long overdue and which was proposed during the last session of Parliament, only to have the Premier at the time say that he was not going in that direction and to do a 180, an about-face, which I am thankful that he has done. But all the same, it is a complete 180-degree turn for the Premier and the cabinet and how they voted in support of this very resolution when it was before us two years ago.

In terms of the power walls, I hear the Minister of Municipal Affairs trying to take great credit for locking down the power walls. But I remember the debate two years ago, or three years ago, in this very House, when it was suggested that the power walls be taken down right away, that there was no real reason to have those continue in the convenience stores for the two years because of the numbers of children who would go into the stores and potentially could take up smoking in that interim period. It was suggested by the Liberals at that time that there was no real rush. So for them to turn around today and to say, "Here we are doing it"—it's two years too late. I am glad it's two years too late rather than never, and I commend the members for what they had to say, but these are times that are well past. The sooner we get on with this, the better.

Ms. Leeanna Pendergast: I'm proud to rise in support of Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles. I'm proud to rise in support as an educator as well as a mother of three boys. We have a responsibility to raise our children and to protect them.

I've dedicated my life over the years to education, to keeping our schools safe and to protecting our youth. This is part of that very same commitment. As citizens, by definition we have a responsibility to give back to our communities and to our society. Part of that responsibility is to protect the health and well-being of our children; in this case, to protect them from second-hand smoke in vehicles.

1540

We teach literacy and numeracy in schools, we teach healthy relationships, we teach our youth to make good decisions. But in vehicles, children under 16 are not driving; they are not making that primary decision to smoke. Therefore, it is not within their control to avoid second-hand smoke. They are not the decision-makers.

The medical evidence is clear: Second-hand smoke is dangerous. I'll share with you a quote from Dr. Suzanne Strasberg, the Ontario Medical Association board chair, who says, "Ontario's doctors welcome the provincial government's decision to ban smoking in cars carrying children to ensure that they are protected from the dangers of second-hand smoke. Protecting the health of Ontario's children is one of our most important jobs." As with seat belt legislation, we owe it to our children to keep them safe and healthy.

One more quote from the Heart and Stroke Foundation: "We applaud the Premier for his commitment to protecting children."

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: I will be supporting this bill, as I have supported the whole movement toward a second-hand smoking ban for a long period of time. But I find it very odd that this Liberal Party, which turned down an amendment on the original bill to control smoking in motor vehicles, which I put forward at that time in opposition, is now taking credit for the very same measure some 18 years later. It's taken them 18 years to get on side with me, Norm Sterling.

The truth of the matter with this Liberal government is that they take a poll, they put their finger to the wind and then they come in and bring forward a phony piece of legislation like this. We could pass this in 10 minutes. There's no need to carry on the debate and waste the time of the Legislature on it. Let's talk about the economy. Let's talk about bills brought forward by the NDP, who want to increase Canadian content in our manufacturing sector. Let's talk about real things for the people of Ontario. Let's talk about the regrettable behaviour of this government in putting severely disabled people out of Rideau Regional Centre in Smiths Falls. Let's talk about real issues that mean real things to people. We all agree with this. Let's get on with the real business of the people of Ontario.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Response?

Mrs. Liz Sandals: I'd like to thank the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing; the member for Durham, who might have been a little bit off track with, I'm sure, a perfectly wonderful person's obituary; and the members for Beaches—East York, Kitchener—Conestoga and Carleton—Mississippi Mills.

What I think we've heard here today is a tremendous amount of support for this bill banning smoking in cars with kids. I'd just like to tell you what the former president of the Ontario Medical Association, Dr. Janice Willett, said: "Ontario's doctors ... congratulate the McGuinty government for introducing legislation to ban smoking in cars carrying children. The health effects of second-hand smoke in adults and children alike are undeniable. This initiative is an important step forward in protecting our children's health."

What I think I hear today is that we are all in agreement with that, and I hope we will be able to pass this bill quickly.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): This might be an appropriate time for me to remind members that questions and comments are intended to be, and should be, directed toward the comments that were made by the speaker—or speakers, in this case. We might remember that from time to time.

I also would like to take a moment to introduce guests of the member for Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry. In the east members' gallery: Mayor Bob Kilger, Lezlie Strasser, Guy Willis, Paul Lefebvre, Jeanette Despatie, Pierre Lefebvre, Mark Boileau, Don Fairweather, Denis Thibault and Caroline Dexter. Welcome to the Ontario Legislature.

Further debate?

Mr. Peter Shurman: Since we're all having such a good and raucous time here this afternoon, I thought I would join the debate. But in all seriousness, I rise to address Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act, of which I've had the opportunity to speak many times of late in this Legislature.

The last time that I rose to refer to Bill 69, I think I didn't please my colleagues on the government side very much—notably, the member from Peterborough. I felt the palpable displeasure of the member from Sault Ste. Marie, who had previously introduced a private member's bill along the lines of Bill 69—the same type of thing: no smoking in cars with children. My own colleague the member from Kitchener–Waterloo has also made that effort, to no avail, in the past. So a number of private members' bills were not passed by the government and are now brought forward as a government bill.

I have to say that I have never criticized the concept, and I want to go on record right now as saying in fact that I would support it, and I rise to do that now. My prior criticism, which I do not recant, was of the McGuinty government for using a bill like this as a smokescreen—no pun intended—to shield it from the big-picture issues. We're talking about the economy; we're talking about health care, education, general fiscal restraint, and of course an economic stimulus package, which we desperately need, right behind it. "So much to do; so little time"—an expression we've all heard so many times. I would divert that a little bit and say, "So much to do in this House and so much time to do it; why don't we get on with it?"

I've been on my feet in this House more than anyone recently, probably—arguably, anyway—on the issue of smoking recently. And yes, this is germane because my concern has been on seeing tobacco products fall into the wrong hands—the hands of children—by allowing the continuation of the blind-eye philosophy of this government to the illicit sale of such products through illicit smoke shacks all over Ontario. I've asked question after question on this subject and I have had the pleasure of being escorted by the Sergeant-at-Arms to the front door. We, the Progressive Conservative Party, support doing anything it takes to protect our children, and I resent any implications to the contrary. Every question directed to any minister on the smoking file gets a response that suggests otherwise. But no one on this side wants kids to smoke any more than you do on that side. We have the power to rail about the non-level playing field; they have the power to level the playing field, but they don't do it.

Let me quote from a recent statement to this House by my colleague from Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock. She said:

"When my colleague brought forward a bill calling for an educational campaign for parents and others on the dangers of smoking in vehicles with children inside, this government was silent yet again. When asked why children can purchase cheap and dangerous cigarettes without so much as being asked for identification, she is silent. Why should some children in this province be excluded from protection from smoking, both first- and second-hand ways? It's two-tier protection of children.

"Is the minister going to plan to police the automobiles as they drive away from the many illegal smoke shops we have in Ontario? Is she going to enforce that?" I suggest, Mr. Speaker, to you and to the members of this House, that that is a major focal point for the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

So of course this legislation is worthy of support; I don't argue that. Will they enforce it? I have my doubts. The enforcement might take the form of a just-in-passing arrest. A police car stops at a light. A policeman sees a mom smoking in her car; the kids hopefully are buckled in. At least that law is being respected. So there is a stop and there is a $250 fine, and that's about as close as it gets.

1550

I used the analogy a couple of weeks ago in a short two-minute hit, the one I referred to that some people didn't like, where I talked about the possibility of enforcement taking the form of an OPP cruiser careening down the 401, to catch what? A mom smoking in the car with her children present when in fact that same mom can go home to the kitchen and, outside the view or the purview of the law, can still smoke in the presence of her children.

I used the term "moron" to describe anyone who would smoke in a car in the presence of children, and it does apply. Perhaps we can hope that debating this legislation will let the morons out there know that what they're doing in their cars and in their kitchens hurts their kids. I hope so.

That in itself—the statement I've just made—is a form of education, but it's not formal education. Why doesn't the McGuinty government, which rakes in millions upon millions of dollars in tobacco tax revenues, consider educational efforts that work as opposed to just using a nanny-state ban for everything? Until right now, what has the government done to educate people on the effects of second-hand smoke on children? The answer to that question is nothing. With the several aforementioned private members' bills on this very issue over and done with, with the Ontario Medical Association, the Lung Association, the Heart and Stroke Foundation, among many, many others, screaming for this ban, why not educate if you weren't going to legislate? "Now we'll do it," you say, but that doesn't negate the education component. So let's do it.

As with many other issues, we in Ontario are playing johnny-come-lately here. As recently as January of this year, the Minister of Health Promotion was saying that she was content to postpone the debate of such a ban until the end of the year. Did she take the advice of medical stakeholders or did she just set out to deflect the heavy criticism being levelled at her, in her innocence, over the illicit tobacco trade? I think I know the answer. Sorry, but it's as if 37% of all tobacco sales being illicit, or 40% of butts found around high schools—and there are illicit cigarettes as well in Mississauga—is one thing, and passing a bill like this is another. They're both about protecting people, and when I talk about people, I talk about the children of Ontario. Can we just address that?

The facts of this bill leave open many questions: first, police officers as enforcers of this. They have many things to do. I suggest to you that this is low on the priority list, as important as it may be. Second, the fine is $250. It's a lot of money to some; it's sustainable to most. If we're talking about seriously getting rid of this, maybe that number has to be higher. Finally, the legislation addresses tobacco, but lots of people smoke other substances in their cars. That's reckless in and of itself. Add a child to that mix and my prior use of language doesn't even begin to apply. So let's cover smoking of any substance in a vehicle if we're going to pass this law.

Isn't it interesting that tobacco use still remains the number one cause of death here in Ontario? Some of that is obviously residual: older, long-term smokers reaping what they've sown. But second-hand smoke is what we are addressing here today. Those exposed to it, notably children, with no choice whatsoever, can be—will be, if we don't put an end to it—the next round of victims.

Again, the legislation has merit despite the fact that I prefer education over legislation.

Let me refer this House to a significant stakeholder position. Michael Perley of the Ontario Campaign for Action on Tobacco, which represents groups like the Ontario Medical Association and the Canadian Cancer Society, said that an education campaign would be an important step as long as it leads to an eventual ban. "Our collective position is that you need a public education campaign to precede the implementation of the law," said Perley. "I think we also absolutely need the ban, and the law on the books, because apparently there's still people who have not got the message about the serious impact exposure can have on kids. We need something in force where if someone is seen doing this there is a sanction, because there's certainly one for if you don't have your child properly installed in a child seat...."

"The combination of an education program and the law will get the message through to people who are still doing this," said Perley. "For those who continue to smoke in their cars with children present we need the law to be sanctioned."

As I've suggested, the sanctions should be larger than envisioned.

We also know that kids have higher metabolism and respiration rates—respiration rates fall into metabolism—so they would tend to absorb more smoke if they were in that environment. We also don't know what effect the 4,000 chemicals and over 50 known or suspected carcinogens might have on young and still developing immune and nervous systems.

A vast majority of Ontarians agree with protecting kids from second-hand smoke and also that people strongly support this legislation. Actually, though, only 66% of smokers do, so all we can do is hope that the 34% of smokers who do not support it are not the ones with the children.

In concluding, let me restate that I support this bill because, absent common sense on the part of smokers, kids indeed need protection. Let me also repeat what I said a few weeks ago, to the chagrin of several members from the government side: We need to start dealing with tremendously important issues here. This House will rise in a few short weeks, and we will not reconvene until the end of September.

I believe that those items are: where our province is heading economically; the loss of good jobs to other jurisdictions; the loss of good citizens who leave to seek their fortunes elsewhere; health issues like C. difficile infections in hospitals—as a former Quebecer, I can tell you it is a madhouse there with that, and we haven't begun to see what's going to happen in Ontario, and that is not an expressed hope, but an expressed fear—long-term-care beds; and in my riding, goodness knows, transportation.

These are the issues this House needs to be dealing with. We have spent far too much time, since last fall's election, dealing with bans and with adjustments to legislation. We have real problems in Ontario. I do not want to demean this issue by saying what I have just said, but let's get this bill passed and let's move on.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Mr. Michael Prue: I was wondering whether to actually stand, because I believe that the time for debate is over. But I was taken with a few things from the member from Thornhill, which I guess forced me to my feet.

The first was his discussion around the whole issue of enforcement. I agree with him that it may, in fact, be very problematic to enforce this bill. You're literally going to have to have a complainant alert the police in advance in order to stop a car where they have good and probable grounds to believe that someone may be smoking inside.

It is very difficult, unless one is in very close proximity, to actually see someone smoking a cigarette. Unless it's very blatant—if it's in your hand—it's not clear to the eye. It's hard enough to see a car, let alone the driver inside the car, let alone a tiny little cigarette in the hand inside the car, let alone a couple of kids sleeping in the back seat. I think there will not be much enforcement around this bill, and education is perhaps a better way to go. In that, he is correct.

The second thing he was talking about, and which he closed with, I think, is very important to this House. There have been a number of bills that some in the press have called fluff bills. This one, although it may be very important to some, is not one of the great issues of the day. We have taken action in the last Parliament to ban cigarettes, to ban power walls, to do a number of things that were essential and long overdue, things that municipalities had done and predated us by years upon years. We finally got around to it, and that's a good thing.

Bills like this one, which was a private member's bill that the Premier disagreed with and suddenly saw the light on, are of a very minor nature. The member is absolutely correct that we need to get on to the great issues of the day. This, as important as it is to some people, is not one of those great issues. I believe the time for debate—and I concur with him on this bill—is now over.

1600

Ms. Helena Jaczek: It gives me great pleasure to rise again in the House to address Bill 69, An Act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in motor vehicles by amending the Smoke-Free Ontario Act.

Our colleague from Thornhill is obviously very interested in the educational aspects of what the Ministry of Health Promotion is doing as it relates to creating what we hope one day will be a smoke-free Ontario. So I thought perhaps I would just tell him a little about the call volumes that the smokers' helpline has been getting—in fact, increasing annually. More than 17,000 callers accessed the smokers' helpline in 2006-07, an 8.7% increase over the previous year. In addition, over 7,000 people registered for the smokers' helpline online personalized and interactive quit program. The interim results for 2007-08 are continuing to show an increase in demand for the services of the smokers' helpline, and online. Approximately 27,000 Ontario smokers were motivated to quit during the month of March by participating in the Driven to Quit Challenge in 2008.

As it relates specifically to youth, there was a concerted effort to work with aboriginal youth. In March 2007, the first-ever provincial aboriginal youth summit brought together more than 200 youth province-wide to develop tobacco-wise activity for their communities. We are seeing results with youth. In 2007, 12% of students in grades 7 to 12 reported having smoked in the past year, down from 14% in 2005.

Obviously time doesn't allow me to continue at this particular time, but there are many examples of excellent programs provided by the Ministry of Health Promotion.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments? The member for Caledon-Mississippi Mills.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: What did you say? Carleton.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Carleton-Mississippi Mills.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Thank you. I'd like to comment on the member's speech as we are supposed to in this Legislature in response. I want to talk about the illegal sale of tobacco, which he referred to in his comments.

The effect of this legislation, the effect of the legislation with regard to power walls, has such a minor effect on the use of tobacco, particularly by our young people, that it's almost laughable. The sale of illicit or illegal cigarettes is the biggest challenge we have in telling our young people not to begin smoking. We all know that the addiction to nicotine is tremendous. Once young people get hold of these illegal cigarettes and start smoking, in some cases it's impossible for that person to ever kick the habit because of the tremendous addictive nature of nicotine to them.

Now, I want to say that not only is the illegal sale of tobacco very harmful to the young people particularly in our community, but it's also very harmful to our society as a whole. I want to talk about the small business owner of a small general store in Fitzroy Harbour in the riding that I represent, Carleton-Mississippi Mills. They have seen tobacco products fall off in sales dramatically. That's not because there is a decline in the use of tobacco—because there is—but it's because the resident upstairs is selling illegal tobacco. The store owner sees bags of tobacco go out of that apartment upstairs. They report that to the police and nothing is done.

Until we get after illegal tobacco, we will not beat this terrible habit.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Member for Thornhill, you have two minutes to respond.

Mr. Peter Shurman: Thank you very much to my colleagues from Oak Ridges-Markham, Carleton-Mississippi Mills and Beaches-East York for their comments, which all, I feel, dovetail very well into what I had to say.

First of all, in response to my friend from Oak Ridges-Markham, I acknowledge that education has formed an aspect of the Smoke-Free Ontario Act and has done some good. There's no doubt—I can't argue, and neither can anyone else—that the general reduction of smoking in Ontario has been sustained. How much of it we want to attribute to the Smoke-Free Ontario Act, I can't say. We don't have that statistic. But it's good to know that it's down. That having been said, it isn't a question, when I raise the issue of education, of educating generally about the ills of smoking. I talked about educating on this particular file before we went the route of passing legislation on it.

In response, as well, to my colleague from Carleton-Mississippi Mills, he told a story that I've probably heard, at this point, a couple of dozen times, and I've heard it, indeed, from people who are charged with the enforcement of the Smoke-Free Ontario Act. Illicit tobacco is the problem. The Ontario Convenience Stores Association reports a 25% general revenue drop, which they attribute directly to the loss of tobacco sales. One could easily say, "Well, good, they're selling less tobacco, so fewer people are smoking." No. Their loss is due to the sale of tobacco by illicit smoke shacks. That's where the disconnect occurs.

In response to my friend from Beaches—East York, yes, enforcement is a problem. I'll simply underscore what I said before: Education has to come before legislation. We've heard from Michael Perley in a quote that I put forward to this House, and I think the two go hand in hand.

So let's pass the bill, and indeed, let's get rid of what the press has referred to as "fluff bills." Let's deal with things like 207,000 jobs lost. Oh, and by the way, let's pass some private members' bills that have merit.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate? Does any other member wish to speak?

Hon. John Wilkinson: I'm delighted to enter into the debate. I think there are rare opportunities, as members, when we have an opportunity to have consensus. This is not a place that is designed to reach consensus. It is a place where there is to be a vigorous debate, but every so often, we have items on which I think there is a consensus. The importance for us to pass Bill 69—and I agree with my colleagues on this side of the House and the other side of the House that this is a bill whose time has come.

I come to this debate as someone who, fortunately, did not take up the habit of cigarette smoking as a young person. I'm praying that our three children—my wife and I—don't smoke. I don't think they do, and I think they've been raised not to. We know how pernicious an addiction it is and how important it is that we recognize that tobacco companies target not 49-year-old men like me, where there's not a lot of economic benefit to getting me hooked on cigarettes, but rather, they deliberately target our children.

I was in my riding just the other day and I dropped in at a little place called Gads Hill to get some gasoline. I went in to pay my bill, and I was so happy to see that the power wall in that little store had been taken down. The week before, it was still up. They were already, in advance, in compliance. When I was on the committee with other members of this House in regard to the Smoke-Free Ontario Act, we dealt with the issue of the de-normalization of cigarette smoking, particularly the message that we send to our children, and we do that by saying that you do not put cigarettes out with Twizzlers and candy bars.

There are vulnerable people, our smallest children, who don't have a choice as to whether or not they are exposed to second-hand smoke. They are exposed to second-hand smoke, actually, by members of their own family in the home in which they live. But I think society has come to a point where we believe that a child, particularly one exposed to second-hand smoke in the confined quarters of a car—that is now unacceptable.

I want to commend my friend the Minister of Health Promotion for introducing this bill and all the members from all sides who have championed this cause, particularly the member from Sault Ste. Marie, who, I think, receives special note for his persistence on this idea.

1610

There are times when an idea is ripe for the plucking, and that is today for this issue. As the Minister of Research and Innovation, I'm focused on the issues of the future and ensuring that our children have a brighter future. It's so important that we do not allow them, whatever way we can, to be exposed to nicotine.

I heard some members of the opposition say that it's very difficult to enforce this bill. I think that, more than anything else, this sends a very clear signal to society as to what behaviour is and is not acceptable. The state is not around every corner. It is, in most cases, human behaviour that determines our fate. We're not going to have the state at every corner, but I know that people will drive and say, "If I'm pulled over by the police and I roll down the window and the smoke comes pouring out and there's a baby in the back seat"—we are sending a signal to the people of Ontario that we, and I believe all of us in this House, will say that that is unacceptable. Times change, and I think this is one of those times when we are making it very positive.

I want to reinforce that this is an item whose time has come. There is a consensus around this place. I would urge all members to stand in their place. I don't think that it is a particularly partisan bill. There is always room for debate on other issues and that people are being asked to perhaps meander off of this central issue, but there is one central issue. The people have been very clear to all of us in our constituency offices that this bill's time has come. I would urge all members to dispatch this bill just as quickly as possible and that we send a new, clear statement to all the people of Ontario about what is and is not acceptable and how we must protect those who are most vulnerable.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Mr. Pat Hoy: I'm pleased to rise and provide some comments on the member's dissertation on the act to protect children from second-hand tobacco smoke in vehicles.

I can recall that when I was in high school—which admittedly was in another millennium—the great talk about cigarette smoking at that time was that it might stunt your growth, it might give you emphysema when you were a whole lot older and it was just kind of a nasty habit. It wasn't a very polite thing to do around others.

Medical science over the years has gathered a lot of information and provided a lot of research, a lot of background and a lot of truth to the fact that smoking is indeed bad for one's health. It causes numerous illnesses, and now we have even come to realize through science, that second-hand smoke is also dangerous. It's particularly dangerous for children who are in an enclosed car. These children who breathe second-hand smoke are more likely to suffer health problems such as sudden infant death syndrome, asthma, cancer, of course, and cardiac diseases later in life.

So I think this is an important piece of legislation to send the signal to those who might be considering continuing to do this—even though education might be an excellent piece to go along with this bill, when it is passed and if it is passed—that we have a strong attitude about this in this Legislature, that it won't be tolerated that they would embark on this, because second-hand smoke levels in motor vehicles can be up to 27 times worse than in a smoker's home. If we think about the confined space, it only makes some sense that that particular science would be true.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: I just have a request to the government: Stop filibustering your own bill. Let's vote.

Mr. Michael Prue: Ditto.

Mr. John O'Toole: I just want to put on the record that anything that has been expressed that this side would not support this bill should be expunged from the record.

If you want to look at the history of this particular debate over many years, the member from Carleton-Mississippi Mills was a strong and often-heard advocate against smoking in any form, as well as the member from Kitchener-Waterloo, Mrs. Witmer, as Minister of Health, who took initiatives and was very much supportive. I think the government is the one that was a bit slow in getting to the mark on this thing and putting it together.

That being said, as everyone else in the House is saying, why are we spending so much time on a bill that we all agree on when in fact we could be talking about the economy and other, more important issues?

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): The Minister of Research and Innovation, you have two minutes to respond.

Hon. John Wilkinson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll take less than that. I think we have come to a consensus, and that was the reason for my remarks. I want to commend the members opposite. This is a time for us to take action, and we look forward to speedy passage of this bill.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Further debate?

Mr. David Zimmer: We've heard from members on all sides of this House about, if you will, the technical reasons and the statistics supporting this piece of legislation. We've heard the percentage of cancer deaths and we've heard medical evidence and we've heard of the support from various stakeholders and so on.

But let me just take a minute to put a human face on what this legislation means. I remember as a kid—and God bless my parents. I know they meant no harm, and I expect that in today's world they would have been the very first to not smoke in the car. Nevertheless, there was a culture in a generation before in which smoking in a car, if you were a smoker, was perfectly normal. I can remember trips in the car with my younger brother and my younger sister. We'd be going to visit my grandmother, my father and mother in the front seat and the three kids in the back. Without thinking, they would light up and they'd start smoking in the front seat, talking between themselves and talking about the family business. I remember distinctly—I can smell it to this day; I can feel the burning in my eyes—the three kids in the back seat and the car filling up with smoke. And then I'd start to wheeze and my sister and brother would start coughing. But the very worst thing was getting sick to your stomach, getting green at the gills and feeling nauseous.

I remember saying to my father and my mother, pleading with them, "Stop smoking. I'm getting sick." They'd say, "Oh, you're okay. Be quiet. You're just misbehaving." Then my sister would start to whine and my younger brother would start to whine and the car would fill up with smoke and we'd get greener. Eventually, my father would stop the car and open the door and say, "Let the kids out." We'd go to the side of the road and we'd cough and maybe have a drink of water and get sick and then we'd have to get back in that car and they'd start smoking again.

Fast-forward. My parents finally caught on; they both stopped smoking. Mind you, I was a teenager when they stopped smoking. But I do remember those rides in the back seat of the car. To this day, I discuss them with my brother and sister and at some level we have a laugh about it, but at the other level we realize what an unhealthy thing that was.

I make this point because I think there's a whole new level of awareness today about what is acceptable. My parents in those days also smoked in their home; they probably smoked on a train or a plane; they smoked in their work environments. But things have changed since then. We don't smoke in other persons' homes. Nobody smokes in this Legislature, in the hallways. People don't smoke in airplanes; they don't smoke in washrooms; they don't smoke on buses; they don't smoke on public transit. The last bastion of where they'll smoke in front of others is in a car. They have this idea that it's okay, it's their car, they can smoke, that the passenger is lucky to be getting a ride or whatever. We have to break that last bastion. It's not okay to smoke in a car in the presence of others, particularly children. This is good legislation.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

M. Jean-Marc Lalonde: C'est avec grand plaisir que je viens appuyer ce projet de loi 69, un projet de loi qui porte sur la protection des enfants de cette province, ces enfants qui sont l'avenir de notre province.

Let me tell you, at the present time we have to congratulate the member for Sault Ste. Marie, who thought of coming up and tabling this bill. I just wonder why nobody ever thought of this before.

If you look at the banning of smoking in the province, I believe the city of Toronto was the first one to ban smoking in public places. Today we're looking at doing that across the province, because the McGuinty government has taken action.

Today we are debating a bill, really, that would not only protect the children of today, but also the other people accompanying a person travelling in a car. I know at this point we're really only talking about children, but we should also look a little further, in the near future, to completely banning smoking in cars. If you intend to trade your car in and you have smoke in the car, immediately the value of the car is going down. We never took care of the health of the people travelling in a car in which a person is smoking.

When I look at the changes that occurred in the federal buildings—I used to be a federal civil servant. The absenteeism was reduced considerably after the government said no more smoking in federal buildings, in public buildings.

Today we are debating a bill that is very, very important for the health of all the children of this province.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: I'd like to suggest we vote on this matter.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for Beaches—East York.

M. Michael Prue: Monsieur le Président, d'accord.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Questions and comments? Response? Does any other member wish to speak?

Mr. Bryant has moved second reading of Bill 69. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Shall the bill be ordered for third reading? The parliamentary assistant, I assume.

Ms. Helena Jaczek: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I ask that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on General Government.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Shall the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on General Government? Agreed.

Orders of the day.

Hon. David Caplan: Mr. Speaker, I move adjournment of the House.

The Deputy Speaker (Mr. Bruce Crozier): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

This House is adjourned until Thursday, May 29, at 9 a.m.

The House adjourned at 1623.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.

Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters

Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller

Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum

Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York–Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough–Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London–Ouest	Attorney General / procureur general
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough–Sud–Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke–Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley–Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craitor, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton–Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough–Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet / ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe–Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener—Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin—Middlesex—London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough—Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches—East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London—Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming—Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland—Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds—Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton—Kawartha Lakes—Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton—Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto—Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga—Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton—Kent—Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West—Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest—Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth—Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe—Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener—Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉ PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craitor, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziotti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziotti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craitor,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Pope John Paul II
Mrs. Laura Albanese.....	2131
Lord's Prayer
Ms. Laurie Scott .....	2131
Protection for miners
Mme France Gélinas.....	2132
Firearms control
Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2132
Services for the developmentally disabled
Mrs. Christine Elliott .....	2132
Hospital funding
Mr. Joe Dickson.....	2132

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

Habitat for Humanity
Mr. Ted Arnott.....	2133
West Highland Baptist Church Victory Garden
Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2133
Potato farmers
Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....	2133
Winona Public School
Mr. Paul Miller .....	2134
City of Cornwall
Mr. Jim Brownell.....	2134
Electricity transmission
Mr. Toby Barrett.....	2134
Hospice Northumberland Lakeshore
Mr. Lou Rinaldi .....	2134
Women's College Hospital
Mr. David Zimmer.....	2135
Algoma University
Mr. Michael A. Brown .....	2135
Private members' public business
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	2135
Alma College
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....	2135

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS / DÉPÔT DES PROJETS DE LOI

Handgun Manufacturers' and Importers' Liability Act, 2008, Bill 82, Mr. Flynn / Loi de 2008 sur la responsabilité des fabricants et des importateurs d'armes de poing, projet de loi 82, M. Flynn
First reading agreed to .....	2136
Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn.....	2136

Skin Cancer Prevention Act, 2008, Bill 83, Mr. Ramal / Loi de 2008 sur la prévention du cancer de la peau, projet de loi 83, M. Ramal
First reading agreed to .....	2136
Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2136

MOTIONS

Committee sittings
Hon. John Wilkinson .....	2136
Agreed to .....	2136

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Smoke-Free Ontario Amendment Act, 2008, Bill 69, Ms. Best / Loi de 2008 modifiant la Loi favorisant un Ontario sans fumée, projet de loi 69, Mme Best
Mrs. Liz Sandals .....	2136
Hon. Jim Watson .....	2137
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2138
Mr. Michael Prue .....	2139
Ms. Leeanna Pendergast .....	2139
Mr. Norman W. Sterling.....	2139
Mr. Peter Shurman.....	2140
Mr. Michael Prue .....	2141
Ms. Helena Jaczek .....	2142
Mr. Norman W. Sterling.....	2142
Mr. Peter Shurman.....	2142
Hon. John Wilkinson .....	2143
Mr. Pat Hoy .....	2143
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2144
Hon. John Wilkinson .....	2144
Mr. David Zimmer.....	2144
M. Jean-Marc Lalonde.....	2144
Second reading agreed to.....	2145
Ms. Helena Jaczek .....	2145

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Wednesday 28 May 2008 / Mercredi 28 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Order of business

Hon. David Caplan .....	2107
Agreed to .....	2107
Algoma University Act, 2008, Bill 80, Mr. Milloy / Loi de 2008 sur l'Université Algoma, projet de loi 80, M. Milloy
Hon. John Milloy .....	2107
Mr. Reza Moridi .....	2109
Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2110
Mr. John O'Toole .....	2112
Mme France Gélinas .....	2115
Mr. Michael A. Brown .....	2118
Second reading agreed to .....	2119

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2119
---------------------------------------	------

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2120
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2120

Native land dispute

Mr. Robert W. Runciman .....	2121
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2121
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	2121

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2122
Hon. Dalton McGuinty .....	2122
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	2122

Local health integration networks

Mme France Gélinas .....	2122
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2123

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2123
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2123

School closures

Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2124
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne .....	2124

Infectious disease control

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn .....	2125
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2125

Polygamy

Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2125
Hon. Ted McMeekin .....	2125

Domestic violence

Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	2126
Hon. Rick Bartolucci .....	2126

Human rights

Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2126
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	2126

School closures

Mrs. Joyce Savoline .....	2127
Hon. Kathleen O. Wynne .....	2127

Pension plans

Mr. Paul Miller .....	2127
Hon. Dwight Duncan .....	2127

Ontario Municipal Board

Mr. David Zimmer .....	2128
Hon. Jim Watson .....	2128

Services for the developmentally disabled

Mr. Norman W. Sterling .....	2128
Hon. Madeleine Meilleur .....	2129

Climate change

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	2129
Hon. John Gerretsen .....	2129

Visitor

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2129
---------------------------------------	------

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Alma College

Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....	2129
--------------------------	------

Firearms control

Mr. Tony Ruprecht .....	2130
-------------------------	------

Alma College

Mr. Robert Bailey .....	2130
-------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2130
-----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. John O'Toole .....	2131
------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson .....	2131
-----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2131
----------------------	------

Continued on inside back cover

No. 50

N° 50

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Thursday 29 May 2008

Jeudi 29 mai 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Thursday 29 May 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Jeudi 29 mai 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Hon. David Caplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I believe we have unanimous consent to put forward a motion regarding division of time for debate on the motion for third reading of Bill 80.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. David Caplan: Thank you, Speaker. I move that the time available until 10:45 this morning be divided equally among the recognized parties to debate on the motion for third read of Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and dissolve Algoma University College, following which the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the motion for third reading of Bill 80 without further debate or amendment.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

ALGOMA UNIVERSITY ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'UNIVERSITÉ ALGOMA

Mr. Milloy moved third reading of the following bill:

Bill 80, An Act to establish Algoma University and to dissolve Algoma University College / Projet de loi 80, Loi portant création de l'Université Algoma et dissolution de l'Algoma University College.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Debate?

Hon. John Milloy: It's a pleasure to be here this morning to address this bill once again. We had an opportunity yesterday to participate in second reading debate and pass it. I just want to indicate at the outset that I'll be sharing my time with my colleague the member from Sault Ste. Marie, where Algoma University College is located, and he, of course, will want to speak at some length about the importance of this bill to his community.

I just plan to spend a minute this morning, before turning it over to my colleague, to really summarize what I had a chance to say yesterday, that in my mind this bill is really recognizing three things: first of all the excellence in education that takes place at Algoma University College. As members know, it has been in operation since 1964. It operates offering degrees from Laurentian University and in many ways has a degree of independence already. It has a board of governors and an administration which puts forward really an excellent program for students who go there. By taking this step, we'll be able to enhance the educational experience.

The second point is the special role that Algoma University College already plays in the north and, as an independent university, would play in northern Ontario, allowing students from the Sault Ste. Marie area and beyond in northern Ontario an opportunity to study closer to home, to pursue it at an outstanding undergraduate institution, receive their skills and stay in the north. I know President Ross was indicating the other day, very correctly, that she hopes they will have students from across the province and the country, and we certainly hope to see Algoma flourish. It still has that special role in the north in providing a place for those from northern Ontario.

The third point is its special role in terms of aboriginal education. As I had a chance to indicate yesterday, and I imagine my colleague from Sault Ste. Marie will go into it in some detail, right now at Algoma University College, 20% of the students are First Nations. It has a very, very special link with the First Nations community in the area and again will serve as a bit of a beacon in northern Ontario for First Nations education; indeed, if members look at the bill, it's one of the special missions going forward.

I am absolutely delighted that this is my first piece of legislation as a minister. I want to congratulate the administration at Algoma University College. I also want to make reference to Laurentian University, which has played such an important role in Algoma's life and is very supportive of this move. I also want to congratulate the community of Sault Ste. Marie, which came out in force. I had a chance to mention yesterday a delegation here in the gallery as well as a large delegation which was joined by TV link in Sault Ste. Marie itself, and they expressed their appreciation for this. I want to pay a tribute to the local MPP, David Oraziotti, as well as Mike Brown, from the area around it, and all the northern members, who have been supportive of this. Finally, I do want to pay tribute to my colleagues in the opposition who have been supportive of this bill and have worked co-operatively to have it go through. I think it's an excellent symbol, when we can all come together for a good piece of legislation and work to see it passed in an expedited manner.

With that, I urge all members to support this bill. I think it takes another important step in ensuring excellence in post-secondary education in this province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Mr. David Oraziatti: This is a very exciting bill for our community and for Algoma University College and their community. First of all, I have, obviously, a long list of individuals to thank and congratulate. Of course, you run the risk of not including everybody, but we're going to give it an attempt here anyway, because I think some of these individuals certainly deserve some recognition for the very, very important role that they have played in helping us arrive at this particular point. I have some time this morning, and I do want to be able to speak a little bit about the importance of the institution to our community, to what this bill means to our community, as well as the important role that the First Nations play in Algoma University College, and a little bit about the history of the institution and how we've arrived at this point.

First of all, I can't say enough about the Premier's leadership on this. This is very, very important to the community and it's not every day that we move forward with legislation that has the effect of creating a new university in the province of Ontario. It is indeed historic. The Premier has been behind this from day one, so I want to thank him very much for his support. I also want to thank Minister Bentley, who came up in June 2007 and met with the university community and announced that we would be moving forward with legislation for independence. And today we're here speaking to Bill 80 in third reading. It's been a fairly quick week.

0910

I will also want to congratulate my colleagues across the floor here, who have been supportive as well. I have heard nothing but positive comments from them. I know the Conservatives and the NDP have both been supportive of this, so I want to thank them for that as well.

Minister Milloy and his political and ministry staff have been exceptional in their support for Algoma University. I want to congratulate them and thank them very much on behalf of our community, and our school community, for the very important role that they have played in moving the legislation along this quickly.

The school community has worked very hard. I should tell you that, having had the privilege of serving as a board of governors' member at Algoma University College in 2000 as a second-term city councillor and being a part of the charter steering committee for independence at Algoma University College, this is something that has been supported for some time. It has seen a somewhat long history.

In 1992, the school made it public that they wanted to be an independent university, and they've had challenges in getting there. But today is obviously a very proud day for the institution and for our community.

There are a great number of individuals who have worked very hard at Algoma University College in preparation for this and are very hopeful, obviously, that this bill will pass: Dr. Celia Ross, the president of Algoma University College; the academic dean, Dr. Arthur Perlini, the chair of the board; Bud Wildman, who is no stranger to this place—he was a member here in the Legislature for some 24 or 25 years—as well as all of the staff. There are a lot of unsung heroes at Algoma University College who really support this move and care about the future of their institution.

We're going to go over just a couple of important points about the college. The college was established in 1964 as an affiliate college of Laurentian University and currently has about 1,200 students. This is not a college that has been around for five, 10 or even 20 years; this college has a very long history in the province of Ontario, and they're ready for independence. They've reached a level of maturity and critical mass, I would say, that allows for a very smooth and productive transition as an independent university in northern Ontario.

Algoma University College specializes in undergraduate liberal arts and sciences education. Its location and historical roots provide the basis for the institution's distinctive awareness and commitment to northern Ontario and native communities in the region.

Algoma's enrolment has been growing significantly over the last number of years, certainly over the term of our government. Everyone recalls the double cohort that sent many students out of the high school system into colleges and universities across the province in significant numbers. They've grown by about 17% in the last five to six years.

The school currently has its own board of governors and its own senate, but they receive all approval for their programs from Laurentian University. Graduating students from Algoma University College currently see "Laurentian University" on their degrees. That would obviously change if this bill is passed.

I also want to thank Judith Woodsworth, the president of Laurentian University, for her support in moving forward. Laurentian has been very co-operative, very supportive, and knows that this is important for Algoma University. In a competitive age, where universities and colleges are vying for programs and for students, I think it is very commendable of Laurentian, to say "We fully endorse and support the direction that the province wants to go in with the university college, as well as the school community."

You should also know that Algoma offers degrees in over 30 programs, including programs like computer science, business administration, biology, chemistry, geography, geology, community, economic and social development.

As well, under our government, we have approved a master's in gaming technology at Algoma University College. It's the only program like it in the country. It's a very important program. I had an opportunity last year to visit the school with Minister Bentley and meet some of the students who were enrolled in this program. It's not a large group of students, but it's a very unique program that is based on the knowledge economy and has an extremely high job placement rate. The students were from all over the world; there were students from Brazil, China, Europe, the United States and throughout Canada.

I was very impressed by Algoma's ability to attract students from different countries to this program. I know that when I was on the board, Krista Yetman was out doing recruitment in southeast Asia and different parts of the world to try to bring students to Algoma University College. They have a significant presence of international students, and I know they're continuing to work to enhance the international presence at the school. That's certainly very commendable.

If the legislation passes, it would make Algoma University the north's fourth independent university. I think it's important that we take a few minutes to look at the history of the institution so we can understand how we've arrived at this point. As I said, I think Algoma is frankly quite ready for independence and has been for a number of years.

"The desire to establish an undergraduate liberal arts college in Sault Ste. Marie originated as a broad citizen movement in the 1950s. In October of 1964, Algoma College Association was incorporated by letters patent through the province of Ontario. One year later, Algoma College was established as a non-sectarian institution affiliated with Laurentian University.

"In September of 1967, Algoma College opened its doors to students. Its program for full-time students was limited to the first year of the B.A. and B.Sc. degrees. In part-time studies, the college was permitted to offer the full-time B.A. program. In the early years, part-time enrolment expanded rapidly to over 1,000 students by 1969-70." The school was going strong.

"The strong community support that led to the founding of the college continued during the early years of its" ongoing work and "development. The citizens of Sault Ste Marie, through their municipal government, provided major assistance to the college in the form of capital and operating funds. In addition, local industries, businesses, service clubs and individuals established a scholarship program for students attending the college."

This is a deeply entrenched institution in our community, and our community is passionate about it and the region is passionate about it. I see my colleague sitting over here, the member for Algoma-Manitoulin, who is a long-standing member of this Legislature and whose communities in Algoma-Manitoulin greatly support, and whose young people greatly support, Algoma University College. I know he has worked very hard as well to support the legislation today, and I want to thank him for his work. I should add that one of his daughters had the opportunity to go to Algoma University and has recently graduated—

Mr. Michael A. Brown: Paula.

Mr. David Oraziatti: —Paula, he's telling me. He's quite proud of that experience, and I think she's still in Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. Jeff Leal: Isn't she getting married soon?

Mr. Michael A. Brown: She just got married two weeks ago in Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. David Oraziatti: She just got married two weeks ago in Sault Ste. Marie. I think the member is more proud of that.

Applause.

Mr. David Oraziatti: The year 1971 marked a great turning point in the college's history with respect to both program and facilities. In recognition of the rapid process of growth of the college, the department of university affairs at the time authorized the expansion of full-time in arts to the full three years. In September 1971, they added the second year and in 1972 they added the third year of programming. "In addition, in September 1971, the college was relocated to its own campus. The college acquired by lease Shingwauk Hall and the Shingwauk site, including 53 acres of land fronting on the St. Marys River. Extensive renovations were completed to Shingwauk Hall," and temporary buildings were erected to provide a science laboratory, music conservatory, language laboratory, office and classroom facilities.

In 1973, there was the additional construction of the library wing. "In 1975, with the assistance of a grant from the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, the college purchased Shingwauk Hall and 37 acres of land surrounding the buildings. In 1989, the Arthur A. Wishart Library was opened and other renovations were completed." Some of you may remember the name Arthur Wishart, from my community of Sault Ste. Marie. He was a former Attorney General, and the Arthur Wishart Act was something that he was probably most remembered by. He was certainly well respected in our community, and very fittingly, a library wing was opened in his name.

0920

"In 1992, the George Leach Centre was opened for athletics and recreation." The 39,000-square-foot George Leach Centre provides a wide range of facilities. The centre's gymnasium features three regulation court surfaces that can accommodate all types of sports: badminton, basketball, volleyball and tennis. I know the folks at Algoma University College are very proud of their athletic centre and it means a lot to the community. It's also available not only for students, but for community use. They can play indoor tennis there in the winter months. Having gone through the winter we just went through, certainly in northern Ontario, I know it was well used.

Mr. Michael A. Brown: Is it over?

Mr. David Oraziatti: I think it is over.

A student residence was completed and occupied in September 1995, with an additional building opened in September 2001. "With the completion of this construction, Algoma's facilities are as modern as any in the province."

The university is sensitive to the educational needs of the community and certainly responds to these needs. I want to congratulate Algoma University on their very active engagement of students in the Sault Ste. Marie area as well as throughout the Algoma region, who are tremendous supporters of the school. The Arthur Wishart Library is also accessible for public use, as is the George Leach Centre. Many students, faculty and staff lend their knowledge and actively support many community organizations, from government and research, to cultural agencies who participate and are actively involved at the university. Obviously, independence would enhance this role in the community.

I want to spend a couple of minutes speaking about the role of the First Nations at the school. The aboriginal component at AUC is alive and well and very strong at the school. In fact, 20% of the enrolment at Algoma University College is First Nations, and it's expected to grow. That is a credit to those folks working at the college, and the First Nation community representatives who are very actively engaging First Nations in the region to undertake post-secondary education and training, knowing how important it is for all of us.

I know the First Nations folks are very progressive in their thinking about the programs that they want to see offered at the college and that they are currently offering. Algoma currently offers unique programs in Anishnawbe and Ojibwa culture, history and language, including the only B.A. program in the Ojibwa language anywhere. Again, Algoma does considerable outreach with its First Nations.

The Shingwauk Education Trust and the historic relationship of the First Nations people with Algoma University is incredibly important to the school. The trust has the ultimate goal of establishing the first native university in Ontario, coexisting with Algoma, and they view Algoma's independence as a positive step in that direction. I can certainly recall comments by National Grand Chief Phil Fontaine at Algoma University College around First Nations education and the importance of educating and engaging First Nations peoples, and having them very involved in the post-secondary education experience, to give them the skills and education they need to participate in today's knowledge-based economy.

They recognize that, their leaders recognized that, and they are working well together at Algoma University College to ensure that this goal is met. The Shingwauk Education Trust was founded based on a vision of an Ojibwa chief, Chief Shingwauk, in 1875. His vision was to create what was referred to as a "teaching wigwam," with an overall goal of providing education to Anishnabek students.

The goals of the trust have not changed since the Shingwauk vision in 1875, and the organization continues to strive to meet the goals for the success of the Shingwauk University Centre of Excellence for Indigenous Studies. They have a number of goals. I just want to mention a few of these here, because they are very important to the First Nations community at the college. They want to be able to provide opportunities for educational development of Anishnawbe people and other students of native heritage, to deliver educational, social, cultural and economic development programs designed to advance the goals of aboriginal people in the province of Ontario and to initiate co-operative education programs of cross-cultural education between Anishnawbe people and others.

Their mission statement: The organization would like to see the creation of the Shingwauk University Centre of Excellence and to see the centre become a post-secondary educational institute with the seven Anishnawbek First Nations in Sault Ste. Marie, dedicated to the vision of Chief Shingwauk and the original mandate under the site and guise of the Shingwauk trust.

They strive to deliver holistic learning to advance Anishnawbe people and other students of native heritage. The Shingwauk University Centre of Excellence for Indigenous Studies will be committed to fulfilling the Shingwauk Education Trust mandate to carry on educational programs for Anishnawbe people and other students of native heritage in order to increase knowledge respecting teaching methods, teaching skills and teaching aids through research, education, and publication and distribution of books, papers, reports and other documents that are relevant to First Nation peoples.

The Shingwauk Education Trust has a legacy to carry on the vision of one man who had the insight to look at an important way to meet the needs of his people, to ensure that the children were able to develop the capacities to develop their own land and resources. The trust believes that as native peoples have evolved from hunters and gatherers to the agricultural age and the industrial age, they recognize that they are now in a knowledge age where their advancement through post-secondary education is key to their success, and I think we probably all agree. They have stated that the tool needed to move from the industrial age to the knowledge age is the medium of post-secondary education.

In recent years, the trust has noted that Statistics Canada reported that from 1901 to 2001, the aboriginal ancestry population increased tenfold while the total population of Canada rose by a factor of six. They recognize that many corporations have been made aware that the fastest-growing population is the Anishnawbe people of Canada and that they will play a major role in the workforce of tomorrow. It's very important that we encourage and support the goals of First Nations to gain post-secondary education and the skills and training they need to be successful participants.

The trust is forging ahead to develop a First-Nation-owned, managed and controlled education institute with relevant curriculum and course content. They seek to develop programs to meet the needs of First Nation communities in the areas of leadership, administration, policy development and analysis and financial accountability, and to assist with the implementation of new national and international government initiatives.

I want to just read very briefly here. Here's what Darrell Boissoneau, who is the president of the Shingwauk trust, said in a letter in reference to the introduction of the legislation this week:

"On behalf of the board of the Shingwauk Education Trust we want to extend our congratulations on achieving legislative support" for independence for Algoma University.

"We believe that an independent post-secondary institution situated here in Sault Ste. Marie on lands that are set aside for Anishnawbe education will be of significant importance for student needs and excellence.

"I wish to convey the sentiments of Chief Lyle Sayers from the Garden River First Nation"—my understanding is that Lyle Sayers is a descendent of Chief Shingwauk, who is now the chief of Garden River First Nation and who completely endorses this legislation and supports the independence of Algoma University College—"and myself that the success of our efforts are linked to the common understandings of the covenant and that also requires Shingwauk Kinoomaage Gamig to achieve ministerial consent as soon as possible. In this regard we look to your continued support for Shingwauk's vision to take its rightful place."

I really want to thank Darrell Boissoneau, who is the president of the Shingwauk trust, as well as Chief Lyle Sayers of the Garden River First Nation, for their wholehearted endorsement of this legislation. This is a very significant step in helping the institution move forward.

I would be remiss if I did not mention the work of a Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities from a number of years ago. The member from Vaughan, Greg Sorbara, was, as you know, the Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities some time ago.

0930

I was related a story by an individual who was the chair of the board at Algoma University. His name was Geri Nori. He passed away some time ago, but before he did, he told me about his time at Algoma University College as the chair of the board and how important provincial support was to them. He told me that at one point the school was in debt around $1 million or $1.5 million, I think it was. Back in the 1980s, that was a little more than it is today, but it was significant for a university college of this size.

Geri Nori was a well-known lawyer in our community. He actually practised law at the Wishart firm in Sault Ste. Marie. Wishart was a former Attorney General here at Queen's Park. Geri told me about a discussion with the Ministry of Training, Colleges and Universities. He was asked to come, with the president, to Toronto and meet with them around their circumstances. He anticipated at the time that Algoma University College was in fact going to be closed, that there wasn't going to be a future for Algoma University College and that the opportunity for young people in our community to gain a post-secondary education locally was not going to be there any longer. Geri was very impressed, when he had the opportunity to sit down with Minister Sorbara at the time, that they were going to find a way to meet their financial commitments and obligations despite the struggles of the school at that time. Certainly, their future was very much in question.

I asked the former minister about that conversation and I said, "Here's what Geri Nori from Sault Ste. Marie told me about this. What do you remember about this? It sounds like it was a very important decision that was made and your support was instrumental in ensuring that Algoma University College remained open in Sault Ste.

Marie." He said to me that when he was the minister he had travelled to British Columbia for some type of meeting. A small community college was closed in a community in BC and he remembers the circumstances around that, how unfortunate that was and the lack of opportunity that resulted from that. He came back here and certainly did not want to see that happen to any school in Ontario.

I want to thank Greg Sorbara who, in recognition, was made an honorary member of Algoma University College in 2000. In 2005, Greg Sorbara was part of a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the ICT building, the Information Communication and Technology building, at Algoma University College, which is now the Great West Life Amphitheatre, a 32,000-square-foot facility on campus—very fitting. In a speech in Thunder Bay, he congratulated Algoma University and said it was, according to him, his favourite university campus in Ontario. I want to thank him for his historic support of the university. It was very fitting to have some of the information from the previous board members at Algoma University College in recognition of a contribution by the Peterson government of the day in supporting and ensuring that Algoma University College remained open.

It was also quite fitting that just this past week Minister Milloy and I had the opportunity, with Dr. Ross and Bud Wildman, to participate in a live video-link conference from the Great West Life Amphitheatre. The theatre at the university was packed, there was standing room only, and through a live video link we were able to talk a bit about the importance of this legislation and celebrate that together with the Algoma University community. I did want to mention that, because it was instrumental and very important in terms of the school remaining open.

Our government very clearly recognizes that a degree-granting charter would not only strengthen Algoma University College but would also have a very significant positive impact on our community's economic, cultural and social landscape. The projected enrolment at the school is expected to double to around 3,000 students as they continue to attract students from throughout Ontario and all over the world. Degrees would be granted under Algoma University's name rather than under Laurentian's name and would provide for more autonomy at Algoma to pursue its own aspirations in programming to better address the needs in the community and throughout the region, in partnership with the First Nation peoples of the province and in the region—again, a long history, established in 1964, I think. Algoma has reached that level of maturity and independence on its own.

Through a legislative process here, I'm very hopeful that the bill will pass. Again, I want to recognize the opposition parties and members, and to thank them for their support in helping to move this process along at a little more rapid pace. I know it's greatly appreciated by the community and by the institution.

I want to just read very briefly what Dr. Ross had to say about the importance of the legislation being introduced: "Algoma University College is delighted. The introduction of the charter legislation and the passing of the first reading in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario today" is a giant step toward the launching of a new university. "Algoma U students are future leaders" who will "use their education" earned here "to transform their communities. We will be the university for students who want innovative, community-based, hands-on programs in technology, science, business and liberal arts."

So Dr. Ross is certainly very excited about the university's opportunity to become independent. I know that our mayor and council have supported this initiative as well. Council supported a $250,000 contribution toward the Information and Communication Technology Centre that was built at Algoma University College and opened a number of years ago. As well, they've recently supported independence with another $200,000 contribution. The mayor was part of the video conference and spoke very glowingly about the importance of this and about council's commitment to it.

I want to thank Mayor Rowswell and members of city council in Sault Ste. Marie for their ongoing support and endorsement. Jamie Caicco, who is a councillor in ward one, is the current member from council on the university board. I know he has been very supportive of it as well. Brady Irwin, who is vice-chair of the board, was able to participate in the video link and actually helped to host that event as we, I think for the first time at Algoma University—I'm not sure whether that was the first time we were able to do that at the media studio; I think they had to get some equipment to make that happen. I want to thank them for all their support as well.

As members of the House know, we have made significant improvements in post-secondary education over our term in government. I want to congratulate Minister Milloy on his ongoing leadership when it comes to post-secondary enrolment opportunities, funding and support. We restored grants for students; we have 100,000 more students in our colleges and universities today than we did when we came to government; and we have doubled funding available for student aid to $1.5 billion—very significant increases and support.

We froze tuition for the first time in the province's history, until we could find the resources to ensure that we move forward in a way that is manageable and affordable for students. I'm very pleased with the support our government has shown for post-secondary institutions. Certainly in my community, Sault College has been a beneficiary of our government, as has Algoma University College.

Certainly this is a historic opportunity for Algoma University College. I am very pleased and so supportive of this legislation. Again, I really want to thank Premier McGuinty, members of cabinet, our caucus and Minister Milloy for their support. Without their support this wouldn't happen.

It's not every day that this happens. The school indicated in 1992 that they wanted to be independent. There were other opportunities to make that occur, and it didn't happen. We're here today to get that job done, that very important work of moving Algoma University College forward to Algoma University.

I think it's an incredible opportunity, not only for students in Sault Ste. Marie, throughout the district of Algoma and the province, but beyond. I know that the officials at Algoma University College will do a fantastic job of moving forward with Algoma University if the legislation passes.

0940

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: I rise to make a few brief comments about this bill.

I'd also like to congratulate the member for Algoma-Manitoulin on the marriage of his daughter and on her graduation. Can grandchildren be far behind?

Mr. Michael A. Brown: Another daughter—in two weeks.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: Two weeks?

Mr. Michael A. Brown: A different daughter.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: We'll make that point clear: It's a different daughter.

Interjection.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: This will be the fourth grandchild. That's a great landmark. As we pass through this life, grandchildren are one of the joys we all will hopefully enjoy eventually. Personally, I have 13 grandchildren, and they keep me very busy, especially at Christmastime and birthday time.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: It's a huge issue.

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: It's a huge issue: grandchildren and the joy they bring into the lives of seniors in this province.

Secondly, I'd like to congratulate the government on bringing forward this bill to convert Algoma University College into a university. It's important that these educational facilities are there for our future. Ontario has one of the great bases for educating college and university students. Our college system and the expansion of our university system began in the 1960s under former Premier Bill Davis, when he was education minister—a Conservative government, I might add. We grew and expanded our college system and our university system, so that Ontario is perhaps the most well educated jurisdiction in North America. That puts us in a very enviable position to be able to take advantage of wherever the world economy and world business takes us. Having a well-educated population gives us the flexibility to take advantage of where we might go in the future.

I would also put an oar in the water for the expansion of Wilfrid Laurier University, which is currently looking at opening a campus in Milton, which is the fastest-growing community in all of Canada and will continue to be for some time in the future. A large university site—I think it's 150 acres—is hopefully going to be created there if this government sees fit to do some funding in that process. We look forward to that coming to fruition as well.

I'm very pleased to see that the new university will have an economic development program within it. That's very important, because the people of the north, the people of Algoma and indeed the people of Ontario should understand that economic development is extremely important in the future of the province. In fact, if this government had understood the importance of economic development, we might not be having the difficulties we're seeing in the manufacturing industry today.

It would seem that this government, in their search for the future in Ontario, has decided that the future of Ontario is based on biotechnology, information technology and digital information—going down that path—which sounds all very well. It's very futuristic; those are the industries of the future. That is what this government has decided, and I take issue with that, because I think that in a well-rounded economy there are many different facets, not just two.

Everything the government seems to be doing is moving down the road toward digital information, biotechnology, information technology and all the futuristic jobs they would bring. I think the theory—of course, in a university you would learn a lot about theory and economic development—that leads the government in that direction is that information is the future and education is the key. Of course, it's focused on two important assumptions. One of those two assumptions is that the price of energy remains low enough in order to ship manufactured products around the world. In an economic development program at the university, you might look for other options and you might look for other opportunities, because perhaps the energy prices in this world are not going to remain as low in the future as they have been. For instance, we're seeing today that the price of a barrel of oil is moving through $130. A year and a half ago, it was $40 a barrel. It would seem to me that shipping manufactured products around the world while our manufacturing industry goes through a demise may not take place. Perhaps the death of our manufacturing industry in this province, which the government seems to have accepted, is a little premature.

One of the other key assumptions is that the borders around the world will remain open to trade. Something that we have seen just recently, especially since 9/11, is borders that are far more difficult to cross. Therefore, it would seem to me that the two assumptions that the government is working on have some serious problems associated with them, in that we may not be going in the direction that the government's philosophies perhaps would suggest that the province should be going.

High energy prices, of course, are going to cause a flip-flop in the way the world trades goods. It seems to me that shipping automobiles from China and washing machines and refrigerators from the Orient is very expensive. As energy prices increase, it becomes more expensive and we become more dependent on those items as our manufacturing industry disappears. However, if we look at digital information and information technology, which the economic development part of Algoma University will be teaching, I'm sure—what that would say is that it's far cheaper to ship information technology from the Orient and from India than it is to ship refrigerators and automobiles. So the flip-flop of what we expect to happen in the future may not happen at all. The flip-flop is that we may be set with manufacturing being the main industry in Ontario in the future, while information technology, biotechnology and all those things that are easily transported around the world become part and parcel of development in the Asian theatre. Those are some thoughts that we might have concerning economic development.

One of the problems that we see here is that when governments make decisions as to what direction a province or a jurisdiction may take, it's extremely dangerous because that government is quite often wrong in their assumptions. Who would have believed a year and a half ago that we'd be looking at $130 for a barrel of oil, and the consequences that the shipping costs and the disruption of manufacturing sources around the world would be having on us today? Those kinds of things are not necessarily predictable. I think a government's main thrust should be—in economic development and in the care of the provincial economy—to ensure that we have as many options open to us in the future as is humanly possible, making sure that we have the ability to manufacture, we have the ability to be involved in biotechnology, that we have the ability to be involved in information technology and digital information, to have the ability to have a strong agricultural unit, to have the ability to have a strong tourism industry and to have the ability to be in as many different sectors as we can possibly be. We do that through education, through the expansion of universities—such as we're debating here today—and we do that through good economic policy and tax bases that a jurisdiction can offer to industry around the world, so that they can come into this province and be competitive with other industries around the world, rather than a government trying to guide the direction that a province should go in. I consider that to be an extremely dangerous process. Why? Because so often in the past, when governments have tried to do that, they've been wrong. You can look around the world and see examples of government-led economies that have failed and are in poverty today, where they had opportunities in the past.

0950

Government choosing various industries is something that has led to failure in many different areas. I know that in the granting of monies to industry, for instance, this government has given out huge amounts of money to the automobile industry to encourage them to stay in Ontario. They've given money out to the Big Three—Ford, Chrysler and General Motors. Precious little money has been given out to the foreign car companies that have come here and are assembling or manufacturing cars in this country; however, those car companies are increasing in size, and they're increasing their market share. Foreign companies are manufacturing more and more automobiles, and hiring more and more people, while the traditional automobile industry in this country is shrinking. That's a very dangerous situation to be in. When the government inserts themselves into that marketplace, they do so at great folly; they are supporting companies that may not be here in the future because of their inefficient and traditional ways of doing business. They can't seem to break out of the mould of doing business in the same way today as they've done it in the past.

I thank you for allowing me these comments that have perhaps strayed a little bit from the motion at hand. However, education in this province is extremely important. It is something that is going to dictate our future and should provide for the well-being of our children and grandchildren, which we started out talking about today. I look forward to further debate and to seeing this bill pass, and to this university coming into place. I also look forward to the university coming into place in Milton, as we move down the road in that debate as well.

Mr. Rosario Marchese: I'm happy to rise and speak to Bill 80. Welcome, citizens of Ontario, to the parliamentary channel. It's not yet 10 o'clock in the morning. I'm hoping and assuming that you've had your espresso or your regular coffee, and that those of you who like tea have had your tea and that you're steady, ready, willing and happy to listen to the debates in this Legislature—at 9 o'clock in the morning, courtesy of the House leader of the Liberal Party, the Premier and the whiz kids in the Liberal Party. I'm assuming that most of you are at home and not golfing, but if you're golfing, you might be able to catch it later. It's not a big deal.

This is one of those rare opportunities where we get to co-operate with the government and collaborate from time to time. It's a good thing. I was happy to hear the history from the member for Sault Ste. Marie, and I was happy to have respite from the usual oppositional kind of role we play—until the last two or three minutes when he started praising his government about what it does, and then I thought, "Oh, my God. He's provoking me." Right? Because here I am trying to be so nice and trying to collaborate with the government, and then he spoils the 35-, 40-minute speech with what the government is doing. So I asked myself, "Shall I be provoked by that, or shall I simply try to maintain my composure and be nice and avoid that," because this is clearly an occasion to celebrate. It's a bill that speaks to the possibility of a promising new post-secondary education opportunity in this province, and we should be celebrating that.

The member from Sault Ste. Marie gave so much history that makes so many of my comments redundant, but he does make a good point about what Algoma University College does that is unique to education in the north. It's a point that I wanted to point out but I'm glad to repeat it for emphasis, and that is that the school has a special focus on serving aboriginal students and that they offer a BA program in the Ojibwa language. As many of you know, aboriginal people have virtually lost their languages across Canada, which in my view is a tragedy. It's something we should be promoting, supporting. Where many of us think of aboriginal people, of First Nations people, as a nation, they ought to have that privilege and the right to their own language. When you have Algoma University College currently having a BA in the Ojibwa language, it's a big deal and it's something that should be honoured by those of us who take pride in such things. It is something they're doing that is a unique program and a learning opportunity for many aboriginal kids in the north, and that's something I wanted to make mention of.

It's an opportunity for me to briefly say, as I work with the government on this, that I had the honour of meeting with Bud Wildman, as the chair of the board, and Celia Ross a couple of years ago. I saw the university and some of its programs and was a witness to some of the programming and environment that the university offered. I wanted to remind some of the members in the Legislature about what he told me, because in 1999, their board made a commitment to operating in the black, to steady expansion, to further development of their partnership with the Anishnawbe community and to moving toward independence.

They opened discussions with SET, which is the Shingwauk Education Trust, and established a joint working group of representatives of SET and the Algoma University College to explore avenues of co-operation and to map out directions for the future post-secondary education at the Shingwauk site, especially how they could work collaboratively to bring Shingwauk's vision to fruition. He reminded me about the difficulties and the relationships to be worked out on all sides for all of them: the Algoma University College board, the administration, the senate, faculty, staff, students, alumni, SET, GRFN, Batchewana First Nation and other First Nations organizations, CSAA and the wider community of Sault Ste. Marie and Algoma district.

It's a reminder about how long the process takes from when the discussion begins to the final bill that is before us, that there were difficulties, disagreements that had to be worked out, and many had to be involved in that process. For that, I thank all of the participants. Obviously for my part, I thank Bud Wildman, the chair of Algoma University, and the dean, Celia Ross, for their efforts and their work over the years. I know that the government members smile when I thank Bud Wildman in particular, but he has been the chair for many years.

Hon. George Smitherman: What was that name again?

Mr. Rosario Marchese: Bud Wildman. He has been the chair of the board for many years, since 1999. The government members have already thanked themselves and thanked us too, and I already said I'm happy to collaborate with the government on this bill, so we are all in this together. This is true.

I wanted to remind the folks that a covenant was signed in a very impressive and emotional ceremony at the GRFN by Grand Chief Phil Fontaine of the Assembly of First Nations, SET president Darrell Boissoneau and Bud Wildman, who was representing the AUC board, before representatives of residential school survivors, national and Ontario aboriginal organizations, members of the Batchewana First Nation, the GRFN and the AUC community in Sault Ste. Marie. It was an impressive ceremony where this covenant was signed.

The work has been done. There are obviously many challenges they will be facing and some of those challenges will be the work to reach out, to recruit many other students across Ontario and Canada, which I'm convinced they will do and they will do successfully. Many other challenges we'll have will have to do with funding. We are hopeful, based on the comments made by the member for Sault Ste. Marie, by the minister himself, that whatever funding is necessary for this university to work will be provided, because if it is not provided, they will be in difficulties. That's a challenge they face and I'm hoping it's not a challenge the government will face in providing the support. If the support does come, then this university has a lot to be proud of, and the government too, because, after all, it's their bill. They can take credit for all of the years of work done by so many, including themselves, presumably, based on what I hear. So we can all, in the end, take credit.

I'm hoping that the support will be there, and with that, I end my remarks and congratulate all who have been involved in bringing this bill forward.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Seeing none, Mr. Milloy has moved third reading of Bill 80. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Third reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Be it resolved that the bill do now pass and be entitled as in the motion.

Hon. David Caplan: I seek consent for the House to recess until 10:45 a.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Agreed? Agreed. We're recessed until question period.

The House recessed from 1002 to 1045.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Good morning, members. Good morning, guests.

On behalf of the member from London North Centre: in the east members' gallery, we'd like to welcome Janet Collins and Celia MacDonald.

On behalf of the member from Hamilton East-Stoney Creek: in the west members' gallery, John Hall from Kamloops, BC; Karen Cerniuk from Kamloops, BC; and Larry Bancroft from Kamloops, BC. They're here visiting the Canadian Labour Congress convention.

On behalf of the member from Brampton-Springdale: Richard Boyes, president of the Ontario Association of Fire Chiefs and the Oakville Fire Chief; and Chris McDonough, president of the Ontario Municipal Fire Prevention Officers Association and fire prevention officer of the town of Georgina.

On behalf of page Dina Gang: her mother, Yaffa Gang, and her father, Barry Gang, in the west members' gallery.

On behalf of the member from Richmond Hill are a number of guests joining us today: Faheem Khan, Khalid Qureshi, Lal Khan Malik, Naseem Mahdi, Abdul Aziz Khalifa, Kaleem Malik, Aslam Daud, Asif Khan, Farhan Khokhar, Nasir Khan, Ashraf Sial, Tanya Khan, Qudsia Hamid and Amtul Rafiq Zafar.

On behalf of the member from Sarnia-Lambton, in the west members' gallery: Ron and Jean Bell, Jim and Nancy Hibbert, Larry and Sharon Watson, Ken and Christine Jaques, Bruce and Marg Gray, Gary and Dolores McGregor, Rick and Shirley Redmond, Jim and Bev Maitland—hi, Jim and Bev; friends of mine—Gerald and Edith Bailey, Mike Watson, Bill Allingham, Gord and Bernice Whiting, and Ernie Williams.

As well, I'd like to ask all members on behalf of the Speaker to welcome in the Speaker's gallery today a delegation from the Republic of Latvia, led by His Excellency Gundars Daudze, the Chairman of the Parliament. Accompanying the delegation is His Excellency Margers Krams, ambassador of the Republic of Latvia to Canada. Please join me in welcoming them and our other guests as well. Welcome today.

ORAL QUESTIONS

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is to the Minister of Health. For several years now, you have been travelling the province and touting your interest in building public confidence in Ontario's health system. However, your actions in recent weeks—in fact, your actions during the term of your office—when it comes to dealing with infectious diseases such as C. difficile indicate that there is tremendous doubt and concern in the minds of the public, rather than any confidence whatsoever. I ask you today, are you prepared to restore public confidence in our health care system and implement an investigation into C. difficile?

Hon. George Smitherman: The matter of C. difficile, amongst other infectious diseases, is a substantial matter for the health care system. I just don't tend to agree entirely with the premise of the honourable member's question, which places all of the expectations of the public on the back of the minister at Queen's Park.

We share in a health care system that has not performed as well as it can. On that, everybody would agree. I agree that this is a matter of confidence, most certainly. I think that the actions that have been taken, which have been responded to positively by the health care system and especially the hospital sector, are a very big advantage for patient safety initiatives in Ontario. I have confidence that Dr. Baker can lead Ontarians forward in a way—the health care system and patients alike—that enhances the requisite confidence in our public health care system. Those are the steps we're focused on.

1050

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Despite the warning you got when the C. difficile outbreak occurred in Quebec, despite the recommendations of the Canadian Medical Association to develop an outbreak plan and to deal with it, and certainly despite what happened in the Soo, you have failed to protect people in the province of Ontario. As Minister of Health, you are accountable to protect the health of the people.

I ask you again, are you prepared to instigate a public inquiry now, an investigation into what happened, in order that we can restore public confidence in Ontario's health system, which is currently sadly lacking?

Hon. George Smitherman: I would say, just on the matter of confidence, that the honourable member is not the only arbiter of this kind of circumstance. Indeed, 650,000 more people in Ontario have access to a family physician. This is an ingredient of confidence in our health care system, and I don't think it's appropriate for the honourable member to conclude that only one matter is the determinant.

I know that we can do better and we have to do better. Where the honourable member is a little bit off base is when she speaks about circumstances in Quebec as if that is a warning to only one individual and that the CEOs of hospitals that have experienced challenges with C. difficile, as an example, or the chiefs of staff or the workers in those environments don't share the health system obligation to do our very best for our patients. I know that we can do better. We have all the opportunity, through the investigation that has been done by the coroner, through the work that's been done by doctors like Dr. Gardam, to implement their best advice and to have immediate effects for patients. That's what I'm—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: The member seems to forget that this is a very tragic and very sad situation and that these deaths were preventable. I believe that we owe it to the people whose family members have passed away and to the people who are going into our hospitals to ensure that we have all of the information as to what happened and why.

Yesterday you indicated that we were going to do reporting, but what you didn't indicate was the plan to ensure there are no more of these preventable deaths. That's why I call upon you again, Minister. Will you commit to an investigation, an inquiry, into C. difficile in order to ensure that we know why this happened and make sure that no other family has to suffer in the future?

Hon. George Smitherman: I note that even your staff are clapping on the sidelines.

I think that the honourable member and I have disagreement on one point. It's not that anyone questions that these are challenging circumstances and tragic events for families and communities. It's not that there aren't lessons that can be applied, but it is that we have the lessons at hand. The honourable member's approach is to take a few years, appoint some lawyers and spend a lot of resources on these considerations. Ours is much more clearly to put in the hands of Dr. Michael Baker, an accomplished leader in this field, the capacity to begin implementation of strategies that can have effect much more immediately.

I agree with the honourable member. This is a very challenging circumstance. It's a health care system circumstance that requires a response across the breadth of health care. We're going to lead that, and Dr. Michael Baker is going to be a very effective advocate on behalf of patient safety in the province of Ontario. Our strategy is about immediate benefit.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Minister, you have had almost five years to lead and demonstrate that you are prepared to tackle issues such as C. difficile. You had the ability to restore public confidence, and you haven't done so. Right now, there's doubt and concern. You called upon us to do an inquiry into SARS when 44 people died. We now know that at least 270 people have died, and as I said yesterday, if you extrapolate, it could be 5,000.

I call upon you today to give peace of mind to the family members whose loved ones passed away. Make sure that no more deaths occur in the future which we know are preventable. Call an investigation in order that we have a plan to save lives in the future.

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to say to the honourable member, firstly, I think that her continued insistence on this suggestion that we've only now, as a health care system, been aware of C. difficile is not the appropriate circumstance. The events in Quebec are a lesson for everyone. That's why I think it's important to acknowledge that those who are on the front lines of health care, who have the responsibility for running health care organizations, also bear responsibility for implementation.

Dr. Richard Schabas, a former chief medical officer of health, on CHCH, recently offered the following: "I'm not sure a public inquiry is necessarily the next logical step. They often make for good theatre, but they don't get us where we need to go, which is to address the problem in a vigorous and effective way."

I think, largely, we already know what the underlying problems are with C. difficile. We're going to work under the leadership of Dr. Baker to make sure that all hospitals are applying those things that we already know, to the immediate benefit of the patient.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: What the coroner's report of over a year and a half ago proves is that this government has done nothing since that report came out to prevent further outbreaks and, certainly, to prevent further deaths.

In the Hamilton Spectator on Saturday, there was a description of what people go through when they die of C. difficile, and I'd like to read that. They are "mired in feces, suffering constant diarrhea, in pain and withered away except for grotesquely bloated stomachs."

That's what happened to Jack Elliott, who went into hospital for knee replacement surgery.

Jack's wife, Dorothy Elliott, and his daughter, Fern Merchant, are here today. Mr. Minister, will you commit to Jack Elliott's family today that you will call an immediate province-wide inquiry—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister?

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to extend to this individual family and to any family in the province of Ontario that has had an involvement with the health care system that hasn't been as positive as it possibly can be, that have suffered this kind of a loss—we share in the burden, on behalf of those individuals, of doing better work.

The matter at hand is the difference in approach between that which is proposed by the opposition party—an inquiry which would take a very substantial amount of time—and our approach, based, as an example, on Dr. Richard Schabas, who said in his quote that we have the information that we need to do a better job for our patients related to C. difficile and other infectious diseases and patient safety risks in our hospitals. Our strategy is to implement reporting which is rigorous and mandatory and which will place a very, very strong emphasis on these challenges. I think that this is the approach, in the name of those who have suffered and struggled—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: It would be my hope that the ministry has the depth to accomplish all those tasks at the same time and that we don't just have to do one after the other, so the investigation can go on to teach us about how to prevent these things into the future while we're working on preventing deaths in the current time.

A year and a half ago, the coroner's report said that we should be doing certain things. Not all those things have been implemented, and people like Jack Elliott continue to die unnecessarily. Jack's family deserves to know why. Minister, will you look Jack's family in the eye today and tell them that an immediate investigation will take place province-wide?

Hon. George Smitherman: Firstly, I'm not sure where the family is sitting, but as I had a chance to say a moment ago, our sympathy is with those in the circumstances.

You're not calling for an immediate inquiry. You're calling for a method of inquiry which is, by its nature, not immediate at all, and that is the central piece. You keep referring to the coroner's report, but the coroner's office themselves said they do not see the advantage of further inquiry because, like Dr. Schabas, they believe that we have the information that we need and that hospitals, including the hospital in Burlington, have the information that they need to implement strategies and policies which are more effective.

Our strategy is to work on relentless implementation, with mandatory reporting that will dramatically enhance the transparency associated with patient safety risks in our hospitals, under the leadership of Dr. Baker. This will produce the most important, beneficial and timely results for the patients in the province of Ontario. This is the way to act in the name of those who have succumbed to circumstances associated—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

1100

MANUFACTURING JOBS

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Deputy Premier: This morning, we learned that Canac Kitchens Ltd. is closing its Thornhill plant, which will result in the destruction of another 1,000 manufacturing jobs. This is added on to the over 100,000 manufacturing jobs already lost in the greater Toronto area over the last three years.

My question is this: With manufacturing job loss announcements coming on almost a daily basis, why does the McGuinty government continue to refuse to implement the policy tools that have been so effectively put in place in other jurisdictions to help sustain manufacturing jobs?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Economic Development.

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I do appreciate this question, because I know the people of Thornhill have had this company in their community for 41 years, and we're very sorry to see its demise with this announcement today.

What I can tell you is that we have had a number of fronts coming forward to help our manufacturing sector; this, in the face of a lineup of challenges that our manufacturing sector has never seen before. We all know that the dollar is stronger than ever, that oil is extremely expensive—all of these factors, and then on top of those, an American market that is not as strong as we would like. With this comes a budget from our government that puts cash on the table for our manufacturers—$190 million in last year's budget initiative alone, some of which is retroactive to the year before—so that we can help with this kind of investment that companies need to make to be more productive, to face these challenges.

I look forward to the supplementary so that we can speak to some of our other initiatives.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The Canac jobs are leaving, going to the United States.

The fact of the matter is that jurisdictions like Manitoba and Saskatchewan, which equally have to face a low-value American dollar and equally do not have their own sources of oil, are in fact doing a much better job than the McGuinty government in Ontario in sustaining manufacturing jobs. Manitoba is adding manufacturing jobs as hundreds of thousands of them leave Ontario. What's the difference? Manitoba has implemented a refundable manufacturing investment tax credit. Quebec has implemented a refundable manufacturing investment tax credit. Both jurisdictions see the wisdom of a reasonable industrial hydro rate, while the McGuinty government drives the industrial hydro rate through the roof.

I say again, when is the McGuinty government going to start implementing policies to sustain manufacturing jobs rather than killing—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Minister?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: To follow this member's logic, you would think that those jobs in fact would be moving to Manitoba or Quebec. That is not the case. This company also has a factory in Statesville, in the US, and they are consolidating their operations to that site.

As we say, every time we hear news of this, we recognize the stress it causes families. That's why families expect our Ontario government to come forward with real solutions for companies to see to a brighter future. That means us stepping forward collectively and every member of this House being supportive of initiatives like our advance manufacturing strategy, like our Next Generation of Jobs Fund. Every time we've brought forward these initiatives, this particular member has voted against them. Every time we've have a budget that has put cash in the hands of our manufacturers to see them through these struggling and challenging times, these members opposite have voted against these initiatives.

I say again, when it comes to manufacturing, we plant our flag—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Final supplementary.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I would say that under the McGuinty government, the flag is barely flying at half-mast and dropping every day.

The minister says these jobs are simply being consolidated. The fact of the matter is, these jobs are moving to a jurisdiction which has a manufacturing investment tax credit. These jobs are moving to a jurisdiction where a reasonable industrial hydro rate is guaranteed by the jurisdiction, something that you cannot find in Ontario any more. Jobs are moving to jurisdictions like Manitoba, which is now selling state-of-the-art, energy-efficient buses into states like California, New York, Illinois and elsewhere because they've had the wisdom to implement some of these policies.

These were good-paying jobs at Canac—$30 an hour. When is the McGuinty government going to stop holding photo ops and start—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Everything this member has just tabled is patently wrong. He's just incorrect. When we talk about energy prices, we know that there's a challenge across North America, but our competing jurisdictions in manufacturing—those same jurisdictions—have higher prices than Ontario. What you have tabled today is just inaccurate, and you need to be called on the carpet for this. Just because you say it's so does not, in fact, make it so. You're just wrong.

What we are facing is a slowing of the US economy. That is absolutely going to affect a company like Canac Kitchens, which makes products for the housing market. The housing market in the US has slowed, and we know this. It affects lots of our businesses that are involved in housing products.

What we know is that we are committed to our manufacturers. We are stepping forward in innumerable ways to help make investments so that they will be more productive—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

Mr. Howard Hampton: The only thing that is inaccurate around here is a McGuinty government that boasts about manufacturing jobs as they leave Ontario in droves virtually every day.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Deputy Premier: I want to ask the McGuinty government about its latest flip-flop. In the Court of Appeal yesterday, two months after requesting that the Kitchenuhmaykoosib Inninuwug leadership be hit with penalties that hurt, suddenly, the McGuinty government reversed their position. The judges thought it was almost humorous. In fact, they commented on it. I want to ask this: Instead of forcing grandmothers and respected First Nation leaders to spend two months in jail, why didn't the McGuinty government use the tools at your disposal, use section 35 of the Mining Act to declare that the disputed lands were not subject to mining exploration, and save everybody the embarrassment?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Deputy Premier?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I was given this on the front lawn, by the way. I want to thank the people who provided this.

Interjection.

Hon. Michael Bryant: It wasn't meant that way; it was meant rather to respect the wishes of somebody who provided it to me. Anyway, Speaker, I apologize.

I do want to say to the member that on this National Day of Action, it is one where, obviously, there's a particular focus on the federal government. Those have been the wishes of the national chief, Phil Fontaine, and the comments of a number of chiefs across Ontario. It's not to say that provincial governments don't take the opportunity to take stock of what has been done and what has to be done to make improvements. We have a long, long way to go. This government is very committed to making the changes in partnership with First Nations and Metis and Inuit people that will see improvement in the months and years to come.

Mr. Howard Hampton: As the judges pointed out, there's a big difference between the McGuinty government's position of asking for "hurt" two months ago and then, when forced to fess up yesterday, asking for "reconciliation."

The point is, the whole exercise—the jailing of great-grandmothers, the jailing of innocent First Nation leaders, having to go through the courts and spending millions of dollars in legal fees—could have been avoided by the McGuinty government simply using section 35 of the Mining Act and saying, "These traditional First Nation lands will not be subject to mining exploration or mining development.”

I think the McGuinty government owes an explanation to those innocent people who spent two months in jail, to that innocent great-grandmother who spent two months in jail. Why did the McGuinty government not use section 35 and exempt the lands? Why did you use a process that sent innocent First Nation leaders to jail?

Hon. Michael Bryant: The member knows very well that what he's saying is contrary to all the facts that have been presented in this House and in the court, that the government of Ontario took the position from the beginning that incarceration was wrong and ought not to happen. The appeal was expedited because the province brought a motion to expedite the appeal. The province continued to take the position in court that the appeal should in fact take place and that the chief and council ought to be freed. That's exactly what happened, and any suggestion otherwise by the leader of the third party—he knows that this is not the case and is inaccurate. But the point is that we know in the long term it's not just about sitting down with First Nation leaders and trying to negotiate agreements where there are conflicts; it's also about making changes to the Mining Act that will see those changes that we're all in agreement have to take place, and this government is moving forward in doing so.

1110

Mr. Howard Hampton: The McGuinty government likes to throw around the word “inaccurate,” so I want to quote from the judges. “The words ‘hurt’ and ‘reconciliation’ are total opposites,” Mr. Justice MacPherson said. Further coverage: “The suggestion by government lawyer ... Wilson elicited much confusion on the part of the three-judge appeal court panel and some laughter among those in the packed courtroom.” I think it's pretty clear who is being inaccurate.

The fact of the matter is, an innocent 58-year-old great-grandmother spent two months in jail. Innocent First Nation leaders, who were merely trying to protect their traditional lands, spent two months in jail. Why? Because the McGuinty government refused to use section 35 of the Mining Act to simply say, “These lands will not be subject to mining exploration and mining development.” The McGuinty government chose a path which resulted in the jailing of innocent First Nation leaders—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Minister?

Hon. Michael Bryant: The member is just making all that up, Mr. Speaker. He's making it up in the context of—

Interjections.

Hon. Michael Bryant: He knows very well how section 35 works. He knows very well that the crown took the position at both levels of court that incarceration ought to take place. He wants to suggest that the crown did not take the position that it did, that it opposed incarceration. But the National Day of Action is not just about what happened yesterday—which was the good result, but that frankly never should have been before the Ontario Court of Appeal because it never should have happened in the first place; the member and I are in agreement on that—it is about those changes that need to be made. First Nations' leadership has said that the primary reforms have to take place in Ottawa. That's why the leadership is there, and we agree with that leadership.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Stop the clock, please. I'd just ask the honourable member if he would withdraw the comment that he made in the opening of his answer, please.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I withdraw.

MANUFACTURING JOBS

Mr. Peter Shurman: My question is for the Minister of Economic Development and Trade and it deals with the latest example of how this government lacks leadership in manufacturing. After 41 years of operation, the Canac kitchen cabinet plant in Thornhill, as we have already heard this morning, is closing its doors and moving production to a facility in North Carolina. This closure represents a total loss of 1,000 manufacturing jobs in my riding of Thornhill, a riding that already has precious little in the way of manufacturing. These were good-paying jobs within a reasonable travel time for employees. I doubt there is a member in this chamber who did not at one point have Canac cabinets in his or her kitchen. Those days are over.

Will the minister accurately tell this House when the people of Thornhill and the people of Ontario can expect the McGuinty government to wake up and take real action to save our manufacturing sector?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: Once again, to the people of Thornhill, we do regret that Canac has taken this decision to consolidate its manufacturing base out of its own factory in the US. We know that these are challenging times for the manufacturing sector. We recognize that last year they also laid off 600 employees. I wish that this member would have been so forthcoming a year ago, when 600 had been laid off. Maybe that would have changed how he voted in this Legislature for initiatives that are here to help manufacturers in this province. Last year's budget was a perfect opportunity for this member opposite to show support for the manufacturing sector in this province.

We are working with our manufacturers. We recognize the challenges they face, and at least this is one government that will be behind them with more initiatives to come.

Mr. Peter Shurman: Okay, I guess it's my fault.

This is yet another symptom of this government's failure to manage Ontario's economy, a failure that resulted in the loss of 15,000 jobs last month alone. One thousand jobs in Thornhill were lost from Canac as of yesterday; 15,000 lost last month, 50,000 over the past year and 207,000 since 2004.

This government claims it is leading Ontario? The only place it's leading Ontarians is into the unemployment line. Will the minister finally admit that this government's only plan to stimulate this economy is to close its eyes, cover its ears, click its red shoes together and wish the problem away?

Hon. Sandra Pupatello: I will say this: that Ontario-wide we have seen over 450,000 net new jobs, and 450,000 net new jobs is something that every member in this House should be proud of. We recognize that within the manufacturing sector we are seeing challenges the likes of which we have not seen before.

That is why we continue to call on our federal counterparts to help us in this matter, so that when it comes to our manufacturers, the very sector that has fed the nation for decades now—and we, above all other sectors in manufacturing, see the strain of a high Canadian dollar, see the strain of a high price for a barrel of oil. That's when we need our partners to come to the table with us.

In the meantime, we expect every member of this House to vote in favour of initiatives that are here to help manufacturers. That member from Thornhill is included. We're going to watch your vote in the future on—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

DRIVER LICENCES

Mr. Gilles Bisson: My question is to the Minister of Transportation. Minister, I raised in this House two days ago the issue of a person who had received a lifetime ban from driving as a result of a tragic accident where four people were killed. The individual went to jail and on coming out of jail went and applied for another driver's licence.

Your answer was, "Because there was a wrong date of birth, the person was wrongly issued a driver's licence." Could you tell me—and you can tell everybody else—why it is that MTO doesn't check basic things like a person's last and first name, a person's address, or any other information that might be inside the database to prevent something like this from happening?

Hon. James J. Bradley: What the member doesn't understand—that's because I understand you wouldn't have all the information—is that there were—

Interjection.

Hon. James J. Bradley: The member for Oxford is interjecting. He should worry about day trading at Agricorp, not about this question.

Back to the member himself: There were two records which were created. That was the problem, the ministry officials have informed me. As you know, the person does not have a licence at this time.

This is an aberration. They do very thorough checks. There are rare occasions when these things happen. We are taking specific action that I'll deal with in the member's supplementary. I'll deal with the specific actions the ministry has taken to try to avoid these kind of circumstances. Even though they may be rare, any instance—I think you will agree with me—where this can happen is not acceptable. That's why the ministry is working hard with other ministries to try to—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. Supplementary.

Mr. Gilles Bisson: I don't think, Minister, that it's as rare as you make it out to be. You would know, as well as I do, that the CPIC database, which is the criminal database that's run by the RCMP, doesn't flag to the MTO database any criminal convictions. So somebody could be charged for an offence under the courts, it could go to the CPIC database, but there's no flag back to the MTO database.

The only reason we caught this person is because he was charged criminally and was listed in the CPIC database. That's how we found out. So I go back to you and I say again, when are you going to fix the provincial database to make sure that we have some kind of a flag between the CPIC database and there's a proper search done with the information that resides in the MTO database to stop this from happening again, because it will?

Hon. James J. Bradley: First of all, we do not control the CPIC database. We don't control that.

We have created a convictions records improvement committee with representatives from the Ministry of Transportation, Ministry of the Attorney General, the police and the courts. We've raised this issue with members of the committee and have expressed our concerns, just as the member has. We're also raising this issue on an ongoing basis.

System improvements have been put into place to ensure our records' accuracy. Once an electronic record is received, the MTO database does a search to add this information to the record. If a record is not found, a message notifies staff. Staff then perform a manual search in an attempt to eliminate any errors. If a record still isn't found, staff ask the court or respective police officer for more information. The ministry is considering the implementation of leading-edge security enhancements such as photo comparison technology which will help address fraud and identity issues.

1120

MUNICIPALITIES

Mr. Jim Brownell: My question is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing. While our government believes in working with municipal governments to ensure that the people we both serve, the people of Ontario, have access to the best possible quality of life, not every government has felt the same way. The official opposition's great legacy when they were in government was to download services to Ontario's municipalities without providing the means to finance them.

We have moved to correct this imbalance through measures such as the uploading of 50% of land ambulance and the uploading of ODSP and ODB. This is important. In 2006, the Premier also promised a complete review of the way service delivery is funded. This is a long-overdue measure to right the wrongs imposed by the last Tory government.

But there is some concern among the communities in my riding of Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry that the Provincial-Municipal Fiscal and Service Delivery Review is somewhat overdue. Could the minister tell us how the review is progressing, and when we can expect to see the results?

Hon. Jim Watson: I want to thank the honourable member from Cornwall. I know he has a delegation from Cornwall with us again today, and I very much welcome them to the Legislative Assembly.

I'm very proud of the work that the Minister of Finance and I are doing, in partnership with the city of Toronto and AMO, on the Provincial-Municipal Fiscal and Service Delivery Review process. We're certainly on target to have this very important body of work completed in the next couple of months, well before the AMO AGM that will take place later this summer. We want to get it done on time, but we also want to get it done right.

Many of us who served in municipal government remember that a similar process was followed by the previous government. We remember Premier Harris telling AMO that the downloading and the realignment of services would be revenue-neutral, pinky-swear. We all remember when he said "pinky-swear." It was never revenue-neutral; that was proven and—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mr. Jim Brownell: I want to encourage the minister to get it right for the municipalities of Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry and all of Ontario. It is important for all levels of government to work together to benefit the people who truly matter: the constituents whom we all serve. Hopefully, this is not lost on our federal counterparts and they will begin to work with us to strengthen Canada's municipalities, potholes and all.

One item that was to be reviewed was the matter of compensation payments that municipalities, like Cornwall in my riding, receive annually in lieu of taxes for hydroelectric stations on their land. I was proud to work with the former Minister of Finance to ensure that this was included in the review. Again, could the minister tell us if the city of Cornwall can expect some good news in this regard when the results of the Provincial-Municipal Fiscal and Service Delivery Review are released?

Hon. Jim Watson: I want to commend the honourable member, plus the mayor of Cornwall, His Worship Mayor Kilger, with whom we have a good working relationship. We understand that this particular issue is very important to the city of Cornwall and to the member's community. It's one of the reasons why this issue is before the fiscal architecture table of the review. We have a number of working tables that are working on a number of issues, and this issue is before that particular table.

Obviously, because we're still in the midst of negotiations between AMO and the city of Toronto, we want to ensure that the issues remain confidential until we come forward with our consensus report. But I'm very optimistic that we have turned the page on the downloading and the negativity of the previous government, moving forward in a spirit of co-operation and consultation with the municipal sector, because we respect them as equal partners in the relationship to build a better and stronger Ontario.

CASINOS

Mr. Frank Klees: My question is for the Attorney General. Last Tuesday, CBC News reported that the RCMP in Ontario believe that criminals are using Ontario's casino system to launder the proceeds of crime. To prove how easy it is, CBC News members pumped $15,000 into slot machines, cashed out the vouchers, and left with legitimate casino cheques. No questions were asked, no follow-up, not even a friendly inquiry as to the suspicious conduct. Can the Attorney General advise the House if he has ordered an investigation into this illegal activity that's taking place in our casinos, and if not, can he explain why he's turning a blind eye to criminals using Ontario's casinos to do their business?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: As the member would know, investigations into alleged illegal activity are conducted by the police. We don't direct the police. This government doesn't direct the police. We've taken a very strong stand with respect to security in the province generally. With respect to security in casinos in particular, I wouldn't comment on any specific case. Again, we don't direct the police, and the proper direction for my colleague's question and for the supplementary I suspect will be the minister. I'll wait to hear the supplementary.

Mr. Frank Klees: This is not a recent development. The first test of the OLG's launder-your-money game was conducted on December 1, 2005, at Casino Rama. The OPP's David Crane, who now heads the enforcement arm of the Alcohol and Gaming Commission, said that this kind of activity should have triggered concerns in the casinos. In fact, he said it should have set off alarm bells.

I would have thought it would set off alarm bells with the government, with the Attorney General, with the minister responsible. Not only have there been no alarm bells, according to FINTRAC, suspicious reports from Ontario casinos have actually dropped from 330 in 2002 to 84 last year.

Margaret Beare, a York University criminologist, said that what's happening here is basically a culture of preferring profit over enforcement. My question is this: I'm not asking the Attorney General to direct an investigation. I'm asking—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Attorney General?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: That was the very beginning of your first question, of course. You wanted to know whether I had launched an investigation. Of course, the police investigate alleged criminal activity. If you have additional information, you should get right down to the OPP. They work very closely with the casino security and the RCMP to fight money laundering. They serve at AGCO's investigation enforcement bureau. There's information sharing across jurisdictions, federal FINTRAC database collects information for use by law enforcement and—

Interjections.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: Contrary to the heckles from the other side, there's a great deal of co-operation between enforcement units federally, provincially and across the border. So these are just some of the ideas. Casinos must comply with federal regulations to fight money laundering, including mandatory reporting, compliance officer, background checks; there's a lot going on. But again, if the member has additional information, get right to the OPP.

PUBLIC HEALTH

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: Ma question est pour le ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée.

Medical officers of health are crucial to the protection of public health in Ontario, so important that yesterday the minister finally announced that hospitals will be required to report C. difficile to their health units so that "medical officers of health have the information they need to monitor and respond to emergent outbreaks."

Why, then, six years after the Walkerton inquiry recommended that vacant medical officer of health positions be filled expeditiously with full-time candidates, are one third of Ontario medical officer of health positions vacant, part-time, temporary or acting?

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to thank the honourable member for her question. Indeed, it's a good one. This proves to be a substantial challenge in the health care system in Ontario as there are unequal resources because some public health units are larger than others. We're working to enhance the capacity of schools of public health to create the kinds of candidates who would do well in the environment, which requires, of course, strong epidemiological backgrounds and good administrative capabilities, given the size of the health units. We've more than doubled public health funding in the province of Ontario in the last four years, in response not just to the challenges associated with Walkerton but others that have been there. We're continuing to work with public health units in evaluating the review of work that's been done that suggests that perhaps consolidation of some of the public health units may be necessary over time.

1130

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: The Ontario Medical Association has said that the lack of full-time, fully qualified medical officers of health poses an enormous threat to the health of Ontarians and that a single dysfunctional health unit could incubate a nationwide epidemic.

The minister says that hospitals will report outbreaks so that the Minister of Health can monitor and respond.

He says that he will look in the future to the consolidation of health units and building strength. I hope we will include health promotion within the list of qualities that the medical officer of health should have. But what kind of reassurance is this to Ontarians right now, when there is a third of health units that continue to lack the leadership of a medical officer of health? Where is the reassurance?

Hon. George Smitherman: Substantial reassurance should come from the fact that in each of these public health units there is an acting chief medical officer of health who has a good deal of capacity to be able to address the circumstances that the honourable member speaks to.

We're working hard to create more of the kind of candidates who would do well in these leadership roles. We've created bursary programs that allow acting medical officers of health to do the necessary transitioning so that they can become permanent in those functions. We've announced, through our health human resources strategy, HealthForceOntario, the capacity to create more opportunity for foreign-trained professionals to transition into these roles and have allocated funding for up to five physicians who wish to pursue specialty training in community medicine or an equivalent, which is a master's in public health.

The obvious is there. There are vacancies, of course. They're filled by acting chief medical officers of health, and work is being done to increase the number of people who would be suitable candidates for these roles on a permanent basis. These steps, alongside—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

AGRICULTURE INDUSTRY

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: My question is for the Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs. As you know, the supply-managed sector of our agriculture industry has proven itself to be an effective way of ensuring that farmers earn a stable and profitable income. For years, FarmGate 5 has proven its ability to provide the high-quality products Ontario consumers demand at a fair return to farmers.

I've been following the World Trade Organization agricultural negotiations in Geneva very closely and with great concern in recent months. Dairy, egg and poultry farmers in my riding of Lambton-Kent-Middlesex are truly worried by reports that Canada's supply-managed sectors are at risk because the latest negotiating text presented at the WTO does not provide the necessary flexibility to accommodate all our supply-managed sectors. Could the minister please bring this House up to date on what's happening at the WTO agriculture negotiations?

Hon. Leona Dombrowsky: I am happy to have the opportunity to share with all members of the House. You may recall, in December 2005, that all parties in this Legislature did support a motion that the province of Ontario would remain very strong in supporting supply management. As a result of that we have, I think, staked out some pretty clear ground with respect to our position nationally as well as internationally.

We're very pleased with the progress in some of the sectors, particularly as it relates to aggressive tariff reduction formulas, as well as the reduction and elimination of export subsidies. We are, however, concerned with the most recent text of modalities that have come from the WTO that would impact sensitive products.

Again, because we've had the resolution in this Legislature, we can say that the province of Ontario is stalwart in our commitment—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: It's important for our government to hold the federal government to account on this important issue. Canada and the province of Ontario have a strong interest in moving fairer trade policies forward for agriculture. Farmers in my riding tell me that we want a level playing field, and this means assurances that there will be meaningful cuts to US and European Union subsidies.

It does concern me, however, that with the stroke of a pen the federal government could negotiate supply management away. At a recent MP-MPP meeting in Lambton County, local representatives of the supply-management sector repeated the call for both the provincial and federal governments to continue defending the interests of those farmers dependent on supply management. They told me that there can be no federal plan B.

Could the minister please tell this House today what our government is doing to protect the interests of the supply-management sector?

Hon. Leona Dombrowsky: Obviously, again, the member is a very strong advocate for her constituents and for supply management. We thank you for that.

But with respect to the issue that has been raised, in February, the two ministers of the province of Ontario and the province of Quebec did issue a joint release to say that we urge the federal government to make this very clear: Supply management was to remain intact as we know it today.

Just last week again, after the most recent text had been released, the minister from Quebec, Laurent Lessard, and I issued another joint release making the point to the federal government that we need to remain strong in terms of protecting supply management. We have followed that up with a letter to the federal Minister of Agriculture on this very issue. Tonight, in the city of Toronto, agriculture ministers from across Canada will be meeting in this city—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

SERVICES FOR THE DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED

Ms. Sylvia Jones: My question is for the Minister of Health and Long-Term Care. Last week, I met with a family in my riding that I'm trying to help, who are caring for their three children, all of them diagnosed with a rare genetic chromosome imbalance that leaves them with high medical needs. All three require care, with the youngest in need of constant monitoring and care throughout the night.

Before the boundary changes, CCAC provided overnight respite care, allowing their parents to attain much-needed sleep. While the case managers agree with the need for overnight nursing care, in 2008 they have had to go without 80 hours per month. While the CCAC has done the assessment and agrees that the service is needed, Minister, how can you ensure that this family gets the care they actually need?

Hon. George Smitherman: I do want to thank the honourable member for her advocacy on the part of this family. It mirrors, at least somewhat, a few other circumstances between me and members and my staff who have been working to try and make sure that they get the care they require. Obviously this family needs to be acknowledged for the work it's doing in support of three young children with underlying medical complications. I don't know the ins and the outs of the circumstance, but I will commit to the honourable member to work alongside her, with community care access centres and staff from the ministry, to try and find a foundation of resources which can allow this family to support the children in their family. If the honourable member would give us a chance to learn just a bit more about the circumstances, we'll see what we might be able to come up with on their behalf.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I appreciate your assurance, and I do have more details here which I will provide to you.

This family has met with representatives from the CCAC a number of times, and they've actually come up with some very proactive solutions. To date, they have been given no flexibility to do that. As I said, for 80 hours every month since January they've gone without care.

Interjection.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: Minister, will you assist my constituents so that they can receive the overnight care they need to allow them to continue caring for their children at home, and before they go into crisis?

Hon. George Smitherman: I heard that the former Minister of Health from Simcoe-Grey wanted to take credit for the CCACs. It was important to remind him that for a few years there, they actually flatlined their budget. In contrast, we've been able to give, even just last year alone, $100 million in additional resources to community care access centres.

Interjection.

Hon. George Smitherman: Now he's heckling about their further plans to cut another $3 billion from health care.

Interjection.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I ask the member from Simcoe-Grey to withdraw the comment that he just made.

Mr. Jim Wilson: I withdraw, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. George Smitherman: Mr. Speaker, we shouldn't allow our side comments to confuse—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): You should be speaking through the Chair.

Hon. George Smitherman: Yes, that's why I said, "Mr. Speaker."

To the honourable member: I'll work with you to do what we can on behalf of this family. They need our support. I think it's possible to get it, and together, I'm very certain we'll be able to do so.

1140

PROPERTY TAXATION

Mr. Michael Prue: My question is to the Minister of Finance. My office has been working with Ms. Julia Sangster, a senior who lives in a granny flat on her daughter's property in the city of Kawartha Lakes. We have also had months and months of communications with Carl Eisenberg of MPAC, and the reason is because Ms. Sangster's daughter's property has been assessed $35,000 higher due to the granny flat which is placed upon the land. MPAC says it is bound by regulations signed by you that state that structures placed on the land are assessable.

However, the city of Kawartha Lakes says that the granny flat must be removed upon the sale of the property and it is not a permanent structure. Can the minister tell this House why a temporary structure is assessable even though it has absolutely no resale value?

Hon. Dwight Duncan: I thank the member for the question. I'm not familiar with the circumstances of this particular situation. My hope would be that we could work together to have a look at this. If you've corresponded with me already, I apologize. I'm not familiar with the case, but I'd be happy to look into it further with you.

Mr. Michael Prue: I thank the minister for that statement.

Julia Sangster has been living through this for a long time. There has been correspondence going back and forth between her, my office, MPAC and, I believe, your office as well. She is not alone. She is like thousands of other seniors who live on their old age pension independently and at no cost to the public. She and many others in this situation are being penalized by the assessment system.

I am thankful for what you had to say today, but this is a lacuna in the law that cries out for remedy. Will you promise to look into this to change the regulation in section 3 of the Assessment Act, not only for Ms. Sangster but for all of the other seniors across this province who live in granny flats on properties owned by their children?

Hon. Dwight Duncan: I thank the member for the question. I'll be happy to review it with him, but I'd like to review a few other things with the member.

Last month we brought in reverse onus on MPAC, something you and seniors called for for ages. Do you know what that member did? He voted against it. This government brought in a senior property tax credit in its last budget, and do you know what that member and his party did? They voted against it. We enhanced the senior property tax credit on three occasions over three years, and do you know what that member and his party did? They voted against it.

It's difficult to come to terms with a party that on the one hand says it advocates for seniors, and votes against every single positive measure for seniors—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. New question.

PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION

Mr. Jeff Leal: My question today is for the Minister of Transportation. Minister, you know that public transit is very important to the people of Peterborough. Ridership on our local transit system has increased steadily since our government made increasing public transit a top priority. I also know that certain studies clearly show that many people are still driving their cars to get to their destinations.

In my region, transit and transportation are linked together with positive economic development. We need an edge so we can stay competitive and have a future filled with prosperity. Minister, what are you doing to provide the best transit alternatives to the good people of Peterborough?

Hon. James J. Bradley: As the member would know, the government made a serious commitment when we decided to invest two cents of the gas tax into public transit for municipalities—$315 million in all. Since 2004, Peterborough has received almost $5 million in gas tax funding. Additionally, we recently invested more than $930,000 in capital infrastructure in Peterborough Transit. We believe these investments will propel transit systems forward, allowing them to make upgrades and provide tangible service improvements to their riders.

I understand that Peterborough has used part of it to upgrade its bus fleet, which will soon include 15 fully accessible transit buses. Added to that, we recently informed Peterborough council of an additional $762,000 for the Ontario bus replacement program. We've been working with the member on a regular basis. He's a tireless advocate for transportation—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mr. Jeff Leal: I'd like to once again address the Minister of Transportation. Minister, I agree that this government has made transit a top priority. It's actually sad that the previous government cancelled transit funding altogether for two years. That lack of investment left us with a lot of catching up to do. I've received a lot of positive feedback from my constituents and from local municipal leaders and transit riders about our great investments, but we really need to look from a regional perspective as well. Minister, can you update us on the multi-million dollar question of the progress on getting GO Transit train service to Peterborough—another transit issue?

Hon. James J. Bradley: I would first of all agree with the member that when the Conservatives got out of the funding of public transit completely, that was a major mistake that we're trying to rectify. Our government has invested over $10 million in Peterborough since 2003. It's a fundamental shift from the era previous to that. We recognize that to address gridlock, to address climate change in a meaningful way, you have to invest in transit options.

I understand that GO Transit is currently exploring ways to provide bus service from the Oshawa train station to Peterborough. GO Transit is also committed to extending their rail service from Oshawa to Bowmanville. This extension will serve to improve the riders' experience by facilitating closer bus-train meeting locations. The ability to extend rail service to Peterborough presents some different challenges, and as you know there are significant infrastructure upgrades that will be required. This has been given to Metrolinx to lead a joint rail study.

PESTICIDES

Mrs. Julia Munro: My question is for the Minister of the Environment. Constituents of mine who work in the structural pesticide industry are very concerned that they will be caught up in your cosmetic pesticide bill. In your haste to bring this bill forward, you have overlooked structural pest control. This industry uses pesticides as a last resort, keeping our homes, hospitals, schools, restaurants and other buildings free of harmful insects. To protect our health and quality of life, they often have to work on the outside of these buildings. This is not cosmetic use. Will you amend the list of exempted uses in Bill 64 to include uses related to structures?

Hon. John Gerretsen: I'm very pleased to answer this member's questions and talk about the positive nature of our cosmetic-use-of-pesticides bill that we have brought in this House right now. As the member well knows, we're into second reading right now. Obviously, the bill will go to committee at some point in time. We've also at the same time posted about 80 different ingredients and 300 different products that we're contemplating being part of the regulatory framework that will actually put the act into place.

We realize that there may be certain exceptions, not with respect to lawns or backyards and playgrounds etc., but certainly with respect to the use indoors, because some of these products in effect can be utilized indoors as well to deal with issues like pest control. The bill will make provisions for it, as the member well knows. We're looking forward to this member's positive contribution with respect to this bill and we look forward to all members of this House—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. Supplementary?

Mrs. Julia Munro: Minister, structural pest control often has to fight some of the insects from the outside of buildings, and that includes such insects as yellow jackets, paper wasps, hornets, ants, spiders, termites, ticks, fleas and earwigs. If this industry cannot do its work outside, it cannot destroy these threats to health. Will you commit to meeting with representatives of the structural pesticide industry to ensure that they are exempted, ideally by the bill, or at least through its regulations?

Hon. John Gerretsen: We already have met with literally dozens of groups of individuals and industry representatives on all sides of this issue. Obviously we want to hear from the group that she's talking about as well, and we will certainly make arrangements to meet with them.

PETITIONS

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Jim Wilson: I want to thank the congregation of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church and Father Tad, in Alliston, the church that I went to as I was growing up, for sending this petition to me.

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has been an integral part of our parliamentary heritage that was first established in 1793 under Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer is today a significant part of the religious heritage of millions of Ontarians of culturally diverse backgrounds;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to continue its long-standing practice of using the Lord's Prayer as part of its daily proceedings."

I agree with this petition and I've signed it.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Mike Colle: I've got a petition trying to outlaw firearms in vehicles.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas innocent people are being victimized by the growing number of unlawful firearms in our communities; and ....

"Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

"Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities and take the guns off of our streets.”

I support this petition and I sign it.

ALMA COLLEGE

Mrs. Julia Munro: I beg the indulgence of the House for a moment. I am presenting a petition signed by thousands of people who wanted to request, through the petition process, the saving of Alma College. I think that in respect to all of those people who signed these petitions, even though, sadly, we don't have that opportunity, it is out of respect to their concerns that today I read this petition.

“To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

“Whereas historic Alma College, designed in the High Victorian Gothic style, chartered by an act of Ontario passed March 2, 1877, opened in October 1881, located in the city of St. Thomas, county of Elgin, province of Ontario, has fallen into a dire state of disrepair; and

“Whereas Alma College continues to be threatened with demolition by its current owners despite the efforts of many concerned citizens, alumni and various officials; and

“Whereas an historical plaque commemorating Alma College was unveiled at the college on Thursday, October 28, 1976, by the Ontario Heritage Trust, an agency within the Ministry of Culture and Recreation; and

“Whereas the city of St. Thomas designated Alma College under part IV of the Ontario Heritage Act (bylaw 167-94), in 1994; and

“Whereas recent amendments (2005) to the Ontario Heritage Act allow the Minister of Culture to designate property as being provincially significant;

“We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

“The Minister of Culture immediately designate Alma College as a building of provincial significance and, in the event of a demolition order being issued for Alma, to immediately intervene by issue of a stop order, and to further identify provincial partnerships and possible funding to protect the existing buildings from further deterioration while financial resources are generated to restore the property to its former glory.”

I do this on behalf of the many thousands of Ontarians whose wish is never to become true.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have a petition today from Miss Susan Bishop, who lives at 2091 Hurontario St. in beautiful Mississauga.

“Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

“Whereas ‘day surgery’ procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

“We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

“That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to ‘day surgery’ procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed.”

I agree with this petition and I will affix my signature to it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

“Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

“Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

“Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

“Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

“Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature.”

I agree with it and affix my name to the petition.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Pat Hoy: “To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

“Whereas innocent people are being victimized by the growing number of unlawful firearms in our communities; and

“Whereas police officers, military personnel and lawfully licensed persons are the only people allowed to possess firearms; and

“Whereas a growing number of unlawful firearms are transported, smuggled and found in motor vehicles; and

“Whereas impounding motor vehicles and suspending driver's licences of persons possessing unlawful firearms in motor vehicles would aid the police in their efforts to make our streets safer;

“We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 56, entitled the Unlawful Firearms in Vehicles Act, 2008, into law, so that we can reduce the number of crimes involving firearms in our communities.”

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have another petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly from constituents asking for progress on the western Mississauga ambulatory surgery centre, for which I'd like to thank the office of Dr. Tom Short. It reads as follows:

“Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

“Whereas ‘day surgery’ procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

“We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

“That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to ‘day surgery’ procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed.”

I'm pleased to sign and support this petition and to ask page Damian to carry it for me.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: “To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

“Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network (CE-LHIN) board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan....

“Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

“Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

“Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

“We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

“That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

“That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit.”

I'll affix my signature to this and pass it to Natalie.

ANTI-SMOKING LEGISLATION

Mr. Jeff Leal: This petition arrived just recently.

“To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

“Whereas children exposed to second-hand smoke are at a higher risk for respiratory illnesses including asthma, bronchitis and pneumonia, as well as sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) and increased incidences of cancer and heart disease in adulthood; and

“Whereas the Ontario Medical Association supports a ban on smoking in vehicles when children are present, as they have concluded that levels of second-hand smoke can be 23 times more concentrated in a vehicle than in a house because circulation is restricted within a small space; and

“Whereas the Ipsos Reid poll conducted on behalf of the Ontario Tobacco-Free Network indicates that eight in 10 (80%) of Ontarians support ‘legislation that would ban smoking in cars and other private vehicles where a child or adolescent under 16 years of age is present’; and

“Whereas Nova Scotia, California, Puerto Rico, and South Australia recently joined several jurisdictions of the United States of America in banning smoking in vehicles carrying children;

“We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to approve Bill 11 and amend the Smoke-Free Ontario Act to ban smoking in vehicles carrying children 16 years of age and under.”

I agree with this petition, will affix my signature to it and give it to page Christopher.

POPE JOHN PAUL II

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Parliament of Ontario given to me by a number of individuals in the Polish church in Mississauga. It's a petition in support of an initiative of my colleague from Newmarket-Aurora with which I agree. I'll read it as follows:

“Whereas the legacy of Pope John Paul II reflects his lifelong commitment to international understanding, peace and the defence of equality and human rights;

“Whereas his legacy has an all-embracing meaning that is particularly relevant to Canada's multi-faith and multicultural traditions;

“Whereas, as one of the great spiritual leaders of contemporary times, Pope John Paul II visited Ontario during his pontificate of more than 25 years and, on his visits, was enthusiastically greeted by Ontario's diverse religious and cultural communities;

“Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Parliament of Ontario to grant speedy passage into law of the private member's bill ... entitled An Act to proclaim Pope John Paul II Day."

I'm pleased to sign this petition, and ask page Alie to carry it for me.

ANTI-SMOKING LEGISLATION

Mr. Jeff Leal: I have two more petitions which have just recently arrived.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas children exposed to second-hand smoke are at a higher risk for respiratory illnesses including asthma, bronchitis and pneumonia, as well as sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) and increased incidences of cancer and heart disease in adulthood; and

"Whereas the Ontario Medical Association supports a ban on smoking in vehicles when children are present, as they have concluded that levels of second-hand smoke can be 23 times more concentrated in a vehicle than in a house because circulation is restricted within a small space; and

"Whereas the Ipsos Reid poll conducted on behalf of the Ontario Tobacco-Free Network indicates that eight in 10 (80%) of Ontarians support 'legislation that would ban smoking in cars and other private vehicles where a child or adolescent under 16 years of age is present'; and

"Whereas Nova Scotia, California, Puerto Rico, and South Australia recently joined several jurisdictions of the United States of America in banning smoking in vehicles carrying children;

"We, the undersigned, respectfully petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to approve Bill 11 and amend the Smoke-Free Ontario Act to ban smoking in vehicles carrying children 16 years of age and under."

I agree with this petition and will affix my signature to it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mrs. Laura Albanese: I have a petition from the residents of York South-Weston.

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the government is proposing to remove the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature;

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature each and every day since the 19th century;

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict;

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"We, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I will affix my signature to this petition and give it to page Taylor.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions has expired.

This House is recessed until 1 p.m. this afternoon.

The House recessed from 1204 to 1300.

VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I just want to welcome all our guests here today, chiefs from across the province. Welcome to Queen's Park.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Norm Miller: I rise to mark the Aboriginal Day of Action, being held across the province today.

One must only look outside the doors of the Ontario Legislature to see that this government is not doing the job when it comes to our aboriginal communities. After five years in power, this Liberal government unfortunately has a record of being long on promises and flowery language but comes up very, very short when it comes to real, tangible action.

Our aboriginal peoples have played a vital role in the history of our province and stand to be a main driver of our province's prosperity, particularly in northern Ontario. Unfortunately, this government does not seem to understand that. This government stands idly by as our aboriginal communities face substandard living conditions, substandard schools and substandard community facilities.

There's no better example of this government's unwillingness to act than the Ontario Mining Act. This government has been in power for five years, yet they have failed to see the growing frustration amongst First Nation communities, and they have failed to act to change the Ontario Mining Act, which has been hurting communities and jeopardizing economic development.

We, in the Ontario PC caucus, understand the frustrations people feel when they try to deal with this government. We respect the demonstrations that are occurring across the province and on the front lawn here at Queen's Park, and we commend the various groups for these peaceful expressions of frustration.

MARKHAM MUSIC AND ARTS GROUP

Ms. Helena Jaczek: I recently attended an event hosted by the Markham Music and Arts Group to celebrate their Ontario Trillium Foundation award of $67,500. This money will be directed to hire a professional fundraiser to develop and execute a sponsorship campaign, thus ensuring the long-term sustainability of three important cultural initiatives in my riding of Oak Ridges-Markham: the Markham Village Music Festival, the Markham Jazz Festival and the Markham Arts Council. These three organizations came together to apply as a group for the grant.

The Markham Village Music Festival, held on the third weekend of June on Main Street Markham, is probably the best known, attracting some 15,000 to 20,000 residents and visitors. This flood of visitors allows Old Markham Village to show itself off in its best possible light and, happily, also generates much-welcomed income for the many places of business on Main Street Markham.

The Markham Jazz Festival follows on the third weekend in August.

The Markham Arts Council provides seminars, school programs, art shows and much more.

Needless to say, all of these important activities are made possible by the contributions of many selfless volunteers.

Congratulations to the Markham Music and Arts Group for continuing to enrich the cultural life of my community, and to the Ontario Trillium Foundation for recognizing their importance.

ONTARIO SUMMER GAMES

Ms. Laurie Scott: As the member of provincial Parliament for Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, I'm pleased to say that the county of Haliburton has made an official application to host the 2010 Ontario Summer Games. The Ontario Summer Games have never been hosted in rural Ontario, but I'm here to tell you that Haliburton county is ready to change that statistic.

Haliburton is known as central Ontario's playground, and this event will showcase our community and, more importantly, present the athletes with down-home hospitality.

I will be in attendance at an event in Haliburton county on June 4 to meet the review team and to enthusiastically present my unwavering support for their bid.

The review team will be receiving a tour of the incredible facilities that will leave a lasting legacy for youth activity and healthy living in rural Ontario.

We're eagerly anticipating the arrival of over 3,800 athletes, coaches and officials in the summer of 2010.

And here's the exciting point: Every single young athlete will be staying at a lakefront camp, where they will experience the outdoors and recreation of rural Ontario during the four days of competition. This is an amazing opportunity for the young people of this province to see and experience what happens outside the big cities, an opportunity to see the amazing lakes, rivers, forests, trails and rugged terrain that rural Ontario offers. But most importantly, this is about our youth and what rural communities bring to this province.

As Haliburton county's bid correctly suggests, it's altogether amazing. I trust that a full, fair and objective review will be made by the Sport Alliance of Ontario, and I know they will recognize that Haliburton county is, without question, the most outstanding locale, and in 2010, after 37 years, the Ontario Summer Games will finally come to rural Ontario and the county of Haliburton.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Mr. Joe Dickson: I am pleased to announce that the Special Olympics Ontario 2008 provincial spring games start today, and are being held in Durham region for the first time ever. I am hopeful that this is the beginning of a new trend. Opening ceremonies are at 7 p.m., and continue all day Friday and Saturday.

In Oshawa, we will see our athletes compete in power lifting, baseball, basketball and five- and 10-pin bowling. Of course, I am most eager to see the swimming competitions, which will be held in my riding of Ajax-Pickering. Our Pickering recreation centre will open its doors on Friday and Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. I hope to see all of you there to cheer on these Special Olympians.

It took a lot to get here. These wonderful athletes all exhibit boundless courage and enthusiasm. Teamwork and friendship is generally displayed and, as you will see, their hearts and souls go into the games.

In 1968, Eunice Kennedy Shriver opened the first Special Olympics world games, saying, "In ancient Rome, the gladiators went into the arena with these words on their lips: 'Let me win. But if I cannot win, let me be brave in the attempt.'" That was a very powerful message.

Today, all of the young athletes are in Durham. Many of them will win, but even more important, I know they will be brave and bring credit to their parents, their province and their country.

Special thanks to Deputy Chief Chuck Mercier and the entire Durham Regional Police Service for their efforts in making these games possible.

I would like to personally congratulate all of the 800 athletes who are competing. You are all winners in my books. Enjoy the competition. The government of Ontario wishes you all the very best and is looking forward to seeing you "embrace your spirit."

DURHAM MENTAL HEALTH SERVICES

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I am pleased to rise today to speak about the 20th anniversary of Durham Mental Health Services. It's a non-profit community mental health organization which services Durham region residents living with mental illness.

Durham Mental Health Services opened the doors of its first residential program in Whitby in the late 1980s with the hope that they would be able to assist a few people with mental health issues by means of giving them a clean, safe place to live, healthy food to eat, and the ability to be surrounded by trusted, caring people.

Today, Durham Mental Health Services is proud to serve Durham region by providing a wide range of community-based mental health programs that include supportive housing, crisis services, case management, family support and court support services.

Durham Mental Health Services believes that individuals with mental health issues are often overlooked or stigmatized and works hard to remind their clients that they are full members of our community, with the same right to dignity and opportunity as all of us. There is every reason to be hopeful about the capacity of each individual with a mental illness to live a life of meaning and purpose. Once our communities acknowledge the impact of mental illness and commit to helping those afflicted through no fault of their own, we can make that hope a reality.

Community mental health programs are a vital service, and they work. I am proud to share that Durham region has such an esteemed group of professionals helping out the members of my community, all the way from the governing board of directors, the management team, to the caring front-line staff whose tireless work helps Durham Mental Health Services clients achieve their full potential in our communities.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mr. Gilles Bisson: Today is the First Nations National Day of Action. Across this country, we have First Nations out, trying to educate the rest of the public on the conditions in their communities.

It's a sad state of affairs because, as we look on most First Nations communities, certainly the ones in the riding that I represent, Timmins-James Bay, as it would be in Kenora-Rainy River and others, you basically have situations where people are living in what in some cases are probably worse than Third World conditions. This, in a country that is wealthy, in a country that has brought wealth and prosperity to people for hundreds of years. This, in a province where prosperity has happened for many people.

What are First Nations people asking for? They're simply asking that we share. When we signed treaties with First Nations years ago, it was with an understanding that we would get access to their traditional territories and that there would be a sharing in the benefits of whatever economic activity took place in those territories.

1310

For the first 100 years, there has been not a lot of sharing. It has been about the Europeans, as we're seen, coming in and doing development at the cost of First Nations, with no economic benefit back to them.

Where are we today? We're exactly where we were 100 years ago. This government refuses, to this day, to enact what is called revenue sharing and to give First Nations an opportunity to benefit from the impacts of whatever economic activity happens near or on their traditional lands.

On this day, the day of action, I say that this government should take heed of the comments that are being made and actually give First Nations the respect they should have gotten in the first place.

MUSLIM COMMUNITY

Mr. Reza Moridi: I'm pleased to recognize the centenary of the Caliphate in the Ahmadiyya Movement in Islam. Established in 190 countries with members in my riding of Richmond Hill, the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community continues to preach a message of peace and tolerance. The movement is a reminder that the values we all share are stronger than those who would seek to divide us.

As the Ahmadiyya Movement in Islam celebrates this centenary, I would like to acknowledge a very distinct member of this community, the late Professor Abdus Salam, one of the giant physicists of the 20th century. Professor Abdus Salam won the Nobel Prize in physics for unifying the electromagnetic and weak forces and led us closer to the understanding of nature.

Over the course of its history, the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community has established a record of advocacy for universal love and compassion. As the centenary celebrations of the establishment of the institution of the Khalifat are fast approaching, I wish to extend my sincere congratulations to His Holiness Khalifa Hadrat Mirza Masroor Ahmad and to every member of this community. I would also like to acknowledge members of the community in the east gallery.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Welcome.

AGRICULTURE PROGRAMS

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel: Last Tuesday, students from Ontario involved in the Specialist High Skills Major in Agriculture program gathered at the University of Guelph for a two-day conference to learn from a number of current agricultural leaders.

School boards that offer the agricultural programs sent students to take part in the jam-packed two days of speakers, workshops and tours of the agricultural facilities at the University of Guelph campus. Topics included the world of work in agriculture and agribusiness, innovation in agriculture and the food sector, and the bio-science century. Former Ontario Federation of Agriculture president Peter Hannam, a leading Ontario grower and developer of soybeans and soybean products, provided the keynote speech on the implications for agriculture of new developments in bioscience.

This agriculture program provides students who complete four major credits and two co-op placements as part of their Ontario secondary school diploma an opportunity to use that skill further in life. From the words of committee member Mike St. Pierre, "Students who graduate with a Specialist High Skills Major in Agriculture designation on their diploma are prepared for success in the agricultural sector and in the post-secondary destination of their choice."

I know that a number of these students will bring the knowledge and skills that they have acquired as a Specialist High Skills Major in Agriculture and put those into practice in my own riding of Lambton-Kent-Middlesex. I certainly look forward to that day.

CLIMATE CHANGE CHANGEMENT DE CLIMAT

Mr. Phil McNeely: This spring, we held the second annual Ottawa-Orléans Climate Change Challenge. The goal of this annual challenge is to engage students in a dialogue about climate change, how it's impacting them and what they can do about it.

Les élèves devaient créer un vidéoclip d'une durée de deux minutes répondant à la question suivante : comment pouvons-nous, en tant qu'individus, réduire notre empreinte carbonique et contribuer à la prévention du changement climatique?

Four hundred fifty students participated in five local high schools: Sir Wilfrid Laurier, École secondaire publique Louis-Riel, Cairine Wilson, École secondaire catholique Garneau and St. Matthew.

J'ai aujourd'hui le grand plaisir de recevoir les gagnants et les gagnantes du concours à Queen's Park. Avec moi, in the west gallery, I have from Cairine Wilson: Justin Muhall, Sarah Poluha, Caitlin MacDonald, Allie Davison and their teacher, Guy MacDougall; et les élèves de l'École secondaire publique Louis-Riel : Marie Harrigan et Christine Miller, ainsi que leur professeure, M<sup>me</sup> Najat Ghannou.

Thank you again to the students and teachers. Votre conscience environnementale, votre créativité et votre pensée avant-gardiste nous ont tous inspirés.

Students, you are indeed the generation of change, and you should be very proud of yourselves.

I wish to thank Enbridge, the Cement Association of Canada, Wayne French of Waste Management, the EnviroCentre, Via Rail and CTV for making this day possible.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, and welcome as well.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS

MUNICIPAL RESIDENTIAL SPRINKLER ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES EXTINCTEURS AUTOMATIQUES RÉSIDENTIELS DANS LES MUNICIPALITÉS

Mrs. Jeffrey moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 72, An Act to amend the Building Code Act, 1992, the City of Toronto Act, 2006 and the Municipal Act, 2001 with respect to fire sprinkler systems in new residential buildings / Projet de loi 72, Loi modifiant la Loi de 1992 sur le code du bâtiment, la Loi de 2006 sur la cité de Toronto et la Loi de 2001 sur les municipalités à l'égard des extincteurs automatiques dans les nouveaux immeubles d'habitation.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member from Brampton-Springdale.

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey: The blaze started in a small brick bungalow in Toronto at 3:45 p.m. Darryl was at home at the time of the fire. He lived with his parents: a retired father and his mother, who operated a small, home-based business as well as caring for her son.

Darryl, 54, had multiple sclerosis and was confined to a wheelchair. His elderly father and a nephew attempted to save Darryl but were driven back by the smoke. They were taken to hospital with serious smoke inhalation injuries. Darryl was pronounced dead at the scene. A working smoke alarm was recovered in the house outside the bedroom where the fire started.

I present to the House Bill 72, the residential fire sprinkler systems act, 2008. It would be more appropriately named for individuals like Darryl and the hundreds of other Ontarians who might have been saved if a residential sprinkler system was present.

In the galleries today there are members of fire services from across Ontario who have travelled here today to bear witness to our actions. They can all tell you the harrowing stories of people who died or were injured, who might have had a chance if they'd had the extra precious minutes that a residential fire sprinkler system would have provided. I want to acknowledge their attendance and thank them for their ongoing dedication.

Since being elected in 2003, I've brought forward two private members' bills that would have ultimately put the onus for mandating residential sprinklers on the shoulders of the province. After consulting fire professionals, I've decided this time to approach the issue from a different perspective. The bill we're talking about today would amend several provincial statutes granting municipalities to enact bylaws requiring fire sprinkler systems in all new residential buildings. This bill recognizes that municipalities should have the ability to ensure that new homes in their communities have this important, life-saving feature incorporated during construction.

This past weekend, a family in my community of Brampton lost their home in a new subdivision, and two firefighters were taken to hospital. I believe that sprinklers would have limited the spread of the fire that engulfed one home and left two others severely damaged. Every few days, we read stories about another preventable fire and the needless loss of life. These stories raise awareness, and it's clear that the issue of residential sprinklers has finally become a provincial debate.

On the one side are those charged with public safety. Municipalities and their fire chiefs from across Ontario have petitioned our government, asking for the power to ensure that residential sprinklers are installed in all new residential construction.

On the other side of the debate are home builders and members of the construction industry who claim that new homes are safer and fire-resistant. It's true that building practices have improved, but today homes are built from lightweight, composite wood frames that are consumed by fire more quickly and fail even faster than solid wood beams.

1320

Caught in the middle of this debate are politicians. For me, the choice is clear. I'm passionate about saving lives, and I know there is more that our province can do. I no longer wonder if building codes will be changed to require residential sprinklers; I just wonder when regulations will be brought forward. It's clearly the way of the future, as witnessed by cities such as Vancouver.

Interior finishes such as upholstery, laminates and contents made of synthetic foam and plastics are routinely found in our homes. Our sofas and carpets are now largely constructed from petrochemically based materials. These contents create fires that burn hotter and quicker and produce higher concentrations of toxic smoke than natural finishes.

A new study, released in October 2007 by the Underwriters' Laboratories, adds credibility to the characterization of polyurethane foams and similar materials as solid gasoline. The furnishings that surround us today pose a higher level of risk than in the past, resulting in faster-developing fires and less time to escape. As a result of this and other factors, the time between the start of a free-burning fire and a flashover has been reduced to between 2.2 and 4.3 minutes. Homeowners have a shorter period of time to escape, and firefighters have a much more serious situation upon arrival.

Some have argued that only smoke alarms are necessary. Yet, while our first thought upon hearing a smoke alarm should be to get out, this is not always the case. People wait for reinforcing cues. What we typically do when we hear a fire alarm sounding is get out of bed, open the door, stick out our head and wait for a cue or direction, all of which takes precious time.

In a review of fatal fire data over a three-year period in Ontario, it was found that 43% of smoke alarms did not work, usually because of a dead or missing battery or power source. Smoke alarms aren't foolproof. They have a limited lifespan and need to be replaced every 10 years.

Residential sprinklers are an automatic device, a technology that requires no human intervention or reaction. It's a proven technology, like airbags. It doesn't rely on changing human behaviour to prevent an accident or loss of life.

Others have questioned the need for sprinklers. They've argued that the cost will negatively affect home affordability and may cost jobs in the housing sector. Yes, there's a cost associated with the installation of residential sprinklers. There's a cost factor with seat belts and airbags in motor vehicles. Today, these devices are recognized as essential life-saving equipment that no one would be without. Vancouver, which has had residential sprinkler legislation for nearly two decades, has not seen housing sales negatively impacted. We spend nearly two thirds of every day in a sprinklered environment, and no one has made the argument that we shouldn't have sprinklers in public places because of cost.

Fire sprinkler systems have proven their value and effectiveness time and time again. They protect our workplaces, restaurants, entertainment venues, schools, factories, gyms and places of worship. Vancouver has had 18 years of experience with residential sprinklers, and since the city passed the bylaw, there has not been a single accidental fire death in a home equipped with sprinklers.

The Association of Municipalities of Ontario recently expressed support for building code revisions that would make sprinklers mandatory in new residential buildings over three storeys and has also expressed support for this proposed bill. The Canadian Association of Fire Chiefs and the Council of Canadian Fire Marshals and Fire Commissioners support the need for fire sprinklers in all residential occupancies. Organizations such as the Ontario Municipal Fire Prevention Officers Association and over 50 municipalities across Ontario support this legislation.

On a cold February morning at 4 a.m., a fire engulfed a family home in Toronto. Loretta managed to escape the blaze with her two-year-old daughter and was pounding on neighbours' doors, pleading desperately for help. Her husband and four-year-old twin son and daughter were trapped inside the inferno.

Neighbours reported that this young mother was frantic. She was screaming for her family members in the house. A neighbour went into the house, and he said, "I've never seen anything burn like that. There was just nothing I could do. Smoke and flames were coming out. It was engulfed."

Toronto Fire Services dispatched 13 vehicles with 50 firefighters. The fire was under control at 4:22. Paramedics pronounced Stewart, Mackenzie and Arthur Cameron dead at the scene.

This past weekend, I joined Toronto Fire Services and the Toronto Professional Firefighters' Association at a service to honour past, present and future firefighters who make the supreme sacrifice at the fallen firefighters' memorial, to mark the addition of 22 names to that monument. These brave men and women put their lives on the line protecting us. I don't want to see any more families devastated by the premature loss of their loved ones.

I want to thank the Premier for acknowledging that our province can do more with regards to fire safety in residential buildings over three stories. I want us to be courageous and take that next critical step and develop a comprehensive residential sprinkler strategy for new construction.

For more than 25 years, nearly a dozen coroners' juries and inquests have recommended changes to the Ontario building code to include residential fire sprinklers. Isn't it time Canada's most populous province took the lead on this issue and answered the call of saving lives?

When I first came to Queen's Park, I remember something the Premier said. He encouraged us to be courageous and to bring forward legislation that's meaningful. I took his words to heart. I cannot think of anything more important than demonstrating our commitment to civilian and firefighter safety. I'd like to thank my friend Brian Maltby. He's been relentless in his determination to see residential sprinklers become mandatory.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I'm happy to be up and speaking to Bill 72. I want to thank the member from Brampton-Springdale for reintroducing this bill. To say "reintroducing" this bill may not be quite true; obviously the other two were slightly different. I want to talk a little bit about that difference, but I do want to thank her for her perseverance, for dealing with this issue that is part of fire safety.

Having been a firefighter for 25 years, I very much appreciate anything that government and any member of government can do to make society safer from the effects of fire and, more importantly as it relates to firefighters, to make it safer for those who risk their lives to make sure others are not hurt by that fire. We saw it with the World Trade Center, but you see it every day when you go to a fire anywhere, that as everyone else is trying to get out, the firefighters are trying to go in, to help those that are there. There's no doubt in my mind that sprinklers in the house would help that cause; I do want to acknowledge that right up front.

I want to recognize all the firefighters who are here today. It's great to see you here. It makes the place somewhat worthwhile that as you talk about a piece of legislation this important, the people who are going to be impacted by it are here to hear that discussion. I want to thank them for that.

I did say that there was one thing I did want to talk about a little bit: the difference between this bill, Bill 72, and the previous ones, the first one—oh, I haven't got the right date here—Bill 141, and the second one was Bill 2. They were similar bills. The only difference was that they were bills that would amend the building code so that every house constructed after a certain point in time would have a sprinkler system installed. This act changes that somewhat.

I think one can look at it either way, but it changes it so that we would no longer have a uniform building code across the province. In fact, we could have one municipality that dictated having sprinkler systems in new houses and another municipality that decided not to go that route. We could make the assumption, I suppose, that every municipality will see the benefits of doing it and that we would then have a uniform system across the province. But if that's the case, then it would still seem to me that the most practical way of doing that is to leave it in the building code so it just becomes common practice for everyone.

So I find some concerns. The big concern is that everything else that the government has been doing in the last while tends to take us in the other direction. I'll just use some examples.

The smoke-free Ontario legislation: Now, we all know that in every municipality the council has the power, and still does, to do what they deem necessary to protect the health and safety of their citizens, their residents. So we had a lot of municipalities—I think something like 75% or 80% of the population—covered by a bylaw that prohibited smoking in public places. Then the province came along and said, "No, we want to make sure that we have it uniform, so that 20% of that population is not deprived of that same protection. If it's good for one, it's good for us all." So the government passed the smoke-free Ontario legislation to make sure that we would have uniform coverage across the province.

1330

More recently, we're presently debating in this House, when we're debating government business, the pesticides act. It's exactly the same thing: Presently, the city of Toronto has a bylaw that regulates the spraying of cosmetic pesticides on lawns in the community. We have pesticides legislation now that will prohibit it across the province. The difference between those two: The smoke-free Ontario legislation applied a stronger standard or as strong a standard as we had anywhere in the province. It appears that the pesticides legislation doesn't do that; it actually lowers the bar and says that no municipality can regulate above that. So we are in fact taking away the ability of municipalities to regulate what they think is in the best interests of their citizens. We will be getting rid of what the government calls a patchwork system and we will make it all the same by uniform policy. This bill, a change from the previous bill, will do exactly the opposite: It is permitted in all municipalities, but no municipality in the province is presently mandated to do it. This legislation would allow the councils to decide whether they want to implement the building code.

I have some concern that if you do that, it's kind of difficult to say that safety for the people of Oxford county is less or more important than for the people of the city of Toronto. I don't think it's fair to suggest that firefighters' risks should be greater in any single municipality than another. So if we're all convinced that the proper way is to have it uniform across the province, then it would seem to me that that's the way the legislation should go.

Having said that, I also believe that this type of legislation—I said it the last time when I spoke to the member's bill, and we appreciated that opportunity. This is something that requires, as the member said, a considerable amount of debate. There are two views—there's more than one view, anyway; there are likely more than two. There are two sides to the story. The safety aspect of it, of course, is very important, but then there's another facet of what it will do to society in general and to the cost of homes and how well they will work and so forth. There's a lot of debate that needs to go into making the final decision.

Every so many years—I think it's every five years—there's a building code review to see what needs to be changed for future direction in the province. I believe that's when this type of thing should be discussed, so everybody involved has an opportunity to put their position forward and then come out at the end with what is in the best interests of the province. I want to point out that I think it's rather important that between the last time I had the opportunity to speak to this bill and now, we've had such a building code review. I wasn't at that one. I've been involved in a few before then, but the last one, I wasn't there. I would presume that this issue had been discussed at that time, but it was decided that no changes would be made.

As it relates to this bill, I support the principle of what the member is putting forward, but I really have concerns that it will be any more successful in getting through the next step after today, if it passes today. I think we would have great difficulty in getting it back into this House for third reading. We know that the government House leader has to call it back. In order for the government House leader to call it back, it has to be the wish of the government for it to be passed into law. If that was true—and I'm just guessing now—and if the government was intending to pass this into law, they would have included it in the last building code review.

So I say to everyone gathered that passing it today will not necessarily make it the law of the province. The individuals I spoke to after the last debate on this bill may very well be in the audience this afternoon. I remember saying that I would be much more enthused about this if I thought that the bill was coming back for third reading in order to be passed, as opposed to just going through the process of having the discussion on second reading. At that point, it turned out to be true, and we're here to do it again. I still have that same concern that it may not make it there.

Having said that, I do want to quickly go over some of the concerns that were expressed by some of the other people. This is from March 2, 2007; and it was written in the Globe and Mail. I won't go through the whole thing. It was Mr. Mike Holmes from Holmes on Homes. Some people consider him quite an expert on renovations. I watch him from time to time. I know that when I get involved in that type of thing, I want to do it right, so he will tell me when I'm not. It's interesting—I've never seen him compliment anyone whose work he was tearing out.

I just want to point out this out. It says here, "We've all heard the statistics about people who had smoke detectors or fire extinguishers that didn't work when they needed them, because they forgot to change the batteries or replace them as needed." He goes on to talk about how the sprinklers will have the same problems if they aren't maintained, and there's nothing in the legislation that would encourage that maintenance. I mention that because I think it's so important. If you read the statistics and stories that are in the paper about fatalities in house fires, it will quite often include whether or not the smoke detector was working, and the majority of the time, it wasn't.

We have to remember that the sprinkler system will do a great job of helping fight the fire for the firefighters, and it will do a great job in trying to save property, but I'm not sure that it does as great a job of warning people that the house is on fire and gets them out. Most of the time—or a lot of lot of the time, at the very least—the smoke will be hazardous to your health long before the fire will set off the sprinkler system. I think we need to put much more of our efforts and our time into making sure that people have smoke detectors and that they're workable. I know that the law is that you must have a smoke detector on every level in your house. I'm here to say that I do have, but no one has ever come to see whether or not they're working. I think we need to do more enforcing the rules to do that.

Mike Holmes also goes on: "If we're pushing for new legislation—instead of a Band-Aid-like solution such as mandatory sprinklers, how about introducing something that will improve the building code standards for fire-resistant building? Let's build it right the first time." What he's talking about there is, if we're going to make that investment, why do we still use half-inch drywall instead of five eighths? Because the five eighths take much longer for the fire to get through. It's things like that that one can do to improve the efficiency of the building, to keep it from burning.

I commend the member for introducing this legislation. I think it should have had more consultation through the building code, but I understand the member's problems with getting that done. If it's not the government's wish to get this done, then this is the only alternative the member has to get it into the House, and I appreciate very much that she has persevered to get it to where it is today. Thank you for allowing me to speak.

Mr. Michael Prue: I'm here today to speak again, for the third time, on the Municipal Residential Sprinkler Act, Bill 72. I say "for the third time" because in each session since the member from Brampton–Springdale has been here, she has put forward a bill—a logical, clear, coherent, concise, doable bill—to protect lives in this province, and in each session, we have seen it die on the order paper. It has been referred to committee, but the first two times, it wasn't even called by the committee. The government refused to call the bill into committee to even allow public deputations, to even allow an all-party conference to listen to it, support it, speak to it, make amendments to it and garner public support.

On the first occasion, she spoke with extreme passion, and many people and firefighters came out. The numbers seem to swell each time this is brought forward. Each time, more and more people come out to hear about this bill. I am convinced that the public at large is totally, completely supportive of this bill.

I rise here today, as I have in the past, to talk about the merits of saving lives. I know that there are people out there who do not support this bill; we all know that. We all know that some of those people who have had the ear of the McGuinty government and the cabinet—those people who have spoken against this bill and other similar bills—have largely come from the construction industry, the new home builders. They talk about the costs, and I've asked them and questioned them about the costs in human lives. They talk about money, and I think that the member from Brampton-Springdale and others in this Legislature have talked about human lives and talked about the importance, and which one is the most important.

1340

Each year that she has spoken, and this is the third time, she has asked the government, her own government, to do the right thing. I'm asking them to do the right thing again this year, and we acknowledge—the previous debater talked about this as well—that the bill has changed. I am not sure that the bill has changed for the better, and I have to say that. I understand her frustration—we all understand her frustration—in having to move an amended bill that calls upon the 480 municipalities to individually have their own fire code, their own building code, their own regulations, their own bylaws, because she understands that this government seems to be intransigent upon something that other governments have seized years ago.

We know they've done it in British Columbia; we also know they've done it in 400 other jurisdictions across North America. One only has to look at the demonstration in front of Queen's Park—all members were invited to come out to it—a year or two ago. They showed how fast a fire can start; how fast it can reach the flashpoint, the point upon which it becomes extremely dangerous, at which the residents invariably are in danger, where the firefighters who enter the building are in danger; and how that flashpoint can be reduced to almost nothing with a residential sprinkler. It showed how fast a mock chair, I think it was, went up, and then it showed how, when the mock chair had a sprinkler on it, even though the fire may not be completely put out, it lessened the fire and the severity and the intensity of that fire to the point that it was not a danger.

We all know that firefighters across this province endeavour to get to the scene of a fire within four or five minutes of the time that the alarm is sounded and they're out the door. By and large, in the larger urbanized areas, they are absolutely and totally successful in almost every case in meeting that mandate. But we have lots of places in this province where they don't, and the firefighters are too spread out in rural and remote areas, in small-town Ontario, where it is impossible, with volunteer firefighters, to meet that four- or five-minute mandate. We know that having a residential sprinkler will allow the home to be watered down even a little, so that the flashpoint is not reached, so that lives are not put at the same kind of risk, so that the smoke doesn't engulf the entire home. Even if that buys another four, five or six minutes, it's going to save lives every single time, and every single time it's going to give firefighters who bravely come out to unforeseen circumstances that extra couple of minutes before the flashpoint is reached, and that extra couple of minutes to save their own lives and their own health, which we all hold so dear.

I too have introduced a bill three times in this Legislature. The minister from Brampton-Springdale and I work almost in tandem. She is trying to get residential sprinklers for new homes and I have been trying to get wooden fire escapes off the old ones. Each time she speaks to my bill and I speak to hers. I remember when my bill on the last occasion actually got to committee; it actually made it to committee and it was debated. I remember the sadness that I had when we tried to incorporate some aspects of her bill at that time into my bill. The Conservatives all supported doing that, and I was the lone New Democrat—it was my bill—and I supported doing that, but her colleagues in the Liberal Party wouldn't even buy into what she was trying to do in terms of this bill. My bill passed, but without any of the amendments that I wanted for her.

This is tough. I know what she's trying to do and I support it wholeheartedly. I'm not speaking to her, because I don't need to. I'm speaking to the other members. I know it's going to pass unanimously here today—or I expect that what happened before is going to happen again—that we're all going to vote for it, but it's not enough to vote for it today. You have to, as a caucus, make the determination to send this to committee and you have to, as a caucus, stand united to make it happen. It has to happen, and it has to happen there. Then you, as a caucus, have to demand, through the Premier's office and through the House leader, that it be brought back for third and final reading in this House. It's not going to happen any other way. It's not going to happen if we all sit here and are content to allow it only to happen here today.

So I'm asking members to do something I have seen all too rarely in these last five years—not that I'm ever going to see it—and that is for there to be a mini-caucus revolt, where people say, "This is an important bill."

We've seen what the government is trying to do. They're talking about sprinklers, but in places that are not going to really affect anybody; well, they're going to affect some people. They're talking about sprinklers in residential and service areas, in common areas and in mixed-use buildings, but they all have to be in excess of three storeys. They're not talking about sprinklers in single-family homes, and that's what this bill is all about.

It would not take a huge amount of effort to take what the government is planning to do anyway and incorporate all homes, to be like the 410 or so other jurisdictions across North America that already see the brilliance of doing this. I am asking them and all of you to do that. It is not a difficult proposition.

I just want to close by quoting from my favourite former fire chief, retired, of the city of Toronto, whom I see here today, Mr. Al Speed. He wrote an editorial opinion to the Toronto Sun on January 9, 2008. He said:

"Fire sprinkler systems have proven their value and effectiveness time and again. They protect our workplaces, restaurants, entertainment venues and institutions, yet we return to our homes, where we should feel safe, and that, tragically, is where most perish in a fire, typically between 90 and 100 annually in Ontario."

He goes on in very hard-hitting terms: "Let's stop this madness now. Vancouver introduced mandatory residential sprinklers for all new residential construction in 1990, and 17 years later they have never recorded a fire fatality in an occupancy protected by sprinklers.

"The responsibility in Ontario lies with Queen's Park, and they can bring in changes to the Ontario building code requiring all new houses and apartment/condos to be protected by fire sprinklers."

He ends with these words: "I urge the people of Ontario to call upon their local MPPs and the provincial government to introduce the necessary legislation requiring the installation of fire sprinklers in all new residential occupancies. If the government is not prepared to make this progressive move, I challenge them to at least set up an inquiry to learn the facts."

I challenge the members opposite to do the same: to learn those facts, go back to your caucus, support your colleague from Brampton-Springdale and, this time, do it right. You're making the changes anyway. Include single-family residential homes. Protect the lives of citizens and the lives of our brave firefighters.

Mr. Kim Craiton: It's a pleasure to be speaking here today at 1:50 p.m. on Bill 72, a bill that I consider very significant. Before I start, I would like to recognize two very professional firefighters from my riding of Niagara Falls who are here today to support this bill. One is Fort Erie Fire Chief Jim Douglas. He's in the east gallery, behind me, so I don't have a chance to say hello to him personally, but thank you for coming out, Jim. As well, Niagara Falls Assistant Fire Chief Jim Jessop is here. Thank you very much for taking the time.

The fact that both of these chiefs are here indicates that they know first-hand the tragedy and trauma of needless death. They also know that this bill will support not just the public but firefighters. I believe that by their presence here, they're giving strong testimony for the need for this private member's bill that the member for Brampton-Springdale has put forward, and that they're supporting it.

1350

We all have stories about fires, unfortunately. I'm going to share a couple with the House today. They're not nice stories to tell, but I think they're significant enough to be told because they emphasize why having sprinkler systems, as indicated in the bill, are so important.

Two weeks ago, when a fire broke out at Cavendish Manor, a retirement residence in my community, some of the residents were so desperate to escape that they were hanging from the open windows on the second floor and some of them were getting ready to jump. The fire was an accident, but it was a tragedy waiting to happen because this residential retirement building had no fire sprinkler system. Thank goodness the fire broke out just before 11 in the morning, in a room on the second floor of a 90-year-old former schoolhouse, when staff were present. Thank goodness it happened during the day, because the well-trained staff at that home knew what they were doing and they did it very well. If this had happened at any other time, particularly in the evening after 8 p.m., when there is less staff on duty, Assistant Fire Chief Jessop told me there could have been a loss of at least 20 of this city's most respected seniors. Many of these seniors are personal friends of mine, and I've attended many of their milestones and I celebrate their birthdays with them. As it was, one of the residents in fact did die while being evacuated but, thankfully, was resuscitated by a firefighter. I'm happy to report that she's doing well.

I visited the home the next day. I talked to the responders. I talked to the staff. I talked to the investigators. I saw the devastating results first-hand. I saw how in just four minutes, a little, containable accident became a raging, ravaging inferno that consumed everything in its way in its quest for oxygen. I saw how the fire was contained by the existing regulations we have. I saw how the fire doors that were there and the fireproof ceiling helped. But I also know and I was told that had there been one sprinkler head, it would have limited the damage to that one room only and allowed everyone in the home to live with the peace and security of a sensible fire protection system, had it been in place.

Another situation: While no one was injured after a fire gutted a home on Casey Street, again, in my riding of Niagara Falls, earlier this year, the damage was extensive. The fire started in an area in the basement and burned through the ceiling, spreading to the first floor. The damage was pegged at $70,000. Again, Jim Jessop, assistant fire chief with the Niagara Falls Fire Department, told me that if the home had been equipped with a residential sprinkler system, the fire would have most likely been extinguished by a single sprinkler head, with far less damage.

Unfortunately, this was not true last year in Fort Erie, as their fire department tried valiantly to rescue a mother and a child from a townhouse. The mother suffered burns to over 80% of her body and is still hospitalized. The daughter died. This fire was truly tragic. It was tragic for the loss of life. The tragedy continues today for the mother as she fights the pain of body and soul. The tragedy continues as our community copes with the horrendous medical and professional care bills. But the biggest tragedy of all is that it did not need to happen. With a single fire sprinkler head, the mother and daughter would be here today, in this gallery, alive and in good health, supporting this bill. The damage to the property would have been minimal. I want to tell you that the responding brave men and women of the Fort Erie Fire Department would in fact have faced a significantly less dangerous situation, with less risk and far less emotional trauma.

Nobody likes to see a needless death. Tragically, our fire departments across the province have seen far too many of them.

You've heard from two of the speakers before me about the city of Vancouver, and I want to say it for the third time: Eighteen years ago, by a municipal bylaw, they passed legislation requiring residential sprinklers in all new homes. Since then, they have not had one—let me repeat that—not one fire-related death in a home with a sprinkler.

Every year, my guests, two of Ontario's best fire professionals, have travelled to urge us to amend the building code to require sprinklers in all structures over three storeys. They're back here today. They're asking us to complete the job and to cover buildings under three storeys. According to Patrick Burke, the Ontario fire marshal, who was formerly the fire chief for Niagara Falls, there are almost 13,000 fires, that result in 90,000 deaths, 800 injuries and over $340 million in property damage in Ontario; 72% of fires occur in residential homes.

Those opposing mandatory sprinklers have said that their concerns are about the cost and the impact on new homes. I'm going to tell you that the same thing was said about seat belts and airbags in motor vehicles. Today, these devices are recognized as essential life-saving equipment. So even if there is a cost, we are talking about people's lives. That's something you can never place a value on.

Let me say in conclusion: In light of all the evidence, if we fail to act, if we fail to support this legislation, if we fail to insist on the installation of fire sprinklers, then we fail the communities we serve and we fail to protect those who protect us. If we fail to serve, then we really are being negligent.

I want to thank the member from Brampton—Springdale, my good friend and colleague Linda Jeffrey, for her passion and purpose. I am quite honoured to have the opportunity to speak in support of this bill.

Mrs. Laura Albanese: I am pleased to rise today to support Bill 72, the Municipal Residential Sprinkler System Act, put forward by the member from Brampton—Springdale.

I am pleased to participate on behalf of the residents of York South—Weston, who remember a fire tragedy that took the life of a 15-year-old girl. In December 2006, a fire broke out in a townhouse complex on Humber Boulevard in York South—Weston, and a 15-year-old was trapped on the third floor of her home. Although her mother jumped out a window to escape the flames, the teen had to be retrieved by fire crews. Tragically, she later died in hospital.

As a mother, when I hear about these incidents I can't help but feel hurt for the family and the mother who had to cope with this tragic loss. I know that residents were shaken up by the blaze, but I also think it's very important to think about the firefighters who must work to extinguish fires in such dangerous situations. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the firefighters who are here in the chamber today.

In the case of the Humber Boulevard fire, the Toronto fire platoon chief, B.J. Hansen, said at the time that the visors on the helmets were completely melted off of his crew, and the firefighters suffered steam burns. So in battling fires, we think of the safety of the residents of the buildings and the families who endure the trauma, but we also think about the front-line staff who must protect and contain the danger while potentially putting themselves in harm's way.

Residential sprinkler systems are another tool that residents and firefighters can draw on to prevent these kinds of tragedies. In 2006, the cause of the blaze was unknown, but the fire officials noted that the smoke detectors in the complex were in good working order. Despite that fact, there was still the tragic loss of a young life.

Building codes, the materials used in construction, and fire warning and prevention systems within complexes are all-important when it comes to fire safety. Home-owners should certainly think about installing residential sprinkler systems, but the proposed Bill 72 keeps in mind the particular nature of multi-unit dwelling residences that are very high or are attached. The member from Brampton—Springdale is correct in bringing particular emphasis in Bill 72 to the multi-level nature of new construction.

Although I started my debate speaking about a tragic fire that took a life about a year and a half ago in York South—Weston, there was actually a more recent fire that illustrates the importance of integrating fire prevention into new buildings. Just this past Monday night, May 26, in the area of Jane and Weston in York South—Weston, there was a four-alarm fire on a top-floor unit of a townhouse complex that spread to at least two other homes. Nineteen fire trucks and 80 firefighters were called to the scene, and it is estimated that about 40 residents were affected by the blaze and had to be evacuated from their homes. The firefighters did a terrific job—no reports of injuries. Residents were able to return to their homes quickly.

1400

What I find relevant to our discussion on Bill 72 is that firefighters were on the scene for over three hours, because while the fire started in one unit of the complex, it spread quickly to adjacent buildings. The fire captain estimated that the townhouses were less than two years old.

So Bill 72 really speaks to the fact that it does take a variety of participants to work together to prevent incidents like the fire in York South—Weston on Monday. Therefore, on behalf of the residents of York South—Weston, I would just like to conclude by once again congratulating the member from Brampton—Springdale for bringing forward this bill, which highlights a variety of partners who can work together to bring changes in Ontario to save lives.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Ms. Jeffrey, you have up to two minutes to respond.

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey: I'd like to thank the member from Oxford. I know he supports the principle of this bill. He spoke about a contractor's opposition to this legislation. I know developers and contractors are concerned about this legislation, but I'd like to encourage them to embrace this proven technology in the same way they do environmental and energy initiatives.

To the member from Beaches–East York, I appreciate his ongoing support on this issue. He gets it and he understands that fire safety is not a partisan issue. I like the idea of a sprinkler revolution, so I'll think about that.

To the member from Niagara Falls, I thank him for his ongoing support. It's unfortunate that fires continue to take a toll on our residents, and I'm sorry they're happening in Niagara Falls.

To the member from York South–Weston, I thank her for speaking and sharing that tragic fire in her community and how she lost such a young life at such an early age.

It's unfortunate that fires continue to take a toll in Ontario. That's why I'm here again today. This is my one chance to talk about something that I'm passionate about. We are the voice of all Ontarians across this province. The most vulnerable, the elderly, the disabled and children are most at risk when their home is on fire. They rely on us, when we find out about good technologies or good ideas, to put those ideas forward and not wait until a building code review or some other opportunity happens. We're here to react and be nimble when things are obvious to us. This is an obvious piece of legislation, and I am committed to seeing the legislation passed so we can protect all Ontarians across all our ridings in this province.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): I'll just remind our attendees today and people watching at home that, under the new rules, this item will be voted on in 100 minutes' time.

JAY LAWRENCE AND BART MACKEY MEMORIAL ACT (HIGHWAY TRAFFIC
AMENDMENT), 2008

LOI DE 2008 COMMÉMORANT
JAY LAWRENCE ET BART MACKEY (MODIFICATION DU CODE DE LA ROUTE)

Mr. Rinaldi moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 74, An Act in memory of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey to amend the Highway Traffic Act / Projet de loi 74, Loi modifiant le Code de la route à la mémoire de Jay Lawrence et Bart Mackey.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Pursuant to standing order 97, Mr. Rinaldi, you have up to 12 minutes for your comments.

Mr. Lou Rinaldi: I rise today in this House to pursue—like the previous private member—something that I passionately believe in, that we as legislators need to act on to prevent further tragedies.

Just a little chronology on this particular bill I've introduced: Back on July 30, 2000, two young men, Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey from the community of Baltimore, which is just north of Cobourg in the municipality of Hamilton township, along with some friends were riding in the back of a pickup truck. The truck was involved in an accident and both of those young gentlemen died. In May 2001, the former member from Northumberland, a member of the then government, introduced a private member's bill to try to deal with this issue. Unfortunately, the bill never made it through the process. In November 2004, after being elected and just over a year in government, I reintroduced a bill to eliminate riding in the back of pickup trucks. In February 2005, it was ordered for second reading. In November 2005, it was ordered for third reading. We went as far as January 2007. Then, through the Ministry of Transportation, we had some consultations and really good feedback. In September—as you know, in October we embarked on the election—the bill died on the order paper.

What I am trying to say here today is that there are six jurisdictions in Canada—British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—that have some regulatory regime to prevent folks from riding in the back of pickup trucks. Having said that, there are 31 jurisdictions, specifically 31 US states, that currently, as we speak here today, out of the 50—which is about 75%—have regulatory regimes to prevent riding in the back of pickup trucks. To put it mildly, Ontario needs to get up to the times.

My speaking comments could have been very brief: “Well, what I said back in 2004 and 2005 I'm going to say again.” But I must say that I'm going to touch on some points, because things haven't changed. I talked about the two young gentlemen who were killed. Another incident that came to my attention from feedback that I got from some folks when I first introduced this bill last time is that in August 2004 the same thing happened to a 20-year-old gentleman in Manitoba.

I just want to emphasize that back in 2000 the Canadian Public Health Association passed a resolution condemning the use of the back of pickup trucks. They took a bit of a different spin. Although there are a number of lives lost, they wanted to focus on injuries from accidents when people are riding in the back of pickup trucks. They tell us that, on average, whenever there is an injury, for the first year there is a cost to our public health care—and this is an injury—of well over $300,000. They also tell us that if somebody is permanently injured—and it's quite common when you're not restrained and riding in a motor vehicle—it costs our health care system some $2.5 million for each injury over the lifespan of the particular individual. So, not to diminish the anguish that a family has to go through, and the challenges, if somebody is hurt because of an accident, we tend to put dollar figures to it, but it's the pain and hardship that normally are not easy.

Some of the things that they tell us also are statistics when you talk about injuries occurring from riding unrestrained: Specifically in the back of a pickup truck, the chances of getting hurt or dying are over 10 times higher than if you were restrained. So, as you can see, the statistics tell us that there is something wrong with the way we do things. They tell us that over 200 deaths occur per year in Canada from riding in the back of pickup trucks.

Mr. Speaker, when we compare things—for example, if you or I were to take our pet for a ride in the back of a pickup truck, it's against the law to have that pet loose in the back of the truck. You have to restrain it with a leash and so forth. Yet, as human beings, we can sit or stand in the back of a truck.

I want to make reference to the last couple of years, when we strengthened our seat belt legislation in the province of Ontario. It tends to lead us to believe, with some of the wording in the legislation—I don't have it in front of me—that this is covered. Well, it might well be covered, but I talked to some police forces that are supporting this bill—it is quite vague. Do we want to debate vagueness after somebody is hurt or has lost their life, or can we give our police the authority to sort of control it before an injury happens? So we can argue that piece. It's certainly addressed, but it is very vague.

1410

Some of the concerns that came up the last time this bill was introduced were some exceptions. I, for one, sometimes ride in the back of a pickup truck during parades. I'm sure we all do in this Legislature. But during the consultation that the Ministry of Transportation did back in 2007, the ministry spoke with a number of groups—actually quite a large number of groups, from agriculture to labour unions and construction—saying through regulations, and these came up pretty clearly during the consultation process, we could put assurances in place that we can deal with those issues.

For example, through the agricultural sector, one of the things that came up was that this might create a challenge for the agricultural industry, and I come from a rural community. But, for example, we could have exemptions that riding in the back of a pickup truck from farm to farm might be permissible as long as it's not on a highway. I think we can deal with those issues. Those two young folks I spoke of were just a bunch of folks that got together for a good time.

It's the same with tourists. For example, sometimes we sit here in front and we see some tourist buses open, double-decker buses, that might not be restrained. But those folks are very well controlled. They probably don't go over 20 kilometres an hour. We can build that through regulation.

I just want to take a minute. First of all—I should have done this upfront—I need to thank my staff, the legislative folks who helped us put this together and review it for this time, for their hard work. Obviously, as you know, our lives are pretty busy. Also, I do want to acknowledge the Port Hope Police Services Board, the Ontario Association of Chiefs of Police, the Quinte West OPP detachment and the Cobourg Police Service board. I do have one of the many letters I got from Peter Nielsen from Cambridge, Ontario, supporting this piece of legislation to move forward.

Wrapping up my time here: We've already done a lot of work on this. I've read that the chronology of things went through. It already went to committee. We had some consultations.

I also understand that we're two years down the road now and there might be some new ideas that we need to incorporate into this. I'll say upfront that if this bill is successful today in getting approval in second reading, I'll certainly recommend that it go to committee for further consultation. I think we need to make it as right as we possibly can with today's information. Having said that, I'm looking forward to hearing debate from all sides of the House, and comments. I hope I can get everybody's support.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Thank you very much. Further debate?

Mr. Peter Tabuns: It's a pleasure to rise in support of the bill and, frankly, to thank the member for his efforts on behalf of road safety in this province. Just as the member for Brampton–Springdale with a previous bill stood up, came forward with very practical, very reasonable legislation for dealing with a safety issue to protect lives, I appreciate what this member has done.

I know there will be questions that will have to be resolved in committee about how we deal with some of the circumstances that present themselves in the far north or in rural parts of Ontario, where there are situations requiring people to ride in the back of trucks for work-related purposes. I leave that to committee to sort through.

But Mr. Rinaldi is quite correct: People in the back of trucks, unrestrained, going at high speed, are in danger of losing their lives, in danger of being profoundly injured or maimed. For us to take action is entirely consistent with all that's been done in this province historically around seat belts, around redesign of cars, around standards, so that people get to live their full lives, so that people aren't forced to become charges of the state or simply in situations where their lives become insufferable and unbearable. I appreciate the circumstances that led him to introduce this legislation, and I think it's entirely reasonable for this piece of private member's legislation not only to pass here on second reading, but to go through committee and third reading and be introduced as law in this province. If we are going to look after ourselves, and if we're going to look after the next generation, we have to take these kinds of steps. Again, I thank him for coming forward.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I'm privileged and honoured to stand up and speak in support of the bill brought forward by my colleague and seatmate from Northumberland, Bill 74, An Act in memory of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey to amend the Highway Traffic Act.

I know the member is a great advocate for many different issues, and today he is bringing to this House a very important safety issue. He mentioned in his speech the importance of passing this bill in order to protect lives in our communities across Ontario. As you know, so many people think it is easy to put somebody in the back of a truck without a seat belt, without anything, and then drive on the highway at speeds of 70, 80 and sometimes 100. Sometimes they are surprised when they push the brake and the people who are in the back of the truck fly into the air and get injured or die. As he mentioned, statistics say that 10 people on a yearly basis die across Canada, and a great number die across Ontario. He gave the example of two people from his riding who died in the year 2000.

It's important for us, as a Legislature, to bring forward bills and laws to protect the lives of the people of Ontario. We and the opposition need to make sure that all the rules and regulations in this province are being utilized in a safe way.

He mentioned that there are to be some exemptions. As you know, recreational trucks being used in the province for different reasons often don't speed; they go 10 or 20 kilometres per hour. Also, we see a lot of double-decker tourist buses in front of Queen's Park or in Toronto and many different tourist areas in Ontario. Those will be exempt. But the most important thing we're talking about is the pickup truck. It's open in the back, and people jump in and then go on the highway. This will cost a lot of lives.

This issue is also important for our health care, because, as you know, we have a lot of stress on our health care system. We cannot open more ways to keep the stress on health care and create more injured and disabled people, and more people losing their lives. It's our responsibility to make sure that all the people in this society, in this community, in this province will be protected.

Ironically, as my colleague and seatmate mentioned, if you have a dog or cat and you put it in the back of a truck, you have to put it on a leash and tie it to the truck, but if you're a person and sit in the back, there's no regulation, no rules. It's just amazing. When I spoke in support of this bill for the first time in 2005, when he first introduced it in this place, I thought this already existed in Ontario.

Sometimes when we open the books and start monitoring and examining things, there's a lot of dangerous stuff not being regulated in the province. You wonder why not. That's why colleagues from different sides of the House bring issues, like my colleague from Brampton brought earlier: sprinklers in single-family homes to protect lives in our communities. Many members before her have brought different ideas and bills to this House to enhance our ability to govern the province and protect the people of Ontario.

I think my colleague and seatmate, the member for Northumberland, brings a very important issue to this House today. It's about safety, about saving lives and about protecting the people of Ontario. Sometimes we feel young and strong; we think nothing will hurt us. But we cannot take anything for granted. Sometimes we use a lot of things, a lot of methods, a lot of ways, and we think we are able to deal with them. But we are weak creatures, and if we don't create laws and rules to protect ourselves and protect others, we'll leave ourselves vulnerable to many different dangers. That's why I'm standing up today in support of this bill and hopefully others will stand up and support the bill too.

1420

Ms. Helena Jaczek: I rise in the House with great pleasure, and I mean that with all sincerity. This afternoon is proving to be one of those occasions when we seem to be able to reach consensus relatively easily. Of course I support Bill 74, An Act in memory of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey to amend the Highway Traffic Act, and I'd like to commend our colleague the member for Northumberland—Quinte West in his persistence in this regard, in bringing this private member's bill forward again, following on his predecessor in his riding, a member of a previous government, who had initiated this.

Clearly, from my the point of view, public safety—prevention of death, prevention of injury—is absolutely paramount, and I view it as a duty of this Legislature to do what we can in terms of legislation and regulation to optimize the possibility of our constituents living their lives to the full.

I was particularly pleased to see how many letters of endorsement the member for Northumberland—Quinte West received, particularly from police forces across the province. We need to understand that for first responders—and seeing the fire chiefs here today makes me think, of course, that it's not only the police that have to transmit often very tragic information to families, but so often the firefighters, as our colleague from Eglinton—Lawrence has pointed out, are in fact the first on the scene and are often very much affected, as are paramedics. Obviously, anything we can do to have our first responders less exposed to these critical incidents is certainly something that I would applaud.

I was interested in the member for Northumberland—Quinte West mentioning parades and so on. I had the great good fortune to be involved in the Nobleton parade, in the great township of King in my riding, and I was presented with a 1968 Mustang convertible—red, of course—in which to ride. I immediately hopped onto the back, but I must say, I was following Queen Victoria. Queen Victoria actually made a special visit that day; she was in an absolutely splendid black carriage with a couple of wonderful horses leading the way. But as we proceeded down Highway 27, we did stop and start on a number of occasions, and even in that regard, there is a certain risk. These are things that clearly we need consultation on, and committee will no doubt be the place to have that kind of further consideration of perhaps what should be in the regulations in this bill. It is certainly without any hesitation that I will be supporting this piece of legislation. Again, I wish to congratulate the member for Northumberland—Quinte West in bringing it forward today.

Mr. Michael Prue: I rise in support of the bill in order to send it to committee. It has been before committee before. I think that the bill does need some tinkering—I will be very blunt. I think it needs some further discussion on how it is to be effected.

I'm a city boy—I'm from Toronto. I've said this before. I've grown up in this city my entire life, save and except for one year in Ottawa, and that hardly qualifies as small-town Ontario. So I've spent my whole life in big cities: this one and Ottawa. I cannot imagine allowing people in a built-up metropolitan area to ride in the back of a truck. I did see that quite regularly in my youth, but I have not seen anyone doing that for years and years, and justifiably and with good reason; it is because it's simply too dangerous. Having said that, we all know that every place in Ontario is not like Toronto or Ottawa or Hamilton or London or Thunder Bay. There are many, many places in this province where it may be necessary—either for survival or to make a living—for people to be transported in the back of a truck.

The one that comes immediately to mind is farm workers who are being transported from a bunkhouse or a farm compound out into the fields or out into the adjoining field, even if they do have to go down a minor roadway or two in order to earn their livelihoods, in order to be brought back at lunchtime, in order to be brought back at the end of the day. Sometimes the distance, even if it is only a kilometre or two, is simply too long for weary people who have hard work to do.

I want to start to think about the farm workers and about the ability to transport those farm workers under conditions which are not nearly so hazardous as cars zipping in and out and around in big cities. They are likely to be the only car on the road and there is a great unlikelihood of car accidents.

I also want to think about rural communities and isolated communities that do not have access to highways. This is true in large swaths of northern Ontario, particularly in our aboriginal communities and the Treaty 9 area and north of Thunder Bay and over towards the Manitoba border.

I have had the privilege and the honour of going with members of this Legislature to a number of such communities across northern Ontario. We did so, in part, with the bill to talk about sharing arrangements for our aboriginal communities and how we could help them, in the way that we do with other municipalities, in order to allow them to gain some of the taxes from development on their lands. I know that members of this House who went on that committee will remember the isolation of many of these communities, where there are no roads into them, where the only roads that exist, exist in and around the community itself. There may be five or six or 10 kilometres of roads in the area surrounding an isolated community. They are not paved, they are largely gravel, and the people who travel on those roads are people only from the community.

When you fly in, of course, there's no other way to get there, save and except if you go in the winter. Over the frozen muskeg, you can sometimes make your way in from what we consider, in southern Ontario, to be isolated communities like Sioux Lookout and places like that, which really aren't isolated at all.

We need to understand the necessity in those places of the trucks and the vehicles that people drive. It would not make sense in many of these communities, and you will hardly ever see a person with a car like in southern Ontario. It makes absolutely no sense economically for them to have a car that seats four or five people in relative safety, enclosed with a roof over it, because they need their vehicle for so many things. They need their vehicles for hunting, because in most of these isolated communities the only protein that they get has to be what they shoot. There may be a Northern Store, but if you go in there and you buy a chicken that you can buy in Toronto for 99 cents a pound, I will guarantee you that you will pay $5 or $6 or $8 a pound for that chicken in the Northern Store. Very few people can eat that, or they can't have turkey, they don't buy beef, they can't afford pork, and the only food that they realistically have and protein that they have is what they shoot themselves, whether it be geese in the spring or moose in the fall or the fish that they catch from isolated lakes. That's where it comes from, that's what they eat, and they need the truck to gain access to some of those locations. They need the truck not just for themselves, but oftentimes for many people in the community who go out in a hunting party or a fishing party. They need that truck to go out even for such basic needs as collecting fuel for the fire by which they heat their homes. People go out with an axe or a chainsaw or a handsaw into the forest in order to cut down the wood to take it back to keep their families warm.

They don't go out individually, one or two in a truck. Sometimes they go out in great numbers, with the largest truck used to transport the fuel back. I want to think about them when we're doing this. I do not want them to be breaking the law. Even though it's highly unlikely that they will ever be stopped by a member of the OPP, they still in fact have their own aboriginal police people. I want people to understand that we need to protect their rights to the indigenous way of life that they have chosen.

1430

I also look at what is happening around the other provinces and note that in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island there are no restrictions. In Manitoba you can sit in the back of the truck provided you are seated at all times while it is in motion. You can go in the back of a truck if you are working, and this would protect farmers and the like in Alberta, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. I do agree that British Columbia and Quebec have a ban similar to that which is being proposed here today.

I also need to talk about the past history of Bill 153, which was the bill that preceded this, that the member from Northumberland—Quinte West put in the last Parliament. It went to committee. It had the very rare thing happening that it actually passed committee and was ordered back for third reading. But the government of the day, his own, decided not to bring the bill forward for a final vote.

I am asking the Liberals who are here again today—this is a good idea that needs some tinkering. We need to pass this legislation to save lives. There need to be members of the caucus who have the unmitigated gall, the temerity, to stand up to the Premier and to the cabinet and say, "We want this bill brought forward for third and final reading," should it get that far again.

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: Courage, you mean.

Mr. Michael Prue: Yes, you need courage. You cannot simply stand here today, as I told you on the last bill, and pass it and expect it to go off into oblivion. You have to stand up in your caucus. It is you and not me, and only you and not me, who can effect that change within the Liberal caucus. So go ahead; really try to do it. There are good bills emanating from all sides of this House from private members and they need to be acted upon. It should not just be the prerogative of the government House leader and the cabinet to determine. You all have a role, if you want this bill to pass, to make it so.

Having said that, again I ask you to look back when the bill comes, because there were some changes the last time. When it went to committee, the government members determined that you could not travel over 25 kilometres an hour. I ask you to stop and think: That's about the average pace of a horse. We are not going to be stopping the Amish and the Mennonites who are travelling around with horses—

Mr. Ted Chudleigh: That's a full-up gallop.

Mr. Michael Prue: Yes, that's about the full-up gallop of a horse.

We're not going to be stopping them in the back of their stuff. Stop and think about this in terms of farm communities. If we're going to allow the Amish and the Mennonite communities to transport people in sleds and things behind horse-drawn carriages at a pretty good gallop, we should think that it would be at least as safe in a truck.

Secondly, I think we also have to look at the necessity of transporting such things as wood and fuel and game for our aboriginal communities and those in isolated communities in the north, where they have to travel over rough roads and where they literally have no other way.

I would look upon these as exceptions that need to be made to the law. But the law itself, for most people, the overwhelming majority of the 13 million of us who live in southern Ontario, the overwhelming majority of Ontarians, is a good law whose time has come. We should join British Columbia and Quebec. We should ensure that road safety is paramount and that we save the lives of those people who are in trucks.

Mr. Jeff Leal: It is a pleasure for me to have a few minutes this afternoon to support the bill of my colleague, Bill 74, An Act in memory of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey to amend the Highway Traffic Act.

The member from Northumberland—Quinte West did introduce this bill in the last Parliament. Frankly, it's unfortunate that it didn't get ultimate passage, because this is a road safety bill, a very important bill. The member from Northumberland—Quinte West has a long and standing interest in road safety, certainly in the province of Ontario. When you review his personal background, he spent some time with the Fiat motor car company and Chrysler. Indeed, his family business, Brighton Speedway, promotes the safe operation of vehicles and road safety. So he has a very long and distinguished history in this area. It's very consistent with his own personal thinking that he brought this bill forward to protect individuals riding in the back of pickup trucks.

In the last Parliament, when he introduced this bill, I know the member from Northumberland—Quinte West did an extensive consultation in his own riding. He was in Roseneath, Cobourg, Hastings and Campbellford, and I know so well that he took the opportunity to speak with individuals on those back concessions about his vision of how to improve safety on those back concessions, that took the lives of two very young people back in 2000.

I know his staff has provided some excellent research for us to quote from. He talks about how other provinces in Canada—British Columbia, New Brunswick, Northwest Territories, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Alberta—have various forms of legislation dealing with restrictions on riding in the back of pickup trucks. He certainly makes the plea this afternoon that Ontario, as the largest province in the Canadian Confederation, a province that's always prided itself on leading highway and public safety, should move forward with this particular bill.

He notes in his research: "Going back to the year 2000, the Canadian Public Health Association passed a resolution calling on all Canadian jurisdictions to take action to make it illegal for passengers to ride in the back of pickup trucks. The reason they did that is because they know that injuries happen, deaths happen..." and we shouldn't allow, as an advanced nation, for that to happen.

It went on to talk about: "Whereas the head is the most frequently injured body region following a fall or ejection from the back of a pickup truck, and the direct average cost of care during the first year following severe brain injury can be as high as $300,000, with lifetime cost of care ranging from $2.5 million to $5.5 million—that's just from an injury." That's not a death, that's just from a severe injury and trauma to the head that results when you are ejected from the back of a pickup truck.

Also in his research, he said: "A Washington state study found the fatality risk is 10.4 times higher for persons riding in the cargo area than the risk to the general population involved in collisions. So it increases tenfold." One of the ways we could certainly reduce very serious injury and deaths in the province of Ontario is to move forward with Bill 74, and make it an act of this Parliament to protect people who are riding in the back of pickup trucks.

The member deserves full credit, based on the work of a previous member of this House, Mr. Galt, but certainly introducing it in the previous Parliament and bringing it forward now. This is a bill that needs to be passed in the province of Ontario. I commend my colleague for bringing it forward at this particular time.

Mr. Frank Klees: I'm pleased to rise to speak in support of this bill and commend the member from Northumberland—Quinte West for bringing it forward. There is considerable history to this bill, as you will know, Speaker. You were here as a member of this House when our former colleague, Doug Galt, who was the member then from Northumberland, first introduced this bill in 2001, some seven years ago. At that time, it was a very moving debate, as we will remember.

I don't believe that there will be any member of this House who will vote against this bill. I don't want to presume that, but I can't imagine, because of common sense. What is so concerning to me, and I'm sure to other members of the Legislature, is why we now have the third reincarnation of this bill before us. It still is not law, and yet, to the person here, we speak about the importance of implementing some form of legislation with amendments. As former speakers have mentioned, there obviously are some areas that need to be refined. But why we are still here trying to move forward a piece of legislation that is just good common sense and is in the public interest is so frustrating for me as a member of this place. But we are going to remain eternally hopeful that this time the government of the day will hear the call of this private members' hour, will respond to the appeal of the member for Northumberland—Quinte West and all of his colleagues here and will in fact move forward with this bill.

1440

For the record, I want to put into context the real initiative for Mr. Doug Galt's bill originally. I was in the House at the time of the debate. I recall very well the parents of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey: John and Judy Lawrence were present at the time of that debate and Laurie and Linda Mackey were here as well.

In reviewing the file, I came across the committee hearings that took place at that time. I want to read into the record Mrs. Mackey's comments to the standing committee on June 11, 2001. It's so very close to this very debate that's taking place now, and unfortunately the parents of these two young men have watched the dithering of this place on an issue that I'm sure is beyond their comprehension as to why, when we've passed so many pieces of legislation that, in my humble opinion, are not nearly as worthy as this simple piece of legislation, and yet we've devoted hours and hours of debate and committee, and the government has wielded its power to implement that legislation. But here we are, still debating this.

I want to read into the record Mrs. Mackey's comment on June 11. It goes as follows:

"Honourable committee members: almost one year ago we both lost our sons Bart and Jay while riding in the back of a pickup truck. Our lives have changed forever ...

"We will never forget the devastation of police and OPP showing up at our door early in the morning of July 30, 2000 to inform us of their deaths. No one should have to bear that kind of grief. We miss them with all our hearts.

"We are astounded at how many people did not realize that it was not illegal to ride in the back of a pickup truck. Our stringent laws today seem to make everyone more safety conscious, but there's nothing safe about the back of a pickup. It offers no protection for the rider. One quick foot on the brake, and you're thrown around. No one is allowed, by law, to ride in their own vehicle without a seat belt, so for drivers to allow riders in the back of a pickup just doesn't make sense.

"We are here today to try to have this very tragic loss of ours rectified by having a bill passed to make it illegal to ride in the back of a pickup. We only want to see that no other family or families have to go through the loss of any loved ones. Many provinces in Canada—I believe it's five—have passed this bill, and we feel Ontario is behind the times on a very big safety issue. Referring to the name of this bill as the Jay and Bart clause, we feel, is a terrific honour in their memory and would perhaps bring this very important issue closer to the minds of people and prevent further deaths or accidents.

"Before we close, we would like to bring your attention to the ribbons we are wearing. We are not overly religious families, but we do have a belief system and we chose these colours for a reason, white signifying the light and the love of God, which we know surrounds us, and green signifying a healing process which we all agree would be a great beginning with the passing of the outside riders act, accompanied by the Bart and Jay clause.

"I thank you for your time and support."

It's been a long time—seven years—since we heard those words in the standing committee in this place. We've heard members speak to this issue. I'm sure the parents of these two young men would be extremely overjoyed to see the legislation passed, as they appealed to us some seven years ago.

I and my colleagues will certainly be supporting this bill. We will be encouraging that it does go to committee. There are some specific areas that must be addressed. We had some significant amendments proposed in 2001 by the Ministry of Transportation. The last time this bill went to the committee, there were also some amendments that were recommended at that time. They deal with a number of matters in terms of the scope and authorities of the police, in terms of the age limits that would be involved in being able to charge an individual, the level of responsibility and so on.

In the final analysis, it is the right thing to do. We will be supporting it.

Again, I commend the member from Northumberland—Quinte West for bringing this legislation forward and we look forward to the Premier and the Minister of Transportation embracing this legislation. Whether they choose, as often is done, to incorporate this into a government bill or whether they choose to pass it as a stand-alone bill is going to be up to the government, but in whatever form it's brought forward, we will certainly be supportive. In fact, I am hearing that there may well be a Ministry of Transportation government bill being tabled in the House at some point soon. This is a fairly straightforward piece of legislation, and what we could do perhaps is ensure that we have the committee hearings in time to incorporate this legislation into that government bill, if the government so chooses.

To my colleague the member from Northumberland—Quinte West, I say thank you again for not allowing this issue to remain on the sidelines. I want to again thank the former member from Northumberland, Mr. Doug Galt, our former colleague, for his initiative. Above all, I want to encourage the parents of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey and assure them that by the actions of this government in passing this legislation—and implementing it, which is the real issue—they can take solace that other lives will be saved and that it will be to the honour of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate? Seeing none, Mr. Rinaldi, you have up to two minutes for your response.

Mr. Lou Rinaldi: I certainly want to thank the members from London–Fanshawe, Oak Ridges–Markham, Beaches–East York, Peterborough and Newmarket–Aurora. I'm overwhelmed with the amount of support, and I thank you for that. Everything they said mirrors the intent of the bill. Do we have to address some of those fine details? Absolutely.

I didn't have time to include this as part of my opening remarks, but I must tell you just a quick, short story. Just last summer, at home—we have quite a sizable piece of property—I'm ashamed to admit I was riding in the back of my pickup truck. I was sitting on the tailgate with somebody who was driving in front, probably not more than five kilometres an hour. It's embarrassing, but I do have to admit it.

1450

When we got to the point of destination in front of my house, I thought he was stopped. But he wanted to go a little bit further to get me closer to my door. As he almost came to a stop, I tried to step off the back gate, and at the same time, he accelerated. I don't need to tell you where I landed. For about three weeks I limped, but I was embarrassed to tell people why I was limping because of the type of legislation that I was trying to bring forward. I guess my point is that even at those minute speeds, when you don't have control of your own destiny, things could happen.

I'm encouraged by what I hear today, and I certainly hope that we can make some real headway. I want to thank everybody for their support. Hopefully I can get your support during the time of the vote.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): We'll vote on this ballot item in 50 minutes' time.

PROPERTY TAX DEFERRAL ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LE REPORT DES IMPÔTS FONCIERS

Mr. Shurman moved second reading of the following bill:

Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities / Projet de loi 78, Loi visant à accorder des reports d'impôts fonciers aux personnes âgées à faible revenu et aux personnes à faible revenu atteintes d'une invalidité.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Mr. Shurman, pursuant to standing order 97, you have up to 12 minutes for your presentation.

Mr. Peter Shurman: It gives me great pleasure to rise in the Legislature today to speak on Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities—my first private member's bill.

This bill will allow low-income seniors and disabled persons to remain independent in their homes longer. It will stimulate the economy by providing additional disposable income to low-income seniors and disabled persons, and it will provide a common property tax deferral program across Ontario and get rid of the current patchwork system.

Seniors' issues are near and dear to my heart. As many of the people in this House know, my mother passed away not too long ago. In caring for her, my family and I were exposed to a very wide range of issues faced by our seniors, the builders of our province, as they age. We're all aging. Indeed, our province is greying. The implications are vast, covering long-term care, health and the economy, notably for those on fixed incomes.

The fact is, most seniors and disabled persons want to be independent. Independence is probably the strongest of the human instincts. They want to stay in their homes—so do all of us in this chamber, ultimately. They want financial freedom. Is this too much to ask? Not if we can make that happen, basically at no cost to the taxpayers of Ontario.

One's home provides a source of pride and familiarity and offers a genuine sense of dignity, which is of importance to an aging population. For many of us, the most significant investment we will ever make is the purchase of our family home. However, every year across this province, ever-increasing property assessment and property tax rates threaten that investment. All too often, such increases force low-income seniors and disabled persons to leave their homes, homes that they raised their children in, because they can no longer afford to pay the taxes on their properties.

I believe that our seniors and disabled persons across Ontario deserve better, and I know that we in this chamber can do it. It is time that we as legislators, with Bill 78, provide the assistance that our seniors and disabled people deserve.

Bill 78 has received support from organizations representing seniors across this province. I had the opportunity to meet with Ms. Susan Eng, vice-president of advocacy for CARP, Canada's Association for the Fifty Plus. I also had the opportunity to meet with Mr. Warren Carroll, president of the Thornhill Seniors Club, a very vibrant club in my riding. He provided the initial impetus for this effort today. Both of these organizations recognize the need for real and meaningful property tax relief for seniors and disabled persons on fixed incomes. Both organizations support Bill 78.

Ms. Eng has stated, "CARP represents an important demographic, including those on fixed income who risk being driven out of their homes by rampant property tax increases. Until the government fixes the property assessment process, Bill 78 offers real relief to beleaguered seniors."

Mr. Caroll has stated, "As president of the Thornhill Seniors Club, with some 830 members, I have heard of some owners experiencing serious difficulty in keeping their own homes because of rising taxes. I hope that all MPPs, regardless of party affiliation, endorse this bill to its fullest extent."

My parents owned three homes during their period as parents in their lifetimes. They never completed paying any single one of them off. They never even got enough equity out of those homes to make a difference in their lives. How lucky I am, along with my own brother and sister. As a family, we all own our homes, have all paid our mortgages, we're free and clear, and we worked hard to do that. I believe that speaks to hundreds of thousands of Ontarians who have done exactly the same thing, and yet here are so many of them on fixed incomes in the senior years, who are incapable or worried about being incapable of retaining those homes because of the burden of rising municipal property taxes.

The Liberals have attempted to address this serious issue in their most recent budget, and I commend them for a good start. They, like we in the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario, recognize the realities faced by both our elderly and our disabled citizens. They propose to provide eligible seniors with $250 for property tax relief in 2009, $500 in 2010 and $500 again in 2011. If you total the amounts, that's $120 million in spending for 2009, $240 million in 2010 and $260 million in 2011.

That money could be saved and put to better use, because Bill 78 is win-win legislation that does not cost extra money to the province of Ontario—I repeat, does not cost extra money, indeed any money, to the province. It provides a significant degree of support for low-income seniors and disabled persons, and it parallels legislation in other provinces. I'll elaborate on that. This type of plan has had huge take-up in the province of British Columbia, for example. The only cost to the province is the administration of the program itself, which in turn is offset by the administration fee that would be charged for the deferral.

It's brilliant in its simplicity. I wish I had thought of all of it myself. The province invests our money to generate interest and protect our precious tax dollars. Often that investment strategy addresses money markets and is backed by mortgages; mortgages equate to houses, houses that people live in. So let's invest it in the same way, collect the interest, but in so doing, protect Ontarians and inject new millions into the consumer economy.

To date in this country, property tax deferral programs are offered at the provincial level in British Columbia, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia. Similar programs exist at the state level across the US. However, here in Ontario, property tax deferral programs are only offered at the municipal level as prescribed by the Municipal Act, 2001 and City of Toronto Act, 2006. This has created a patchwork of municipal programs that puts strain on municipal revenue streams. These programs are not particularly user-friendly, and they have limited participation rates and very limited effectiveness.

For example, in 2006 the city of Toronto had 70 applicants for its deferral program, Peel had 64, and 40 was the total in London. Many municipalities, such as Muskoka, Niagara, Sudbury and Thunder Bay, have zero participants, despite high senior citizen populations. In fact, I might note that Sudbury media contacted me yesterday, having already heard about the debate of this bill, saying there was great interest there because of the senior population. By comparison, British Columbia has a take-up of 65,000, with a population well less than a third of the population of Ontario. It is time for Ontario to join British Columbia, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island by introducing a harmonized property tax deferral system province-wide.

Ontario's current property tax deferral system burdens municipalities and makes any real assistance to low-income seniors and disabled persons difficult to provide. Some $250 coming next year and nothing this year doesn't go very far if your property tax bill is—and I'll take an example from the city of Toronto—on a fairly modest house, $5,000, $6,000, $7,000 or $8,000. Bill 78 seeks to remedy this problem by alleviating municipalities of the responsibility for property tax deferrals through the creation of a common program province-wide—equal treatment city to city, area to area. Bill 78's deferral program will provide meaningful relief for eligible property owners regardless of the municipality in which they live.

1500

This is not a money bill. By registering a lien on affected properties, funding the municipalities for what is not forthcoming, charging a competitive rate of interest no different than what Ontario receives on provincial investments and relying on revolving participation, the program becomes self-sustaining, ending with the death of the participant or sale of the property—very simple and very direct.

Under Bill 78, eligible owners will be able to defer up to a maximum of $10,000 per year on taxes owed on a principal residence. In terms of the cost to taxpayers, when seniors or disabled persons move into provincially subsidized residences, we all pay. Bill 78 is about avoiding that for extended time periods and helping people preserve a lifestyle in what we all recognize as an average longer, more productive lifetime.

By passing this bill, we as MPPs have an opportunity to make a lasting and positive impact on the lives of these people and their families. As we all know, property tax is paid from after-tax dollars, further restricting what can be done with supposedly disposable income, which is especially problematic for seniors and disabled persons on fixed incomes. By passing Bill 78, we will be freeing up a sizable portion of disposable income for these two beleaguered populations, who can then spend that money on much-needed consumer items, thus providing a modest, or better than modest, injection into our troubled economy.

In deliberating the merits of this bill, I encourage my fellow MPPs to think about the people it will help; for example, an elderly couple who outright purchased their home after the war and who now cannot afford to keep that home. We've all seen the distress that high assessments and property tax rates have caused some of our seniors, who are worried about losing their homes. This is not something that our seniors, who have given so much, should have to endure. We must act.

We must also think of the disabled person for whom homeownership provides real freedom. Are we to allow them to become homeless or dependent on an already overburdened system? I think not. The Ontario that I know is compassionate; it helps those in need of a hand. That's what Bill 78 is all about and I urge all MPPs to lend their support to this bill.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Ted Chudleigh): I thank the member from Thornhill. Eloquent as always, perhaps more so today because his wife is in the gallery. Welcome, Mrs. Shurman.

Further debate?

Mr. Peter Kormos: I just want a few moments to address this bill because I know that my colleague the member for Beaches–East York, Mr. Prue, who is our critic in this area, wants to speak to it with a broader perspective, perhaps, than that with which I will address it. Our member from Parkdale–High Park, Cheri DiNovo, is also going to be speaking to it. To the folks who are watching and listening, over the course of the next 40 minutes you're going to be hearing from Michael Prue and Cheri DiNovo on this important issue.

I, for one, am pleased and proud to say that Mr. Shurman has delivered to this chamber, in a short period of time after his election for the first time to this assembly, a very enlightened, timely and relevant bit of legislation. From time to time—and it's unfortunately far too rare a time—opposition members' private members' bills go to committee and indeed, after fine-tuning in committee, they get passed. Of course, once a bill gets second reading, it is no longer a private member's bill; it then, in fact, becomes a government bill, such that the government has absolute control over whether or not to advance it through the legislative process.

I believe strongly that this bill should go to committee and I also believe strongly that the government should cooperate and actively participate in committee, with the view to addressing any perceived shortcomings or flaws in the bill. But I submit as well that the thrust of the bill, one which is designed to protect aging and otherwise lower- and fixed-income people from distress by ever-increasing property taxes—to make this particular method, which is available only in those municipalities that have elected to introduce it, a province-wide program would indeed be an enlightened, progressive step. I look forward to seeing our critic, Michael Prue, participate in committee hearings around this bill as it advances through the legislative process, hopefully with success.

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: I'm delighted to rise and speak on Bill 78, by the member from Thornhill, "to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities." The intent of this bill is very good. The intent is to ensure that seniors who are mostly on fixed incomes are able to stay in their houses. But Mr. Shurman is actually saying congratulations to the Liberals for having a plan in their budget to help seniors on fixed incomes and to ensure that seniors can stay in their houses.

Mr. Peter Kormos: Did you hear him say that? I didn't hear him say that.

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: Yes, he did congratulate us.

The intent is great, but there is a difference between the plan by the Progressive Conservatives and the plan by the Liberals. There is a big difference—

Interruption.

Mr. Tony Ruprecht: There's a call right now.

We wanted to make sure to support our proposal in our budget, which indicates a better plan than that being proposed by the member from Thornhill. There is a vast difference.

What is this difference? As we know already—I did bring a tax bill from the city of Toronto—the interesting part, and the member already indicated that, is that at present the city of Toronto and many other municipalities across Ontario already have tax deferral programs. In other words, anybody who makes less than $40,000 a year, and most seniors of course are in that category, is able to apply to defer their taxes. It's already on the books. Secondly, the city of Toronto and many other municipalities also have on their books a cancellation program, already in place, which I might argue is much better. A cancellation program is much better for seniors, who need the money on a daily basis, than a program that speaks of deferrals.

The member's bill talks about deferrals, of pushing it off to another year, to maybe another five or 10 years. But seniors are proud of their homes. In my riding, I want to tell the member from Thornhill, when people pay off their mortgage there is a party. They invite their neighbours. There are balloons on the front door. That's terrific: They've paid off their mortgage. I want to tell the member from Thornhill that the intent of what he is proposing today is great, but what is the fact of it? The fact of it is that all you're doing is putting a lien against a property, against the city of Toronto, against the seniors, against all those who are on fixed incomes. That's the fact.

Therefore, I ask you, what's the better plan; the Liberal plan, which talks about a tax grant and a tax credit? We made sure there is $1,100 in the pockets of seniors. According to the member from Thornhill, how much are they going to put in their pockets? Nothing. It's a lien and has to be paid back. I ask you, I ask the members and I ask the people of Ontario, which is the better plan: a deferral plan—a lien plan—or a grant plan?

It is clear, because we have the evidence. Which of these two plans is indeed much better? I know you're going to speak about this. I know that. But the whole matter can simply be done in a nutshell. I want the people of Ontario to simply remember this: Liberal means credit and grants; Conservative means deferrals and liens.

1510

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Ms. Laurie Scott: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm just trying to recover from the last speaker's comments.

I'm pleased to rise in support of Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities, which has been thoughtfully brought forward by my colleague from Thornhill, despite what the previous member's comments were. I was also in the media studio yesterday to support my colleague from Thornhill; so was the member from Welland, as he said, and so was Ms. Susan Eng from Canada's Association for the Fifty Plus—all supportive of this piece of legislation moving forward.

Recent statistics show that seniors account for roughly 13% of Ontario's population. In my riding of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, that number is significantly higher. Almost 20% of the population is in the seniors category, and we're growing. Many seniors are choosing to get out of the urban areas and come up to the less hectic pace of life and retire up in the riding of Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock. There are a significant number of them that have had cottages up there for many generations and have chosen to fix up their cottages and lakefront properties to make them suitable for living year-round, and thus become permanent residents, but having been connected with that community for generations and decades. That's a huge investment that senior citizens have, based on hard work all of their lives.

A recent report from WRAFT, Waterfront Ratepayers After Fair Taxation, shows some stunning changes in property values over the past years. In Haliburton and also in Muskoka, the median waterfront property values increased substantially, a higher rate compared to residential values—a 47% increase in median price for cottages versus an 18% increase for the residential properties for the years 2003-07—so assessment values have increased. Of course, there is a threat this year. We are already hearing the news reports of this triple whammy, after assessments had been frozen for the three previous years. That's certainly going to be reflected in my communities, and seniors and other vulnerable people on fixed incomes simply are not going to have the means or the resources to accommodate these huge increases in their property assessments.

No person can reasonably predict their property value going up to 47%, or even 18%, in a span of three years' time, and we certainly, in the campaign, had put a property assessment cap of 5% so that people knew that it wouldn't increase by any more than 5% while they owned that property, which would help seniors and people on fixed incomes be able to stay in their houses for a longer period of time.

My colleague from Thornhill pointed out in his news release yesterday that this bill will help those people stay in their homes longer but will also help our economy, because they're going to have some more money in their pockets, so additional disposable income. Taking into account that I have such a large number of senior citizens residing in my riding, the deferral is going to be a big boost to the people living there and to the economy, with their able to stay in their homes longer. I know that June is now Seniors' Month, and we have 1.5 million seniors in the province of Ontario. I, along with the local member of Parliament from Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, do seniors' seminars in three areas of our riding to try and assist seniors to be informed of what services are available for them. Every year I get property assessment questions—not being able to stay in their homes for various reasons, but certainly that's one of them.

This bill will certainly help low-income seniors and disabled persons to stay in their homes longer. I encourage all members of the Legislature to look at this. We just heard one of the government members speak, but I hope that others are going to speak positively of this and I encourage everyone here today to support this bill.

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: It's an honour to speak to the bill of my colleague from Thornhill, and I commend him for it. It's an exciting moment when you bring forth your first private member's bill. The excitement, the thrill, the challenge of bringing forth your first private member's bill is only met by the depression, the sadness and the reality of what happens to that private member's bill once it gets into the hands of the government, which is that if you're really, really lucky it goes to a committee and it dies there. But thank you anyway. Thank you for the valiant effort on behalf of seniors, whom we celebrate in the month of June, and a special congratulatory note to the West Toronto Support Service, who helped me craft a motion for seniors, which is on the order paper, saying that seniors should get into galleries and museums that are financed by the provincial government for free. They used to. We should do at least that much for our seniors, and we certainly should do something to help them with their property taxes.

Unlike the comments by the member for Davenport—$250 and $500 is not going to do very much, particularly when on a modest house you're looking at taxes, certainly in the city of Toronto and, I'm sure, in Thornhill as well, of at least $4,000 to $5,000 and more per year. I know that in my riding I have seniors who are going to lose their houses if something isn't done when these new assessments come out. We all wait with bated breath for the new assessments to come out. Very cynically, the McGuinty government put a freeze on till after the election. The bad news will hit every mailbox in the fall, and we'll see our property taxes go up.

I want to say that our policy, in the New Democratic Party, is a freeze till resale. This is something we campaigned on. It's something that's done in jurisdictions around the world—in California and others. Our critic, the member from Beaches–East York, will probably speak about our own response to what should be done about property taxes. We believe there should be a freeze till resale unless you put more than $40,000 of renovations into your house, which will trigger a new assessment. This would affect everybody, not just seniors. It would also affect all those other low-income folk: single mothers who are having a real struggle and a time of it now, those who have houses and are disabled—the member for Thornhill has captured that in his bill—and many others. Even young couples are going to be caught when the new assessments come out in the fall, not to mention small business owners who are also just gearing up to come back at this government as soon as they get their bills. As the small business critic for the New Democratic Party, I'm particularly sensitive to their concerns, and they are very concerned about the possibility of huge increases that are going to happen in the fall.

I want to leave time for my colleague from Beaches–East York, who is the critic on this particular subject. I want to commend, again, the member for Thornhill for his hard work and also offer my condolences for what is going to happen to all that hard work. I want to congratulate all the seniors across the province who, without much help from this government, still manage to stay in their homes and manage to have some degree of quality of life. Let's hope we can improve it for them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Further debate?

Mr. Khalil Ramal: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for giving me a chance to speak on Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities.

Unlike my colleague, I'm very positive, especially when members in this House bring different issues to us, especially private members' bills, because we get a chance to debate them, we get the chance to talk about many different issues and I believe it enhances our ability to understand many different issues.

Before us today is a bill talking about seniors. This is very important for all of us. Seniors in Ontario worked very hard for many years to build this beautiful province. I think it is our duty and responsibility, as elected officials, to give them some support when they get old and cannot support themselves. That's why our government made a good announcement last year to support seniors with a $250 grant and a credit of more than $600. In 2010, it will be a $500 grant and a $600 credit, almost $1,100 for every senior on a yearly basis. I think that's a good initiative. The member for Thornhill mentioned that this will cost us almost $125 million. You prefer it to go to some different areas. I believe it's a very honourable area in which to spend money, on seniors, because they deserve it. They've worked very hard, and I think they need our support when they get old.

1520

I looked at the bill and at different legislation across Canada, many different municipalities that brought forward this issue. Actually, they already have it in the city of Toronto; they have a deferral system. They can defer their taxes, but they're charged interest on them. I think we shouldn't interfere with municipalities. Municipalities know what to do. They know their constituents very well. They have a right to bring this bill forward. I don't think it's our job in this province to micromanage every issue in the province of Ontario. I think municipalities across Ontario know their constituents well. They can bring it in if they want, and they have permission to do it.

I think it's our job, as elected officials in this place, as a government, to support seniors. It's our duty and obligation to support them by providing health care to them, by providing long-term-care facilities for them, by sending people to support them if they decide to stay at home while they are old, because many people like and prefer to stay in their home. That's why our aging strategy, which was announced by our government, is to send nurses and health care workers to their homes to support them. I think it's the right thing to do.

This is our obligation—not just deferring some of the taxes for one or two or five or six years or putting liens on their homes—because so many seniors are proud of their homes. They are proud when they pay off their mortgage. As a matter of fact, in my community of London–Fanshawe, when they pay off the mortgage, you know what they do? They gather their families and friends and neighbours and throw a party. They celebrate paying off the mortgage. I think our obligation, as I mentioned many different times, is to support seniors, not to defer the taxes for many years. In the end, they leave nothing for their kids and families.

I was thrilled and honoured when our government came up with a proposal and a project to support seniors by a grant and also by giving them some kind of tax relief. Also, our municipalities have a right to do so. If they want to, they can do it.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I am privileged to stand up this afternoon and support my colleague the member from Thornhill on his Bill 78, which adds yet another layer of relief for seniors on fixed incomes and for those who are suffering disabilities. I congratulate him on taking this action to protect our senior citizens and those with disabilities who have worked hard. They've paid their taxes. They've helped build this wonderful province that we can all be proud of. Anything we can do to relieve them in their golden years is something we should consider very seriously.

I only hope the members on the government side understand that regardless of what legislation they think is in place that protects and gives the appropriate level of protection to our seniors, in this instance, it is not enough. That is why we're proposing to add yet more protection to them. Our seniors are struggling to keep pace with all kinds of issues: the rising cost of shelter, gas, energy, food. Every day they're trying to make decisions about what they give up, whether they buy medication or whether they buy the food they need or whether they are able to have a little bit of entertainment.

I think these are decisions that should not have to be made at that stage of life.

They take pride in their homes. They want to stay in their homes. Their homes are filled with memories of their children growing up, their grandchildren coming for Christmas dinners and so forth. Bill 78 will offer our seniors and the low-income people with disabilities an opportunity to defer their taxes and give them much-needed relief from that stressful burden.

My riding, like many other ridings in this province, has folks who are growing in numbers, seniors who are facing these unique challenges, and I think we have a responsibility, an obligation, but most of all, we have an opportunity right now to help make a difference with that. Several provinces already offer this kind of property tax deferral, and I think Ontario should follow.

These folks aren't in a position to ask for more money. They're no longer working. They can't just do overtime to try to make up for what they don't have, so they truly are at the mercy of the economy. I think that's what gives us this ability to move in and help them.

Fortunately, our motivation here is to ensure the highest quality of life for our citizens in Ontario. But more and more, I'm watching with interest that this government looks at this side of the House as a think tank, picks up good ideas and then moves forward with them as a government bill. If you want to take ownership of it, fine, but do the right thing. I prefer to see politics parked at the door and for all of us to work together in order to make the right things happen.

So the comments today about what the Conservatives did, what the NDP did or what the Liberals did mean nothing to the person sitting at home, thinking about how to make their next pension cheque stretch. It is my great hope that Bill 78 receives unanimous approval today, and that I can go home to Burlington and tell my seniors and my folks with disabilities that this government is a caring government, it is a competent government, and it can move on. I look forward to that today.

Mr. Michael Prue: I rise in support of Bill 78. I do so understanding that it has a few warts. I want to deal with that, but in the end, I intend to vote for this bill.

What is happening here is this member's attempt to mitigate the circumstances after the three-year freeze comes off. We all know what's going to happen this September and October. It's going to be one of the worst Halloween scares. It's not going to be the kid in his mask coming around to your house, it's going to be the Halloween scare of you opening up the new MPAC assessment on your house, seeing the value they now put on it vis-à-vis your neighbours, and having that sinking feeling in your stomach that the taxes are going to skyrocket. It's not going to happen to just a few people. It is literally going to happen to millions of people out there in the province of Ontario.

So this member is attempting to do something to mitigate that three-year freeze when it comes to an end. I think people need to understand where the assessment increases are going to take place. They're going to take place in urban Ontario versus suburban Ontario, so a place like downtown Toronto is more likely to get whacked than Scarborough or North York or the areas beyond.

People are going to find in rural Ontario that who is going to get whacked are those who own lakefront or riverfront properties, those who have recreational properties versus those who live in the adjacent or nearby small towns. We know that that is going to happen as well. What his bill is attempting to do is to mitigate against that.

Having said that—and that's why I'm going to support it, in order to help those who are disabled, in order to help those on fixed incomes, those who are retired. But in so doing, I have to question and I have to ask, if it is passed today, when it goes to committee—the bill will limit this to people who are receiving the GIS. It will limit it as well to those who are disabled, to be defined in the regulations, and who are also below the threshold, to be defined in the regulations.

I want to first talk about the pensioners. There are literally hundreds of thousands of people in this country and in this province who do not receive a pension. We are a land of immigrants. If people have come here and lived in this province and in this country for less than 10 years, they are not eligible for old age security or for the GIS. You have to think about them. Some of them own homes. Some of them have brought money with them to own that home. Some of them have been given the money by their children; some of them have found other ways in which to buy the house. They are every bit as much at risk as someone who is limited to the income from pension and GIS. So I think we need to look at this. I think that they are Canadian citizens and landed immigrants too, and we need to look at that responsibility, which has not been done in this bill.

The second thing is about the disability. In order to be poor in this province, if you use the low-income cut-off figures—the LICO, which they're called—you have to earn under $19,000 a year if you are a single person. That's what the low income is. This does not define what disability is. Is disability somebody who is in receipt of Ontarians with disability? If so, the maximum payment you can get is some $12,000 a year. That's the maximum you can get. That person would live in abject poverty, even if they were allowed to keep some of the money. What is the limitation? I feel very uncomfortable leaving this to a minister or a future minister; I think the bill should spell it out.

1530

I also believe that there are problems with the deferral in terms of the amount of money, which allows for up to $10,000 a year. I cannot speak for all of Ontario, but the taxes of $10,000 a year in Toronto equates to a home approximately valued $1.3 million. That's what it equates to. I don't know how many people out there would think that that is a limit we should be supporting. I have some real problems with $1.3-million homes receiving a deferral. If the person is that well off, I want them to stay in their home but not necessarily that one. I want them to be able to pay their taxes, and I'm sure they would want to as well. If they have to downsize—people at a certain age do that as a matter of course in any event.

I am also disturbed a little about the “repaid with interest” portion because the interest can be quite large. Municipalities charge about 15%. I know that as a mayor I charged 15% on deferrals, and I believe it's still 15% or 18% today. I don't know of many seniors who would want to pay that kind of money. In fact, the member quite rightly pointed out that only 70 people took advantage in the city of Toronto. When I was mayor, there were only two or three who took advantage of it in East York, and it was for exactly that reason.

I am also troubled because I find that most of the municipal bylaws, including those from Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and other places, are superior to the contents of this bill because it gives the municipality and the council the authority to waive the fees.

With all of that, I'm still going to vote for it. There are some flaws here. We need to help, but please, it has to be done in committee.

Mr. Bob Delaney: It seems like I'm picking up a little bit where the member for Beaches—East York left off.

It's a very interesting proposal, and let me pick up on the remarks about the impact of compounding. If an interest rate is 15%, then the principal will double every five years. If it's 12%, it will double every six years.

This is a proposal that disproportionately rewards people who live in very expensive, high-end homes. A $10,000-a-year property tax exemption in the city of Mississauga will mean that you live in a home that's valued at somewhere between $1.5 million and $2 million. This is money that comes off the property tax base of the city, and the member's bill is deficient in that it doesn't say what the city will do to recapture that lost property tax base.

The government's existing property tax relief across the province will subsidize seniors to the tune of some $740 million. What impact will this proposal have? How many billions of dollars will it remove not so much from the provincial tax base but from the municipal tax base? This, in effect, will say to municipalities that in order to subsidize people who may be living in high-end homes and are deferring upwards of $10,000 a year in property tax at interest rates that aren't specified and could be very high and could result in the very serious erosion of the person's equity in their very home—this will also transfer that missing property tax base to young starter families, the people who are buying townhomes and semis. The very people who, at the moment, are struggling to be able to afford to buy a home are not only going to have to carry the freight for themselves but increasingly the freight for people who are living in homes that could be valued at $800,000, $900,000, $1 million, $1.5 million, in which, with relatively few restrictions, these individuals under this proposal will be able to defer upwards of $10,000 a year.

This hasn't been costed out, and this is a serious deficiency in this particular bill. This is not, of course, the member's intent. The member is a thoughtful person. The member is in his first term here. But this is surely the outcome of this particular proposal.

One of the other things the member has forgotten is that municipalities are required to provide relief from reassessment-related property tax increases and to provide it to low-income seniors or low-income disabled persons. So the essence of the member's proposal not only already exists, but it exists at the municipal level where it properly belongs.

When the member and his party had a chance to vote on the government's proposal in the last budget to increase the property tax credit from $500 to $625, they voted against it.

Mrs. Christine Elliott: I'm very pleased to add a few comments with respect to Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities.

I'd like to start off again by commending my colleague the member from Thornhill, who proposes what is, in my view anyway, an eminently sensible solution to a problem that continually presents itself in our community offices; that is, with seniors coming into our offices who are telling us that they're finding it increasingly difficult to cope with tax increases in the order of 4%, 5% or 6% per year without a corresponding increase in their incomes.

As has been indicated, most of them are on fixed incomes of either old age pension or disability pensions. The member from Beaches—East York also rightly pointed out that those are extremely low incomes that would be very detrimentally affected by increases in the tax rates on an annual basis.

I think it's a really great solution that has been proposed, and when you look at the seniors we're dealing with here—for most people, not just seniors—their largest asset is their principal residence, which, in most cases, has been entirely paid off, the mortgage has been paid off many years before. The problem is, it's not a liquid asset but it is an asset nonetheless.

What is being proposed here will allow the seniors to remain in their homes, when they otherwise might lose them—homes that they've lived in for many years, raised their families in—because they want to. But also, I should point out, in many communities there might not otherwise be adequate housing options available, particularly if you're speaking about someone with a disability who may already have had their home retrofitted to allow them to stay in the home. It doesn't make sense for them to have to move to another location because they can't afford the property taxes.

There are limitations on this, of course. It provides that people can either defer the property taxes until either they pass away or their spouse maintains the residence as their principal residence, until the person no longer is eligible for the tax relief or the home is sold, unless it's a transfer between spouses, and, again, protects that spousal right to remain in the home.

The $10,000 that has been mentioned as a limitation—I believe it was my colleague's intention that that would simply be an upper limit, that that would not be an amount claimed on an average basis. I would anticipate that the amount that would be requested for deferral on an annual basis would be a much smaller amount than that. So it just has to have a reasonable amount mentioned as an upper limit cap, and I think that is a reasonable amount.

How can that deferral be recognized that it is going to be protected? For anybody listening to this debate who is concerned about how that would be protected, it would simply be protected by registering a lien against the property. Certainly, we have a precedent for that in the province of Ontario with respect to the legal aid situation. That's been outstanding for many years. That's a situation where somebody who can't afford to hire a lawyer to act on their behalf in a family law or perhaps in a criminal law situation can have a lawyer to act on their behalf. Legal Aid Ontario registers the lien against the property and that's collected at such time as the property is sold or otherwise transferred.

I don't believe that there has been any suggestion that that has been an erosion on the existing tax base. I don't anticipate that if this legislation were enacted it would result in a further tax-base erosion either. As the member has indicated, the uptake on situations where the municipalities have offered this deferral hasn't been huge, but it is there for the benefit of the people who really need it.

I would certainly urge all members to consider supporting this bill. I think it's a great solution to a practical problem. It provides that level of support to people who truly need it in our communities.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Mr. Shurman, you have up to two minutes to summarize your comments.

Mr. Peter Shurman: I thank all members who participated in this afternoon's debate on Bill 78, particularly the members for Beaches–East York, Burlington, Parkdale–High Park, Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock, Welland and Whitby–Oshawa for their support. I'd like somebody to explain to the member for Davenport that a lien beats the hell out of a loss. As for the members for London–Fanshawe and Mississauga–Streetsville, they seem to want to support this bill, but somehow or other, maybe they're a little bit constrained.

By no means is Bill 78 a be-all and end-all answer to the issue of property taxation and its impact on low-income seniors and low-income disabled persons. As Ontario's population continues to age, we as legislators will need to find new and innovative means to meet the needs of this important demographic. The government has moved, and we now have the power to go further. Bill 78 represents such a step, and I ask all of my fellow MPPs, regardless of party affiliation, to lend their support to this important piece of legislation. Certainly there are flaws; certainly they can be discussed. That's what committees are for.

We have seen it far too often, seniors and disabled persons forced to sell their homes because they can no longer afford to pay the property tax. This is Ontario, and we can do better. For many seniors and disabled persons in this province, there's precious little to keep them from joining the ranks of the poverty-stricken. Municipalities are not the right entities to provide the sort of relief required. However, we are able to do so here.

Can more be done to help our seniors and disabled persons keep their homes? You bet. The province could move forward with its promise to address the unfairness and unaccountability of the MPAC assessment system. However, this is a start, and it offers real hope to those who need it most.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): the time provided for private members' public business has expired.

MUNICIPAL RESIDENTIAL SPRINKLER ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES EXTINCTEURS AUTOMATIQUES RÉSIDENTIELS DANS LES MUNICIPALITÉS

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): We will deal first with ballot item 25.

Mrs. Jeffrey has moved second reading of Bill 72, An Act to amend the Building Code Act, 1992, the City of Toronto Act, 2006 and the Municipal Act, 2001 with respect to fire sprinkler systems in new residential buildings. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey: I respectfully request that this bill be sent to the Standing Committee on Regulations and Private Bills, please.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it agreed that the bill will be sent to the committee? Agreed.

JAY LAWRENCE AND BART MACKEY MEMORIAL ACT (HIGHWAY TRAFFIC AMENDMENT), 2008

LOI DE 2008 COMMÉMORANT JAY LAWRENCE ET BART MACKEY (MODIFICATION DU CODE DE LA ROUTE)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The second item is ballot item 26.

Mr. Rinaldi has moved second reading of Bill 74, An Act in memory of Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey to amend the Highway Traffic Act. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

Mr. Lou Rinaldi: I request that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on General Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it agreed that the bill go to general government? Agreed.

PROPERTY TAX DEFERRAL ACT, 2008
LOI DE 2008 SUR LE REPORT
DES IMPÔTS FONCIERS

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): The next ballot item is ballot item 27.

Mr. Shurman has moved second reading of Bill 78, An Act to provide property tax deferrals to low-income seniors and low-income persons with disabilities. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? In my opinion, the nays have it.

Mr. Peter Kormos: Mr. Speaker, you didn't call the vote, "All those in favour, say 'aye.'"

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Oh, sorry. Good point.

All those in favour, say "aye."

All those opposed, say "nay."

In my opinion, the nays have it.

Sorry about that. Call in the members. This will be a five-minute bell.

The division bells rang from 1544 to 1549.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Mr. Shurman has moved second reading of Bill 78. All those in favour of the motion will please rise and remain standing.

Ayes

Chudleigh, Ted
DiNovo, Cheri
Elliott, Christine
Hardeman, Ernie

Klees, Frank
Kormos, Peter
Prue, Michael
Savoline, Joyce

Scott, Laurie
Shurman, Peter

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): All those opposed to the motion will please rise and remain standing.

Nays

Aggelonitis, Sophia
Albanese, Laura
Arthurs, Wayne
Balkissoon, Bas
Best, Margaret
Cansfield, Donna H.
Colle, Mike
Delaney, Bob
Dickson, Joe
Fonseca, Peter

Gravelle, Michael
Jaczek, Helena
Kular, Kuldip
Kwinter, Monte
Lalonde, Jean-Marc
Leal, Jeff
Levac, Dave
Mangat, Amrit
McNeely, Phil
Mordidi, Reza

Pendergast, Leeanna
Phillips, Gerry
Qaadri, Shafiq
Ramal, Khalil
Rinaldi, Lou
Sandals, Liz
Sergio, Mario
Takhar, Harinder S.
Wynne, Kathleen O.
Zimmer, David

The Clerk of the Assembly (Ms. Deborah Deller): The ayes are 10; the nays are 30.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): I declare the motion lost.

Second reading negated.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): All matters relating to private members' public business having been completed, I do now call orders of the day.

Hon. Michael Gravelle: I move adjournment of the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Jim Wilson): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried. This House stands adjourned until Monday, June 2, at 9 a.m.

The House adjourned at 1552.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.

Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters

Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller

Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum

Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels Attorney General / procureur general
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craitor, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet / ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener-Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin-Middlesex-London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough-Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches-East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London-Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming-Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland-Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds-Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton-Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto-Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga-Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton-Kent-Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West-Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest-Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth-Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe-Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener-Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakabuski, John (PC)	Renfrew-Nipissing-Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craiton, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziotti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziotti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craiton,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qaadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qaadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Anti-smoking legislation

Mr. Jeff Leal .....2168

Lord's Prayer

Mrs. Laura Albanese.....2168

Visitors

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters).....2168

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Norm Miller .....2168

Markham Music and Arts Group

Ms. Helena Jaczek .....2168

Ontario Summer Games

Ms. Laurie Scott .....2169

Special Olympics

Mr. Joe Dickson.....2169

Durham Mental Health Services

Mrs. Christine Elliott .....2169

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Gilles Bisson.....2170

Muslim community

Mr. Reza Moridi .....2170

Agriculture programs

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel.....2170

Climate change / Changement de climat

Mr. Phil McNeely.....2171

PRIVATE MEMBERS' PUBLIC BUSINESS / AFFAIRES D'INTÉRÊT PUBLIC ÉMANANT DES DÉPUTÉS

Municipal Residential Sprinkler Act, 2008, Bill 72, Mrs. Jeffrey / Loi de 2008 sur les extincteurs automatiques résidentiels dans les municipalités, projet de loi 72, Mme Jeffrey

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey .....2171

Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....2173

Mr. Michael Prue.....2174

Mr. Kim Craiton.....2176

Mrs. Laura Albanese.....2177

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey .....2177

Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey Memorial Act (Highway Traffic Amendment), 2008, Bill 74, Mr. Rinaldi / Loi de 2008 commémorant Jay Lawrence et Bart Mackey (modification du Code de la route), projet de loi 74, M. Rinaldi

Mr. Lou Rinaldi .....2178

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....2179

Mr. Khalil Ramal .....2179

Ms. Helena Jaczek .....2180

Mr. Michael Prue .....2180

Mr. Jeff Leal .....2182

Mr. Frank Klees .....2182

Mr. Lou Rinaldi .....2184

Property Tax Deferral Act, 2008, Bill 78, Mr. Shurman / Loi de 2008 sur le report des impôts fonciers, projet de loi 78, M. Shurman

Mr. Peter Shurman.....2184

Mr. Peter Kormos .....2186

Mr. Tony Ruprecht .....2186

Ms. Laurie Scott .....2187

Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....2187

Mr. Khalil Ramal .....2188

Mrs. Joyce Savoline.....2188

Mr. Michael Prue .....2189

Mr. Bob Delaney .....2190

Mrs. Christine Elliott .....2190

Mr. Peter Shurman.....2191

Municipal Residential Sprinkler Act, 2008, Bill 72, Mrs. Jeffrey / Loi de 2008 sur les extincteurs automatiques résidentiels dans les municipalités, projet de loi 72, Mme Jeffrey

Second reading agreed to .....2191

Mrs. Linda Jeffrey .....2191

Jay Lawrence and Bart Mackey Memorial Act (Highway Traffic Amendment), 2008, Bill 74, Mr. Rinaldi / Loi de 2008 commémorant Jay Lawrence et Bart Mackey (modification du Code de la route), projet de loi 74, M. Rinaldi

Second reading agreed to .....2191

Mr. Lou Rinaldi .....2191

Property Tax Deferral Act, 2008, Bill 78,

Mr. Shurman / Loi de 2008 sur le report des impôts fonciers, projet de loi 78, M. Shurman

Second reading negated .....2192

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Thursday 29 May 2008 / Jeudi 29 mai 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Order of business

Hon. David Caplan .....	2147
Agreed to .....	2147

Algoma University Act, 2008, Bill 80, Mr. Milloy / Loi de 2008 sur l'Université Algoma, projet de loi 80, M. Milloy

Hon. John Milloy .....	2147
Mr. David Oraziotti .....	2148
Mr. Ted Chudleigh .....	2152
Mr. Rosario Marchese .....	2154
Third reading agreed to .....	2155

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2155
---------------------------------------	------

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2155
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2155

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2156
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2156
Mrs. Joyce Savoline .....	2156

Manufacturing jobs

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2157
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	2157

Aboriginal rights

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2158
Hon. Michael Bryant .....	2158

Manufacturing jobs

Mr. Peter Shurman .....	2159
Hon. Sandra Pupatello .....	2159

Driver licences

Mr. Gilles Bisson .....	2160
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	2160

Municipalities

Mr. Jim Brownell .....	2160
Hon. Jim Watson .....	2161

Casinos

Mr. Frank Klees .....	2161
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	2161

Public health

Mme France Gélinas .....	2162
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2162

Agriculture industry

Mrs. Maria Van Bommel .....	2162
Hon. Leona Dombrowsky .....	2162

Services for the developmentally disabled

Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2163
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2163

Property taxation

Mr. Michael Prue .....	2164
Hon. Dwight Duncan .....	2164

Public transportation

Mr. Jeff Leal .....	2164
Hon. James J. Bradley .....	2164

Pesticides

Mrs. Julia Munro .....	2165
Hon. John Gerretsen .....	2165

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Jim Wilson .....	2165
----------------------	------

Firearms control

Mr. Mike Colle .....	2165
----------------------	------

Alma College

Mrs. Julia Munro .....	2166
------------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Jeff Leal .....	2166
---------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Ted Chudleigh .....	2166
-------------------------	------

Firearms control

Mr. Pat Hoy .....	2166
-------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2167
-----------------------	------

Hospital funding

Mr. Joe Dickson .....	2167
-----------------------	------

Anti-smoking legislation

Mr. Jeff Leal .....	2167
---------------------	------

Pope John Paul II

Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2167
-----------------------	------

Continued on inside back cover

No. 51

N° 51

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Monday 2 June 2008

Lundi 2 juin 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Monday 2 June 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lundi 2 juin 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Hon. Michael Gravelle: Mr. Speaker, I believe we have unanimous consent to put forward a motion regarding the division of time for debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 77: That the time available to 10:45 a.m. this morning be divided equally among the recognized parties to debate on the motion for second reading of Bill 77, An Act to provide services to persons with developmental disabilities, to repeal the Developmental Services Act and to amend certain other statutes, following which the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the motion for second reading of Bill 77 without further debate or amendment.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The House is familiar with the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

SERVICES FOR PERSONS WITH DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR LES SERVICES AUX PERSONNES AYANT UNE DÉFICIENCE INTELLECTUELLE

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 26, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 77, An Act to provide services to persons with developmental disabilities, to repeal the Developmental Services Act and to amend certain other statutes / Projet de loi 77, Loi visant à prévoir des services pour les personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle, à abroger la Loi sur les services aux personnes ayant une déficience intellectuelle et à modifier d'autres lois.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: I would have thought maybe the government would want to take the lead, it being a government bill. I'm surprised—are you not going to speak on it?

Mr. Khalil Ramal: We did.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: But are we not having 35 minutes each today?

Mr. Michael Prue: If you want it.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: Oh, so some of them don't want it then. It seems like it's become a banana republic around here. From what I'm hearing about who will be in attendance here this afternoon, the number of cabinet ministers who will be absent, and no one wanting to speak on legislation, you'd think we were somewhere down around Costa Rica or something. This is pathetic, I'm telling you. I cannot imagine—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Speak through the Chair, please.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: Mr. Speaker, I simply cannot imagine, in a Legislature that has an official opposition and a government, that we would actually have a caucus meeting held outside of this House, in another province, during a period when the House was sitting and there was a question period actually on. That is very disappointing to me, as a member of this Legislature, and I hope that a lot of Ontarians will realize that when they get the press releases and see it in the local media.

I'm pleased to speak to Bill 77, An Act to provide services to persons with developmental disabilities, to repeal the Developmental Services Act and to amend certain other statutes. The short title of this bill is the Services for Persons with Developmental Disabilities Act, 2008. This bill is as a result of the closure of the regional centres; there's no question that that's why it was brought forward.

I want to say a few words on this this morning because we had a regional centre in the city of Orillia that was established over 100 years ago. Recently, it had up to 700 employees and provided a service to people with developmental disabilities in this province, particularly, in the last decade or so, people with very severe disabilities. We've lost that in the city of Orillia, as I said, and with that, we've lost 700 jobs, a $29-million payroll to the city of Orillia. The then-Minister of Community and Social Services just said it was a fact of life that it was going to happen, and there was no compensation towards it whatsoever. We're just out of those jobs, and we're down to about 40 people left at the regional centre.

I can tell you that there are a lot of sad stories around it, particularly when the initial announcement was made, I believe it was September 9, 2004, when the minister came and mentioned to all the different mayors etc. that there would be a lot of consultation taking place as we closed the facilities. That was the part: it was the lack of consultation that actually took place. It has been fast-tracked, and if there was ever a sad thing that happened to the most vulnerable people in our society, it was that the consultations with family members and friends who really loved and cared for these people—they were ignored. They were told, “You’re going to go there.” There was no choice.

Let me tell you what the regional centres offered. They offered the best of care of any facilities in our country, and that meant things like physiotherapy, swimming pools for exercise, dental care. The very, very best was offered in these facilities, and we tried to point that out to the minister. This is not to say that there’s anything wrong with the community living organizations; they provide a great service across our province as well. But these 1,000 people who remained in the three regional centres were probably the most vulnerable people we’d seen in the province, and it will cost much, much more to house them in facilities across our country.

The big thing about it, the thing that I’m most concerned about, is the final safety net in case something happens to one of these people. In a lot of cases, people with developmental disabilities get very violent at times, and one of the things that would happen is that it would sometimes take five or six employees to grab hold of the individual and to calm them down. Those types of services are no longer there. So what will happen, and what has already happened in a number of cases, is that some of those folks end up in jail or they end up in a mental institution. Better still, they end up in long-term-care facilities, which is the most disappointing, because there’s already a shortage of long-term-care facilities because this government has basically put the stop on the building of new facilities. It’s disappointing.

I can tell you that up around Orillia, when you go by the Huronia Regional Centre now—and they’re down to only 40 people left in it—it’s like a graveyard. At the time, we asked the government, “Is there any chance that the city of Orillia could be compensated, because we had a satellite university from Lakehead that was wanting to build in Orillia?” and we were completely ignored; absolutely ignored. They wanted nothing to do with a university on that site. It was a beautiful piece of property on the side of Lake Simcoe, and the government completely ignored the fact that when you take 700 jobs out of a community, maybe they should be compensated somehow. Of course, they weren’t.

0910

There are always these wish lists that the municipal councils have ahead of them. They don’t want to disturb the government too much, alarm them or set off any bells that would indicate that there was a problem with the way they govern. So they get away with it. They got away with it in the Rideau Regional Centre and the South West Regional Centre as well, in spite of the fact that we had professionals and people from the Ontario Public Service Employees Union, all kinds of doctors and dentists, all kinds of professionals, and people from the families of clients at the regional centres. They were ignored. It was very disappointing.

So now we’ve got this bill ahead of us that’s going to tidy up the mess and take away the safety net once and for all. That’s what this bill is really all about in the end; it’s about making the closures final. Whatever happens to these folks in the future, God only knows. But I can tell you that the regional centres have served this province well. They’ve done a great job; they’ve looked after a lot of very vulnerable people. As we move forward, I’m not so sure if that same kind of compassion will be there.

When I speak about compassion, I’d like to mention the employees. Until you really get involved and talk one-on-one to different employees from different organizations, you don’t realize how committed a lot of people are to their jobs. This is the one thing—when this closure started, I actually couldn’t believe it. All along, I thought they’d back off on it. I thought, “Well, surely they won’t take away the only remaining safety nets,” even if they left one of them open in the province, just so we’ve got one facility. In other provinces, they’re building them. Manitoba is building them; Nova Scotia is planning on building them. There have been mistakes made in some of those other provinces and now we’re moving forward in a different direction. But we’re not listening to that.

I wouldn’t be a bit surprised if, in the future, we see some government move forward with a centre of excellence for people with developmental disabilities. I think we may see that in the future, because if you look at the history and what we’ve seen happen—the care that’s been taken for those 1,000 remaining folks who have been kicked out of their homes—when we look forward to that, we may see that such a facility will be required.

I guess all I’m saying is that it’s a disappointing day to talk about a very disappointing bill. First of all, I want to go back to the fact that it’s a day when a government that brags about transparency takes 15 cabinet ministers out of the House so that they don’t have to answer any questions, so that the Premier can take them to Quebec City for a photo op. It’s almost like the Minister of Economic and Development and Trade—I’m assuming she’s there as well. She’s getting a lot of photo ops lately.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Stick to the bill, please.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: The reason I mention the Minister of Economic Development and Trade is because she’s the one who made the announcement to close these facilities. I want to say that she’s not a very popular person in that particular community right now, and not a very popular person in any community that had a regional centre or factory in it, because they’re all closing. It’s not a great day.

On the economy: It ties into this. We’ve lost a $29-million payroll in the city of Orillia and area. It is amazing. When you’re out there today, I hope people are listening to what their constituents are saying. I don’t think things are too pretty right now, as far as job creation and the economy. I can tell you that the tourism industry is having a terrible time. So if the Minister of Tourism is in the House today, maybe he'll be prepared to answer a few questions on that.

I want to leave some time for my colleague from Lanark, who will be speaking on this bill as well. In the end, I want to say that Bill 77 has come forward as a result of a movement by a former minister. She has decided to close these regional centres, and this is kind of a house-keeping bill that will allow her to do so and still fund them somehow. But you can be sure of one thing: I don't think there will ever be facilities built like, or that the people who are living in the facilities today or have moved out will ever have the care and treatment they received in, the three regional centres that we had here in the province of Ontario.

I thank you for your time today, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: I understand this legislation is going to go to committee this summer. I support that very much—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): It's my understanding that you have spoken to this bill, and you have moved—

Interjection.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): We need consent of the House for the honourable member to speak. Agreed? Agreed.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Thank you very much for consenting to my speaking to this wrap-up of this bill, Mr. Speaker.

Our caucus supports this legislation; it supports the thrust of the legislation. We are, however, concerned about some of the matters with regard to the treatment of our most vulnerable adults in some of the residences which my friend and colleague has just mentioned here in the Legislature.

I guess one of the challenges as we go forward with this piece of legislation is going to be drawing the line between family responsibility and state responsibility for disabled adults who are in the care of their parents. We have found that under the present programs the government has for this kind of legislation, very, very small amounts of resources are going to the actual need that is out there; that is, helping families take care of their disabled adults in their own home.

I'd like to talk a little bit about the Rideau Regional Centre, which at one time was a residence for over 1,000 disabled adults. As time went on, the number of adults in that particular residence decreased; it has decreased quite dramatically from a time when I think there were 1,500 adults in that particular residence.

I think a lot of people have the wrong attitude as to what these residences were and did for the people who were there. They are, as I have witnessed personally on a number of occasions, fairly happy places in terms of the involvement and the activity of the residents on a day-to-day basis. They have programs for them. That is one of the problems that we are hearing from the parents of these severely disabled people: that they have been promised programs when they have been put into the community and those programs are not there. What we see happening when they're put out to the community is that they're not getting the same level of service as they were getting in Huronia Regional Centre and Rideau Regional Centre.

Basically, what seems to be happening with the residents is that most of them have been put into community living. But as we get down to the final strokes, the remaining 100-plus residents of Rideau Regional Centre are severely, severely disabled. They not only have disability problems in terms of their cognitive ability, but they have severe health problems as well, and therefore they require a lot of care on a daily basis. As I said last week, what's happening now is that an increasing number of them are not going into community living. They are going into nursing homes or long-term-care centres, because their needs are so high that a group home cannot attend to the combination of their disabilities, including their severe health disabilities.

0920

To date, somewhere between 20 and 30 former residents are already in long-term-care centres. As some newspaper stories have pointed out, for some of the younger ones—those in their 30s, 40s and 50s—it is quite a different community that they're being put into when being put into a long-term-care centre, where the majority of the residents are in their 80s and 90s. So it is somewhat of a misplacement in terms of the physical capabilities of some of these people, notwithstanding their health disabilities. Therefore, as we go forward, an increasing number of these residents from Rideau Regional Centre are going to be placed in long-term-care homes, of this 100 remaining.

You don't want to characterize all of them as the same, but some of the remaining residents are incapable of taking care of themselves, unfortunately. They have to be fed. They're incontinent. They have problems taking care of themselves so that they don't harm themselves. Therefore, it is very, very specialized need.

One of the things that the employees of the Rideau Regional Centre in Smiths Falls suggested to the ministry was, why not create a specialized long-term-care home on the existing 350-acre site of Rideau Regional Centre to take care of the last 100—or whatever the particular number is—of these very high-need individuals? They have the staff there that are experienced, they still have a cadre of health care professionals who would volunteer to take care of these particular individuals, and they have such facilities as a modern laundry to deal with the mountains of laundry that are required in order to take care of these kinds of needy people. Unfortunately, the government has made a decision not to retain even a semblance of a long-term-care facility at Rideau Regional Centre.

As I mentioned earlier, part of the concern of some of the parents of these particular disabled adults is that by putting them into the community setting, they're in fact limiting the freedom of these individuals. That sounds kind of odd, but the fact of the matter is that many of these group homes that they are put into in terms of community living are on very busy arterial streets in our urban areas, our cities. The fear of the parents is that for those who are unable to recognize that it's dangerous to walk out onto a street, they're concerned that their children might be hurt by wandering onto the streets at an unsupervised time. The beauty of Rideau Regional Centre is that it's set back from the road significantly; I think it's set back about 1,000 or 2,000 feet from the road. Therefore, the residents have had and do have quite an opportunity to walk around the grounds without any real fear of anything happening to them. They also have a swimming pool at the residence, which they share with the community, so the community comes in and there's some mix with the community in terms of Smiths Falls. They have arts and crafts. They have all those kinds of things. So I think that the public has the idea that when they go out into the community, this is going to be a much easier way for them to get along with the community, whereas at Rideau Regional Centre a lot of them had a very happy existence in life and they were properly cared for.

One of the other things that bothers one a little bit with regard to taking them out of a setting like Rideau Regional Centre is that, at Rideau Regional Centre, the Ministry of Community and Social Services was responsible for their care. In other words, they were ultimately responsible if something bad happened and therefore the impetus to provide the proper care for them was there. When they're put out into community living or into a nursing home or long-term-care centre, the Ministry of Community and Social Services treats them as ODSP clients—Ontario disability clients—and they are no different than other ODSP clients.

Evidently, I'm told and know that after three months, they do an assessment of the placement. After three months or approximately 90 days, the Ministry of Community and Social Services washes their hands of that particular individual. Therefore, the responsibility for seeing that that particular individual has proper care and the proper supports they need falls to the family, friends or the official guardian. The line of responsibility for these severely disabled children—or adults now—really falls apart.

I guess the other part of this debate that has, I think, been unfairly reported on by the minister and put forward by the government is, "Your government was doing this, so we're just following your lead." In 2003, there were close to 400 residents at Rideau Regional Centre. The previous government had said, through their actions, that they were going to allow most of these individuals to continue living their lives at Rideau Regional Centre and try to encourage parents and families and friends of the residents to put them into the community, and that was the way it was being done. Now we have placement officers in these particular residences who have quotas to get the people out. Placement officers have quotas and they have to meet those quotas, and therefore it's a very much more forced system in terms of getting them out into the community, often without family support. The families are frightened. They're frightened to complain to the new long-term-care centre that the resident might land in, they're frightened to complain to community living, which is charged with taking care of their adult child going forward. There is really very little accountability in the whole process.

I might also add that there has been tension for a long period of time between the community living people, the people who provide the group homes, and Rideau Regional Centre and Huronia and those other places, because—and one other place. It's St. Thomas, I believe.

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: South West.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Yes, the southwestern centre. The community living people have felt that too many resources were going into these residences and that was denying them resources with regard to the services they were providing. There was considerable conflict between the two groups, so therefore it didn't surprise those of us who had represented the areas where these centres were that community living was all for the emptying out of these particular residences.

There are a number of things that fit together here, but I guess the other part that has bothered the parents and the friends of the people who are essentially being forced out of these residences is that the staff of the residences have been reluctant—I guess that's the best way to put it—to share information with regard to the associations that their severely disabled adults have had in the residences. In other words, because of the inability of the adult children to communicate, the parents don't know who their friends were in the residence, and so they've been asking the people who have cared for their children, as they are being moved out of the residence, "Who are their friends? Who have they had some kind of feeling towards in the residence?" And the staff who are in these residences have been told that, because of the privacy act, they can't give out that kind of information.

0930

What the families are concerned about is that their child will go out to a nursing home or a group home, and they have no record of who their friends are. So they can't take their adult child from one residence to another and have them meet and visit with each other. We feel that's a very wrong thing to do, notwithstanding the privacy act and all of the protections that it provides. I'm sure that the privacy commissioner would be more than willing to make a comment on this in terms of sharing information with people so that after they find themselves in a new setting, they would be able to visit with each other from time to time, if in fact they had this association before. So it's a very difficult situation for these parents.

I've also heard stories—and there have been some reported stories—of some of these individuals who have gone out to community homes and haven't been able to cope. We had one case in Smiths Falls where an individual went to a community home and then committed a crime—pulled a knife on several people, including the police—and there was really not a good way to deal with that particular individual. They were able to deal with him in the Rideau Regional Centre, but they couldn't deal with him in a group home because of the violent nature of the behaviour of this particular individual. Unfortunately, some of them are quite large people and some of them have a lot of strength and cannot be dealt with in a community setting.

The other one that a lot of adults are having trouble with is what they call, in their colloquial language, runners. In other words, the individuals don't know to stay close to their home. Therefore, when they're put in a community home, unless there's a lock on their door or a wall around the community home or group home, these individuals will just take off. There's a lot of concern with regard to those individuals and whether or not they can be put into the community setting. In fact, in one instance in Ottawa, in a community home, as one family member came to visit a disabled adult, they found another disabled adult on the road, headed down the street, without any kind of supervision.

There has been a lot left to be desired with regard to caring for these individuals. I really think that this could have been done in a much more humane and kind way. I believe that all parties have the goal of trying to put as many disabled adults into the community as possible. If they can thrive and if they can enjoy life more, who wouldn't be for that kind of policy? But as my previous colleague mentioned, where is the fallback for this? What happens when that small number of violent individuals cannot be accommodated in a community home, or their freedom is so strictly controlled—or that they don't have freedom in these community homes just because of the nature of the community homes—versus a larger facility like Rideau Regional or Huronia, where they can in fact deal with these exceptional individuals?

It's with some sadness that these residences will close, because they have provided a tremendous opportunity for the most vulnerable people in our society to live in a somewhat normal way. They've got friends. They've had an unbelievable number of programs to participate in. They get physical activity, to the best of their ability. They have, in the case of Rideau Regional Centre, a large area that they can take advantage of on the outside of their buildings. They live in accommodation that is pretty good. In fact, the accommodation over the last 10 or 15 years has been improved dramatically for these individuals. They've rebuilt a lot of the space in Rideau Regional so that it very much resembles a residence. A lot of them have lived with the same individual for 30 or 40 years in the same room, and some of these individuals are now split into different accommodations, and therefore they've lost their lifelong friends and partners, in some cases.

We really believe that the government should have gone slower in terms of closing Rideau Regional Centre and Huronia, which would have been more in keeping with the needs of these people. They should have been more careful in terms of what they've done. I would really like to see, in two or three years, that we strike a commission to look at where these individuals have gone and evaluate what the outcome of these evictions from long-term homes has been.

I believe that the Ministry of Community and Social Services shouldn't wipe their hands of the responsibility for care of these people, and I will always continue to work on behalf of the parents, the friends and the residents of these centres. It is really sad that the government has bungled this so badly. It could have been done with much more kindness and much more compassion than it has.

Mr. Mike Colle: It's my pleasure to rise today and continue speaking in second reading debate on legislation that deals with individuals with developmental disabilities.

This legislation updates legislation that goes back over 35 years. What it's really doing is trying to, in a comprehensive way, put together all the incremental changes that have occurred in the area of developmental disabilities. You can imagine, since 1974, the number of programs and the different approaches that have developed in our communities across Ontario in dealing with citizens among us who have developmental disabilities. We must not forget—I know there's been a lot of discussion about the employees, who are very important partners in helping people with developmental disabilities—that we are talking about 40,000 Ontarians. These are 40,000 Ontarians who belong to many of our own families—relatives and friends whom we all know—who are challenged with a developmental disability. It could be in any one of our families, it could be in any one of our neighbourhoods, and it is not an easy challenge to deal with, whether it's a member of our family or our community. Many mothers and fathers have struggled their whole lives in trying to help their child who is unfortunate and has this developmental disability, right up into adulthood. There are many forms of it, and it's not easy.

0940

I can remember, when I was first elected to city council, there was a mother and father who lived on Westmount Avenue, at St. Clair and Dufferin. This couple must have been in their late 70s or early 80s, and they still took care of an adult son who was developmentally delayed. It was almost to the point where the father, again, almost 80, was trying to lift and carry their son around in the home, because they had chosen to keep the son at home. The challenge there was that the bathroom was on the second floor. There was a program at that time, through the city and the province, to allow for the retrofitting of a bathroom on the main floor. That son weighed over 200 pounds, so you can imagine this father, who was 80, lifting the son into bed, out of bed, to the washroom etc.

That is one choice that some parents made. Other parents chose to put their sons or daughters into more formal institutions—a very impossible decision to make—throughout the province, like some that have been mentioned here today. That was very difficult to do too.

I remember that we had a young boy named Leslie who lived across the street from us. He was one of five brothers. He had to leave home and was sent to Orillia. I see the family still, and my understanding is that Leslie is now in a group home, after spending many years in Orillia.

It has not been easy for any government to deal with these 40,000 important Ontarians with disabilities. I think all three parties over the years have supported the concept that the best way to help these adults with developmental disabilities is to put them into community settings, what we sometimes call group homes or community living. That is what the province of Ontario has been moving towards for many years. Our government, following many years of expert advice and consensus, thinks that's where men and women with developmental disabilities should be. They should be in a neighbourhood setting, in a community where they can be supervised by an agency that is expert in providing counsellors and support services.

I remember that for many years we had a great battle about group homes in the city of Toronto. It was very challenging, to ensure that individuals not only with developmental disabilities but all kind of challenges could be housed in a group home. Many of the fears about group homes were extremely exaggerated because of people's misconceptions. I don't know if it's the same in your community, Madam Speaker, in Hamilton, but thankfully in the greater Toronto area I'm glad to say that there is a greater acceptance of people with many disabilities and many challenges being integrated into communities. So there isn't the hue and cry about community living facilities coming into neighbourhoods. In some cases, the neighbours aren't even aware that some of these homes are community living homes. In many ways, they're better neighbours than some of the so-called "regular" neighbours who have disputes about your fence, encroachments and so forth, so they make good neighbours.

That's not to say it's not without challenges, because they have to be staffed properly; they have to have the proper facilities in the home, whether they're hearing-impaired, vision-impaired or in wheelchairs. These community homes, as I like to call them, are most critical in terms of investment. You just can't put people in a home without proper staff and without proper facilities so that they can enjoy the amenities of that house. But they may need special lifts, they may need special washroom facilities, or they may need special access in and out of the home. All in all, it is not a perfect solution, but I think it's a very humane approach to helping people with developmental disabilities.

This is a very complex area, and that's why what I think this bill does is it tries to coordinate a lot of the service delivery mechanisms, because it is sometimes most difficult—even as an MPP and as MPP staff—to weave your way through all the complexities of services and how you contact the appropriate service delivery agent. This bill is trying to accommodate that service delivery model in making it more comprehensible and more understandable and more seamless, especially for the families of the persons with a disability and for the individual who needs that service.

In every community in Ontario, we have some real silent heroes who are support workers or community workers or counsellors, or they work with foundations that deliver services to our disabled. They are the front line in the delivery of this critical, critical series of supports. They are there working 24/7. As you know, it is not a 9-to-5 job; it's 24/7. We've heard some comments already about the challenges some of the individuals may pose, but it's just a re-emphasis of the fact that it just doesn't mean that the workers in the community homes will leave at 5 o'clock. They're there, they sleep there, they're constantly in contact, 24/7, and again, it is not a 9-to-5 service delivery model. That is why it is extremely complex, extremely demanding and expensive, but it is an investment we have to make.

I know the government invests over $1.6 billion a year in helping our developmentally challenged individuals in this province, but it's an investment we have to make, because it's an investment in the quality of life we're all judged by as a province. It's sometimes the same thing in education or in health care. It's always relatively easy to help those who are healthy, those who are supported at home and have a great family, whether it be in a school or in a hospital, if someone is in excellent health or a great student. But it's the challenged student, the special student, the patient in hospital who has some acute situation that isn't easily administered to by normal health practitioners.

It's the same with individuals in society who are challenged with developmental disabilities. We sometimes, just because of human nature being what it is—and I think that sometimes governments are guilty of that too—tend to dismiss the potential of people with developmental disabilities. They are misdiagnosed. They are segregated from society. They may be visually impaired or hearing impaired, but we all know of cases where many of these individuals we find are really gifted.

0950

There was an amazing documentary on CBC from 20 years ago about this phenomenal pianist who was thought to be just impossible in terms of his future progress. His hearing, his eyesight—he couldn't see. But this young man—I think it was Roy Bonisteel who did the program—was an incredible pianist who could match the calibre of pianists of great renown. For years, he was not allowed to even play the piano. Then all of a sudden he started playing the piano as if he was at a concert at Toronto's Massey Hall or Roy Thomson Hall—almost Glenn Gould quality.

So many of these individuals, if given an opportunity, will be able to offer all kinds of reciprocal benefits to society. They do. Many of them can work if they get the support and the opportunity to work in a—sometimes they call them sheltered environments, or sometimes they work with assistance. That is one area where I think not only government but employers in the private and public sectors could do much better, and that is to ensure that within the workplace there are opportunities for people with developmental disabilities. I know that in some of the work settings in this province there are employers who should be congratulated because they hire these individuals. Many of them are very productive and contribute a great deal to the workplace.

I think it's something that government should encourage more employers to do, because this is part of the whole spectrum of service that is needed to ensure that the 40,000 individuals in Ontario who are developmentally challenged get full opportunity, not only in the setting with their medical needs, their educational needs and their social needs, but also in meeting the needs of their potential. Part of that is ensuring that they get an opportunity to work. It is sometimes a bit of trouble for an employer, but still it's something that is very rewarding not only for the adult, usually with developmental disabilities, but also for the people who are in the workplace. In many cases, the individuals with developmental disabilities have so much to contribute. They are sometimes very insightful. They can do things better than we can do. We underestimate the talent sometimes hidden within individuals with developmental disabilities.

So I would hope that in the future there are more opportunities in all of our workplaces. Even in this Legislative Assembly and the legislative precinct, I'm not sure whether there is a program where young men and women with developmental disabilities might get a chance to work. I'm going to speak to Speaker Peters about this. Why not have an opportunity for a placement here in the legislative precinct for a young man or woman or an older adult with a developmental disability? Let them be here in the legislative precinct. Maybe there are some here already; I'm not sure if the program exists or not. But that's one thing that I think would be an example of the Legislature showing leadership in this area. It would be a very good learning experience for us too, and not only helpful for the individual. I will take that request up with Speaker Peters and see if we might do something to lead by example.

This really is a partnership, as I said before, with many excellent community organizations—Community Living Ontario, community living agencies we have all across Ontario. In Toronto, an organization that comes to mind that I deal with quite frequently is the Jewish Vocational Service. They have an army of excellent people who help all kinds of individuals with supports that they need. The Reena Foundation is legendary in the great work that it does here in the greater Toronto area, in Ontario. And I can go on and on. They are the partners who are critical to the success of any legislation the government brings forward.

Governments are one half of the equation; the other half is the service delivery partners in the communities. The agencies in our communities cannot succeed in helping people with developmental disabilities unless the public is supportive. I know there is great activity in terms of fundraising that they do, community outreach programs. They do all kinds of social programs, and they need the public to participate. I would hope that we don't forget that this is part of any government initiative. The government is now updating this legislation, Bill 77, but it cannot succeed in helping these 40,000 Ontarians unless there is full partnership with organizations like the Reena Foundation, unless there's full partnership with the men and women who are the front-line caregivers in these homes and community homes and in our community settings where these individuals with developmental disability challenges live. So we need to encourage a better awareness of the critical work that they do.

We all know that our police, our firefighters, our transit workers, our emergency service workers, our teachers, our doctors, our nurses, do great work. But what about the front-line workers who work in these group homes, as I said, from morning till night helping some of these most vulnerable of Ontarians? They are never given enough recognition to encourage them to continue to do the great work they do. I'm sure we all know these people, but again, in many cases they are the silent, hidden jewels in our communities—these community support workers in our group home and community home settings who are very generous and very caring. They are doing excellent work, considering that the pay isn't always great and the recognition is very rare. I hope that we, as members of provincial Parliament, in all of our ridings, can recognize the incredible, generous people who help people who need support, again, around the clock in some very challenging—and I know the member from Carleton-Mississippi Mills said that it is not easy.

There is no magic solution here. Those of us who have a little bit of an understanding of how challenging this is know how daunting it is. This bill is important because it brings it together in a comprehensive, seamless way, and it's got to be done. We're going to have hearings, and I think they will be very valuable. But we still have a lot of work to do in all of our communities in helping those amongst us—and as I've said, these families are our families, these 40,000 Ontarians are our neighbours, and we have a responsibility to take care of them and to help them and to allow them to reach their potential.

Again, I do hope that this bill and the measures undertaken will be a positive and very helpful step in helping these Ontarians who, for too long, have been unnoticed and not cared for enough. We've tried, but sometimes those of us who are so busy with our run-around lives never stop to think of those amongst us who need extra help.

I think this bill is a good opportunity for all of us to be more aware of the need to make this investment in time and effort and legislation, so that this part of our society is not neglected or taken for granted. I do support this initiative, as most members do, because we know we have to keep making these improvements. I see Bill 77 as an improvement; it's a very valid attempt to deal with a problem that is not easy. Again, in the problem, there are challenges and rewards, because if we can help these 40,000 individuals and their families, we will make this a better place for everybody.

The saying is that we're always judged as a society on how we help the most vulnerable amongst us. This is, hopefully, a positive step in that direction. I commend the minister and the staff in her ministry for undertaking this very difficult and challenging work. I wish them great success at the hearings, and I hope that we can come up with a piece of legislation that really is of benefit to the 40,000 individuals in Ontario who suffer from developmental delays and their families.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I just wanted to give the questions and comments opportunity a kick-off, as well as to say—

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): I'm sorry. There was an agreement that the time would be divided amongst all three parties. There are no questions or comments.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I can see that I'm out of order. My apologies.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate? Seeing no further debate, is it the pleasure of the House that the motion for second reading carry? Carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Hon. Michael Bryant: It is being referred, and I'll leave it to the parliamentary assistant to speak to this.

Mr. Khalil Ramal: I would ask that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Social Policy.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I seek consent for the House to recess until 10:45 a.m.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Agreed? The House is in recess until 10:45 a.m.

The House recessed from 1004 to 1047.

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): A little late; my apologies.

I have a number of introductions; pray be seated.

On behalf of the member from Lanark—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington, I would like to welcome Julie Kipp and Jeff Kipp. Jeff works in Mr. Hillier's office.

On behalf of the member from York South—Weston, I'd like to welcome a number of guests who will be here this afternoon: Gianni Bardini, the Consul General of Italy; the Honourable Judy Sgro; the Honourable Gino Bucchino; Julian Fantino; George Visintin; Carlo Fillipazo; Roberto Buttazzoni; Paolo Ponti; Fabrizio Patuelli; Martin Stiglio; and Maurizio Gherardini.

On behalf of the member from Etobicoke North, in the members' gallery east: Mr. S.M. Muncer, Mr. Khurshid Ahmed Jomezai, Mr. Anwar Merchant, Mr. Samir Dossal and Mr. Anwar ul-Haq. They're representing the Pakistan

Chamber of Commerce, and they're leading a trade delegation to Ontario.

On behalf of the member from Kenora—Rainy River, in the west members' gallery: Mary Cox, Gary Green, Tom Kear, Walter Poremski, Lorraine Schulz, Antoni Shelton and Rennie Terbogt, from the Humber River Health Coalition.

On behalf of the member from Kenora—Rainy River and the member from Parkdale—High Park, in the west members' gallery: Charles Foster, Judy Persad, Edward Lantz, James Wardlaw, Edward Portelli and Chris Robinson.

On behalf of the member from Toronto—Danforth, in the west members' gallery: Lily Chang, Jacqui Latter, Nancy Murphy and Linda Rose, members of CUPE Local 79.

I'd just like to welcome, on behalf of the member from Oxford and myself, Jeff Helsdon, who's from the Tillsonburg News, in the media gallery today.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: I would like to seek unanimous consent to move a motion to stand down question period today in light of the fact that the Premier and 14 ministers are absent, and that we have a double-header tomorrow; we would have two question periods back to back.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is there consent? Agreed? I heard a no.

ORAL QUESTIONS

SEWAGE SPILL

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: It looks a little bit like summer school in here today.

To the Minister of the Environment: Over 35 football fields worth of sewage leaked into the Ottawa River in 2006, and it has been reported that the Liberal government has known about this for over one year now. Why has the Ministry of the Environment covered up—

Interruption.

Mr. Howard Hampton: Mr. Speaker, there's hardly anybody here.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'm not impressed. I would like all those cameras confiscated, please, and not returned to the members.

Interjections.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): To the member from Welland: If he persists, I'm going to name him, and I'm going to name all the members.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: I'd expect some respect from the other side of the House. It would have been nice if the minister were here, but why has the minister—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The honourable member knows that the tradition in the place is that we do not make—you ask your question to a specific minister. You're making reference to that minister's absence.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Why has the Ministry of the Environment covered up this sewage spill for over a year?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would just ask the member to withdraw the comment. I ruled on that phrase previously.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Why has the Ministry of the Environment participated in a cover-up of this sewage spill—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd just ask the member to withdraw the comment, and I'm going to turn it to the Acting Premier.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Withdrawn. But, Mr. Speaker, will the minister call for a public inquiry?

Hon. George Smitherman: I think the honourable member has sought to elevate this matter, but at the heart of it, everybody can agree that the circumstances in Ottawa were highly unacceptable circumstances.

Interjections.

Hon. George Smitherman: The heckling from the member from Leeds–Grenville notwithstanding, I think it is important to note that already in the circumstances still under further investigation, significant acts of accountability have been taken. This a serious issue, most certainly, for the people of Ottawa—

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: One you sat on for a year.

Hon. George Smitherman: —and accordingly, that's why the investigation ongoing by the city of Ottawa into the circumstances is essential. We all look forward—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would ask the honourable member to withdraw the comment, and this will be your last warning.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I withdraw.

The Speaker: Member from Carleton–Mississippi Mills, supplementary.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: This spill took place in August 2006. The ministry claims that it found out about it in May 2006. They started their investigation in May 2008. Why did you start the investigation a full year after you found out about this huge spill of sewage into the Ottawa River by the city of Ottawa?

Mr. Tim Hudak: Cover-up.

Hon. George Smitherman: Thank you very much—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I would ask the member from Niagara West–Glanbrook to withdraw his comment, please.

Mr. Tim Hudak: Withdrawn.

Hon. George Smitherman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think, as I had a chance to say in an earlier answer to the other member from the Ottawa area, that this is a very serious matter indeed. All of us agree that the protection of the health of the Ottawa River is very, very essential, of course, to the many hundreds of thousands of people who are nearby to it.

That's why the actions that have been taken to date and the accountability associated with them recognize the importance of the matter at hand. That's why there are efforts at present by the city of Ottawa to further examine their own behaviour and conduct and that of their officials in this circumstance, and that's why more information will be forthcoming on this matter. The Minister of the Environment will be working to ensure that appropriate steps are taken so that appropriate accountability is found in the circumstances.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Yes, the city of Ottawa has seen fit to have an inquiry of their own through the auditor general of their city. But the question here is, what did the Ministry of the Environment do or not do over the period of time? An investigation by the Ministry of the Environment is no good because it's investigating itself.

Mr. Deputy Premier, the only way that you will clean the record of the Ministry of the Environment in this matter is to have an inquiry into the behaviour of the ministry or lack of action by the ministry, knowing a full year about this huge spill, enough to fill the Palladium in Ottawa. We want a public inquiry. Will you have a public inquiry?

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member, in his questioning, seeks to draw attention to one element of the circumstance, but what he doesn't focus on is the admitted act—that act that has been admitted by city staff, that they failed to do what was their obligation, which was to notify the ministry immediately. That's why the investigations that are under way by the federal government, by the Ministry of the Environment, and by the city itself are very likely to be instructive in finding further accountability for this circumstance, which is not a tolerable circumstance.

There's much agreement with respect to the notion, to the idea, that the Ottawa River and its health are essential. That's why the actions by the city and city staff—who did not immediately make the Ministry of the Environment aware—are so particularly of concern, and that's why we have these three ongoing investigations at present.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is to the Minister of Health. Minister, you have acknowledged that because of your lack of action, the C. difficile crisis has shaken the confidence of the public in the health care system. If we take a look at the sequence of events, it's obvious that you knew more than you were willing to acknowledge.

The Toronto Star, on October 22, 2004, said, "Ontario's newly formed Provincial Infectious Diseases Advisory Committee is studying whether to add C. difficile to the list of reportable diseases, said Dr. Karim Kurji, Ontario's associate chief medical officer of health."

Then, on July 15, 2005, the Windsor Star quoted David Spencer—as you know, spokesman for the Ministry of Health—who said that the ministry is setting up a committee to determine whether C. difficile should be reported.

Minister, if that's the case, you knew this in 2004 and you knew this in 2005—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister?

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member brings evidence today that everybody in health care was very aware of the circumstances related to C. difficile and very aware of the actions that need to be taken in health care provider organizations related to it. That's why, in that very same time frame, we funded 137 additional infectious disease officers. That's why we established the provincial infectious disease advisory committee. That's why we established 14 regional infection control mechanisms. That's why we doubled the funding for public health.

I agree with the honourable member that C. difficile is a particular challenge in the context of superbugs in the hospital and in other environments in health care, and that's why people across health care have been attuned to the circumstances associated with that. The separate issue of whether and how it should be reported is a matter that many have grappled with, for which there has not been a clinical consensus. But we've decided to move forward. On September 30, Ontarians will gain—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you. Supplementary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: The Minister of Health is aware of the fact that work was ongoing in 2004-05. In November 2004, the Canadian public health agency announced it was tracking C. difficile in 25 teaching hospitals in Canada. Again, Minister, your response was no action. By then, we'd had at least 21 people die in Ontario. In June 2005, CUPE's hospital division called on you to make C. difficile a reportable infection—still no action from you, and we had 14 more people die at Peterborough hospital.

Minister, despite the warnings in 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007, why did it take you so long to come up with a plan and start reporting?

Hon. George Smitherman: For her own purposes and for the purposes of running down confidence in health care and misaligning responsibility for running front-line health care provider organizations, the honourable member is pretending that she first learned of C. difficile through recent reporting. In fact, we have all known about the circumstances associated with C. difficile in the hospital environment through circumstances learned in other provinces. That's why we created an infectious disease advisory committee and why we created those infection control networks.

I think it's very, very important that the honourable member acknowledge that this isn't a situation that came to rise only in recent circumstances. Hospitals, which have the primary obligation for controlling their environments, have known about these risks and have been dedicating themselves to dealing with the challenges.

1100

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: It's obvious that the minister is unwilling to accept any responsibility or accountability to the people in the province of Ontario. The reality is that if you are the Minister of Health, you have an obligation to protect the health and safety of the people of Ontario.

You knew in 2004; you knew in 2005. In 2006, we had the outbreak in the Soo; in 2007, Dr. Baker told you to start reporting and you ignored him. Then we had Joseph Brant. I ask you today: Why are you not prepared to set up an inquiry in order that we can determine what happened in this province, and make sure we protect people in the future when we are going to have more of these infectious diseases?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's not reflected in the record of the words that I have spoken in this Legislature that the matter of accountability is one where any of us in health care can pretend it was all about the actions of one or another. It's about the collective capacity of the health care system to be able to do these things. The people who run a local hospital obviously bear a substantial obligation to operate their environments in a way, with all of the information that's available, that is safe for the patients of the province of Ontario. To have the honourable member suggest otherwise is intensely inappropriate, especially given the fact that she herself has been a Minister of Health.

We see the opportunity, with Dr. Baker appointed and with reporting to be initiated on September 30, of dramatically enhancing the transparency and the power associated with it to the benefit of the patients in the province of Ontario. We think that acting in that fashion is more appropriate than an inquiry, which will take years to come to fruition.

CHILD CARE

Mr. Howard Hampton: My question is for the Minister of Children and Youth Services. The Ontario Coalition for Better Child Care is here at Queen's Park today. They note that parents in Quebec have access to quality, public, not-for-profit licensed child care and early learning for children up to age 12 for $7 a day. On a day when the Premier and two thirds of his cabinet are visiting Quebec, apparently trying to learn something, can the Minister of Children and Youth Services tell us when the McGuinty government is going to keep their promise to child care? When are we going to move even remotely near what parents in Quebec have in terms of good child care?

Hon. George Smitherman: First, on the matter of child care, I think it's very, very important—

Interjections.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I just want to remind the members that I've already asked them to be conscious of standing within this chamber.

Mr. Tim Hudak: This is unprecedented—15 away.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member from Niagara West.

If we can remember an old Speaker, there should be only one person standing. When I'm standing, I'm the one who is speaking.

I'd just remind the members that you asked a question. The Deputy Premier is here to respond to those questions in the absence of any minister who may not be here today. So the responsible individual is answering the question.

Mr. Peter Kormos: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. Upon using my eyeglasses, I find a number of backbenchers sitting in ministers' chairs. How appropriate is that, when backbenchers are being used to basically fill the seats, like papering the room?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I thank the member. That was not a point of order. Deputy Premier?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the member from Niagara West: I do think it's important to acknowledge that the honourable member makes a lot of protest, but didn't make any protest when they pulled the presentation of a budget out of the Legislative Assembly, nor did he seem offended at all when the Premier, at the head of his government, attended the legislative question period only 35% of the time.

To the New Democratic Party: We have to be reminded, first off, that by killing the government in Ottawa that was in favour of daycare, they have cost Ontario's families thousands and thousands of funded daycare spots. We have created 22,000 spots by making sure that we backfilled those that were cancelled when they defeated a government in Ottawa that supported daycare and elected one that didn't.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I think most people would find it passing strange that in a McGuinty government that has promised new child care spaces and new child care investment over and over again, the only money they could find for child care was federal money. Meanwhile, we have the province of Quebec, which, as a matter of public policy, provides early child care for all children under 12 years of age at $7 a day.

My question to the McGuinty government: You promised it over and over again. In the last budget, just six weeks ago, you had $6.2 billion of new spending. How come child care didn't even get a line item in the McGuinty budget?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's always exciting to see the NDP on their feet in the Legislature when they fail especially to acknowledge the role they played as daycare killers in our country. They did that by defeating a government in Ottawa that was prepared to dedicate substantial financial resources to daycare, and instead they killed it. They killed that government and they killed the budget that supported the creation of thousands of funded daycare spots. We've created 22,000 spots. When they were in government, they killed subsidies for 6,000 Ontario families related to daycare.

We're proud of the progress we've made. We realize that there are important opportunities to better enhance the capacity for our children to live, especially at young ages, and that's why we're making substantial investments as well in expanding the capacities of our education system to support younger and younger kids.

Mr. Howard Hampton: I think what we're getting is an admission that the Premier and two thirds of his cabinet are learning nothing in Quebec today, certainly nothing about child care, because all we hear are excuses. A government that promised new child care spaces, that promised affordable, licensed, quality not-for-profit child care spaces in 2003 and promised them again in 2007, has done nothing. Nothing. The only money that has gone into child care in Ontario has been money from the federal government.

So I ask again, on a day when the Premier and two thirds of his cabinet are in Quebec: When is the McGuinty government actually going to make quality not-for-profit public child care a priority in Ontario, as it obviously is in Quebec?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's nice to see that the honourable member today is a supporter of good child care, but where was he when his party was killing a federal government budget that was supporting child care in the country? Where were they on that day?

In our model, people who earn under $20,000 are eligible for free child care, and these are the pieces of progress that we've been able to make as we've created 22,000 additional spaces in Ontario. That stands in very sharp contrast to the action of that party, which had the opportunity to support the emergence of a strong national program but instead, for their own political interests, sought to kill off a government that was in favour of child care.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

Mr. Howard Hampton: To the Deputy Premier: At a time when there are 23,000 children in Ontario looking for child care space, the best the McGuinty government can do is find someone to blame.

Perhaps the McGuinty cabinet ministers on tour in Quebec will get a briefing on that province's payday lending situation. They won't find a payday loan outlet there because Quebec introduced a hard interest rate cap of 35%. That's what happens when a province takes serious action to prevent payday lenders from ripping off the lowest-income people in the province.

ACORN, the Toronto and York Region Labour Council, Justice Matters, Ontario Consumer Credit Assistance and financial experts all agree. Why won't the McGuinty government agree that this government's Bill 48 must include a hard interest rate cap of 35% so that we can protect low-income people?

Hon. George Smitherman: To the Minister of Government and Consumer Services.

Mr. Peter Kormos: Is he here?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: He's here.

I'm pleased to respond to the question and to begin by thanking the members of the third party. During debate in first reading, they indicated their intent to support this bill, and I really do appreciate that. It's the right thing to do. It's before committee today, as you know, and there could conceivably be a number of amendments put at the committee. I don't want to prejudge that, so we'll see where that goes later in the day.

1110

Mr. Howard Hampton: Yes, we'll support something on first reading to get it before the House. We'll even support something in principle so that we can have a debate. But what's happening now is that it looks as if the McGuinty government is prepared to accept annual interest rates of 60% or more. Do you know what that means? It means—

Mr. Peter Kormos: Your bill sucks.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for Welland will withdraw the comment he just made, please.

Mr. Peter Kormos: I withdraw.

Mr. Howard Hampton: It means that your bill is useless. It means that people would be further ahead to simply refer to the Criminal Code, and that's what Charles Foster of Justice Matters has said. He successfully defends low-income people from payday lender rip-off interest rates. He says that the McGuinty government bill as it stands now is so useless that people would be just as far ahead to use the old Criminal Code. Does that sound like a worthwhile piece of legislation to the McGuinty government, allowing 60% or more interest rates?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: Let me just recap for the honourable member what our bill is intended to do. I think it would be a healthy refresher. We've already taken some action, by the way, with respect to posting rates and requiring standardized contracts with all payday lending institutions. Our proposed Payday Loans Act would require lenders and brokers first and foremost to be licensed. That's very important. It will provide authority to set a total cost of borrowing. As the member knows, we're doing something similar to what happened in Manitoba, where they had an independent group look at the rates. We're following their lead there. It would prohibit back-to-back and concurrent loans. It would permit borrowers to cancel loan agreements without penalty within 48 hours—the two-day cooling-off period. And it would impose serious penalties on those who abridge those aspects of the law.

Mr. Howard Hampton: It's apparent the McGuinty government is trying to dress up this legislation any way it can. As it stands now, the lowest-income Ontarians, many of whom are forced to go to a payday lender so they can pay the rent or pay the hydro bill or put food on the table for their kids, are going to be charged interest rates of 60% a year, and the McGuinty government says that's fine. The McGuinty government says that's fair. What is fair about charging the lowest-income people in Ontario 60% annual interest rates when they have to borrow money just to make sure their kids have food to eat?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: As the honourable member opposite knows, it's a priority of this government to develop a comprehensive poverty reduction strategy, and this is one component of that—one of many components.

I just want to point out to the member opposite not only the demographics of those who borrow money—

Mr. Howard Hampton: A 60% interest rate is a poverty reduction measure?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: It was 620% in Manitoba. Maybe you could explain that to the House. That's just a bit of an aside.

We would have preferred, frankly, if the federal government had taken their responsibility seriously and come up with some legislation that would have applied equitably right across the country instead of any patchwork quilt. We're working with our provincial partners, including Manitoba, which recently set their rate—their independent panel—at 620%.

INFECTIOUS DISEASE CONTROL

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is for the Minister of Health. It's little wonder that the public has lost confidence in health care in the province of Ontario, as you continue to indicate that you are unaware of the C. difficile crisis or the numbers or what's happened. For example, October 22, 2004, in the Toronto Star: "Ontario's associate chief medical officer of health said there have been two recent clusters of C. difficile in the hospitals." On November 5, 2004, the Guelph Mercury quotes: "Dan Strasbourg, spokesperson for the ministry, said no hospitals in Ontario have reported numbers above the norm."

Minister, you can't continue to assign blame to the hospitals for responsibility. The responsibility is yours. I ask you today, as I asked you before, how many deaths from C. difficile have we seen in this province since 2004?

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member knows the answer, having asked the same question several times last week. But I do think it is the honourable member's persistent questioning on this point about actions taken and about responsibility which requires some further discussion.

Most certainly, the health care system—all of the pieces that must operate together to use the word "system"—bears responsibility when circumstances are not as good as they can be. That's shared. No one is pretending otherwise, but I think the honourable member is pretending that those people—CEOs and the staff who run hospitals—don't bear any responsibility for the conditions or circumstances in their hospitals. It's just not a responsible position; it doesn't bear up with the reality of the circumstance. We took steps—the infectious disease advisory committee and infection networks—putting people in the hospitals with those responsibilities from a very early start, and the honourable member knows that very well.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I think the minister knows more than he says. A report last Thursday in the Toronto Star says, "Smitherman warned people might be shocked about infection rates when data come out...." Minister, despite your denials, it's clear that you and your ministry are aware of the infection rates and the death toll from C. difficile. Will you call an inquiry so that we know what happened and why it happened, so that we can protect people in the future?

Hon. George Smitherman: It's an irresponsible suggestion on the member's part, and she does not have it accurately. The point is that as you move to a more transparent model of reporting on those things in the hospital environment which are related to patient safety, not just superbugs but also infection—just as we did a few months ago when the mortality rates came out. This is challenging information because it's never been made available before. We find power on behalf of the patients in putting that information in the public domain. That's why Ontario is moving forward with a rigorous model of reporting that hospitals and those who work in those environments have themselves concluded will be very challenging, but the transparency is powerful. Any time you bring to the fore information which has not been available before, everybody who gains access to that information is empowered by it, and that's what my comments related to.

WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Mr. Paul Miller: My question would have been for the labour minister or the Premier. I'll have to go to the Deputy Premier.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Just—

Mr. Paul Miller: I didn't say they weren't here.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'd just remind the members.

Mr. Paul Miller: I'm sorry. Minister, yesterday was the 25th anniversary of Injured Workers' Day, a very sad anniversary. On Injured Workers' Day last year, the then Minister of Labour told injured workers that he would introduce legislation to eliminate deeming. Deeming—or, more accurately, the phantom job—is the practice that allows WSIB to pretend that you are working and earning a pretend salary. The WSIB can then reduce your benefits because it pretended that you have a job.

It is one year since the minister made the promise to eliminate deeming, and the WSIB is still deeming, and reaming, injured workers. The workers of Ontario don't want any more delays. When will this government introduce legislation to honour its year-old promise to eliminate deeming?

Hon. George Smitherman: I think it's interesting that the honourable member from the party with the history of the Friedland formula would be offering up a word like "reaming." I do think that we've made some progress with and on behalf of injured workers in the province of Ontario. We've seen a reduction in workplace injuries by 24% to date, and recent budgetary action has certainly enhanced the capability of reaching out and lending support to injured workers and their families who are in very, very difficult circumstances with increases that have been above the rate of inflation. I acknowledge that there is more to know about the issue that the honourable member raises. I know that the Minister of Labour is working on it and looks forward to an early opportunity to discuss in person with the honourable member that very issue.

1120

Mr. Paul Miller: For many, many years, the NDP, injured workers' groups and the labour movement have called for an end to the perverse incentives employers receive under the WSIB experience rating program. This is a program that actually rewards companies to under-report workplace injuries. The McGuinty government has the authority to put a stop to the program immediately. Why won't this government eliminate the experience rating program immediately?

Hon. George Smitherman: I know that the honourable member has had an opportunity in the past to discuss that matter with the Minister of Labour. The experience rating program is under review, as the honourable member has had a chance to comment on in conversation with the Minister of Labour prior.

I do think it's important to acknowledge that since 2003 we have added 200 new workplace safety inspectors, making up some progress that had been lost under the prior government, and have had over 33,000 fewer lost-time injuries: 24% reductions overall in those workplace injuries. This is substantial progress on behalf of injured workers.

We acknowledge that we have more to do to make all of the environments as safe as possible, and look forward to the opportunity to make further progress on these matters.

FIREARMS CONTROL

Mr. Mike Colle: My question is to the Attorney General. Ontarians are well aware of the senseless deaths that too often result because of the unlawful use of guns. We are also aware of the devastating effects these crimes have on victims, their families, and communities at large. It is critical that all levels of government join together to reduce gun crime. I myself have introduced Bill 56, which, if passed, would impound vehicles and suspend driver's licences of people carrying guns.

I also know that the Attorney General is working very hard to try and bring all levels of government, especially the federal government, together in terms of trying to stop the source of guns in Ontario. I'd like to ask the Attorney General how he is engaging the federal government in trying to stop the smuggling of guns into Ontario and taking these dreaded things off of our streets and out of our communities.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: The member from Eglinton-Lawrence is right that many of the challenges we face as a society involve engaging other levels of government and require constant interaction and meeting. The gun challenge is one.

We've called on the federal government for a national ban on handguns. We called on the federal government to increase mandatory minimums and reverse-onus bail, and we're pleased the federal government did that.

We've done our part by putting more police on the streets to go after handguns.

The federal government has started down the road; there's more work to do. We've called on the federal government for tougher border security, and I made an announcement that I'll speak to in the supplementary in Niagara Falls just the other day. But the federal government is involved in border security; they're in charge of the borders. We need them to engage more completely in that issue. And we have worked very hard with municipalities, because the fact of the matter is that municipal police forces as well the OPP are leading the charge against gun crime involved in our guns-and-gangs and other initiatives.

Mr. Mike Colle: In my supplementary, I would like to restate to the Attorney General that many MPPs and many elected officials locally in the city of Toronto and the GTA are really fed up with the tragedies that occur almost every day in our communities, and in every case it seems that behind that tragedy is some person with a gun.

I know that he's imploring that the federal government join with this effort to stop this senseless violence that in many cases is ruining communities. Can he please indicate to us what we can all do to ensure that we join together in a real, meaningful partnership to put an end to this gun violence that is destroying families and destroying communities?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: The member from Eglinton-Lawrence has been leading the charge for many years on this. He has a private member's bill that we're all interested in reviewing and discussing at length.

One of the things he mentioned in his first question was the issue of border security. It's an enormously important issue. It's one of the four points that we have asked all levels of government to engage in to reduce gun violence. A huge proportion of the guns used in illegal activity are smuggled across the border.

The federal government is in charge of the border. What can they do? Number one, sign the protocols the government of Canada executed years ago to implement the protocols requiring extended marking of all guns manufactured or imported to assist the police in tracing guns used in illegal activity; secondly, make it clear that frames can't be imported in Canada; and third, put some federal prosecutors on our guns-and-gangs task force.

The deaths are there; the officers are there. Federal government, spare a few prosecutors and let's—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister. New question.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: To the Minister of Health: In government, just as in life, timing is everything. The coroner's report from the Soo hospital in regards to C. difficile and the outbreak they had there has been on your desk for over a year. One of the identified reasons for the scope of the outbreak and containment challenges was an aging hospital infrastructure. Joseph Brant hospital and the Soo hospital have been in need of funding to upgrade their facilities for quite some time.

Minister, can you tell the people of Ontario, the people of Burlington and the people of the Soo why you ignored the two hospitals that are at the epicentre of the C. difficile outbreak and excluded them from your funding announcement last Friday?

Hon. George Smitherman: If they were excluded from our funding announcement last Friday, it is because they don't have one of the 23 worst-performing emergency rooms in the province of Ontario. But on the matter of hospital capital, I think it's important to make three points to the honourable member.

First is that there was a representative from her political party for eight and a half years in government who didn't make any progress on the renewal of that hospital. Indeed, our government has built or initiated the redevelopment of more hospitals than the last five governments in the province of Ontario combined. This is very substantial progress indeed. Indeed, Sault Ste. Marie, one of those that honourable member mentions, has construction of a new hospital that consolidates two former hospitals that is well under way.

No one argues about the need to continue to make investments in hospital infrastructure in the province of Ontario. That's why we're so surprised to see a party proposing to cut health care by $3 billion.

Mrs. Joyce Savoline: I guess I can say that there's some good news with the bad news if Joseph Brant is not considered on the list as one of the 23 worst hospitals with emergency room wait times.

I'm aware that the funding announcement was to resolve some of these wait time issues in hospital emergency rooms, and I am well aware of the need to create priorities. But Minister, only seven of over 150 hospitals have chosen to report their C. difficile deaths, and there are many more of those hospitals that have not reported. They are already 250 deaths in those that have.

The safety of our seniors who are entering Ontario hospitals for elective surgery and never coming out again should be your priority right now. Even the press have acknowledged your partisan tactics. Minister, when are you going to stop playing politics with people's lives and finally give Joseph Brant the funds they need to meet the 2008 infectious—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Thank you, Minister.

Hon. George Smitherman: The press have acknowledged my partisan tactics, in part, in the context of trying to hold the leader of that party to the word that he offers privately. I make no apology for that as he makes these comments on principle but won't hold to them in a public environment.

The funding announcement from last Friday which the honourable member speaks to again was a $109-million investment, $30 million of that directed very specifically at 23 hospital emergency rooms. But the balance of the announcement was designed to affect the performance of all hospital emergency rooms by substantially enhancing the capacity of home care to support our seniors at home with a greater degree of hours, or to exit them from the hospital environment to their home—again, with a greater degree of support from home care. This is an announcement about the whole province of Ontario. It's tied in with our aging-at-home announcement, and is made possible because we're not a party proposing a $3-billion cut to health care.

HEALTH CARE WORKERS

Mr. Peter Tabuns: A question to the Minister of Health: 10 years ago, Riverdale Hospital, now called Bridgepoint, got rid of all registered practical nurses and brought in personal service providers. Last week, Bridgepoint management officially informed CUPE Local 79, the union representing both groups, of a plan to replace all personal service providers with RPNs by October 2009. Have you encouraged or approved of this plan?

Hon. George Smitherman: The honourable member calls—I think personal support workers is what he's referring to. This is not a plan that I have either encouraged or approved of. It's not necessary for the Minister of Health to make approval on a matter that is within the domain, if you will, of the independently governed Bridgepoint hospital. In the case of Bridgepoint, they've made this decision on the basis, I assume, that their budget allows them to bring into positions workers with a greater scope of practice, which ought to offer some enhancement to the people who are there.

1130

Our concern is for those PSWs who are dislocated. Through the offices of HealthForceOntario, we're going to work to do what we can—as we're also adding hundreds of new PSW positions in long-term care—to transition those individuals who have been put out of work due to the repositioning of positions in the Bridgepoint hospital family.

Mr. Peter Tabuns: More than 225 women and men, many from racialized groups, could lose their jobs. You are well aware that there's an acute shortage of registered nursing staff. There will be difficulty recruiting new staff. There will be pressures on Bridgepoint's budget. There's the potential, the risk, that there will be fewer people delivering the care that's required. With that combination of replacement difficulties and higher salary costs, we want to know from you, Minister, that you will be ensuring that there will be no reduction in front-line patient care. Will you make that commitment?

Hon. George Smitherman: The plan at present does not offer the prospects of cutting staff. I think the honourable member has offered that up when it doesn't bear up with the information that I have. It's a plan for a one-to-one replacement. There are issues associated with it which are of particular concern, of patients on the one hand who seem to be in a position to have an enhanced scope of practice on the part of a registered practical nurse, but we're also very concerned about the dislocation of those personal support workers.

As I mentioned to the honourable member, we'll be working through the auspices of HealthForceOntario to see if we can develop some mechanisms—which we have never had in the past, as best I know—to transition those experienced PSWs into opportunities which are emerging in other parts of the health care system. These are decisions that a local independent hospital corporation took. They do have ramifications in health care and for those individuals. We're going to do our very best in the circumstances to affect those employees who will see their circumstances transitioning out of that hospital environment. We're going to look for opportunities for them elsewhere.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: My question is for the Minister of Northern Development and Mines. I've recently heard and read a number of stories about the Mining Act and disputes that have arisen over mineral exploration activity. On the one hand, I know that mining is very important to our economy and quality of life. It sustains 100,000 direct and indirect jobs in the province and produces the raw materials that drive today's society. On the other hand, I'm very disheartened to read about these mining conflicts in the papers.

I know that in our throne speech, we said we would seek to forge a stronger, more positive relationship with Ontario's First Nations. Could the minister provide clarification around section 35 of the Mining Act and how it might relate to fostering a better relationship with our First Nations partners?

Hon. Michael Gravelle: Let me assure the hard-working member from Huron-Bruce that our government has been working over the past several years to continuously improve relationships and engagement processes with First Nation peoples, including a multi-pronged initiative over the past year in particular to develop a consultation framework for mineral sector activities.

In terms of section 35, I think it's unfortunate that the leader of the third party has been providing inaccurate information to the House regarding this part of the Mining Act. In fact, section 35 does allow the ministry to remove crown land from staking, but it cannot be used to cancel existing claims that are in place. So on crown lands that are not yet staked, this could be used to withdraw a culturally sensitive area, as identified by a First Nation.

In fact, just recently we withdrew 2,250 hectares of land from staking in Kirkland Lake at the request of a First Nation in that area. My ministry also has a standing offer to withdraw culturally sensitive sites for other First Nations across the province. We look forward to continuing to work with our First Nation partners.

Mrs. Carol Mitchell: I'm certainly encouraged by the government's efforts and that it's committed to working with First Nations to try to identify sites that should be withdrawn from staking. However, I do have to ask about recent Supreme Court rulings and what they mean for mining in Ontario. As I understand it, the Supreme Court ruled that the crown has the duty to consult where mineral sector activities may negatively impact on aboriginal or treaty rights. I know that the term "duty to consult" is not written in Ontario's Mining Act, so I ask the minister: Does this mean the Mining Act is preventing us from meeting our duty to consult with our First Nations?

Hon. Michael Gravelle: It's a very good question. Let me say first off that we are committed to meeting our duty to consult. It's something we take very seriously. We recognize it as a continuing obligation, and our efforts are absolutely ongoing. I must stress that we are meeting our duty to consult in the context of the current Mining Act; in other words, the Mining Act does not prevent us from meeting that duty.

Secondly, we very much welcome the Supreme Court rulings because they help clarify the crown's duty to consult on mineral activities or, indeed, any kind of development which may impact on aboriginal treaty rights. They also stress that all parties need to work together constructively to achieve meaningful consultation. That said, we are committed to reviewing Ontario's current Mining Act, and I am proud to say that the work is well under way. Input from our aboriginal and industry partners, as well as the public, will be a vital component to the review. We look forward to moving forward on that.

POLYGAMY

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: To the Minister of Government and Consumer Services: Under section 293 of the Criminal Code, it is clear that polygamy is illegal, and so is any kind of conjugal union with more than one person at the same time, whether or not it is legally registered. This is contrary to what the minister stated in question period last week. Would the minister like to correct the record, and will the minister finally begin to enforce the law and equality rights for women?

Hon. Ted McMeekin: It's a legal question that should go to the Attorney General.

Hon. Christopher Bentley: As the member probably knows, the Criminal Code is quite clear. The section has been there for some period of time, and it is being enforced and prosecutions will be conducted if the investigation by the police—and they do the investigation—reveals information on which there are reasonable and probable grounds to believe an offence has been committed. If we receive the charge, then the prosecution is conducted accordingly.

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: John Turley-Ewart, today, in the National Post says you are "giving licence to sharia by stealth." The minister knows full well that polygamy is illegal in this country. It is so in the Criminal Code of Canada. There are many documented cases within the last week, whether you're reading the National Post, the Toronto Star or listening to AM640.

Does the minister agree with Imam Hindy, who was quoted as saying, "If the laws of the country conflict with Islamic law, if one goes against the other, then I am going to follow Islamic law, simple as that," or will the minister put Canadian law first, and will he launch an investigation into these illegal polygamist marriages, which are happening right here in the city of Toronto?

Hon. Christopher Bentley: For all the commentary, the minister said no such thing. The minister has always taken the position, as we all do, that Canadian law in the Criminal Code is the one that is first and foremost and paramount. That's why we made certain decisions that we did during the last mandate. We are always one that will uphold the law of Canada as outlined in the Criminal Code. From our perspective, if allegations are investigated by the police and the police determine that there is evidence on which to found a charge, that charge will come to the Ministry of the Attorney General's department, to the crown attorneys, and those charges will be prosecuted in the normal course. The Canadian law is paramount—end of story.

HEALTH CARE

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: My question is to the Minister of Health. A number of community activists from northwest Toronto are here in the gallery today. They're here because there has been absolutely no consultation on the site selection for the new Humber River Regional Hospital. Everyone agrees that northwest Toronto needs a new hospital; that's not the issue. But there ought to be a full and transparent consultation process on where it should be built. Why did this minister allow the hospital corporation to shut the public completely out of this important process?

Hon. George Smitherman: Firstly, I do want to acknowledge for the honourable member that our government is prepared to invest in the construction of new hospitals, including in northwestern Toronto. They didn't build any hospitals when they were the government, except for a little one here and there, and we're making a real, serious contribution to the renewal of Ontario's hospital stock.

I think it's important to acknowledge as well that the hospital has been very engaged with communities through this very long process of discussion about the construction of a new hospital, and also that there aren't that many 30-acre sites that are available when we start to narrow down the options to make this multi-hundred-million-dollar investment in a new hospital.

I want to acknowledge, as well, our plans to invest substantial resources in the renewal of the existing York-Finch site of the Humber River Regional Hospital chain.

1140

Ms. Cheri DiNovo: Again, to the Minister of Health: In fact, he hasn't replied to 18 registered letters, 9,000 signatures—$25 million raised by this community and already lost.

MPP Sergio, who I see is actually in the chamber today, said he would resign if the facility at Jane and Finch lost its acute care capacity.

There needs to be Ombudsman oversight, and our Ombudsman, André Marin, has actually agreed with this. So I ask the minister again: Will you at least give Ombudsman oversight to this community and at least return their registered letters? Will you at least listen?

Hon. George Smitherman: I know the honourable member is not the health critic, but she sure seemed to be struggling to knit together the storyline there.

No, we're not advancing the governance of Ontario's hospitals to the Ombudsman. We believe in independent, community-based governance. That's been a long-standing tradition in the Ontario health care system.

On the matter at hand, the Humber River Regional Hospital has got lots of integration and engagement with its local communities, and the conversation with respect to the renewal of capital facilities for that hospital has been ongoing for a long enough time that it might be a decade now.

We're going to move forward with plans to renew the capital hospital infrastructure for the good people of northwestern Toronto, because they deserve it. Our government is prepared to commit hundreds of millions of dollars to do that. That includes a new site for the existing Church Street site of Humber River. It also means very substantial renewal and redevelopment of the existing York-Finch site of the Humber River Regional Hospital system. We're proud to be making these investments on behalf of Ontarians.

FAIR ACCESS TO PROFESSIONS

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: My question is for the Minister of Citizenship and Immigration. In my riding of Hamilton Mountain, there has been an increase in the amount of residents who are recent newcomers to the province. Ontario has always been a province of great diversity. In the city of Hamilton alone, over 23% of the population comes from a newcomer background, and over 70 different languages are spoken.

Today some of these individuals tell me that they are finding it difficult to be competitive in the workforce. Hamilton's newcomers, like newcomers across the province, require programs that will help them put their foreign credentials to work in Ontario.

Minister, will you please tell the House about some of the programs already in place in the province to help these newest Canadians?

Hon. Michael Chan: My thanks to the honourable member for raising this important question.

Hamilton Mountain, like many communities in the province, enjoys first-hand the many benefits of immigration. The McGuinty government understands that when newcomers succeed, all Ontarians succeed. Ontario is in the privileged situation to attract talented and skilled newcomers from all over the world, and breaking down barriers for these groups is one of our top priorities.

In 2007, the Legislature passed Bill 124, the Fair Access to Regulated Professions Act, and in 2008, this government further showed our commitment by investing $50 million in bridge training programs.

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: Minister, in talking to my constituents, I've learned that many newcomers, despite their high levels of education and good skills, are still not employed in their field of training.

I recently made a visit to the St. Joseph Immigrant Women's Centre, which furthered my understanding of the local programs in place to help newcomers with the challenges of a new society. What other assistance exists in Hamilton to ensure newcomer employability?

Hon. Michael Chan: My thanks to the honourable member. I'm pleased to hear that she's visiting with service providers in her riding.

Programs to facilitate employment among newcomers are available across the province. In Hamilton, newcomer settlement programs are working daily with skilled newcomers to level the playing field for all. For example, one partner agency, the Settlement and Integration Services Organization, is a community-based organization which exists to serve immigrant and refugee communities in Hamilton. SISO assists by providing assessments of language ability, settlement services and an engineering bridge training program.

Ontario is the destination of choice for newcomers in Canada. We want to keep it up.

PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: My question is for the Minister of Health. Today the Toronto Sun reports that your ministry is considering the expansion of prescribing powers for pharmacists, midwives, optometrists etc. I'm going to ask you a very simple question. Yes or no: Are you in fact commissioning a study to review this issue?

Hon. George Smitherman: No, the ministry has not directly commissioned such a study, but most certainly HPRAC, which gives the government advice on such matters, is broadly looking into the issues of prescribing—not just in relation to pharmacists, which I think was the context of the question the media asked me about, but also in terms of the class of drugs that nurse practitioners would have the opportunity to be able to prescribe.

Of course, at all times we're seeking to balance the risks and safety of the population with the opportunities to enhance access for Ontarians to important matters like prescribing. Is it appropriate to have people go to a hospital emergency room to get a prescription renewed, or do we think it might be more appropriate to allow a prescription renewal, as an example, to take place with a pharmacist? These are matters that are being discussed. Initiatives have taken place in provinces like Alberta and some other provinces, so I think it is worthy of consideration. No decisions or advice are offered yet on this matter.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer: I appreciate the answer, and I guess this is a very complex issue. It will require considerable study. You've indicated that HPRAC is undertaking this review. I'm just wondering whether or not the public, at some time, will have an opportunity to provide some input. Will there be any form of public hearings?

Hon. George Smitherman: I think it's a little bit premature to conclude what steps should be taken as we go further, but most certainly HPRAC's reports to the government are very public reports. So that's one thing we know for sure: that the public will have an opportunity for engagement on any such matter. We encourage people who are taking witness of this issue now to let us know of their views, or to let HPRAC know, this body that's considering the matter. Actually, I don't know, top of mind, whether that requires regulatory or legislative approval. Obviously, if it is in the legislative domain, if we were to initiate such a policy, there would be opportunities for engagement of the opposition and through committee processes etc.

So it's a little bit hypothetical at this point. It is a matter that there's some report work being done on. No decisions have been taken and no advice has been offered on these points yet, but everybody should be duly acknowledged that there is such consideration in the form of a report ongoing.

CORRECTIONAL SERVICES

Mr. Peter Tabuns: To the Minister of Correctional Services: In 1990, the Supreme Court of Canada declared that the imposition of a year or more of solitary confinement constituted cruel and unusual punishment. The Correctional Service of Canada says that enforced segregation for 60 days is individually destructive and psychologically crippling. Yet here in Ontario, three young men—Fahim Ahmad, Zakaria Amara and Mohammed Dirie—charged, but not tried or convicted, have been in solitary confinement since June 2006. What will your government do to end this shameful and inhumane treatment of these prisoners?

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: I think the member knows full well that this is a federal prosecution, and I would think that the member knows the procedure and the mechanics that are in place with regard to that.

Mr. Peter Tabuns: This government needs to end this case of cruel and unusual treatment. They're being held by the province. The United Nations has standard minimum rules for treatment of prisoners. Will you adhere to those standard minimum rules?

Hon. Rick Bartolucci: With regard to provincial institutions and those people who are incarcerated that fall under provincial law, there is a standard of care that we live up to at all times. Obviously, when there is a federal prosecution that is in place, there are rules and procedures with regard to that that fall under federal jurisdiction.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for question period has ended. It's now time for petitions.

1150

Mr. Phil McNeely: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: The member for Carleton–Mississippi Mills said that the Ottawa spill was reported to the MOE in 2006, but he lied to this House. It was in 2007, 10 months later. I'd like to clarify—

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): First, it's not a point of order. A member can only correct his or her own record and, secondly, I'd ask you to withdraw the comment that you just made.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I will not withdraw.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'll ask you a second time to withdraw the comment.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I will not withdraw.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): A third time to withdraw the comment.

Mr. Phil McNeely: I will not withdraw.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I name Phil McNeely, the member from Ottawa–Orléans, and ask the Sergeant-at-Arms to escort him from the House.

Mr. McNeely was escorted from the chamber.

PETITIONS

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Norm Miller: I have a petition to do with the Lord's Prayer which reads:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas Premier Dalton McGuinty has called on the Ontario Legislature to consider removing the Lord's Prayer from its daily proceedings; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I support this petition.

URANIUM MINING

Mr. Peter Tabuns: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas exploration for uranium is taking place in Ontario, including on the traditional territory of Algonquin First Nations; and

"Whereas there is also a risk of seepage of uranium and its toxic by-products into the source of drinking water for hundreds of thousands of people in the Ottawa Valley; and

"Whereas uranium mining will produce toxic radioactive waste, mainly in the form of a fine powder, which can be carried on the wind eastward towards Ottawa; and

"Whereas Canada exports over 80% of its current domestic production; and

"Whereas short-term profits for a few investors should not be sufficient justification for exploring for, mining and processing uranium near population centres, given the risks to hundreds of thousands of people; and

"Whereas citizens of Ontario oppose the exploration, mining and processing of uranium;

"The Legislative Assembly of Ontario is requested to call an immediate moratorium on uranium exploration and new uranium mines in eastern Ontario until there is a full, well-informed and serious public debate and consensus regarding the impacts of the uranium cycle and Ontario energy policy, including the role of nuclear energy as part of this overall strategy;

"We, the undersigned residents of Ontario, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario for a total moratorium on uranium exploration and mining in eastern Ontario until there is a full, well-informed and serious public debate and consensus regarding the impacts of the uranium cycle and Ontario's energy policy, including the role of nuclear energy as part of this overall energy policy."

I agree with this petition and affix my signature.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Bill Mauro: I have a petition here addressed to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario that reads as follows:

"Whereas an all-party committee is reviewing the recital of the Lord's Prayer at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the Lord's Prayer in the Legislature."

LORD'S PRAYER

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: I have a petition here that was brought to my office by Diane Monk. She collected quite a number of signatures from my riding and, I believe, from the riding just south of me, one that may be well acquainted with you. It is to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message of forgiveness and the avoidance of evil is universal to the human condition. It is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena of conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

Thank you very much for the opportunity to present this petition.

GRAFFITI

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: A petition to the Legislature of Ontario:

"Whereas graffiti creates a nuisance that can adversely affect property values, business opportunities and the enjoyment of community life;

"Whereas graffiti promotes a sense of disrespect for private property, and a perception that laws protecting public and private property can be disregarded with impunity;

"Whereas it is important that everyone do their part in keeping both public and private properties free of graffiti in order to maintain community pride and confidence;

"Whereas the quick removal of graffiti from walls, fences and other structures is critical to maintaining community cleanliness and beauty; it is always true that prevention is the best policy;

"Accordingly we, the undersigned, petition the Legislature:

"To impose certain conditions on the sale of spray paint, broad-tipped marker pens, paint pens, glass-cutting tools and glass-etching tools or instruments of graffiti and to make it be unlawful for any person, other than a parent, legal guardian, school teacher or law enforcement officer in the performance of duty, to sell, exchange, give, deliver, loan, or otherwise furnish or permit to be sold, exchanged, given, delivered or loaned any prohibited graffiti material to any minor unless the minor is accompanied by their parent or legal guardian."

I agree with this petition and I will be adding my name to it.

LORD'S PRAYER

Mrs. Julia Munro: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the current Liberal government is proposing to eliminate the Lord's Prayer from its place at the beginning of daily proceedings in the Ontario Legislature; and

"Whereas the recitation of the Lord's Prayer has opened the Legislature every day since the 19th century; and

"Whereas the Lord's Prayer's message is one of forgiveness, of providing for those in need of their 'daily bread' and of preserving us from the evils that we may fall into; it is a valuable guide and lesson for a chamber that is too often an arena for conflict; and

"Whereas recognizing the diversity of the people of Ontario should be an inclusive process, not one which excludes traditions such as the Lord's Prayer;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, ask the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to preserve the daily recitation of the Lord's Prayer by the Speaker in the Legislature."

I have affixed my signature to this, as I am in agreement, and given it to Radhika.

COMMUNITY SAFETY

Mr. Yasir Naqvi: "To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas crack houses, brothels and other persistent problem properties undermine a neighbourhood by generating public disorder, fear and insecurity; and

"Whereas current solutions—enforcement measures based on current criminal, civil and bylaws—are slow, expensive, cumbersome and not always successful; and

"Whereas safer communities and neighbourhoods (SCAN) legislation is provincial, civil law which counters the negative impact on neighbourhoods of entrenched drug, prostitution or illegal liquor sales based out of homes and businesses and is being successfully utilized in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Nova Scotia and the Yukon; and

"Whereas the following have endorsed SCAN legislation: city of Ottawa, city of Kingston, city of Hamilton, federation of Ontario municipalities, Ottawa Police Service, Ottawa Police Services Board, Ottawa Centre MPP Yasir Naqvi, Ottawa Neighbourhood Watch executive committee, Concerned Citizens for Safer Neighbourhoods, Eastern Ontario Landlord Organization, Friends and Tenants of Ottawa Community Housing, Hintonburg Community Association, Somerset Street Chinatown BIA and the Dalhousie Community Association;

"Be it resolved that we, the undersigned, urge the province of Ontario to enact safer communities and neighbourhood (SCAN) legislation in Ontario for the benefit of our neighbourhoods and communities."

I agree with this petition, affix my signature and send it by way of page Gregory.

ONTARIO SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS

Mr. Charles Sousa: This is a petition to support Bill 50, the Provincial Animal Welfare Act. It reads:

"To the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

"Whereas the OSPCAA has not been updated since 1919;

"Whereas Bill 50 would require all veterinarians to report suspected abuse and neglect, protecting veterinarians from liability;

"Whereas it would allow the OSPCA to inspect and investigate places where animals are kept;

"Whereas the bill would prohibit the training of animals to fight;

"Whereas Bill 50 would allow the OSPCA to inspect roadside zoos;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to pass Bill 50, entitled the Provincial Animal Welfare Act, 2008, to protect our animal friends."

I affix my signature to the petition and hand it over to Dina.

1200

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Bob Delaney: I have a petition to the Ontario Legislative Assembly. I'd like to thank the patients of Dr. Tom Short for having sent it. It reads as follows:

"Whereas wait times for access to surgical procedures in the western GTA area served by the Mississauga Halton LHIN are growing despite the vigorous capital project activity at the hospitals within the Mississauga Halton LHIN boundaries; and

"Whereas 'day surgery' procedures could be performed in an off-site facility, thus greatly increasing the ability of surgeons to perform more procedures, alleviating wait times for patients, and freeing up operating theatre space in hospitals for more complex procedures that may require post-operative intensive care unit support and a longer length of stay in hospital;

"We, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care allocate funds in its 2008-09 capital budget to begin planning and construction of an ambulatory surgery centre located in western Mississauga to serve the Mississauga-Halton area and enable greater access to 'day surgery' procedures that comprise about four fifths of all surgical procedures performed."

I'm pleased to sign and support this petition and to ask page Christopher to carry it for me.

Mr. Michael Prue: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Is quorum present?

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is there a quorum present?

The Deputy Clerk (Mr. Todd Decker): Quorum is not present, Speaker.

The Speaker ordered the bells rung.

The Deputy Clerk (Mr. Todd Decker): Quorum is now present, Speaker.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Petitions.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network (CE-LHIN) board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas, despite the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government, this plan now calls for the ill-advised transfer of 20 mental health unit beds from Ajax-Pickering hospital to the Centenary health centre in Scarborough; and

"Whereas one of the factors for the successful treatment of patients in the mental health unit is support from family and friends, and the distance to Centenary health centre would negatively impact on the quality care for residents of Ajax and Pickering; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding;

"We, the undersigned, therefore petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service to our Ajax-Pickering hospital, which now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain the badly needed 20-bed mental health unit."

I affix my signature and will pass it to page Jocelyn.

HOSPITAL FUNDING

Mr. Joe Dickson: I have a petition to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario.

"Whereas the Central East Local Health Integration Network ... board of directors has approved the Rouge Valley Health System's deficit elimination plan, subject to public meetings; and

"Whereas it is important to ensure that the new birthing unit at Centenary hospital, a $20-million expansion that will see 16 new labour, delivery, recovery and post-partum (LDRP) birthing rooms and an additional 21 post-partum rooms added by October 2008, will not cause any decline in the pediatric services currently provided at the Ajax-Pickering hospital; and

"Whereas, with the significant expansion of the Ajax-Pickering hospital, the largest in its 53-year history, a project that could reach $100 million, of which 90% is funded by the Ontario government ... ; and

"Whereas it is also imperative for the Rouge Valley Health System to balance its budget, eliminate its deficit and debt and realize the benefits of additional Ontario government funding; and

"Whereas the parents of Ajax and Pickering deserve the right to have their children born in their own community, where they have chosen to live and work;

"Therefore we, the undersigned, petition the Legislative Assembly of Ontario as follows:

"That the Rouge Valley Health System continue to provide the current level of service; and

"That our Ajax-Pickering hospital now serves the fastest-growing communities of west Durham; and

"That the Ajax-Pickering hospital retain its full maternity unit."

I shall affix my signature to that and pass this to Gregory.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The time for petitions is about to expire. This House stands recessed until 1 o'clock this afternoon.

The House recessed from 1205 to 1300.

VISITOR

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I'll take this opportunity to welcome a former colleague of ours, Mario Racco, from Thornhill, a member of the 35th Parliament. Welcome, Mario.

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS

ATTENDANCE OF CABINET MEMBERS

Mr. Garfield Dunlop: At a time when police and law-and-order folks are crying for resources, when our tourism industry is suffering like we haven't seen it suffer in probably the last 15 years, when we have seen record manufacturing job losses, when farms are shutting down every day across rural Ontario, suddenly, when we have an opportunity to actually do some good in this House and ask some appropriate questions, all of a sudden we find that the McGuinty Liberals have decided to have a cabinet meeting in Quebec.

It's nice to go down there, wine and dine and have a fancy photo op. It's nice when they can go down and give a plaque presentation. The reality is that this costs taxpayers a lot of money at a time when I think they're showing contempt for this Legislature. The reality is that they could have done this during constituency week. They could have done it last Friday. They could have done it on the weekend. They could have waited until the summer months. But what do they do? They hold it when the House is sitting and we, as members of the opposition, require answers to questions—and we don't even get that here.

Do you really care whether you're here or not? That's what you should ask yourselves. Tomorrow when you go to caucus, make sure you tell your Premier that he's made a huge mistake, because there's nothing but contempt for this place in the fact that this government would have a cabinet meeting in Quebec at a time when the House is actually sitting.

POLYGAMY

Ms. Lisa MacLeod: I must say, the Liberals have officially dug their heads in the sand. I've never been more disappointed in a group than I have been in this Liberal government. By refusing to uphold the rule of law and gender equality rights, by allowing and endorsing illegal polygamous marriages, they are, as John Turley-Ewart says, "giving licence to sharia by stealth."

Real people are suffering because this Liberal government is ignoring reality. Safa Rigby, a 35-year-old mum of five, learned just the other day that her husband had another wife. He was multiply married by Imam Aly Hindy, who justifies polygamy this way: "If the laws of the country conflict with Islamic law, if one goes against the other, then I am going to follow Islamic law, simple as that." That's why others like Alia Hogben of the Canadian Council of Muslim Women ask, "Why are they so wishy-washy? Why aren't the officials doing something" about it?

I intend to do something about it, even though the Liberals are passing around illegal polygamous marriages like a hot potato around the cabinet table. I am therefore calling on the McGuinty Liberal government to uphold the rule of law by investigating and enforcing the law on these illegal polygamous marriages.

Surely the Liberals will consider the impacts on children, on gender equality rights under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. And, of course, they will consider the Criminal Code of Canada—or are they secretly putting forward another agenda to bring forward sharia law in Ontario?

These questions need to be asked, they need to be answered by the members opposite, and I demand that they do so.

CLARKSON VILLAGE

Mr. Charles Sousa: I rise today to talk about a historic milestone in my riding of Mississauga South. This year marks the 200th anniversary of Clarkson village.

Clarkson was named after Warren Clarkson, who arrived in 1808 from New Brunswick with others such as Thomas Merigold and Lewis Bradley. He and his family operated the local general store and post office for many years. Their homestead, built in 1819, still stands, and today it is known to the people of Mississauga as the Bradley Museum.

In honour of the family, the road leading up to the estate became known as Clarkson Road and the surrounding area was renamed Clarkson Corners.

Clarkson village is the oldest of our waterfront communities, and the residents are proud of this heritage and of this important historical landmark.

On June 21, Clarkson will be hosting a celebration to mark its 200th anniversary, which will include many attractions such as horse-and-buggy rides, children's entertainment, live music and much more. I encourage all members of the House to join me and the residents of Clarkson on June 21 to celebrate this once-in-a-lifetime occasion.

I offer my congratulations to the people of Clarkson and many thanks to the Clarkson 1808 Celebration Committee and the volunteers and sponsors who have given so generously of their own time and money. Their efforts are what make this year's festivities possible.

STREETSVILLE

Mr. Bob Delaney: The year 2008 marks the 150th anniversary of Streetsville. This year, Streetsville will celebrate our present and past: recent history and events and traditions that span the centuries back to Queen Victoria's reign, when Streetsville was founded and named after local resident Timothy Street.

Streetsville's service clubs, community groups and organizations have established the Streetsville 150th Celebration Committee. Some of the committee members are guests with us here today: Bernice Cunningham, Carol Cairns and Scott Brubacher. I call members' attention to them in the members' east gallery. I certainly welcome them to Queen's Park.

Throughout 2008, Streetsville will celebrate with events, festivals, theatre and, of course, hot dogs, hamburgers and fireworks. On September 13, in the heart of Streetsville, people who were not here or perhaps not alive to see the celebrations that Canadians held coast to coast during our centennial year will feel some of that ambiance as Streetsville holds a day-long anniversary party. Other events include Streetsville's annual Bread and Honey Festival this coming weekend, Canada Day celebrations, Driftwood Theatre and Shakespeare Under the Stars.

The village of Streetsville is exactly the type of village that people will remember. Let's party hearty and start another 150 years of history, progress and memories.

JOHN MCLAUGHLIN

Mr. Michael Prue: I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. John McLaughlin. Mr. John McLaughlin is a resident of Beaches-East York, and he is a former provincial employee. Having worked for more than 25 years, he's a member of the Quarter Century Club.

I'm here today to pay tribute to him because he was a winner recently, on May 21, 2008, of the community service award for former provincial employees. He was presented that award by Lieutenant Governor David Onley.

He has been absolutely instrumental to so many things in Beaches—East York, particularly in the East York area. He was one of the fixtures of the mayor's Christmas dinner, which is held every year on Christmas Day for people who otherwise would not have a place to spend Christmas with family. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club. At Toronto East General Hospital, he's on the volunteer services. On the Toronto East General Hospital Foundation, he does a lot of work around the Beaches Jazz Festival and the Taste of the Danforth. Mr. McLaughlin is a member and a past president of True Davidson Meals on Wheels, delivering meals for the last several years, and he even worked his way up through that rank as well.

To show you how strong a person he is, he had to have knee surgery a few years ago, and within one week he was back there in the hospital—not in the bed, but on two canes—talking to the patients as they arrived, in one of his jobs as a greeter.

I can only say: Congratulations, John; job well done.

REPUBLIC OF ITALY

Mrs. Laura Albanese: June 2 marks the 62nd anniversary of the birth of the republic of Italy. This is one of the most important Italian public holidays, which, like July 1 in Canada and July 4 in the United States, celebrates the birth of the nation.

The national holiday of the republic of Italy—la Festa della Repubblica italiana—commemorates the national referendum of 1946, when Italians voted against the monarchy and in favour of a republic. It is important to note that this was also the first time that Italian women were allowed to vote.

Today also marks the 60th anniversary of the adoption of the Italian Constitution, which came into force on June 2, 1948, while the country was still emerging from the rubble and the devastation of the Second World War.

The national holiday of the republic of Italy is celebrated by many Italians living in different countries all over the world. Italian embassies and consulates worldwide hold celebrations in which heads of state of the host country are invited to participate. Here at Queen's Park, a celebration is hosted every year by MPPs of Italian origin, and it is going on as we speak. Celebrations held on this day offer Italian Canadians the opportunity to celebrate their heritage and offer other Ontarians the chance to learn more about the Italian culture and the contributions of Italians over the centuries. Congratulations to all of those celebrating Italian Republic Day.

1310

ONTARIO FARMERS

Mr. Ernie Hardeman: New and young and expanding cattle, hog and horticulture farmers need help. That shouldn't be a surprise to the members of the Legislature, because our party has told them over and over that under the government's cattle, hog and horticulture program, these farmers didn't get the support they deserved. We told them about retired farmers getting cheques for $80,000. We told them about farmers who got cheques for livestock they didn't have. Yet the government has done nothing to solve the problem.

I want to commend the farmers in my area who are also working to raise awareness of the situation, farmers like Tina Veyhof, a pork farmer who has spoken out about her struggle to hold on to her farm and feed her four children because she didn't receive support under this program, and farmers like Rene Boerkamp, who recently wrote to the Ontario Farmer about his situation and asked others to share their stories. He said, "An injustice has been done regarding the Ontario cattle, hog and horticulture payment program, in which the beginning and/or expanding producer has been left in the cold and as a result has to deal with not only bad market conditions, but also with colleagues who are a few steps ahead through a government payment they did receive, therefore creating an unlevel playing field between farmers."

If the government won't listen to us, maybe they will listen to these farmers. They are the ones who need help. They are the reason the government needs to fix this program before anyone else is forced out of farming.

PSYCHIATRIC PATIENT ADVOCATE OFFICE

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for Etobicoke North.

Mr. Shafiq Qadri: Grazie, Signor Presidente.

Last week, the Psychiatric Patient Advocate Office, an arm's-length advocacy and rights protection program of the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care, celebrated its 25th anniversary.

In 2001, the PPAO's mandate was expanded to provide rights advice to patients in general hospitals with a mental health unit and to patients living in the community who are being considered for community treatment orders, and their substitute decision-maker, if any. This means that the PPAO is now a service provider in almost every community in Ontario. Last year, this resulted in more than 22,000 patient visits, with service being provided in 45 languages.

I am proud to be part of a government that has invested $270 million in new funding for community mental health, a 66% increase in support. This means that 208,000 new clients are being served in the community, including assertive community treatment teams, crisis management programs, residential safe beds, supportive housing, and early intervention programs for adolescents and young adults.

On behalf of the people of Ontario, I invite you to join me in congratulating the PPAO on its quarter-century of service to the people of Ontario.

INJURED WORKERS' DAY

Mr. Khalil Ramal: Yesterday, June 1, was Injured Workers' Day. It's a day on which we remember those workers who have been injured, have become ill or have died on the job.

This year was the 25th anniversary of Injured Workers' Day, and its importance and symbolism have not wavered at all throughout the years. It is never easy to hear of a worker being injured on the job. This government knows that when a worker is injured, there are repercussions not only at work but also in terms of how it affects his or her family and quality of life.

The health and safety of Ontario workers is one of our government's top priorities. The Ministry of Labour continually participates in awareness campaigns with its health and safety partners to increase the collective knowledge of hazards in the workplace.

We have taken action to put more money into the hands of injured workers through benefit increases and announced reforms to the Workplace Safety and Insurance Act. This government has also paid special attention to our new and young workers to ensure that they have information about safety and employment standards as they are entering the workforce. This government knows that we all need to work hard to prevent these injuries from happening, but also to recognize the help that's needed when injuries do occur.

REPORT, CHIEF ELECTORAL OFFICER

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): I beg to inform the House that on May 29, 2008, the Chief Electoral Officer tabled his report on the 2007 referendum returns and his report on selection of the Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND SAFETY AMENDMENT ACT (WORKPLACE DEATH, CRITICAL INJURY AND OCCUPATIONAL ILLNESS REGISTRY), 2008

LOI DE 2008 MODIFIANT LA LOI SUR LA SANTÉ ET LA SÉCURITÉ AU TRAVAIL (REGISTRE DES DÉCÈS, DES BLESSURES GRAVES ET DES MALADIES PROFESSIONNELLES SURVENUS DANS LE LIEU DE TRAVAIL)

Ms. Horwath moved first reading of the following bill:
Bill 84, An Act to amend the Occupational Health and Safety Act to create a registry of workplace deaths, critical injuries and occupational illnesses / Projet de loi 84, Loi modifiant la Loi sur la santé et la sécurité au travail afin de créer un registre des décès, des blessures graves et des maladies professionnelles survenus dans le lieu de travail.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? Carried.

First reading agreed to.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): The member for a short statement.

Ms. Andrea Horwath: The bill amends the Occupational Health And Safety Act to create a registry of workplace deaths, critical injuries and occupational illnesses, information that is currently provided to the Minister of Labour. The online registry would make it available to everyone.

ORDERS OF THE DAY

COSMETIC PESTICIDES BAN ACT, 2008

LOI DE 2008 SUR L'INTERDICTION DES PESTICIDES UTILISÉS À DES FINS ESTHÉTIQUES

Resuming the debate adjourned on May 26, 2008, on the motion for second reading of Bill 64, An Act to amend the Pesticides Act to prohibit the use and sale of pesticides that may be used for cosmetic purposes.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Mr. Norm Miller: I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak for a few minutes to Bill 64 this afternoon. I sure wasn't planning on speaking to it this afternoon, but I know our member from Niagara West-Glanbrook will be here shortly to speak to the bill. I would like to get a few points on the record, as this may be the last opportunity there is to speak to Bill 64 in its second reading. It is, of course, the Cosmetics Pesticides Ban Act, 2008.

I think most people in the general public support reducing unnecessary use of pesticides, which, as we know, means insecticides, herbicides, fungicides. My impression of this bill is that the bill itself is cosmetic, as so many different bills that the government is putting through this Legislature are. It is my feeling that this bill is really more superficial. It's about optics. It's about looking like you're doing the right thing to do what is perceived to be reduction of use of harmful and toxic substances, but I would argue that it's not necessarily based on fact.

One point I would like to make is that this bill would address a very tiny amount of the actual pesticides used in society; some 4% or 5% are used on people's lawns. We've heard the argument from the government that it's okay for golf courses, which use of course far more pesticides than people do on their lawns, because the golf courses have training. I would say that if that logic is to be followed, it should be fine that businesses—in our area, we have the Weed Man; I would argue the people who work for the Weed Man and do the application of pesticides through that business are probably as well-trained or better than farmers who will use pesticides in the growing of crops. Using the government's own logic, I would think they may consider an exemption for some of those businesses that certainly have expertise in the proper application of pesticides.

1320

They say also that this bill is based more on political science. When you look at information coming out recently from Health Canada on a popular herbicide—I think it's an herbicide—2,4-D, which just came May 16, 2008, Health Canada finds that 2,4-D can be used safely. It is the federal government that has traditionally regulated pesticides. So here we see this coming out May 16, stating:

"Jim Gray, executive director of the industry task force ... on 2,4-D research data, said, 'After reviewing an unprecedented depth of scientific data and expert panel reviews regarding the impact 2,4-D may have on children, adults, animals and the environment, Health Canada determined the herbicide meets all of Canada's pesticide health and safety regulations, which are among the toughest and most stringent in the world.

"These most recent findings by the PMRA are consistent with previous decisions made by authorities including the World Health Organization, European Commission, US Environmental Protection Agency, and recent studies by the US National Cancer Institute that deem 2,4-D to be a valuable and useful herbicide that does not pose human health or environmental risks when used according to label instructions,' Gray added.

"This conclusion supports the 2005 and 2007 draft assessments issued by PMRA, which found that 2,4-D can be used safely on lawn, turf, agricultural, forestry and industrial sites when label directions are followed."

It seems to me that this is a pesticide that the federal government, through extensive scientific testing, has found to be safe to use. Yet, with this Bill 64, I believe it is one of the substances that would no longer be available to be used in Ontario, even by trained professionals. Other than in the arena of public opinion, where people just assume that all pesticides are bad and will hurt the environment and risk public safety, it seems to me that actual science is not what is determining the construction of this bill; it is more political science, because it is a popular thing to do. That is true of so many of the different pieces of legislation this government has brought forward.

Recently I met with the local East Nipissing-Parry Sound chapter of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, as I do from time to time. I met with them in Magneta-wan—I always enjoy getting together with the Ontario Federation of Agriculture—and they let me know some of their concerns with what they've been hearing about what's going on. One of the bills they expressed concern about was this Bill 64, the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act. I did point out to them that agriculture is excluded from coverage in this bill, and they were happy about that. I know they are trained and that they have different systems in use on the farm to regulate how they use pesticides. But they still had concerns, and they still wanted to make their feelings known, when given an opportunity when the bill might move to the committee stage. I assured them I felt quite confident that the government would want to get input from other interested stakeholders, so I said I felt quite confident that the bill would be going to summer committee hearings and that it would likely travel around the province so that those in rural areas would get an opportunity to comment to the bill.

I've just recently learned that that is in fact incorrect, so I'd like to make sure the members of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture realize that they won't get an opportunity, at least not close to where they live, to give input in this bill, and to just forewarn them that by the looks of things, the government is going to rush this bill through and try to pass it before the end of this session of the legislature. So those interested stakeholders should immediately give comments to whatever committee the bill gets referred to. You'll get a very short window of time to be able to make comment to the bill. I just wanted to make sure the Ontario Federation of Agriculture was aware that there likely would not be summer hearings on this bill.

I suspect that the reason the government is trying to rush the bill through now is that there are actually people on the other side who want to see tougher legislation than this bill is putting forward: probably some municipalities that already have tougher pesticide bans in place that will be weakened by this provincial bill because it's going to take precedence over the municipal bills that are already in place. I think the government wants to rush this through and get it over with as quickly as possible.

As I say, it's all about optics. They can say they've brought in this ban and they're protecting the province, whether it is based on science or not, not wanting to take the time to get input from farmers and perhaps those in industry who are in the business or some of the scientists who have done studies. They just want to get the bill passed quickly. To those who may want to give comment, you're going to have a very short window to do that at committee. Make sure you check with the clerk of the committee to find out when you have that opportunity and make your voices known.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak to Bill 64, the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act, this afternoon. I would like to share my time with the member—

Interjection.

Mr. Norm Miller: It's a rotation, so our member will have a chance to speak.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments? Further debate?

Mr. Tim Hudak: I am pleased to rise to offer some comments on Bill 64, the Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act. I have some comments on behalf of my constituents from Niagara West—Glanbrook, and I have some personal comments on the legislation as well.

First I want to commend Toby Barrett, the MPP for Haldimand-Norfolk and critic for the Ministry of the Environment. I think he has done an outstanding job on this legislation. He has researched it thoroughly and has spoken quite eloquently to this bill.

I hope the minister will be open to the amendments that I anticipate Mr. Barrett will be bringing forward on behalf of the PC caucus. I'll speak to a few of those things that I hope the minister will take into serious consideration as he reviews the Hansard debate at second reading as well as any amendments to the act that are brought forward.

I do have to make sure I give some initial comments about how the bill was announced. You may remember that a big press conference was held on Earth Day with Premier McGuinty, and Minister Gerretsen in tow, and probably a bevy—is "bevy" the appropriate word?—a horde, of staff from the Ministry of the Environment and the Premier's office in attendance. The Premier was asked a question by the media: Would this legislation overrule any kind of municipal frameworks, or could municipalities have more strict rules on top of Bill 64, if passed and implemented? Members will recall that the Premier said that indeed municipalities could have stricter rules on top of Bill 64, that it would be the floor, and municipalities could put their own set of rules on top.

Of course, this was not in keeping with the facts; it's quite the opposite of what the bill states. The bill says it's a province-wide scheme, that municipalities could not have rules that are of a higher standard than the province. The Minister of the Environment, Mr. Gerretsen, was standing beside the Premier at that point in time. You would expect that he would have corrected the record. The Premier misspoke because he wasn't properly briefed, he didn't want to give the proper answer, or for whatever reason. But Minister Gerretsen did not correct the record, and I think Robert Benzie of the Toronto Star has made some suggestions about a chill that has come down from the Premier's office and those working in the Premier's office and the ability of ministers to express themselves and to respond to questions if not in line with the Premier's wording.

So Minister Gerretsen stood there without indicating that the Premier had misspoken. I think if the minister had corrected the Premier at that point in time, it would have killed the story. It would have got the facts out to the general public through the media. He may have had his wrist slapped for contradicting the Premier, but in the interest of being honest about what's in the bill, I would have hoped that the Minister of the Environment would have corrected the Premier. Instead, he stood there mute on the stage and did not correct the Premier.

1330

There was another opportunity for the minister himself or his staff to correct the record among the media after the press conference. That, too, was an opportunity that was not taken up by the staff at the Ministry of the Environment or in the Premier's office, and it allowed the story to go out for approximately a week to the media and to stakeholders that the bill would allow municipalities to have higher standards than those in Bill 64's regulations. That was not true; that was a false impression that had been put out there. Strangely, sadly, nobody in the Premier's office or the ministry made an attempt to correct that.

Later on, some members of the media discovered that this was not the case, and they pestered the minister about it. I would've expected that the Minister of the Environment would've apologized here in the Legislature for allowing a false statement to be spread through the media in that sense. Unfortunately, he failed to do so. As a result, what should have been a good-news announcement for the government was spoiled by the Premier's lack of understanding of his own bill, the minister's inability to correct the Premier, and a lack of any activity by staff to make sure the media had the facts with respect to the bill.

As I said, I think that shows two things. First, ministers are very wary of crossing the Premier. Political staff and ministers' offices are obviously very wary of running on the wrong side when it comes to Premier's office staff. Third, I think it illustrates a bit of duplicity. Are the McGuinty government's environmental initiatives all they're built up to be?

Hon. Donna H. Cansfield: I don't think that's a nice word.

Mr. Tim Hudak: To my friend the Minister of Natural Resources: I think it's accurate when it comes to a number of your bills. I know that if you were the Minister of the Environment at the time, you would've corrected the Premier. You would've been confident in your standing and confident in your knowledge of the bills, and you would've made sure that this issue was killed immediately, as opposed to having it spread out there for a week or so. But I'll get into some other aspects of the bill.

I wrote to the minister on May 2, Madam Speaker—Madam Speaker, of course, hailing from the Hamilton area, and well aware of the gypsy moth concerns we have in Hamilton, the rural areas which I represent around the Glanbrook area, upper Stoney Creek, and spreading eastward into West Lincoln, Pelham and Grimsby. In fact, the gypsy moth infestation is now being found along the Niagara River at the easternmost boundary of Niagara, Fort Erie, Niagara Falls and Niagara-on-the-Lake. A spraying program is happening, but it's been funded exclusively by landowners and some municipalities.

I've called upon the Minister of Natural Resources, actually—and I hope she is still considering this—to resurrect the old provincial cost-shared program that split costs between the Ministry of Natural Resources, municipalities and individual landowners to eradicate gypsy moths. The problem is that we are at infestation levels we have not seen in many, many years. I thought it was an appropriate measure. I hope the minister is taking that into full consideration and will help out. Otherwise, I fear what kind of damage will be caused to the ecosystem in Hamilton, Glanbrook, Niagara and even to areas like Brantford.

The reason I bring this up, Madam Speaker—you're probably wondering—about gypsy moths and the Pesticides Act is that the minister has given himself some exemptions in the act. In fact, a large room for exemptions has been one of the criticisms we've heard here in the Legislature, the number of exemptions and the vagueness about what those exemptions are going to be. One area that I have called on the minister to clarify is if spraying for insects that are causing significant damage, like gypsy moths, will be allowed under the act or not. When we contacted the Ministry of the Environment, they said that it had not yet been determined if that would be the case or not.

So I wrote to the minister on May 2, and I hope to hear back from him soon. Let me just quote you a little bit from my letter. The ministry did "include some exempted uses in the legislation, such as for agriculture, on golf courses, and for managing forestry issues. Residents and municipal leaders in Niagara and Hamilton are concerned that Bill 64 will effectively ban the spraying of gypsy moths in areas other than those used for agriculture."

A number of local municipalities such as Hamilton and West Lincoln have implemented cost-shared aerial spraying programs with local residents to combat the gypsy moth problem. I have joined with those municipalities and property owners in calling the province to come forward with its own cost-shared spray program. However, they've expressed concern that if the province bans spraying for gypsy moths, the infestation will no doubt continue to spread into new territory, including provincially protected areas like the Niagara Escarpment and the Ontario greenbelt. I've kindly asked the Minister of the Environment to clarify and confirm that spraying for gypsy moths and the like will be allowed to continue should Bill 64 come into law. I do hope to have a response from the minister in the very near future.

We did have a response from Aidan Hyde—I don't know if that is Aidan sitting over there. No, not Aidan. Well, Aidan Hyde, from the minister's office, did respond, indicating that the ministry will look at amendments to regulation 914, but at the time was not able to give us clarification on the minister's intent when it comes to spraying for gypsy moths.

I also wrote to the Minister of the Environment on June 2—today, Madam Speaker; and the minister will have that on his desk shortly—on behalf of a hardware operator in my riding. Vineland Hardware Electric Ltd. does a great job and has outstanding customer service. They're close to the corner, just east of Highway 8 and Regional Road 24. It's one of the last truly independent hardware stores in the province of Ontario. It has that stature, if you will, because of its outstanding customer service, its history in the community and its great selection of products.

Mr. Horsley, the owner, asked me if what he heard was true—I think he said it in the Globe and Mail, but I can't say with certainty if it was in the Globe and Mail or another journal—that Roundup was going to be exempted from the act but other pesticides like Killex and some of its competitors would not be. Mr. Horsley asked me what determination the minister would use for exempting certain pesticides and not others. I wrote to Minister Gerretsen on his behalf. Just to quote from the letter:

"I kindly ask that" Minister Gerretsen "respond to Mr. Horsley at the address provided below and explain how you will be making these determinations and the science that's involved in the decision-making process. He would also appreciate an explanation of how you expect this ban will impact retailers like him. And finally, if the above-mentioned media reports are true, why is Roundup entitled to a specific exception while others are not?"

There's more detail in the letter, but I wanted to make sure that the minister was aware of the concerns of Mr. Horsley and other hardware store owners and retailers in the province like him.

We also contacted a number of municipalities in our area and asked for their views on the proposed legislation. We received a response from Larry Fortier, who is the manager of parks and facilities with the town of Grimsby. I'll give you some of the bullet points that Mr. Fortier brought back to my attention.

He says, "It will be interesting or even may be a non-issue for us depending on the definition of the term 'cosmetic,'" which is in dispute as part of our debate. He says that the "department in Grimsby has always used very little pesticides for aesthetic reasons.... Our main use, of the various pesticides available; is to aid us in providing safe and healthy turf for our facility users. We also only apply pesticides when necessary; the industry term is 'integrated pest management.'"

He goes on to say, "Those of us in the sports turf industry are making grass do things that it was never really put on this planet to do—grown at very low heights and see constant use throughout the growing season. The wear and tear combined with the requested mowing heights causes the turf to be in an almost constant state of stress, thus weakening the grass plant, making it more susceptible to pest investigation (weeds, insects and disease). Without the aid of pesticides and with our current manpower it would be next to impossible to provide safe, healthy-quality playing fields."

That comes from Bruce Atkinson from the town of Grimsby. Larry Fortier had some concerns as well about the impact on municipalities.

We also heard from the city of Welland, which expressed concerns about bowling greens and sports fields. He says about sports fields:

"We spray Roundup on warning tracks and stone infields and on softball fields. Failure to do this would result in grass and weeds growing, which could lead to a liability issue. To manually do this would be a big cost to the taxpayers, as it would take many man-hours."

He goes on about insecticides, but in the interest of time I won't get into great detail. Maybe I'll copy these to the Minister of the Environment for his information.

1340

The bottom line from the city of Welland staff was, if pesticides are omitted from our maintenance plans, our bowling green would close, sports fields could have liability issues and taxpayers would be on the hook for more money, with fewer services. I hope the Minister of the Environment will respond to the concerns of our municipal partners.

There are exemptions for golf courses. Bill Carroll on CFRB has pointed out—with great comedy, I'd say—that somehow golfers are immune. If pesticides are so nasty for families, children and residents of the province of Ontario, what is it about golfers that makes them immune to the ill effects of pesticides? Perhaps if we all carried putters around we could ward off the evil impacts of pesticides. Mr. Carroll, among others, has pointed out: Why golf courses and not parks? At the municipal level, why golf courses and not front lawns? If pesticides are so negative in their impact, why was it not more broad-based instead of this exemption for golf courses? I'll ask my colleagues opposite; maybe the minister for public safety and security can tell me: What it is about golfers that makes them immune from the ill effects of pesticides?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: They're going to ban shorts.

Mr. Tim Hudak: They're going to ban shorts?

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Yes, so you can't get the ill effects on your legs.

Mr. Tim Hudak: So shorts instead will be banned on golf courses, my colleague from Mississippi-Carleton—

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: Carleton-Mississippi Mills.

Mr. Tim Hudak: Exactly, like I said.

Anyway, I wanted to bring those points forward that we have received from a number of constituents and municipalities in my riding. I have one from a resident of Grimsby, who asked not to be named but acts as a greenskeeper at a golf course in southern Ontario. We'll make the case that golf courses should be exempted. I said I would read this into the record. The constituent writes, "As you know, all of our products are extensively tested and pose no health hazards. No country is more strict than Canada in ensuring the safety of Canadians in terms of pesticide use. We are professionals and do our applications strictly according to label rates.... These chemicals are expensive and we do not waste them.

"We in the golf industry need our exemption and we need your help."

So an individual who works—doesn't own a golf course; a worker in a golf club, who lives in my riding, makes that point. I guess the other point would be, if the exemption exists for golf courses, as the constituent indicates, why is the minister not similarly considering exceptions for municipal parks, as Welland and Grimsby have brought forward?

I did have a letter as well from Lavinia Sharp, who's a constituent of mine in the beautiful community of Caistor Centre. Ms. Sharp is a supporter of the legislation. She did talk about gypsy moths, because she was aware of my letter to the minister asking for an exemption to allow for spraying of these pests that are causing considerable damage in the rural areas outside of Hamilton and in Niagara. She writes in her letter, "I have witnessed devastation throughout West Lincoln from this invasive, non-native species and find it alarming that this spray would ever be considered 'cosmetic.' My mother and I have a 25-acre woodlot and it's a costly matter of survival, not a matter of cosmetic upkeep, for the trees in our lot." Woodlots are another exemption, but I think the point is that Ms. Sharp writes that gypsy moth spraying should be an exempted use.

She responded to my concerns about the way this bill was introduced, the Premier saying something that was not, in fact, in the bill, and the minister's failure to correct him. She responded to me in writing here: "Yes, I feel misled by their actions and I'm angry about it. They should apologize for their greenwash and strengthen this important legislation to allow constituents to further protect themselves. I want them to be taken to task for misleading me and I want them to live up to what they claimed, even if it was a claim in error. That's what's most important to me." I said I would bring her concerns forward. It's something that she says she has been concerned about for some time.

In her letter she also says, "And my concern has grown as I've watched development run rampant in ecologically sensitive areas and unnaturally green lawns appear across our landscape. With each step"—she asks for expansion of the Greenbelt Act and for stronger legislation, but as I said, she also concurs that the way the bill was brought forward was under some pretences that weren't in keeping with the facts.

The other thing I don't think I fully understood from the minister was, if my understanding is correct, that all of these pesticides are reviewed by Health Canada. Health Canada invests significant resources in ensuring a top-quality scientific review of a pesticide and its potential impact on the environment.

I used to speak in this Legislature, when Minister Gerretsen was the Minister of Municipal Affairs, about the political science that was underlying the greenbelt boundaries, as opposed to environmental science. I am concerned that he has brought the same bag of tricks over to the new Ministry of the Environment, where his decisions of what would be allowed uses or not—what pesticide would be allowed or disallowed in the province—may be based more on political science than on good environmental science.

It may also be reflective of who's the best lobbyist. I believe that the vast majority of taxpayers in the Niagara West-Glanbrook area would like to ensure that if any pesticides are banned, they are so done based on the scientific merits of the argument as opposed to who's gone to whose fundraiser or any other political considerations rather than on good science.

The last thing I'll say on this is that municipalities have had a role historically. I've mentioned a couple of reasons why. They've played that role to make their own judgment locally of what kinds of property standards to enforce through their bylaws. This is consistent with municipalities' historic roles in these areas. This would take away any municipal discretion. I know that the city of Toronto, among other municipalities, has written to the minister expressing their concern about Bill 64.

That's the bottom line. People of Niagara West—Glanbrook have responded. I'm glad to have a chance to read them into the record. I do hope the Minister of Environment will respond to both of my letters soon. I do ask him to take seriously the views brought forward by our hard-working critic from Haldimand—Norfolk, Toby Barrett.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Thank you.

Prior to calling for questions and comments, Vic Dhillon, the member for Brampton West, has asked me to acknowledge the presence of Mr. Sukh Dhaliwal, an MP currently in the riding of Newton—North Delta. Welcome. Thank you for joining us.

Questions and comments? The member for Carleton—Mississippi Mills.

Mr. Norman W. Sterling: I'd like to compliment the member for Niagara West—Cranbrook—Glanbrook; it's as bad as Carleton—Mississippi Mills.

I want to point out, particularly for the young people sitting up in the east gallery, the structure of how we control pesticides and herbicides in Canada, in Ontario and in our municipalities.

First of all, the federal government is responsible for approving the product. They have a board of the most eminent scientists in all of Canada to determine the risks and the benefits of any pesticide or herbicide that might be used on our farms, in our gardens, on our lawns, on our golf courses etc. They determine whether or not a product should be put up for sale, should have restrictions on it in terms of whom it's sold to or whether it should be applied by people who are specially trained.

The province's role is to license people who can put these products on our lawns, on our gardens and on our farms. So this again is another set of experts who decide what the training shall be, what the qualifications shall be, to put those products on those particular areas.

So our objection—perhaps most of our objection—to this is that there have been no scientific studies done by the government of Ontario to show that there is a huge risk, or any risk, associated with putting pesticides on lawns or on the side of our highways etc. We would love to see the facts before we vote on a piece of legislation to ban this particular use. Maybe the ban should be wider. Maybe it should be narrower. Maybe there should be no ban.

Ms. Sylvia Jones: I am pleased to rise to comment on the discussion of my colleague for Niagara West—Glanbrook on Bill 64. I think he ably set out that, from the beginning, this legislation has been bungled. From the day of the announcement—and we now realize that the premier misspoke the depth of where this ban could be implemented—we've now heard from communities like Collingwood, Toronto and Markham, who are saying, "Hold off. If you pass Bill 64, you're actually going to downgrade the level of protection that we, as a community, have held public hearings and passed a bylaw on."

1350

How unfortunate, because there are organizations, municipalities and individuals who'd like to participate in the debate on Bill 64. I, for one, would love to hear from the Ontario Pesticides Advisory Committee. If you look at who makes up this committee, they are plant physiologists, environmental chemists, pharmacologists, toxicologists, environmental toxicologists, plant pathologists, community medicine, environmental agriculturalists, forest pathologists, environmental biologists, and on and on it goes. How unfortunate that the government has chosen, by not bringing forward public hearings and travelling committee hearings, that we won't have the benefit of these scientific committee members who can share with us what they've done in the past and what they can do in the future in terms of regulating and mandating pesticides in Ontario. I think it's a real shame that they've chosen to ignore those experts and instead relied on polling and their own internal discussions to proceed with Bill 64 without travelling hearings.

I will leave it at that for future debate.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Questions and comments? Response?

Mr. Tim Hudak: I thank my colleagues from Carleton—Mississippi Mills and from Dufferin—Caledon for their comments, and they're both right. My colleague from Carleton—Mississippi Mills points out, as a former Minister of the Environment—and a darned good Minister of the Environment, let me add—that Health Canada already reviews these. An eminent panel of scientists, for example, looks at these products. Surely decisions should be based strictly on science and not the politics of a particular chemical or which company has been to which member's fundraisers, by way of example.

The minister, when you hear him debate in the Legislature, says that agriculture has been exempted because they are trained professionals who know how to put the proper amount of pesticides on food products, and therefore the exception is due. There are, however, as my colleague from Carleton—Mississippi Mills said, similarly, professionals who apply pesticides in urban areas. If it's a matter of application, if the minister believes that people who apply pesticides should be licensed, then why have a different set of rules for one sector than the other? Wouldn't it be better to have a regime of licensed professionals who know proper use, if application problems are the result of this bill?

Similarly, as my constituent Lavinia had talked about, the application in golf courses—in her letter, she objects to golf courses being exempted. One would wonder why there would be one set of rules for golf courses and an entirely different set of rules for what would resemble a golf course: a park across the street. It does seem that they made decisions based on a bit more politics than actual science behind a determination of what kind of exemptions should be allowed or not.

My colleague from Dufferin–Caledon put it rightly: Let's have some public hearings. Let's see what people have to say. Let's make sure we look at all of the different sectors or individuals that use pesticides, and then we could bring forward proper amendments to this bill.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Further debate?

Mr. Gerretsen has moved second reading of Bill 64. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? I heard a no.

All those in favour, say "aye."

All those opposed, say "nay."

I believe the ayes have it. The motion is carried.

Second reading agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): Shall the bill be sent for third reading?

Mr. Kevin Daniel Flynn: I'd ask that the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Social Policy.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): So ordered.

Hon. Michael Bryant: I move that the House adjourn.

The Acting Speaker (Ms. Andrea Horwath): The government House leader has moved adjournment of the House. Is it the pleasure of the House that the motion carry? The motion is carried.

The House adjourned at 1355.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO
ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Lieutenant Governor / Lieutenant-gouverneur: Hon. / L'hon. David C. Onley, O.Ont.

Speaker / Président: Hon. / L'hon. Steve Peters

Clerk / Greffière: Deborah Deller

Clerks-at-the-Table / Greffiers parlementaires: Todd Decker, Lisa Freedman, Tonia Grannum

Sergeant-at-Arms / Sergent d'armes: Dennis Clark

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Aggelonitis, Sophia (L)	Hamilton Mountain
Albanese, Laura (L)	York South–Weston / York-Sud–Weston
Arnott, Ted (PC)	Wellington–Halton Hills	First Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Premier Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Arthurs, Wayne (L)	Pickering–Scarborough East / Pickering–Scarborough-Est
Bailey, Robert (PC)	Sarnia–Lambton
Balkissoon, Bas (L)	Scarborough–Rouge River
Barrett, Toby (PC)	Haldimand–Norfolk
Bartolucci, Hon. / L'hon. Rick (L)	Sudbury	Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services / ministre de la Sécurité communautaire et des Services correctionnels
Bentley, Hon. / L'hon. Christopher (L)	London West / London-Ouest	Attorney General / procureur general
Berardinetti, Lorenzo (L)	Scarborough Southwest / Scarborough-Sud-Ouest
Best, Hon. / L'hon. Margaret R. (L)	Scarborough–Guildwood	Minister of Health Promotion / ministre de la Promotion de la santé
Bisson, Gilles (ND)	Timmins–James Bay / Timmins–Baie James
Bradley, Hon. / L'hon. James J. (L)	St. Catharines	Minister of Transportation / ministre des Transports
Broten, Laurel C. (L)	Etobicoke–Lakeshore
Brown, Michael A. (L)	Algoma–Manitoulin
Brownell, Jim (L)	Stormont–Dundas–South Glengarry
Bryant, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	St. Paul's	Minister of Aboriginal Affairs, government House leader / ministre des Affaires autochtones, leader parlementaire du gouvernement
Cansfield, Hon. / L'hon. Donna H. (L)	Etobicoke Centre / Etobicoke-Centre	Minister of Natural Resources / ministre des Richesses naturelles
Caplan, Hon. / L'hon. David (L)	Don Valley East / Don Valley-Est	Minister of Public Infrastructure Renewal / ministre du Renouvellement de l'infrastructure publique
Carroll, Hon. / L'hon. M. Aileen (L)	Barrie	Minister of Culture, minister responsible for seniors / ministre de la Culture, ministre déléguée aux Affaires des personnes âgées
Chan, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Markham–Unionville	Minister of Citizenship and Immigration / ministre des Affaires civiques et de l'Immigration
Chudleigh, Ted (PC)	Halton
Colle, Mike (L)	Eglinton–Lawrence
Craitor, Kim (L)	Niagara Falls
Crozier, Bruce (L)	Essex	Deputy Speaker, Chair of the committee of the whole House / Vice- Président, Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Delaney, Bob (L)	Mississauga–Streetsville
Dhillon, Vic (L)	Brampton West / Brampton-Ouest
Dickson, Joe (L)	Ajax–Pickering
DiNovo, Cheri (ND)	Parkdale–High Park
Dombrowsky, Hon. / L'hon. Leona (L)	Prince Edward–Hastings	Minister of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs / ministre de l'Agriculture, de l'Alimentation et des Affaires rurales
Duguid, Hon. / L'hon. Brad (L)	Scarborough Centre / Scarborough-Centre	Minister of Labour / ministre du Travail
Duncan, Hon. / L'hon. Dwight (L)	Windsor–Tecumseh	Minister of Finance, Chair of the Management Board of Cabinet / ministre des Finances, président du Conseil de gestion du gouvernement
Dunlop, Garfield (PC)	Simcoe North / Simcoe-Nord
Elliott, Christine (PC)	Whitby–Oshawa

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Flynn, Kevin Daniel (L)	Oakville
Fonseca, Hon. / L'hon. Peter (L)	Mississauga East–Cooksville / Mississauga-Est–Cooksville	Minister of Tourism / ministre du Tourisme
Gélinas, France (ND)	Nickel Belt
Gerretsen, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kingston and the Islands / Kingston et les Îles	Minister of the Environment / ministre de l'Environnement
Gravelle, Hon. / L'hon. Michael (L)	Thunder Bay–Superior North / Thunder Bay–Superior-Nord	Minister of Northern Development and Mines / ministre du Développement du Nord et des Mines
Hampton, Howard (ND)	Kenora–Rainy River	Leader of the New Democratic Party / chef du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Hardeman, Ernie (PC)	Oxford
Hillier, Randy (PC)	Lanark–Frontenac–Lennox and Addington
Horwath, Andrea (ND)	Hamilton Centre / Hamilton-Centre	Third Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Troisième Vice-Présidente du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Hoy, Pat (L)	Chatham–Kent–Essex
Hudak, Tim (PC)	Niagara West–Glanbrook / Niagara-Ouest–Glanbrook
Jaczek, Helena (L)	Oak Ridges–Markham
Jeffrey, Linda (L)	Brampton–Springdale
Jones, Sylvia (PC)	Dufferin–Caledon
Klees, Frank (PC)	Newmarket–Aurora
Kormos, Peter (ND)	Welland	New Democratic Party House leader / leader parlementaire du Nouveau Parti démocratique
Kular, Kuldip (L)	Bramalea–Gore–Malton
Kwinter, Monte (L)	York Centre / York-Centre
Lalonde, Jean-Marc (L)	Glengarry–Prescott–Russell
Leal, Jeff (L)	Peterborough
Levac, Dave (L)	Brant
MacLeod, Lisa (PC)	Nepean–Carleton
Mangat, Amrit (L)	Mississauga–Brampton South / Mississauga–Brampton-Sud
Marchese, Rosario (ND)	Trinity–Spadina
Martiniuk, Gerry (PC)	Cambridge
Matthews, Hon. / L'hon. Deborah (L)	London North Centre / London-Centre-Nord	Minister of Children and Youth Services, minister responsible for women's issues / ministre des Services à l'enfance et à la jeunesse, ministre déléguée à la Condition féminine
Mauro, Bill (L)	Thunder Bay–Atikokan
McGuinty, Hon. / L'hon. Dalton (L)	Ottawa South / Ottawa-Sud	Premier and President of the Council, Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs / premier ministre et président du Conseil, ministre des Affaires intergouvernementales
McMeekin, Hon. / L'hon. Ted (L)	Ancaster–Dundas– Flamborough–Westdale	Minister of Government and Consumer Services / ministre des Services gouvernementaux et des Services aux consommateurs
McNeely, Phil (L)	Ottawa–Orléans
Meilleur, Hon. / L'hon. Madeleine (L)	Ottawa–Vanier	Minister of Community and Social Services, minister responsible for francophone affairs / ministre des Services sociaux et communautaires, ministre déléguée aux Affaires francophones
Miller, Norm (PC)	Parry Sound–Muskoka
Miller, Paul (ND)	Hamilton East–Stoney Creek / Hamilton-Est–Stoney Creek
Milloy, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Kitchener Centre / Kitchener-Centre	Minister of Training, Colleges and Universities / ministre de la Formation et des Collèges et Universités
Mitchell, Carol (L)	Huron–Bruce
Moridi, Reza (L)	Richmond Hill
Munro, Julia (PC)	York–Simcoe
Murdoch, Bill (PC)	Bruce–Grey–Owen Sound
Naqvi, Yasir (L)	Ottawa Centre / Ottawa-Centre
O'Toole, John (PC)	Durham
Oraziotti, David (L)	Sault Ste. Marie

Member and Party / Député(e) et parti	Constituency / Circonscription	Other responsibilities / Autres responsabilités
Ouellette, Jerry J. (PC)	Oshawa
Pendergast, Leeanna (L)	Kitchener–Conestoga
Peters, Hon. / L'hon. Steve (L)	Elgin–Middlesex–London	Speaker / Président
Phillips, Hon. / L'hon. Gerry (L)	Scarborough–Agincourt	Minister of Energy / ministre de l'Énergie
Prue, Michael (ND)	Beaches–East York
Pupatello, Hon. / L'hon. Sandra (L)	Windsor West / Windsor-Ouest	Minister of Economic Development and Trade / ministre du Développement économique et du Commerce
Qaadri, Shafiq (L)	Etobicoke North / Etobicoke-Nord
Ramal, Khalil (L)	London–Fanshawe
Ramsay, David (L)	Timiskaming–Cochrane
Rinaldi, Lou (L)	Northumberland–Quinte West
Runciman, Robert W. (PC)	Leeds–Grenville	Leader of the Official Opposition / Chef de l'opposition officielle
Ruprecht, Tony (L)	Davenport
Sandals, Liz (L)	Guelph
Savoline, Joyce (PC)	Burlington
Scott, Laurie (PC)	Haliburton–Kawartha Lakes–Brock
Sergio, Mario (L)	York West / York-Ouest
Shurman, Peter (PC)	Thornhill
Smith, Hon. / L'hon. Monique M. (L)	Nipissing	Minister of Revenue / ministre du Revenu
Smitherman, Hon. / L'hon. George (L)	Toronto Centre / Toronto-Centre	Deputy Premier, Minister of Health and Long-Term Care / vice-premier ministre, ministre de la Santé et des Soins de longue durée
Sorbara, Greg (L)	Vaughan
Sousa, Charles (L)	Mississauga South / Mississauga-Sud
Sterling, Norman W. (PC)	Carleton–Mississippi Mills
Tabuns, Peter (ND)	Toronto–Danforth
Takhar, Hon. / L'hon. Harinder S. (L)	Mississauga–Erindale	Minister of Small Business and Entrepreneurship / ministre des Petites Entreprises et de l'Entrepreneuriat
Van Bommel, Maria (L)	Lambton–Kent–Middlesex
Watson, Hon. / L'hon. Jim (L)	Ottawa West–Nepean / Ottawa-Ouest–Nepean	Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing / ministre des Affaires municipales et du Logement
Wilkinson, Hon. / L'hon. John (L)	Perth–Wellington	Minister of Research and Innovation / ministre de la Recherche et de l'Innovation
Wilson, Jim (PC)	Simcoe–Grey	Second Deputy Chair of the committee of the whole House / Deuxième Vice-Président du Comité plénier de l'Assemblée législative
Witmer, Elizabeth (PC)	Kitchener–Waterloo	Opposition House leader / leader parlementaire de l'opposition
Wynne, Hon. / L'hon. Kathleen O. (L)	Don Valley West / Don Valley-Ouest	Minister of Education / ministre de l'Éducation
Yakubski, John (PC)	Renfrew–Nipissing–Pembroke
Zimmer, David (L)	Willowdale

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
COMITÉS PERMANENTS DE L'ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE

Estimates / Budgets des dépenses

Chair / Président: Tim Hudak
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Garfield Dunlop
Gilles Bisson, Kim Craiton, Bob Delaney,
Garfield Dunlop, Tim Hudak, Amrit Mangat,
Phil McNeely, John O'Toole, Lou Rinaldi,
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Finance and economic affairs /
Finances et affaires économiques

Chair / Président: Pat Hoy
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jean-Marc Lalonde
Sophia Aggelonitis, Ted Arnott, Wayne Arthurs,
Toby Barrett, Pat Hoy, Jean-Marc Lalonde,
Leeanna Pendergast, Michael Prue, Charles Sousa
Clerk / Greffier: William Short

General government / Affaires gouvernementales

Chair / Présidente: Linda Jeffrey
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: David Oraziotti
Robert Bailey, Jim Brownell, Linda Jeffrey,
Kuldip Kular, Rosario Marchese, Bill Mauro,
Carol Mitchell, David Oraziotti, Joyce Savoline
Clerk / Greffier: Trevor Day

Government agencies / Organismes gouvernementaux

Chair / Présidente: Julia Munro
Vice-Chair / Vice-Présidente: Lisa MacLeod
Michael Brown, Kevin Flynn, France Gélinas,
Randy Hillier, Lisa MacLeod, Julia Munro,
David Ramsay, Liz Sandals, Maria Van Bommel
Clerk / Greffier: Douglas Arnott

Justice Policy / Justice

Chair / Président: Lorenzo Berardinetti
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jeff Leal
Lorenzo Berardinetti, Christine Elliott, Peter Kormos,
Jeff Leal, Reza Moridi, Yasir Naqvi,
Lou Rinaldi, John Yakabuski, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffière: Susan Sourial

Legislative Assembly / Assemblée législative

Chair / Président: Bas Balkissoon
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Kevin Flynn
Laura Albanese, Bas Balkissoon, Bob Delaney,
Joe Dickson, Kevin Flynn, Sylvia Jones,
Norm Miller, Mario Sergio, Peter Tabuns
Clerk / Greffière: Tonia Grannum

Public accounts / Comptes publics

Chair / Président: Norman W. Sterling
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Jerry Ouellette
Laura Albanese, Ernie Hardeman, Andrea Horwath,
Phil McNeely, Jerry Ouellette, Liz Sandals,
Norman W. Sterling, Maria Van Bommel, David Zimmer
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Regulations and private bills /
Règlements et projets de loi d'intérêt privé

Chair / Président: Michael Prue
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Paul Miller
Bas Balkissoon, Mike Colle, Kim Craiton,
Gerry Martiniuk, Paul Miller, Bill Murdoch,
Michael Prue, Tony Ruprecht, Mario Sergio
Clerk / Greffière: Sylwia Przewdziecki

Social Policy / Politique sociale

Chair / Président: Shafiq Qaadri
Vice-Chair / Vice-Président: Vic Dhillon
Laurel C. Broten, Vic Dhillon, Cheri DiNovo,
Helena Jaczek, Dave Levac, Shafiq Qaadri,
Khalil Ramal, Laurie Scott, Peter Shurman
Clerk / Greffier: Katch Koch

Continued from back cover

Hospital funding
Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2212
Hospital funding
Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2213
Hospital funding
Mr. Joe Dickson.....	2213
Visitor
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2213

MEMBERS' STATEMENTS / DÉCLARATIONS DES DÉPUTÉS

Attendance of cabinet members
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2213
Polygamy
Ms. Lisa MacLeod.....	2214
Clarkson Village
Mr. Charles Sousa .....	2214
Streetsville
Mr. Bob Delaney .....	2214
John McLaughlin
Mr. Michael Prue.....	2214
Republic of Italy
Mrs. Laura Albanese.....	2215
Ontario farmers
Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....	2215
Psychiatric Patient Advocate Office
Mr. Shafiq Qaadri.....	2215

Injured Workers' Day
Mr. Khalil Ramal .....	2216
Report, Chief Electoral Officer
The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2216

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS / DÉPÔT DES PROJETS DE LOI

Occupational Health and Safety Amendment Act (Workplace Death, Critical Injury and Occupational Illness Registry), 2008, Bill 84, Ms. Horwath / Loi de 2008 modifiant la Loi sur la santé et la sécurité au travail (registre des décès, des blessures graves et des maladies professionnelles survenues dans le lieu de travail), projet de loi 84, Mme Horwath
First reading agreed to .....	2216
Ms. Andrea Horwath .....	2216

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Cosmetic Pesticides Ban Act, 2008, Bill 64, Mr. Gerretsen / Loi de 2008 sur l'interdiction des pesticides utilisés à des fins esthétiques, projet de loi 64, M. Gerretsen
Mr. Norm Miller .....	2216
Mr. Tim Hudak .....	2217
Mr. Norman W. Sterling.....	2221
Ms. Sylvia Jones .....	2221
Mr. Tim Hudak .....	2221
Second reading agreed to.....	2222

CONTENTS / TABLE DES MATIÈRES

Monday 2 June 2008 / Lundi 2 juin 2008

ORDERS OF THE DAY / ORDRE DU JOUR

Order of business

Hon. Michael Gravelle .....	2193
Agreed to .....	2193

Services for Persons with Developmental

Disabilities Act, 2008, Bill 77, Mrs. Meilleur /
Loi de 2008 sur les services aux personnes ayant
une déficience intellectuelle, projet de loi 77,
Mme Meilleur
Mr. Garfield Dunlop .....	2193
Mr. Norman W. Sterling .....	2195
Mr. Mike Colle .....	2197
Second reading agreed to .....	2200

INTRODUCTION OF VISITORS / PRÉSENTATION DES VISITEURS

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters) .....	2200
---------------------------------------	------

ORAL QUESTIONS / QUESTIONS ORALES

Sewage spill

Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2200
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2201
Mr. Norman W. Sterling .....	2201

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2201
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2202

Child care

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2202
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2202

Consumer protection

Mr. Howard Hampton .....	2203
Hon. Ted McMeekin .....	2203

Infectious disease control

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2204
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2204

Workers' compensation

Mr. Paul Miller .....	2205
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2205

Firearms control

Mr. Mike Colle .....	2205
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	2205

Hospital funding

Mrs. Joyce Savoline .....	2206
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2206

Health care workers

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	2207
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2207

Aboriginal rights

Mrs. Carol Mitchell .....	2207
Hon. Michael Gravelle .....	2207

Polygamy

Ms. Lisa MacLeod .....	2208
Hon. Christopher Bentley .....	2208

Health care

Ms. Cheri DiNovo .....	2208
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2208

Fair access to professions

Ms. Sophia Aggelonitis .....	2209
Hon. Michael Chan .....	2209

Prescription drugs

Mrs. Elizabeth Witmer .....	2209
Hon. George Smitherman .....	2209

Correctional services

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	2210
Hon. Rick Bartolucci .....	2210

PETITIONS / PÉTITIONS

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Norm Miller .....	2210
-----------------------	------

Uranium mining

Mr. Peter Tabuns .....	2210
------------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Bill Mauro .....	2211
----------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mr. Ernie Hardeman .....	2211
--------------------------	------

Graffiti

Ms. Laurel C. Broten .....	2211
----------------------------	------

Lord's Prayer

Mrs. Julia Munro .....	2211
------------------------	------

Community safety

Mr. Yasir Naqvi .....	2212
-----------------------	------

Ontario Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals

Mr. Charles Sousa .....	2212
-------------------------	------

Continued on inside back cover

No. 52

N° 52

ISSN 1180-2987

Legislative Assembly
of Ontario

First Session, 39th Parliament

Assemblée législative
de l'Ontario

Première session, 39<sup>e</sup> législature

Official Report
of Debates
(Hansard)

Journal
des débats
(Hansard)

Tuesday 3 June 2008

Mardi 3 juin 2008

Speaker
Honourable Steve Peters

Président
L'honorable Steve Peters

Clerk
Deborah Deller

Greffière
Deborah Deller

Hansard on the Internet

Hansard and other documents of the Legislative Assembly can be on your personal computer within hours after each sitting. The address is:

Le Journal des débats sur Internet

L'adresse pour faire paraître sur votre ordinateur personnel le Journal et d'autres documents de l'Assemblée législative en quelques heures seulement après la séance est :

<http://www.ontla.on.ca/>

Index inquiries

Reference to a cumulative index of previous issues may be obtained by calling the Hansard Reporting Service indexing staff at 416-325-7410 or 325-3708.

Renseignements sur l'index

Adressez vos questions portant sur des numéros précédents du Journal des débats au personnel de l'index, qui vous fourniront des références aux pages dans l'index cumulatif, en composant le 416-325-7410 ou le 325-3708.

---

Hansard Reporting and Interpretation Services
Room 500, West Wing, Legislative Building
111 Wellesley Street West, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Telephone 416-325-7400; fax 416-325-7430
Published by the Legislative Assembly of Ontario

Service du Journal des débats et d'interprétation
Salle 500, aile ouest, Édifice du Parlement
111, rue Wellesley ouest, Queen's Park
Toronto ON M7A 1A2
Téléphone, 416-325-7400; télécopieur, 416-325-7430
Publié par l'Assemblée législative de l'Ontario

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Tuesday 3 June 2008

ASSEMBLÉE LÉGISLATIVE DE L'ONTARIO

Mardi 3 juin 2008

*The House met at 0900.
Prayers.*

ORDERS OF THE DAY

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Hon. David Caplan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I believe we have unanimous consent to put forward a motion regarding division of time for debate on government motion 60.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Mr. Caplan seeks unanimous consent for debate on government notice of motion 60. Agreed? Agreed.

Hon. David Caplan: Thank you. I move that the time available until 10:45 a.m. this morning be divided equally among the recognized parties for debate on government motion 60, following which the Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the motion without further debate or amendment.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Is it the pleasure of the House the motion carry? Carried.

Agreed to.

PERSONAL HEALTH INFORMATION PROTECTION

PROTECTION DES RENSEIGNEMENTS PERSONNELS SUR LA SANTÉ

Hon. John Wilkinson: I move that pursuant to subsection 75(a) of the Personal Health Information Protection Act, 2004, the Standing Committee on Social Policy be authorized to review the act; and that, pursuant to subsection 75(b) of the act, the committee shall report to the House its opinions, observations and recommendations concerning amendments to the Personal Health Information Protection Act, 2004, no later than one year following the assignment of this order of reference to the committee.

The Speaker (Hon. Steve Peters): Further debate?

Ms. Laurel C. Broten: I'm pleased to rise and speak in support of this important legislation and the fact that it is important that we see this Personal Health Information Protection Act move forward to be examined by committee, so that we can make sure that in a world of information, data collection and new technology, as things are constantly changing and improving and innovating, we have an opportunity to make sure that our legislation, which was introduced in 2004 and came into effect in 2004—and at the time really set a gold standard in terms of making sure health information was protected and that Ontarians had access to their health information—it's absolutely critical that we make sure that we continue to have the gold standard in Ontario.

I'm going to take a few minutes this morning and let Ontarians have a bit of an understanding of the process that's taking place. As the minister indicated, this is a motion pursuant to subsection 75(a) of the Personal Health Information Protection Act, or PHIPA, as we call it, for this piece of legislation to go to the Standing Committee on Social Policy so that they can review it and provide a report to this Legislature with their observations and recommendations determining how PHIPA might be amended in any way.

We were really pleased to deliver this information in 2004, and we have made sure, by way of this legislation, that rules are established for the collection, use and disclosure of personal health information by health information custodians. Health information custodians would include doctors, laboratories, long-term-care homes and hospitals. This legislation also provided Ontarians with the legislated right to request access to and correct their health records of personal health information. It set rules that health information custodians needed to follow, including ensuring that personal health information was protected against unauthorized use or disclosure, informing an individual if their personal health information has been lost, stolen or accessed by unauthorized persons. Those are really critical things.

When we think about what has transpired over the last number of years as to how we collect and maintain data and information, we think back to many years ago where your doctor's office had their records in a file cabinet locked with keys and, as somebody who practised in the legal profession, I was certainly very knowledgeable about the fact that every cabinet needed to be locked at night, because we were very paper-driven. As we move to a more information and database and computer regime, frankly there are issues, because a document that used to be locked away in a cabinet might now be accessible on a hard drive or could be e-mailed to somebody, firewalls can be broken down, so it is really critical that as we modernize society, we modernize the way we protect and maintain health records.

Under the act, the Information and Privacy Commissioner, who is currently Ann Cavoukian, is responsible for overseeing compliance with the legislation. Under the act, the Information and Privacy Commissioner has the authority to investigate complaints, undertake a review on her own initiative and has order-making power to ensure that health information custodians take steps towards complying with the rules set out in the act. So that really ensures that the act has a great deal of teeth when you have someone as prominent and well known in her ability to protect information as Dr. Ann Cavoukian as the Information and Privacy Commissioner, that they have the ability to make sure that that information is well protected.

I want to share with this House that the act has really been widely regarded as a success since its passing in 2004. Some watching may know that the federal government passed a bill called the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act, or PIPEDA, as that one is called. In 2005, PHIPA was declared substantially similar to that federal legislation, and so becoming the only privacy legislation in Canada to receive the designation, making Ontario's health sector exempt from the federal policy because the Ontario policy provided as much or substantially similar protection. PHIPA has served as the model for health privacy legislation in other jurisdictions in Canada, including very recently in Newfoundland, and the Information and Privacy Commissioner recently wrote to the New York Times that they should consider PHIPA as an excellent model for protecting medical privacy.

0910

The review that we are proposing by way of this motion arises directly from the foundation, the early drafting and the early passing of PHIPA. It was contained in there that we needed to have a review, and irrespective of this great success, PHIPA contains a requirement that it be reviewed by a legislative committee. As I said from the outset, I think that's a really important thing, because it's critical that we circle back with those whose information we are trying to protect, with those custodians of the information, to see if there are ways that things could be done better. Is it working? Is the legislation able to continue to provide that important protection of critical health information and allow those of us who need access to that information, to our own health records, to get those changed if there is information that is wrong? We need to make sure that it is accessible, modern and able to modernize itself with the times.

The review is set out so that it needs to be timely. It will take place within a year. The sharing, storage and use of personal health information is evolving and, as I said, it will continue to evolve as we move forward in this government with the important initiative of e-health records.

When I talk to my constituents in my home community in Etobicoke-Lakeshore, I have an opportunity to talk to people about things that are important to them: making sure that our health care system continues to be modern, continues to change with the times, and that we have access to critical information, because information is essentially the key to success.

We know that if a doctor has all the information about the patient, we'll make sure that that patient does not have contraindications in prescriptions, for example. If the pharmacist has that information and if all the various health care providers are able to coordinate, if we move to the continued development of a time where we have health records that are available electronically, that will provide patients across Ontario with an incredible amount of power to look after themselves, to maintain those records and to be knowledgeable about their own health experience, their own health history, and to make sure that that information is accessible and available.

I know that we look to the modernizing of health records, yet we still have some of our old ways of doing things. I recently had to take my sons, Zachary and Ryan, in for immunization. As you are trying to get out to the doctor's office, as you can imagine, with two-and-a-half-year-old twins, it's a little bit of a commotion to get out of the house. "Where are those yellow papers? Where are those immunization records that I need to bring back to the doctor's office?" Wouldn't it be great if we had that information available? It is available electronically in our doctor's office, no doubt, but when we move to the system where it is there, you will have access to it. You can do your banking online now. You apply for a mortgage. You can do all sorts of things. Let's move to that system.

That's what Ontarians are asking, but making sure that PHIPA continues to be a very protective piece of legislation is absolutely critical as we move forward with the modernization of our health records system, because if we don't have adequate procedures in place, we will potentially have critical and important information that will go astray, that will get in the wrong hands and that will get out to someone who should not have it.

I know that we can all turn our minds to a couple of examples about why you would not want your health information available broadly. First of all, it's personal. This is exactly what this is about: personal health information. And that personal health information is yours to disclose to whom you want. Perhaps you have a history of an illness in your family, you've had some tests done for that and you got back whatever answer, yes or no, whether you were predisposed to have that illness. You don't necessarily want all sorts of others who are not to be privy to that personal health information to have it. That's why this legislation is very critical.

Personal health legislation needs to consider changes in the way health care is also being delivered and the way health information is being managed. We know there are very modern, new technologies happening in our hospitals right across this province and we're proud as a government to be leading the way and ensuring that that takes place.

In my own hospital in Etobicoke-Lakeshore, Trillium Health Centre, we now have a process where doctors, nurses, PSWs and others communicate by way of BlackBerry. They are able to have an immediate exchange: "I am at patient X's bed. This is the circumstance. What do you think?" It's much more efficient, and there are instantaneous answers given back to the health care providers so that they are able to give the immediate transition and medication necessary for the best care of that patient. At its heart, every step that our government is taking is to ensure that we provide the best health care for Ontarians. We do that by putting Ontarians first, putting our patients first, at the centre of everything that we do. That is also the focus of PHIPA. The protection of personal health information puts our patients first and our Ontario citizens first, at the heart and centre of a system that is critically important to their quality of life here in Ontario.

Personal health information, as I said, needs to modernize and perhaps change in the way we do things. The use of new technologies such as patient portals allow patients to interact with their doctors online, view lab test results and request appointments. That's starting to take place in the province, and it is of critical importance that information is protected. But wouldn't it be convenient if you had a lab result done and you could have an opportunity to see that? It's efficient for our patients, who don't need to take time away from work, who can have access to their information, as they would, for example, to review their stock portfolio. Why should they not be able to review those health records and have communications with the doctor professional whom they're interacting with, as they do with many of the other professionals in their life? But at the same time, this health information needs to be protected.

A growing number of health care registries are developing. That information also is critical and needs to be safeguarded. The use of databases and information for research and health system planning—those are all mechanisms by which your personal health information is made available, is put on a document on a computer network. We need to make sure that that is being protected.

The legislative committee review would listen to patients and stakeholders and provide advice to the Ministry of Health on how the legislation should evolve so Ontario can continue to be a leader in protecting personal health information. I think today, as we debate this motion, is a really great day, because it demonstrates the ability of this place to keep up with the times. I would suggest that sometimes our constituents might argue that here in the Legislature we don't keep up with the times and it isn't a very modern way of doing business. We sought to remedy some of that this session and modernize the way we do business here in the Legislature. This is a modern time to be speaking. According to my watch, it's about 16 minutes after 9. It is very different for us to be here in the morning, and I think it's great, much more in keeping with when our constituents are up and at it, getting their kids off to daycare, getting their kids to school, then getting into the office and conducting the business of the people. That's what we're doing here.

This motion is about making sure that legislation that we put in in 2004, which was leading-edge at the time, has a mechanism built right into the legislation to make sure that we stay leading-edge, that if someone has a good idea somewhere else in the world or a new technology develops that we didn't think about and we need a new way to ensure the protection of that personal information, we are able to do that.

I think it's a very great day in the Legislature. I look forward to seeing this motion pass very quickly so that we can get PHIPA off to committee and the committee can examine whether or not we need to make any amendments in accordance with new technology.

0920

We've come a long way. We know there's much more to do. The area of electronic health records and the modernization of the health system to use new technology is one that we are very focused on. We're very pleased with respect to a number of the initiatives that we've been able to move forward with since taking office this mandate and the last mandate. We've made sure to look around the world and ensure that we have excellent health care being provided closer to home for Ontarians, that they have access to their health care professionals, and made sure that we protect their personal health information while at the same time ensuring that we are nimble and able to modernize the way we do the business of health for people in this province. Because it is all about putting our patients first and making sure that their information is accessible to them, that their records are protected. Ultimately, that will make for better patient care, a better health system and a sustainable and modern health system for generations to come.

I'm pleased to have had an opportunity to speak to this motion. I will be sharing my time with two of my other colleagues: the member from Etobicoke North, and the member from Mississauga—Streetsville, Mr. Delaney. I look forward to seeing this motion passed quickly and getting this to committee so we can continue to have the most modern legislation here in Ontario.

M<sup>me</sup> France Gélinas: I'm pleased to rise to talk about the health protection information act, more particularly the review of this act. We certainly welcome the initiative of a review of the Personal Health Information Protection Act. It should be noted that the review is long overdue. It actually should have been started a year ago, according to the act. But we're doing it now. So I'll agree with the member from Etobicoke—Lakeshore: Let's move on with it.

When Minister Smitherman introduced this bill, he basically said it delivers on the principle of accountability: accountability within the health care system for the services they provide and for the information that they're keepers of. This has to be with accountability to us, to the public, to the clients of those health care agencies. This step toward accountability is welcome, but it should be said that a number of other government actions are also needed toward accountability: to bring accountability to all of the parts of the health care system, to the clients, to us, the public of Ontario, who use those services. The health protection information act is certainly one piece of it, but I would say there's still a lot to be done in that direction.

The act is an important and necessary act. Privacy legislation in Ontario was a long time in coming. Researchers told me that there were four bills during the Harris government that were actually submitted toward more accountability and protection of health information, but none of them could be agreed upon. Basically, the Personal Health Information Protection Act extends the federal privacy legislation, which did not, in our view, go far enough. It outlined serious and important responsibilities for health care providers and agencies dealing with the protection, disclosure and transfer of people's private health information. When you talk to people about health information, everybody will agree that this is something that they feel is very private to them, this is something that should be handled with care, should be protected—and they should know about it. When they sign a consent, it should be an informed consent so they know who will have access to that information and who won't have access to that information. Then it becomes the agency's and the provider's responsibility to make sure that those wishes and directions are followed according to the act.

The NDP supported the bill back in 2003-04, and we will continue to support its full and effective implementation. When the bill was first introduced we had some concerns. Most were addressed and changes were made to the bill to make it stronger. But one significant concern was not addressed. Our concern was about the financial cost of effectively implementing the bill. If you have a bill that the people, the providers, the agencies are not able to bring into effect, then you're not protecting anybody.

This concern was raised by the number of community-based agencies but mainly by mental health associations and mental health providers during the discussion about this bill. Many of those organizations were concerned that they lack the basic infrastructure, such things as computer systems, to meet their obligation to protect, to keep and, where appropriate, to share personal information.

We expressed concern that small agencies might find themselves in a serious position of unwittingly disclosing information due to the lack of resources necessary to comply with the bill. This is one illustration of why careful monitoring and review of the bill is very important, to see whether it is being implemented properly and how to better support organizations in its implementation in the future.

We, too, look forward to having a review of this bill. If there are agencies and providers in the field that are having a tough time, we should know what they are so we can take remedial action to make sure that the full intent of the act is being respected by everybody covered under the act.

Ontarians have reason to be concerned about whether their health information is being properly protected. The NDP has regularly expressed concern about the lack of oversight and public accountability, specifically within our public hospitals. We have argued that Ombudsman oversight power should be extended to all hospitals, and the government has resisted. I don't understand why. The Ombudsman himself has said repeatedly that he should have the power to investigate complaints that have to do with hospitals. He receives hundreds of complaints every year about our hospitals, and unfortunately, he has to answer back that he hasn't got the power to investigate complaints coming from hospitals. When people have privacy complaints, there are steps to follow through the act, but other complaints should be under the mandate of the Ombudsman, and we would certainly hope that the minister will see that it is a big step toward accountability to give the Ombudsman oversight of what goes on in our hospitals so that he and his office can investigate complaints.

Protecting people's private personal health information is really protecting people's dignity, and yet almost daily we hear examples of practices in all sorts of health care agencies that really are an affront to the dignity of individuals. One need only read Joe Fiorito's column in the Sudbury Star in which he shares quite a few of the many stories of lack of human treatment in Ontario hospitals and other health care settings—a total lack of respect for their dignity. In part, this act is there to change this.

There are systemic issues within the health care system. I would see the shift toward interdisciplinary teams so that more people gain access to primary care. There are still hundreds of thousands of Ontarians right now who do not have access to primary care. They don't have a family physician. They don't have access to a community health centre or a nurse practitioner-led clinic. They just don't have access. Moving forward with interdisciplinary teams under the governance of communities would go a long way toward restoring the dignity of those people who are basically on the sidelines, who are looking out into our health care system, but not able to gain access.

0930

My colleague from Etobicoke-Lakeshore, across the House, talked quite a bit about the importance of adoption of electronic health records. I can tell you that at my community health centre, when we put into place all of the changes that were required to comply with the Personal Health Information Protection Act, a big part of it was dealing with our electronic health records. We wanted to make absolutely sure that whatever information we stored in the electronic health records was only available to the people it was intended to be available to; that when the client gives consent, they give consent to different providers for different information; and that all of this was properly captured by our electronic health records so that only the people who the client had given permission to could have access to that part of their chart, that part of their electronic health record.

I agree with her that having electronic health records throughout the health care system in Ontario would change forever a lot of what is happening on the ground with regard to the health care system. I agree with her that it would be very beneficial for people to have access to their records, to be able to review them and better understand and basically take ownership of their health and their treatment. It would also facilitate communications between the different health care providers so that they better understand what has been done in another agency, in another part of the health care system—if somebody has been hospitalized, exactly what happened; if they went to a lab, gaining access to their lab results. And the list goes on, whether it be a mental health agency or long-term care or home care etc. None of this is feasible in Ontario right now because very few have adopted an electronic health record although time after time many, including the Ontario Health Quality Council, have said this is the key to making our system better perform and also better protect the information, as this act is trying to do.

We also talk about the lack of adequate standards in long-term care and how this relates to lack of protection of human dignity. We've had many stories, most of them reported in the press, of family members who are really saddened by the type of treatment that they see their loved ones getting in long-term-care facilities. We have been asking for an average 3.5 hours of hands-on care for everybody in long-term-care settings. The acuity of the people in our long-term-care homes is such that they deserve and need a minimum average of 3.5 hours. Yet the government is very slow to move on this, which means that here again the human dignity of those people, the founders of this province, the people who have built what we have today, is not being respected. This is something shameful and this is something that has to change.

Understaffing in community home care is another one. Home care tends to be the poor cousin, where the working conditions are not good, the benefits are not good, the wages are not as good, yet those are the same providers; a nurse is a nurse no matter if he or she works in a hospital setting, in home care, in long-term care or in community-based care, yet a nurse can get way better wages and benefits if she works in a hospital setting than if she works in home care.

People will tell you that here again lots of the problems that we see within our emergency rooms, problems that we see within our hospitals are because of the weakness of our home care system. If we did a better job at maintaining people in their homes, that would go a long way towards preventing those people running into problems, having to access emergency rooms and ending up in a hospital bed where they are labelled as "alternative level of care." They are in a hospital but that's not where they should be, and that's not where the best care is for them.

At the base of it all is that if you ask, most of those people will tell you, "I want to stay home, but to stay home I need the proper support." Here again the basic dignity of those people is not being respected. We're not supporting them in their homes the way we should. They end up with problems, they end up in emergency rooms and they end up in a hospital bed—not the way the system should work, and again a lack of dignity to those people who needed us.

Yes, we need to treat people's information carefully and professionally. But we also need to ensure that people are treated justly and caringly.

In summary, we look forward to seeing the results of a comprehensive review of this act. We hope very much that the report will be released within one year, something that is even more important, given that the review is so late in being started in the first place. We also hope that this will be the first step to a general improvement of monitoring and accountability of health care facilities, not just to ensure proper control of information, but proper and dignified treatment of people themselves.

Il me fait plaisir ce matin de vous parler de la Loi sur la protection des renseignements personnels sur la santé. Selon la loi, nous devons faire une revue de cette loi. Cette revue devait être entreprise l'année dernière. Malheureusement, on est pas mal en retard, et on la commence cette année, mais mieux vaut tard que jamais.

La revue de la Loi sur la protection des renseignements personnels sur la santé va nous permettre de nous assurer que toutes les agences et ceux qui ont la responsabilité de garantir l'accès à l'information ont les ressources nécessaires pour le faire et ont été capables de le faire d'une façon efficace dans toutes les parties du système. Lorsque la loi a été proposée, nous, les néo-démocrates, avons proposé plusieurs changements, et le gouvernement a écouté et a adopté la plupart des ces changements-là.

Par contre, il y a quand même une partie qui nous laisse un peu perplexe : est-ce que toutes les agences, surtout les petites agences, et ici je parle surtout des petites agences de soins de santé mentale, ont les ressources nécessaires pour être sûrs qu'elles sont conformes à la loi ? Plusieurs de ces petites agences nous disent qu'elles n'ont même pas l'infrastructure nécessaire—ici on parle d'ordinateurs et de choses comme ça—pour s'assurer que l'information est gardée de façon sécuritaire.

On peut lire dans les journaux plusieurs fois des exemples où des personnes n'ont pas été traitées avec dignité dans notre système de santé. On parle ici des foyers de soins de longue durée, dans les hôpitaux. Plusieurs de ces histoires font les manchettes des journaux.

